North Quincy Baseball Creates Chances But Bows In Opener, 7-2

By BILL GRIFFIN

Opening Day for high school teams in New England are frequently cold, windy afternoons when offenses which have seen little live pitching have trouble warming up from their long winter's nap.

So it was for North Quincy. The Red Raiders created a fistful of chances with a patient eye at the plate, but couldn't deliver the decisive hit and fell to Marshfield, 7-2 in their non-league opener last week at Adams Field.

"We had our chances, we had good opportunities, but we couldn't get the big hit when we needed it," said North coach Dan McHugh.

Frequently, the most important category early in the season is Games Played. It was Marshfield's third game and North's first. Marshfield swung free and easy while the Red Raiders were just a fraction off, their timing not quite sharp in their debut on a day when the temperatures fell through the 40s over the course of the game.

"The only live pitching we've seen has been a couple of scrimmages," said McHugh whose team spent most of March practicing indoors. "We need to be more aggressive with our offense, but I think that will come."

North worked the count well and had quality at-bats. The Red Raiders earned seven walks and left 10 runners on base. They left the bases loaded in the first and fourth and a runner at third in the second. The best chance came in the fourth with the bases full when Nick McGaughey drilled a screaming line drive with one out which went directly at Marshfield second baseman Trevor Salmon. A foot either way and it's two runs.

"I was happy with our patience at the plate," said McHugh. "We worked the counts and we hit some balls well."

Senior righty Josh Hayward battled throughout the cold day and went the distance for North. He gave five in the second, but he was tough the rest of the way against the defending Atlantic Coast League champs. He simply didn't give in to the cold or a strong hitting team. He walked only two and was particularly effective when he mixed in a good breaking ball with his fastball.

"I was impressed with Hayward," said McHugh. "He's a gamer, our No. 1 guy. He threw a lot of pitches, but he hung in against a quality opponent."

Junior left fielder Andrew Currie had a terrific game for North. He had a tumbling catch of a low line drive in the left center gap drilled by Nick DeGrenier in the sixth. In the seventh, he started a 7-5-2 relay which cut down a runner at the plate. He dropped down a perfect bunt single, and nearly made a second circus catch diving in foul territory to trap a sinking liner in the third.

"He's very quick. He has a good baseball presence to him. He'll be a leader for us," said McHugh.

The Red Raiders played errorless ball. Brendan Therrien was sharp around the bag at first and Dan Gould ranged deep into left center for a running grab which saved two runs in the fifth.

"Our defense was good. Danny has excellent range in center. He was one of our top defensive players last year," said McHugh.

Marshfield scored one in the first and went up 6-0 in the second. North scored twice in the third. Pat Verhault (a double and a solid game at short) and Hayward walked. McGaughey singled to load the bases. Currie worked a walk to force in a run and Mike Alibrandi lofted a sacrifice fly to cut it to 6-2.

Marshfield finished the scoring with one in the sixth.

North hosts Scituate Thursday in a Patriot League game and McHugh likes his team's chances in league play.

"I think we have a chance to be highly competitive in the league," he said.

North returns 12 seniors from last year's 6-14 club. Hayward and Currie will be 1-2 on the mound as North tries to replace last year's ace Tim Liuzzo. Currie is a crafty lefty whose curve sets up his fastball. The defense should be solid, especially up the middle with Pat Gould (catcher), Verhault (short), Shawn Grady (second) and Dan Gould (center).

"I'd say pitching and experience should be our strong points," said McHugh. "It may take a little time for our offense. We'll play a some 'small ball' early in the season, bunting and using our speed to create scoring chances. I think as the season goes on, we will hit."

Javelin Clinic April 16 At Faxon Field

Olympic Javelin Thrower Tom Petranoff and his daughter University of Illinois thrower Leigh Petranoff will hold a javelin clinic Tuesday, April 16 at Faxon Field from noon to 2 p.m.

The clinic is free to Quincy students and $10 to out of towners. In the event of inclement weather the clinic will be held in the Quincy High Gym.

Petranoff, a Rhode Island resident, competed in the 1984 and 1988 Olympics and at one time held the world record. He also spent a stint in South Africa and competed for them Internationally. He is credited with inventing the Turbo Jav, a javelin teaching tool which is plastic so safe for use in youth track and physical education classes. Petranoff has traveled to Quincy and the Boston area many times in the past putting on clinics. This is the first outside sponsored event to be held at the new Faxon field track.

Leigh Petranoff was a four-time Rhode Island state champion in the javelin and has also competed internationally representing the US in Junior competition.

The clinic is open to high school and middle school athletes interested in learning about javelin or improving skills. The clinic was made possible by the USATF New England association. For more information contact Steve Vaitones at the USATF-NE office 617-566-7600.

Defense, Pitching Solid For Presidents Bright Spots For Quincy In Opening Day Loss To S-L

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a beautiful opening day for baseball and Quincy played a beautiful baseball game.

The Presidents played errorless defense and handled difficult field chances with a crispness usually seen at mid-season. Dillon Darcy and Ken Sorenson each threw well limiting Silver Lake to five singles and just one serious offensive chance.

It was good enough for most games, but on opening day or any other day, the final answer is pitching, pitching, pitching. Silver Lake's righty Mike Lundin fired a dominating one-hitter to carry the Lakers past Quincy, 3-1 in its season debut at Adams Field Monday.

"I thought for the first game, we played well. Our defense was solid and both of our pitchers looked good for their first time out," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan.

Lundin was simply too much. He featured a whistling fastball and added a darting breaking ball to limit Quincy to a clean single by Tyler Beach with one out in the first. After that, nothing. He struck out 11, walked just two and controlled the afternoon.

"He had two good pitches and he kept us off balance," said Bryan. "15 or 20 at bats into the season when we start to our swings in shape, we'll have a better chance against a good pitcher like him."

There were several positives for the Presidents to take from the game and they start with the pitching. Darcy, a senior righty, spotted his fastball well and mixed in a good change and curveball. The Lakers touched him for three in the fourth, but he only gave four hits, one an infield tapper, and struck out two in four innings of work.

"He hits his spots with his fastball," said his catcher Johnny Marsinelli. "He's practiced his changeup and it worked for him today. His control was good and curve was excellent for the first time out."

"He threw well. I thought his fastball was good and he'll get sharper. He made one bad pitch in the fourth and it hurt him," said Bryan.

Sorenson, a junior righty, finished with three innings of one-hit, shutout relief. He changed speeds, varied his arm angles, dropped down to the side against righties and showed a good curveball. He had the Lakers swinging a bit too early and a bit too late against a good assortment of stuff.

"He's been dropping down to the side like that since Little League. It's hard on righties," said Marsinelli.

There was also the defense. Quincy's two pitchers only struck out two which means the defense handled 19 chances flawlessly. They did more than make the routine play. Darcy and Sorenson each picked off a runner. Third baseman Bob Salvucci went far to his right to retire Cory Sullivan on a one-hop throw which was handled cleanly by first baseman Greg Paulo in the fourth. Paulo was also steady and sure on three popups into a tough sun.

"Those popups were tough chances, but he's a good athlete," said Bryan. "It was a well-played game, especially for an opener."

Second baseman Mike Pugsley handled a hard grounder which exploded at his feet in the second. Left fielder Alex Heffernan saved a run and kept a runner at third with a strong throw home in the fourth. Marsinelli made a nice, running one-handed grab of a low popup in foul ground off first in the third and fired a bullet to nail a base stealer in the seventh.

With the score tied at 0-0, Quincy threatened in the third when Matt Davis walked and Beach made a bid for a two-out shot into the left-center gap which Jim Melanson ran down for the Lakers.

Silver Lake bunched three hits for three runs for all of its scoring in the fourth. Quincy answered with one in the bottom half of the inning. Marsinelli reached on an error, stole second and Robbie Munroe walked. They moved to second and third down on a ground ball. A Paulo bouncer scored one run, but Lundin escaped with a strikeout and the day's offense was finished.

"We worked to get good at-bats, but a good pitcher is tough in your first game," said Bryan.

Bryan hopes that the freshmen and sophomores which dotted the lineup last year will mature as the season unfolds. The Presidents lost six one-run games last year, and a year's seasoning should make a difference in games decided by narrow margins.

"We were young last year and I hope the experience we gained helps," said Bryan whose club won four games last year. "I think we'll hit as the season goes on and our defense has looked good. Every year, our goal is to make the tournament."

One of the strengths Bryan is looking to is the pitching. Darcy, Chris McMahon, and John Leveilee are three experienced senior pitchers. Sorenson will be a tough pitcher for teams to time. If Quincy plays sound baseball behind the pitchers, the Presidents should have a good season.

"The senior pitchers will help us," said Bryan. "Our goal is to play good, fundamental baseball. We played 3-5 freshman and four sophomores at times last year. This year they should be more mature players."

Quincy traveled to Randolph Wednesday and Hingham today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

The Presidents and North Quincy will take part in a baseball tournament next Tuesday, April 16 at Adams Field. The other teams participating are Milton and Weymouth High Schools. Game times are 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The tournament concludes with consolation and championship games next Thursday, April 18 at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. at Adams Field.

SENIOR RIGHTY Dillon Darcy yielded just four hits in five innings of work but Quincy bowed to Silver Lake 3-1 in their home opener Monday at Adams Field.

PRESIDENTS PITCHER Kenny Sorenson tossed two scoreless innings in relief against Silver Lake Monday at Adams Field.

North Quincy Rewarded With Win Over Abington

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are times when a victory is especially sweet.

Second-year coach Megan Therrien has built up the girls' lacrosse program at North Quincy. Numbers and enthusiasm have increased. The skill level has improved. There was energy and teamwork and games which grew closer and closer.

Still, North Quincy needed one thing. The Red Raiders needed a win.

North brought home its victory by leading from start to finish behind a five-goal performance from junior Molly Brown to drop Abington, 13-10 for its first win in two seasons at Veterans Stadium Friday afternoon.

"You should have seen the faces in the locker room, everyone was so happy," said Therrien. "We've put a lot of positive energy into the program and the win reinforces all the hard work the girls have put in. It will mean a lot going forward."

Senior captain Leah Ryan added four goals. Kiera Clifford chipped in with a pair of goals while Lauren McLaughlin had a goal and an assist. Sophomore Ciara Ford added a goal which she will long remember.

"This is her first year ever playing lacrosse and she scored a big goal in our win," smiled Therrien.

Agnes Setow added an assist while sophomore goalie Marguerite Belcher backboned the win with a solid effort in goal.

"She's put a lot of dedication into playing goal and she was spot-on for us against Abington," said Therrien. "All the kids have been dedicated. That's what makes the win so rewarding."

North was 1-2 at the end of last week. The Red Raiders fell to powerful Duxbury and lost to Dedham, 14-5. Even in the Dedham loss, Therrien could see improvement in her club and it paid off in the memorable win over Abington.

"Dedham only outscored us, 5-4 in the second half, so the improvement was there," said Therrien.

Brown scored twice against Dedham while Ryan, Clifford, and McLaughlin added single goals. Lia Bonoli and Clifford played well in the Duxbury loss.

Therrien hopes for a season which builds on the enthusiasm for lacrosse that she has seen in two short years. Last year, 38 athletes came out for the team. This year the number is well over 50, including 20 freshmen who have little or no experience playing the game.

"We want to keep building and put a strong emphasis on making the fundamentals stronger," said Therrien. "I can see improvement in the skills and that's what we want to keep stressing. Again, the win meant a lot because the girls could see a positive result from the effort they've put into their game."

Belcher will anchor the team in goal. Karina Lozano, Erika Histon, Jackie Doody, Evelyn Scuzzarella, Caitlin Coneran and Setow will work on defense for the Red Raiders.

"The key on defense is communication," said Therrien. "I want them talking to each constantly. It's the only way to make sure they're in the right position to help each other."

Katie Burke, Molly Minton, Kristen Abban, McLaughlin, Bonoli and Ryan will see action at midfield. Ryan, who is excellent hockey player, will play center, move the ball through midfield and take faceoffs for North.

"She's our center, our leader at midfield," said Therrien.

Fiona Riordan, Ying Chin, Jenna Arsenault, Crystal Yu, Clifford, Ford, and Brown are the key players on attack.

"Molly has a good scoring touch and Crystal is making quite a transition from goalie to attack," said Therrien.

There has been a good deal of bonding over the past two seasons and Therrien sees it as the strength of her team.

"I think our biggest asset is our teamwork," she said. "We pass the ball well. The girls don't think of individuals, they think of team. As we continue to improve our skills, this teamwork will be our strength."

Phelan's Three Goals Lift Quincy Past Fontbonne

By BILL GRIFFIN

After two straight one-goal losses to the same team and a suspended game which Quincy led by three goals late in the second half, a victory was exactly what the Presidents needed.

Sophomore Kerry Phelan scored three goals and Madry Kamb played a strong game in goal to lift Quincy's girls lacrosse team past Fontbonne, 6-5 in a non-league match last week.

Earlier last week, Quincy held a 7-4 lead over Silver Lake with 17 minutes left when the match was suspended due to inclement weather. The game will be finished Thursday when Quincy travels to Silver Lake. The suspended game will be completed, and the JV and varsity will then be played.

Quincy opened its season with a tough 6-5 loss to Brookline and then lost to Brookline by the same 6-5 score in the rematch last week which made the win over Fontbonne a rewarding one.

"It was a total team effort. Everybody contributed," said Quincy coach Tim Lewis.

Gabbie Zorkers, Sam McArdle and Kayla McArdle also scored for the winners.

Quincy brought up freshman Gabby Jerahian for the match and she played well.

"We brought her up because our bench was a little short," said Lewis. "She gave us quality minutes and helped seal the win with her ball control and discipline late in the match."

Ryan and Emily Hatfield played strong games in the loss to Brookline.

Presidents Edged In Opener But Show Encouraging Signs

By BILL GRIFFIN

There is skill and talent across the roster especially on defense and attack. The question for Quincy's boys lacrosse team is depth.

"We have have excellent front-line players," said Quincy coach Bob Foley. "Most varsity programs have 22-24 players. We have 20 and four of them are new to lacrosse. The younger players have shown well in our early matches and we'll need them to continue their development."

Quincy was 0-2 at the end of last week, but there were encouraging signs. Sacred Heart edged the Presidents, 8-7 in the opener and South Shore topped a shorthanded Quincy team, 15-12 in the second match of the season.

"Against South Shore, we were short five players who were playing for the under-16 hockey team in the national tourney," said Foley. "The younger players stepped up and did a good job."

In the opener against Sacred Heart, sophomore Garrett Reynolds, who had eight goals and seven assists in the first two games, led the offense with three goals and three assists. Senior Pat Dowling and sophomore Steve Ross each added a pair while senior captain Mitchell McGowan had two assists.

BOYS' LACROSSE

Max Hurley and Ross were strong on faceoffs. Freshman Ryan Tucker made a successful debut in goal.

"Like most openers, I saw some good things and things which needed adjustment. Overall, I thought we played well," said Foley.

Quincy showed its resilience in the South Shore game. Not only were the Presidents down five players, they fell behind by nine goals in the early going. They refused to quit, rallied in the final quarter and drew within three goals.

Reynolds led the scoring with five goals and four assists. Dowling had three goals and three assists while McGowan also added three goals. Gavin O'Hare had a goal and assist while Pat Burke had an assist.

"We took the field with only 14 players, but the kids didn't give in," said Foley. "If we play to what we are capable of, we'll have a positive season that we can be proud of."

Tucker and Andrew Johnson will backbone the team in goal. Sophomore Brian O'Callaghan, sophomore Ryan Harty and sophomore Aidan Pugsley, three gifted hockey players, are an excellent defensive trio. Andrew Cook supplies depth.

"Our defensemen have a very high lacrosse IQ and they are excellent stick handlers," said Foley.

Hurley, Ross and Harty are strong in the midfield. O'Hare, James Guerin, John Cherwick, Shaun Brennick, Jake Hallisey, Christian Ventresca, and Anthony McShane will also see action.

McGowan, Dowling and Reynolds are a potent threesome on attack. Burke, Joe Yacano, John Quirk and Suhail Purkar give Quincy strength in reserve.

"Like the defensemen, the attackers are very knowledgeable players," said Foley. "They know how to find the open spaces and put themselves in good position to score."

Quincy faces stiff competition in the Patriot League from two-time defending state champ Duxbury and Hingham at the top of a league which is strong throughout its roster of teams.

"Our attack and defense are good, our depth is a question," said Foley. "The league is very strong, but it gives us something to aspire to. Our front line players are solid. If our depth develops, we could have a good season."

Central Swim Champions

Central won the Quincy intra-city Middle School Swimming Championship where 200 students participated April 6 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool.

Central's amassed 213 total points thanks to 117 points from the boys and 96 from the girls.

Overall, Atlantic placed second with their 78-point output in the girl's competition spearheading its total of 117. Despite placing second in the boy's competition with 55 points, Sterling earned the championship's third best team total of 96.

Broad Meadows and Points Webster finished fourth and fifth with point totals of 45 and 29, respectively.

"The success of the high school program is directly related to the success of the middle school program," said the meet manager and current high school coach of the Quincy/North Quincy team, Bob McGillicuddy. "The kids like swimming, continue to swim and then compete at the high school level. I can't thank the coaches at each school enough for getting the kids ready to compete and excited about swimming."

Three middle school records fell headlined by seventh grader David Hartford who established the new standard of 13.16 in the 25-yard free and finished second in the 50 free (30.78) then joined with fellow Central swimmers including Chris Donaghey, Connor Donaghey, and Adam Tlaxocoxolai, to rewrite history with their effort of 1:05.21 in the 100 freestyle relay. Central's Aymen Sadaka eclipsed the previous meet best, swimming 18.03 in the 25 backstroke, and the sixth grader also placed second in the 25 butterfly (15.02).

Eighth grader Baile Carey paced the Central girl's team winning the 25 free (13.59) and 25 backstroke (16.91) events. Daniel Wong, a seventh grader, encored his three wins from a year ago with a 50 backstroke (38.53) victory and second place in the 100 free (1:08.63). Wong teamed with Thomas Feeney, Aymen Sadaka, and Evo Fearnley for first in the 100 medley relay (1:15.22). Fearnley notched a pair of wins, swimming 30.13 in the 50 free and 1:08.34 in twice the distance. Olivia Walsh, an eighth grader, touched the wall first in the 25 breaststroke with her effort of 19.68.

The youngest swimmer to win three events was sixth grader Emily Steele who took the 50 free (29.22), 100 free (1:03.44), and led Atlantic's 100 medley relay (1:09.40) contingent to first place along with Danielle O'Driscoll, Maevae Hally, and Kat Polastretti. Russ Becker Running Boston Marathon For The Angel Fund

Russ Becker of Wayland, a student at the College of Charleston, will be running the Boston Marathon for the second consecutive year as a member of The Angel Fund team to raise money for ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) research. The 22-year old college senior will join his uncle, Rich Kennedy, President of The Angel Fund, and other team members on the 26.2 mile run to help raise awareness of the disease. His girlfriend, Maggie Butcher, will join the team this year for her inaugural run of the marathon.

Becker and Butcher will raise money to honor the memory of Russ' grandfather, Christopher Kennedy who died from ALS at age 66 and his uncle, Jimmy Kennedy, who also died of the disease at the age of 31. Becker is the son of Kathy (Kennedy) Becker, one of nine children of Christopher and Mary Kennedy-Peretti, formerly of Quincy.

Becker was inspired to run the Boston Marathon for The Angel Fund by his uncle Rich who has also spearheaded a number of campaigns to increase awareness for ALS, including the family's upcoming Squirrel Run, a/k/a 16th annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race and Family Fun Day on June 8th. In addition to coordinating the Squirrel

RUSS BECKER

Run, Rich has run the Boston Marathon for the past 28 years.

Running the marathon for the first time last year was a feat that Becker thought impossible only five years before when he tipped the scales at 300 pounds.

"(At the time) I had little positive direction and even less motivation to change," he said when he began training for the 2012 Boston Marathon. "A conscious decision (during) my sophomore year in high school started me on a path of healthier eating, exercise and thinking about my future. Something just clicked and I started to run."

Now, still 120 pounds lighter, the College of Charleston senior and former Weston resident, has set up a fundraising page through Firstgiving.com to raise money for The Angel Fund, a 501 (c)(3) independent charity that benefits ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at UMass Medical Center under the direction of Dr. Robert H. Brown, Jr., a world-renowned researcher in the field of ALS.

Midgets Bow In National Hockey Tournament

By BILL GRIFFIN

The Quincy 16-and-under Midget State Championship Team lost three games in the National Tourney in Troy Michigan last week.

The Midgets fell to the Pittsburgh, Huskies, the host

Troy Michigan Huskies and the Connecticut Southern Stars. The Southern Stars, the top-ranked team in the country who won the national title, defeated Quincy in a 6-3 contest in which Quincy played an excellent game.

"We played well, we just ran into some really good hockey teams," said coach Brendan Craig. "We met teams that played over 60 games in a season. We play only 20 and that's a big difference."

Pat Freeman, Mike Davis and Jake Hallisey scored for Quincy in the tournament. The state champs played good team hockey in all three games.

"All the kids played well. It was just a case of meeting some excellent hockey teams," said Craig.

Quincy won the state tournament in October in a terrific upset. Quincy had to win a play-in game to make the tourney and went on to win four elimination game to earn the state crown.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

BATTLE OF THE BULGE

Intervertebral discs are cartilaginous cushions that separate the bones of the spine as well as lend flexibility to the spinal column. Throughout our lives, the discs are vulnerable to torque and compression. Disc injury usually occurs simultaneously with displacement of the spine (which chiropractors refer to as "subluxation") that results from sudden, forceful movements such as falls and lifting. When these displacements of the spine occur, they can cause the disc to bulge, protrude, herniate, or impinge upon nerves. As a result, "slipped disc" (the popular term) is a major contributing factor to back pain. In some cases, it can be relieved by removing pressure from the disc with a spinal adjustment that restores vertebrae to their normal positions.

The spine is designed to carry the body's weight and distribute the loads encountered during rest and activity. When excess weight is carried, the spine is forced to assimilate the burden, which may lead to structural compromise and damage. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will try to help you understand your choices about chiropractic and let you make an informed choice regarding chiropractic health and chiropractic care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Chiropractic works! Call us at 617.472.4220 and start feeling better. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Intervertebral discs make up one-fourth of the length of the human spinal column. When they dehydrate we get shorter. Chiropractic adjustments prevent you from shrinking.

Linda Beeler Leaving Her Mark At Crane Library

to say 'yes we can' and find the information by asking somebody.

"We can get you this far, we can figure out what can be known and what isn't possible. We can say yes much more of the time because we have so many more things."

Linda has also been a library leader. With the support of former Crane Library Director Ann McLaughlin, Beeler was responsible for digitally archiving past issues of The Quincy Sun beginning with our first issue in September, 1968. Those archives can now be accessed through our own website as well as the library's.

She was also instrumental in posting the yearbooks from North Quincy and Quincy High Schools on the library's website. The books date back to the first graduation classes up through 2008 with plans to add one year annually. You can search for a graduate by name and find any reference to that individual, including their senior photo, on-line.

Beeler has worked with some very dedicated colleagues over the years, including Warren Watson who first hired her. She described Watson as a great man and an amazing mentor.

"He gave us the advice that if we thought it was a good idea, we should go for it, run it by him whenever we needed help, but he never told us what to do. He believed in us. He stood up for us, he was a gentleman in every way and he never assumed that he needed to give us advice. He was just there to back us up."

So why retire?

"I have been doing this for a long time and it finally occurred to me that it's time to think about something else because I still have a lot of energy. I've done this for so many years that someone else needs a chance."

Linda says she won't be leaving Quincy but she will be spending more time this summer with her husband Bill Ryder at the family home in Maine enjoying the great outdoors and catching up with reading and quilting. The have lived in Quincy since 1987 and have two adult sons: Patrick and Jake, who both attended Quincy Public Schools and are college graduates with their own careers.

But she will miss being behind the reference desk at the Crane Library.

"I think I'm going to miss learning something new from people every day. It's what they teach me that's not going to be happening every day.

"I will also miss my colleagues because we have so much fun helping people. There's such a great atmosphere at the library I'm sure I'm going to miss that.

"But it's time for somebody else to do it and it's time for me to do something else.

"I have learned so much about Quincy and the community that I didn't want to start somewhere else. It was never boring. I always had great bosses. I liked the people who I worked with. We felt like family.

"It was both comforting and challenging for me."

Linda's relentless work ethic and proficient ability to help is best summed up McLaughlin, a longtime friend and colleague.

"If Linda Beeler hadn't become a librarian she could have become the world's greatest detective. Her ability to find the answers to questions is legendary. Everyone would be stumped and Linda would come up with the answer.

"Genealogy was one of her passions. She would pour through old street directories and newspaper stories checking death notices and city records, trying to connect people with their relatives. She once helped a woman from California find a whole family in Quincy that she didn't know because Linda wouldn't give up until she found the answer."

McLaughlin also called Linda a great reader, great writer and a devoted friend for more than 40 years.

"She reads more than anyone I've ever met - novels, memories, biographies, history. All this information gets stored away to help answer some future questions. She is interested in everything.

"She loves meeting people and hearing their stories. She is a great letter writer, a lost art, and even her emails are literary delights. She is a gifted quilter. Everyone she cares about has a beautiful quilt she has created for some special moment.

"We have been friends for over 40 years. She is also as close to me as my own sisters. If there were a Thomas Crane Library Hall of Fame, Linda would be in it.

"She has left her mark. She has kept faith with the past and led the way embracing the future.

"No one," McLaughlin adds, 'will ever take her place.'

Author Casey Sherman Library Speaker Tonight

New Bedford-born Joe Barboza's brutal rise during one of the deadliest mob wars in U.S. history is the stuff of legend, both on the bloodied streets of Boston and in the offices of the FBI and the U.S. Attorney General. Barboza's legacy, buried for years thanks to the murders or deaths of its participants, is finally coming to light and being told in its unvarnished brutality by one of America's most respected true crime writers, Casey Sherman.

Meet Casey Sherman tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy and find out how Boston's most notorious contract killer forged a Faustian bargain with two unscrupulous FBI agents—a pact that would transform the U.S. criminal justice system. From false testimony and manipulated evidence that sent mob leaders to death row, to the creation of the Witness Protection Program so the feds could protect their prized, cold-blooded witness, this was the horrific, dramatic first act in a story of murder and FBI corruption still being played out today in the news and the courtroom with the capture and trial of Whitey Bulger.

Sherman is a Boston-based journalist and the author of the acclaimed true crime thriller A Rose for Mary: The Hunt for the Real Boston Strangler, as well as two novels and Bad Blood: Freedom and Death in the White Mountains. He is the coauthor of The Finest Hours: The True Story of the Coast Guard's Most Daring Rescue. Sherman has been nominated for an Emmy Award, has appeared on dozens of national television programs and has been profiled by numerous magazines and newspapers.

Copies of Casey Sherman's new book, Animal: The Bloody Rise and Fall of the Mob's Most Feared Assassin (due to be released on April 9), will be available for sale after his talk.

Authors Cullen, Shelley To Speak At Library April 16

Kevin Cullen and Shelley Murphy will tell the story behind the story of Whitey Bulger Tuesday, April 16 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Their new book is the first full portrait of this legendary criminal figure—a gripping story of wiseguys and cops, horrendous government malfeasance, and a 16-year manhunt that climaxed in Whitey's dramatic capture in Santa Monica almost two years ago.

Based on exclusive access and previously undisclosed documents, Cullen and Murphy explore the truth of the Whitey Bulger story, including both the astonishing career and the epic manhunt for this Boston-born gangster whose life was more sensational than fiction.

Copies of the book will be available for sale at the event.

Kevin Cullen, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who has written for The Boston Globe since 1985, was the first to raise questions about Whitey Bulger's relationship with the FBI.

A frequent commentator on NPR and the BBC, Cullen has won major journalism prizes including the Goldsmith Prize, the George Polk Award, and the Selden Ring Award.

Shelley Murphy has covered Whitey Bulger and organized crime in Boston since 1985, beginning at the Boston Herald and moving to The Globe in 1993. She has won a George Polk Award for National Reporting.

On Tuesday, April 2, Officer Stephen O'Donoghue was working the overnight shift in West Quincy. Due to four recent breaks in a building under construction on Crescent Street, the officer was constantly making frequent checks of the unfenced property. During past breaks, large amounts of copper, electrical wire, aluminum and tools were stolen. The officer routinely checked for signs of vandalism and that all doors and windows were secured. One of the earlier breaks was through an unlocked sliding glass door, which provided access to one of the partially finished apartments and then to the entire building.

LT. DAN MINTON

Det. Tom Pepdjonovic, who was also working on the case, provided a photo of a suspect who lived nearby and had been arrested recently for "Receiving Stolen Property" from the same location. Officer O'Donoghue staggered his inspections of the property in the event that the suspect was waiting for the Police to come and go. At approximately 1:15 a.m., the officer stopped at the site, and used his spotlight to see that all was normal. He then drove around the adjacent parking lot and copied down all the license plates, which he had been doing for several weeks. Seeing nothing unusual, Officer O'Donoghue left the area but returned 15 minutes later.

After informing the dispatcher that he would be out of the cruiser checking the doors and windows, the officer discovered a sliding glass door to one of the last apartments was unlocked. This apartment had a wooden plank style ramp leading up to the door. The dispatcher was notified and K-9 Officer Chris McDermott, his partner Tucker, and Officers Tom Gaeta and Dan Church were sent to the location. Officer Church secured the surrounding streets, while Officer Gaeta assisted Officer O'Donoghue in securing the inside of the open apartment. While waiting for the K9 unit, the Officers inside heard a distinct thump from inside the partially finished buildings. Officer McDermott and his K9 partner entered the property to begin a search.

Tucker immediately dropped his nose to the ground near the stairs that led to the basement of the apartment that had the unsecured sliding glass door. Officer McDermott and Tucker went into the dark basement. Moments later, Officer McDermott yelled, "get on the ground," followed by a series of barks from Tucker. Officers Gaeta and O'Donoghue entered the apartment and proceeded to the basement where Officer McDermott and Tucker were. The male suspect was hiding behind a water heater in a corner of the unfinished basement.

The officers recognized the suspect as the same person on the flyer sent out by Det. Pepdjonovic. Officer McDermott kept yelling at the suspect, "get on the ground," but he was not complying. At this point, with numerous flashlights on the suspect, the officers observed the suspect move his left hand behind his back. Fearing that the suspect was going for a weapon, Officers Gaeta and O'Donoghue rushed the suspect and after a brief struggle, handcuffed him.

An immediate check of the area revealed two short pieces of electrical heavy gauge wiring. These pieces were approximately 3-5 feet in front of where the suspect was hiding. The suspect, a 27-year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Breaking and Entering with the Intent to Commit a Felony and Malicious Destruction of Property." While being booked at the station, Officer Kent Yee found a female's broken gold watch in the suspect's pants, which he not provide an explanation for.

RULES OF THE ROAD

Bicycles (from Driver's Manual)

Bicyclists have the right to use all public ways in this state except limited access or express state highways where signs specifically prohibiting bicycles have been posted. When riding on public ways, bicyclists must obey the same basic traffic laws and regulations that apply to motor vehicle operators. As a bicyclist:

- You can keep to the right when passing a motor vehicle moving in the travel lane.
- You must signal your intent by either hand to stop or turn. However, the signal does not have to be continuous or be made at all if both hands are needed for the bicycle's safe operation.
- You can ride on sidewalks outside of business districts for safety unless banned locally.
- If on the sidewalk, you must yield to pedestrians and give an audible signal before overtaking or passing (no sirens or whistles).

• No more than two bicycles can be operated side-by-side. On a roadway with more than one lane in the direction of travel, bicyclists riding side-by-side must stay in one lane and not unnecessarily restrict a passing vehicle's ability to overtake you.

• You must ride on or astride a permanent seat affixed to the bicycle. A passenger must also ride on a permanent seat attached to the bicycle or to a trailer towed by the bicycle.

• You cannot transport a person who is between one and four years old or who weighs 40 lbs. or less except in a "baby seat" attached to the bicycle. The person must be in a harness, be seated in an upright position, and their hands and feet must be protected from hitting the wheel spokes. A person can ride on or astride a seat on a tandem bicycle if the person can reach the pedals and handlebars. You cannot transport a child under the age of one year on a bicycle.

• A bicycle helmet approved by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission must be worn by a bicycle operator or passenger under 16 years old. It must be secured to the person's head when the bicycle is operated on a public way or bicycle path, unless the passenger is secured in an enclosed trailer which protects his/her head.

• You must give an audible warning (other than a siren or whistle) when necessary to ensure safe operation.

• You can park your bicycle on a way or a sidewalk, but only if it does not obstruct vehicle or pedestrian traffic.

• You cannot let the bicycle be pulled by another vehicle and can only tow a bicycle trailer.

• You cannot carry any objects that would interfere with the safe operation of the bicycle and must keep one hand on the handlebars at all times.

• You must have a proper working brake system to stop from 15 MPH within 30 feet.

• From a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise, you must have a white lamp in front visible from up to 500 feet and a rear facing red light or reflector visible up to 600 feet.

• From a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise, you must have a reflector on each pedal or your ankles, or reflective material on yourself or on the bicycle. The reflectors must be visible up to 600 feet from all sides.

• Your handlebars cannot be set at a height above your shoulders while gripping them and you cannot extend the fork from its original manufacturer's design.

• You must report any accident involving personal injury and any accident involving property damage in excess of $100 to the police in the municipality where it occurred.

Former Houghs Neck Legion Site To Serve Veterans Again

By EMILY TAFT

The site of the former Houghs Neck American Legion Post 380, which was once a second home to veterans, will now serve as permanent homes for veterans when it becomes two new townhomes for returning veterans.

"This city is so blessed to have so many wonderful organizations and folks that really care about the community and specifically today care about our veterans. We're very fortunate in this city to have so many wonderful people, so many wonderful organizations that come together to get it done and this is another great example," said Mayor Tom Koch during the ground breaking ceremony on April 4th.

"It's a bittersweet day in that the post is closed, but the spirit of the post here is going to continue forever with this project, that will have veterans living in this home forever going forward. This certainly will be a great improvement for the neighborhood here in the great community of Houghs Neck. I look forward to the day when we open the doors and let our veterans move in," the mayor added.

Funding for the new townhomes, located at 1116 Sea St., came from HOME funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), through the City of Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development for $420,000, the City's Affordable Housing Trust Fund for $150,000, The Community Preservation Fund for $150,000, and a loan from Colonial Federal Savings Bank for $85,000. The total cost of the project is just over $800,000, which will include the costs for site acquisition, razing of the former Legion post and the $430,000 in construction of the two new townhouse homes.

"Our mission is really to provide decent housing, sustainable communities, and to provide economic opportunities for residents, the best way to do this, and the only way it works is through public-private partnerships and what you see here in the City of Quincy is just that perfect public-private partnership," said Cedric Kam, Deputy Director for the Office of Community Planning and Development and HUD.

"Quincy is doing an excellent job, and we always say that Quincy is the perfect example of how to make our (HUD) programs work."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You easily handle your tasks this week, thanks to those high energy levels that never seem to run down. But pace yourself, Lamb, for the demanding week ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) With the arts dominant this week, you might want to pick up any of those creative projects you've neglected. A workplace situation benefits from some fresh insight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Music helps replenish your energy levels. Play your CDs if you must. But a live concert could prove more rewarding, especially if you go with that very special someone.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Close friends reach out to help perk up your lagging social life. That workplace situation also eases, leaving you time to do more fun things by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A revelation clears up that perplexing job-related problem. Some changes will have to be made, which, no doubt, will meet with the Big Cat's roaring approval. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reaching out to someone in need is the noble thing to do. But try to restrain the temptation to add a lecture -- no matter how well-intended -- to your good deed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be another tough challenge to face before the month is over. But all that hard work is winning you lots of important recognition from your peers.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Keeping to your work schedule could prove difficult with all those personal distractions. Best advice: Stay with it. There'll be time later for socializing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jumping hurdles this week might be vexing for most, but not for the sage Sagittarian, who recognizes that meeting a challenge can open up opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) More obstacles might be thrown in your path as you try to finalize a new agreement. But the sure-footed Goat ignores the stumbling blocks and stays the course.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) We know the Water Bearer takes pleasure in giving to others. But why not let someone else enjoy the experience too by accepting that offer of help?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might find you need to ease up on your hectic schedule this week. Don't fret about it. It could be helpful to take a break and replenish your energy supply.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of finding practical solutions to complex problems, and you do it with grace.

would be the sixth project for community housing that the Community Preservation Act Funding has been used for since 2006.

"In November of 2006 we, as a community, voted to adopt the Community Preservation Act, and in doing so I think we made a tremendous statement as a community to the acquisition and preservation of open space, the creation and rehabilitation of recreational places, the preservation and restoration of historic buildings, and last but not least community housing," said Coughlin.

"This post has been a very important part of this community for many years, served as a venue for many important purposes, and certainly for veterans, so I am imagining it is bittersweet for them as well. This event today represents opportunity, and my mother use to say to me when one door closes another door opens and that could not be a truer statement when it comes to the opportunity to transform this building and this site, that was at one time a second home for veterans to a place that will be a primary home for veterans."

The ground-breaking ceremony was a part of one of three events for the city's National Community Development Week. The project was designed by Neighborhood Housing Services

"When we first started looking at this property it was a variety of different things that were happening with it and we were thinking about something here for veterans," said NHS Executive Director Robert Corley. "When we approached the Planning Department and the Mayor's office about this, the mayor was very supportive. Projects like this one he has paid very close attention to, and it means so much to this neighborhood, where this building has been sitting here abandoned for many years now."

The two townhomes will provide high-quality affordable housing for two returning veterans and their families. The duplex will feature two, three-bedroom townhomes that will be rented to returning veterans with families.

"What history this post has had in the City of Quincy for the years it's been here, to know that it's going to continue to carry on the tradition by being a home for the veterans," said Director of Veterans Services Tom Stansbury. "I look forward to coming back when the ground breaking is over and the house is built. I am going to thank you right now on behalf of the veterans who are going to live here, because this is going to be a real home for them and their families."

Rev. John Castricum Named 'Honorary Necker' At Farewell Reception

Houghs Neck Congregational Church Pastor Rev. John Castricum was named an "Honorary Necker" Sunday, when the congregation and the community came together to say farewell to Castricum as he accepts a call to serve as pastor at a church in Bedford.

Houghs Neck Community Council President Jim McCarthy presented Castricum with a citation conveying upon him the status of "Honorary Necker" at a luncheon reception held in the church's M. Alicia Corea Fellowship Hall following Castricum's final worship service.

"John is only the third person to receive 'Honorary Necker' status in the 377 years since Houghs Neck was founded," McCarthy quipped, adding that the title would guarantee Castricum "a reserved table at Louis (restaurant). Food and drinks not included."

Both church and community officials alike praised Castricum for becoming such an integral part of the Houghs Neck community during his eight years as pastor.

"When Rev. Castricum came to Houghs Neck he had big shoes to fill, coming as he did after (Peter and Alicia) Corea had served this church for 55 years," said City Councilor Doug Gutro, who presented a commendation from the city on behalf of Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest, who was accompanying her daughter on a college visit out-of-state. "But from participating in the Chowdapest to officiating at community dinners and events and offering the use of the church for neighborhood meetings, he quickly became a part of Houghs Neck."

Ralph Jacobs, chairman of the church's Diaconate, noted the many new programs and accomplishments achieved during Castricum's service as minister, including numerous renovations to the church itself and the formation of new Bible study groups, a book club and a "Faith and Film" series. The church also started a number of popular community events – including a Christmas Living Nativity, a lobster and fish dinner, and the annual Chili Bowl.

"Whether it was serving up his own first prize-winning chowder to 2,000 people at the Chowdapest or serving a lasagna dinner on Maundy Thursday, John was always doing what he does best – serving," Jacobs said. "Our church has been blessed to have his spiritual leadership and we wish John and his family all the best at their new church in Bedford."

As part of the church's farewell reception, the church choir performed the anthem, "When You Call." The congregation also presented a number of gifts to Rev. Castricum and his wife, Sarah, who served as a teacher in the church's Sunday school program.

Castricum thanked those in attendance for the hospitality the Houghs Neck community had shown him and for their support of his ministry – particularly during his early days with the church when he divided

Distracted Driving Dangers Spotlited

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy residents and teen drivers this week can experience the Distractology 101 interactive program, which teaches drivers the dangers of distracted driving.

The 36-foot-long yellow Arbella Insurance Foundation's Distractology 101 mobile classroom, which is available through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Quincy Police headquarters on Sea Street, is outfitted with driving simulators designed to give drivers, especially new drivers, the chance to experience the perils of distracted driving. Participants go through seven or eight different real-world driving scenarios in the course of 30-45 minutes in which some of them include the use of their cell phones while operating the digital car. The program educates drivers on how to anticipate hidden hazards, react to the road and avoid accidents. Participants will also complete an online portion and make a safe-driving pledge.

New teen drivers that sign up and participate in the program receive a $15 gas card along with a discount on their car insurance.

"It's not just your eyes off the road that can be distracting," said Distractology Trainer Robert Bliss. "I try to read the participants personality and tailor which scenarios I pick for them to go through. I get a range of reactions, both from the parents watching and the teen that is participating. I have a lot of participants tell me at the end of it how effective it was. I get a very positive response from most of the

As of Tuesday afternoon, the explosions killed three people, including an eight-year old boy, and injured 176 others, 17 of whom were listed in critical condition.

$118K Restoration Project At Josiah Quincy House

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Josiah Quincy House is in the midst of a multi-year restoration project that will leave the historic home looking like it did in the 1880s.

The house, a National Historic Landmark located on Muirhead Street in Wollaston, was built in 1770 by Revolutionary War Colonel Josiah Quincy - the first in a long line of Josiah Quincys that includes Josiah Quincy

II, who along with John Adams represented British soldiers on trial after the Boston Massacre; Josiah III, a congressman, mayor of Boston, and president of Harvard; and two other Boston mayors.

The house remained in the Quincy family for generations and is now owned by non-profit Historic New England. The organization is overseeing the preservation efforts at the house, combing through documents and photographs taken by Eliza Susan Quincy to see what the house looked like more than 130-years ago.

"The documents we are using to base our interpretation include an 1879 list of furnishings that were in the house as well as photography that was done in the house," Historic New Eng-

Dedications April 25 For James M. Barry, David O. Sullivan And James H. Cavicchi, Jr.

Memorial Squares To Honor 3 Residents Killed In Vietnam War

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three Quincy residents killed in action during the Vietnam War will be honored next Thursday.

Memorial squares for Army Specialist Fourth Class James Michael Barry and Marine Corps Lance Corporal David Owen Sullivan will be dedicated, and a memorial square for Marine Corps Lance Corporal James Henry Cavicchi, Jr. will be rededicated April 25.

The day starts at 11 a.m. at the corner of Phipps Street and Kendrick Avenue with the rededication of the memorial square for Cavicchi. He was born in Quincy and attended schools in Quincy and Weymouth, playing football for both high school teams. Cavicchi moved back to Quincy in 1965.

He joined the Marines in 1962 and was stationed in Cuba and Cyprus following basic training. After being notified that he was being sent to Vietnam, Cavicchi married his wife – the former Catherine Virginia Taromino – in August 1965 and left for Vietnam one day later. While serving in the Marine Corps, Cavicchi received numerous awards including a Purple Heart, a National Defense Service Medal, a Vietnam Service Medal with two bronze stars, and a Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm, among others. Cavicchi was serving with K Company, 3rd Battalion, 1st Marines, 1st Marine Division. He was killed in a helicopter crash on March 21, 1966 near Quang Ngai, about 200 miles north of Saigon. He was 21 years old.

The square was originally dedicated to Cavicchi on

Aug. 14, 1976 in a ceremony officiated by then-Mayor Joseph LaRaia. It is being rededicated because one of the men who served alongside Cavicchi when he was killed – G. Patrick Murphy, a federal judge in the Southern District of Illinois – is the guest speaker at ceremony being held later in the afternoon. Murphy will speak at the rededication, as will Rep. Tackey Chan, Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, and members of Cavicchi's family.

The dedication for Barry will take place at 11:45 a.m. at 89 Gilbert Street. A lifelong Quincy resident, Barry worked as a newspaper carrier with his brother for six years in South Quincy while growing up. He graduated from St. John's Parochial School and then from Archbishop Williams High School, in 1968. He also attended Assumption College in Worcester for two years.

He served in the National Guard prior to enlisting in the Army. Barry was deployed to Vietnam in May 1971 and was serving with the 510th Signal Company as a communications specialist. He was killed in an early morning attack on April 9, 1972 near Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam; four others were killed in the attack and 19 were wounded. Barry, 21, was just two weeks away from returning home when he was killed. His commendations include a Bronze Star, a Purple Heart, and a National Defense Service Medal.

Sen. John Keenan and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci are scheduled to speak at the dedication, along with Barry's family

At 12:30 p.m., the memorial square for Sullivan will be dedicated at 83 Safford Street. Sullivan grew up in Dorchester before moving to Safford Street. He attended Atlantic Middle School and North Quincy High. Sullivan was an acolyte at All Saints Episcopal Church in Dorchester and worked in Quincy Hospital's kitchen prior to joining the Marines.

He enlisted in the Marine Corps in June 1967. He was sent to Vietnam that September, serving in I Company, 3rd Battalion, 9th Marines, 3rd Marine Division. He was killed on Feb. 14, 1969 during action near Unninghat Fire Support Base close to Vietnam's border with Laos. Sullivan was 20 years old. While serving in the Marines Sullivan had been awarded a Silver Star, a Purple Heart, and a National Defense Service Medal among other commendations.

Members of Sullivan's family will speak at the dedication along with Rep. Bruce Ayers and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

The day ends at 2 p.m. with a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay. Murphy, a federal judge since 1998, will be the guest speaker. Mayor Tom Koch, Cong. Stephen Lynch, Keenan, and Joe McCain – a Navy veteran, actor, and brother of U.S. John McCain – are also scheduled to speak.

The day's events were organized by Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter.

Willard Street Project Reviewed

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy Planning Board met last Wednesday to review the site plan submitted by the Galvin Development Company of 21 Totman St., which details the construction of a new, 4,000 square-foot mixed-use office and residential building with related parking to be located at 243 and 245 Willard St. in West Quincy.

"The property right now is in what would be called, with no offense to the companies and businesses that are there, in a very deteriorated condition," said Attorney Edward Fleming, who spoke on behalf of the applicant. "It's essentially a dirt lot with a granite monument company and a used car dealer on the site right now."

Fleming went on to describe the addition of the proposed building, which would reach two to two and a half stories in total height, as "dramatic improvements" to the less than visually appealing piece of land.

The Galvin Company is no stranger to construction in that particular part of Quincy. The placement of two, multi-family buildings on California Avenue, which branches off of Willard Street, "represent a significant improvement," and has aided in elongating the current commercial strip.

The structure will consist of commercial space, which will face the Willard Street corridor, and six residential units to be located at the back of the complex, facilitating a smoother, and more neighborhood friendly transition between the business and residential parts of the building and surrounding, occupied lots.

In addition to the 23 parking spaces which will be provided to service the area, a small driveway off of California Avenue will accommodate visitors, delivery trucks, and other utility vehicles.

Drainage will consist of a single water quality tank that will assist in suspended solids removal. Roof runoff will be captured and recharged into the ground, and the creation of a gutter inlet will assist with possible street runoff according to engineers.

A previous, neighborhood focused meeting provided positive feedback regarding the project according to Fleming. "I believe that many of the neighbors felt that this was a dramatic improvement to the site," he said. "[There have been] very few improvements to the site other than the two, small, wood-framed structures — essentially shacks — on the site that are utilized by the businesses to have some interior space."

As the proponents were simply seeking a site plan review approval, no formal vote could be made as to whether to green-light the project.

Along with discussing the possible construction at Willard Street, Quincy Planning Director Dennis Harrington took the opportunity to briefly speak in regards to the proposed opening of the C-Mart grocery store, and remained neutral by not offering an official opinion on the matter.

"I've listened, I've attended the meetings and listened to the traffic engineers on both sides speak to the matter. I really don't believe that at this point that the Planning Board and the city of Quincy should make an advisory opinion recommendation to the special permit granting authority," he said.

"It would seem inappropriate for this board, with a short review, to make a recommendation and therefore I would suggest that the Planning Board, provided an official vote, decline to offer any advisory opinion to the special permit granting authority, the city council, on this matter."

The issue has been ongoing since proponent Michael Fang submitted his original proposal in 2009, which was denied due to concerns regarding traffic and the creation of extra vehicular congestion to the area.

Harrington also gave a quick update regarding the moratorium being held for the legalization of medical marijuana treatment facilities in Quincy, and stated the board was "ready to move forward" with a mandatory public meeting, to be held May 1.

"The Attorney General's office issued an order saying such facilities could not be banned by law in the Commonwealth but moratoriums were appropriate, temporary resolutions," he said. "In this case, it's a moratorium for something which is not allowed in Quincy, has never been allowed in Quincy, and for that reason I felt it didn't require a public hearing because it's not an allowed use and never was. It may be in the future but it's not right now."

'Responding To School-Based Violence'

Police, YMCA Staff Join DA Morrissey At Security Conference

Quincy was well represented the recent "Responding to School-Based Violence" conference hosted by Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey and Norfolk Advocates for Children.

Quincy police officers Kristen Bowes, Steven Burzio, Lisa Devine and Jenny Tapper attended the half-day conference, as did Tracey Phelan and Alice Correia from the Germantown YMCA.

Sessions addressed complex issues including the developmental impact on children who experience bullying, harassment, dating violence and other trauma, and specific strategies for responding to those events at different age levels. Other presentations detailed the services that the non-profit NAC offers to area communities, including training on Massachusetts laws governing the mandated reporter statute, teen dating violence, bullying, cyber-bullying and other issues that threaten the well-being of children.

"Norfolk Advocates for Children is a public-private partnership of more than 50 agencies — including all 27 Norfolk County police departments, hospitals, state agencies, and private health professionals — with the shared goal of helping children who have been abused and helping prevent future abuse," Dist. Atty. Morrissey said. "Today's seminars were an important part of the work we do, and I am very pleased to see Quincy's strong presence."

More than 75 attended the event held in conference space donated by the Bank of Canton. The project is supported by a federal grant from the US Department of Justice Programs.

There's never been a better time to buy a first home

Three reasons why:

- 1) Rates are at all-time lows — a huge advantage for first-time homebuyers. Your money goes further. And you get to lock in historically-low monthly mortgage payments.
- 2) The eastern Massachusetts real estate market tends to be resilient. Prices here have stabilized...or are starting to move up. Waiting now could cost you later.
- 3) With Colonial Federal's First-Time Homebuyer Program, you get: > A reduced downpayment with no PMI required > A mortgage with a competitive rate > You work one-to-one with our responsive lenders, professionals who want to help you get into your first home > All from a local neighborhood bank specializing in helping people buy homes since 1889.

This is an outstanding opportunity — most likely once-in-a-lifetime — for first-time homebuyers. Is that you...or someone you know? Come see us. Or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

Dedications April 25 For James M. Barry, David O. Sullivan And James H. Cavicchi, Jr.

Memorial Squares To Honor 3 Residents Killed In Vietnam War

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three Quincy residents killed in action during the Vietnam War will be honored next Thursday.

Memorial squares for Army Specialist Fourth Class James Michael Barry and Marine Corps Lance Corporal David Owen Sullivan will be dedicated, and a memorial square for Marine Corps Lance Corporal James Henry Cavicchi, Jr. will be rededicated April 25.

The day starts at 11 a.m. at the corner of Phipps Street and Kendrick Avenue with the rededication of the memorial square for Cavicchi. He was born in Quincy and attended schools in Quincy and Weymouth, playing football for both high school teams. Cavicchi moved back to Quincy in 1965.

He joined the Marines in 1962 and was stationed in Cuba and Cyprus following basic training. After being notified that he was being sent to Vietnam, Cavicchi married his wife – the former Catherine Virginia Taromino – in August 1965 and left for Vietnam one day later. While serving in the Marine Corps, Cavicchi received numerous awards including a Purple Heart, a National Defense Service Medal, a Vietnam Service Medal with two bronze stars, and a Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with Palm, among others. Cavicchi was serving with K Company, 3rd Battalion, 1st Marines, 1st Marine Division. He was killed in a helicopter crash on March 21, 1966 near Quang Ngai, about 200 miles north of Saigon. He was 21 years old.

The square was originally dedicated to Cavicchi on

Aug. 14, 1976 in a ceremony officiated by then-Mayor Joseph LaRaia. It is being rededicated because one of the men who served alongside Cavicchi when he was killed – G. Patrick Murphy, a federal judge in the Southern District of Illinois – is the guest speaker at ceremony being held later in the afternoon. Murphy will speak at the rededication, as will Rep. Tackey Chan, Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, and members of Cavicchi's family.

The dedication for Barry will take place at 11:45 a.m. at 89 Gilbert Street. A lifelong Quincy resident, Barry worked as a newspaper carrier with his brother for six years in South Quincy while growing up. He graduated from St. John's Parochial School and then from Archbishop Williams High School, in 1968. He also attended Assumption College in Worcester for two years.

He served in the National Guard prior to enlisting in the Army. Barry was deployed to Vietnam in May 1971 and was serving with the 510th Signal Company as a communications specialist. He was killed in an early morning attack on April 9, 1972 near Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam; four others were killed in the attack and 19 were wounded. Barry, 21, was just two weeks away from returning home when he was killed. His commendations include a Bronze Star, a Purple Heart, and a National Defense Service Medal.

Sen. John Keenan and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci are scheduled to speak at the dedication, along with Barry's family members.

At 12:30 p.m., the memorial square for Sullivan will be dedicated at 83 Safford Street. Sullivan grew up in Dorchester before moving to Safford Street. He attended Atlantic Middle School and North Quincy High. Sullivan was an acolyte at All Saints Episcopal Church in Dorchester and worked in Quincy Hospital's kitchen prior to joining the Marines.

He enlisted in the Marine Corps in June 1967. He was sent to Vietnam that September, serving in I Company, 3rd Battalion, 9th Marines, 3rd Marine Division. He was killed on Feb. 14, 1969 during action near Unninghat Fire Support Base close to Vietnam's border with Laos. Sullivan was 20 years old. While serving in the Marines Sullivan had been awarded a Silver Star, a Purple Heart, and a National Defense Service Medal among other commendations.

Members of Sullivan's family will speak at the dedication along with Rep. Bruce Ayers and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

The day ends at 2 p.m. with a ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay. Murphy, a federal judge since 1998, will be the guest speaker. Mayor Tom Koch, Cong. Stephen Lynch, Keenan, and Joe McCain – a Navy veteran, actor, and brother of U.S. John McCain – are also scheduled to speak.

The day's events were organized by Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter.

Quincy Sisters Marking A Very Special Day: 30th Anniversary Of Life-Saving Kidney Transplant

Never Give Up On Living

Editor's Note: April 27 marks a very special day for two Quincy born and raised sisters. On that day, Maryrose Mirick and her sister Patricia Sullivan will celebrate the 30th anniversary of the day Patricia gave Maryrose a life-saving kidney.

This is a story of love and a unique bond between sisters.

We are grateful to Maryrose for sharing it with our readers.

By MARYROSE MIRICK

I grew up in a duplex in Quincy, with six siblings, children of Mary and John Sullivan. On the other side lived my Mom's sister, Aunt Margie, Uncle Matt and my seven Mullen cousins. On the third floor lived my Mom's parents, my Noni and Grampa.

It was a big house, lots of people coming and going.

One October, day in 1958 I remember everyone was anticipating the arrival of the newest member of the Sullivan family. I was as excited as a Christmas morning. Five years old and happy I was no longer the youngest. I was wearing my favorite yellow sweatshirt and stripe pants. Soon my Mom and baby sister, the last child of Mary and John Sullivan's seven children would be home.

First my mom came in looking happy yet tired, then everyone; cousins, aunts, sibling etc. all gathered as my sister-in-law walked in with an angel of a baby...a new baby sister. Yes me, I was now a big sister. Someone to dress up like a doll, help mom with, a new best friend, I was so excited, she was so little and beautiful.

Who would of guessed on that October morning, this little baby would one day save my life.

In 1971, my senior year of high school, I met my best friend and the man I knew I would marry. Back then I recall being tired a lot, back ache, and upset stomachs. Doctors tested me for mono, diabetes, etc. "You are fine" I was told, just growing hormones or some answer that we accepted and moved on. Married in 1974, we were trying unsuccessfully to have a child, I miscarried, why...what was wrong with me?

It was a sunny day in 1975, I was at working at Quincy Court when I collapsed. Doctors in the ER said I was suffering from renal failure. I remember thinking, "what the heck is renal failure?"

Soon doctors at Tufts Medical Center explained what it all meant. Why I was unable to carry a pregnancy to term. They said conceiving was nearly impossible. That was the beginning of my a life-long patient relationship with Tufts Medical Center in Boston. Doctors said I was suffering from a rare disease called hypereosinophilic syndrome. I was 25 years old facing a lifetime of "What's next" in front of me... not only me, but my husband, and our family. We had no idea what was ahead, young full of love, faith and hope, nothing could stop us...so we hoped.

I was determined life would go on and I was going to fight anything that was going to try to keep me from the life I knew I was meant to have. I prayed for strength and patience. We still wanted children so we filed for adoption. In 1981 we got a call to come pick up our new baby girl! She was amazing, beautiful. The same excitement as the day my baby sister came home filled my heart. But this was different, this little girl was our daughter, Andrea Rose. She was our hopes and dreams wrapped in a blanket. I would ask Patricia to be her Godmother.

Little did I know this baby would one day be my strength and to reason to live.

Life was full. We were happy enjoying being young parents. But my renal failure was worsening. With my creatinine level rising, high doses of steroids, and many other medications became a way of life. I had to keep a chart schedule for meds on the bathroom mirror. I was tired, but still was able to exercise, play with my baby, love my husband, and spend glorious days with my wonderful family and friends.

December 1982 I was told it was time to seriously consider a kidney transplant. It was time for family members to be tested. I was approaching my big 30th birthday in January 1983. There was a big surprise birthday party. People made kidney shaped cards. A poster decorated with kidney beans and filled with pictures of 30 years of memories. Even the jelly beans in the dishes were kidney shaped. That's my family...take a problem, deal with it with a positive attitude, and move on.

After four of my siblings went for testing it was discovered that all matched, but the perfect match was my baby sister Patricia...that beautiful angel Mom brought home when I was 5, was now my lifeline. I had much hesitation. I was afraid for her, her health, her future. There were no guarantees...why did my health issues have to involve anyone else? I was so scared for her...not so much for me. I knew I would be fine, I just knew that God and the superior team at Tufts would not have Patricia go through all this if they did not believe it would be successful.

On April 27, 1983 after my last days of dialysis and much testing on both my sister and myself it was time for the surgery. Tufts doctors, nurses and staff were amazing: professional, caring, brilliant. During the surgery, doctors found that not only were my kidneys totally destroyed by HES disease, but both my ureters were scarred and useless. There was thought that I may have also suffered, since childhood, from vesicoureteral reflux of the ureters. When they opened my sister to remove one of her healthy kidneys they found an extra ureter just floating...waiting for me...another miracle.

Over the last 30 years living on this gift my sister gave me, I have lived a very full and wonderful life. A licensed real estate broker, I have worked as a secretary, to a tutor for special needs, executive director of a hospital foundation, to a teacher. My sister, she has dedicated her life to one very honorable profession ~ Teacher. Patricia has earnestly facilitated the academic and social abilities of the lives of hundreds of Quincy kindergarten children at Snug Harbor School for over 30 years. Dedicating her life to these children is her calling and her pride.

I cannot describe the respect, strength and love my siblings and I have for each other. We had very strong parents. A father that was an alcoholic, yet pulled it together to become the youngest Federal Mediator of his time, President of AA, Quincy School Committeeman, and volunteer to numerous charitable, and civic organizations. A mother who's love, silent strength, and wisdom, was the glue that kept us all together.

In April 1984, we lost our sweet oldest brother Jack, and our dear father within five weeks of each other. Both from forms of cancer. I also delivered a six-month still born the day after my brother died. I was ready to give up...we were all in shock, it was a dark time. Just one year after our transplant, I felt broken, hope was fading...then my little daughter Andrea, walked into my hospital room and said "Mommy, when are you coming home, I miss you."

There was my reason to fight. That baby we brought home was now my strength and reason to live.

Another miracle would happen. I was soon pregnant again, and this time I would give birth to a healthy baby girl. I named her after my father, brother and of course the sister who saved my life.

Jacquelyn Patricia was born June 30, 1985. This time I knew this baby would carry me past the dark sadness into a new growth of happiness. Andrea now had a sister. My husband and I were overjoyed that once again we were blessed with a baby girl. Now we are grandparents of our beautiful granddaughter, Julia Rose.

I have many heroes in my life. My sister Barbara who fought and won her battle with breast cancer. My husband Wayne, daughters, granddaughter, and siblings for their love, and for never giving up on me. My late Mother, who's sweetness, courage and strength are qualities I can only hope to follow. My late brother and father, who battled cancer, never complained, always positive. And most of all my sister Patricia, she is my lifeline, my true hero. She possesses such a pure heart and spirit. Those who know and love her, are a better person to have her in their life.

How do I thank her for unselfishly giving me one of her kidneys? There really is no words. If tables were turned, she knows I would not have hesitated to be the first one tested. In fact, if it had been anyone of my siblings, all of us would be right there for each other.

Patricia gave me the opportunity feel the warm sand on my feet every summer, watch my children's faces every Christmas, hold my granddaughter, and nearly 40 years of marriage. She gave me years to love, laugh, learn, and LIVE! On April 27, 2013 it will be 30 years since she gave me "life again." God bless her.

This year, I celebrated another big birthday surprise party, my 60th. Thirty years after my kidney transplant, I now face a new battle of heart failure. I have been on Tufts Medical Center's heart transplant list of 3 1/2 years. There is life after heart failure and kidney failure. You must stay positive, eat healthy, and exercise...but most importantly ~ love and live life to the fullest. Respect the body you live in...treat it right, and it will do the best it can for you.

Never ever give up on the prize...after all the prize is living.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1960 postcard published by the owner of Eddie's Motor Inn in Quincy Point. It had just been built next to Eddie's Diner at the junction of what was then Route #3 and Quincy Avenue, known as the "Gateway to Cape Cod." The motor inn, with 24 new modern rooms, was a member of Quality Courts United which was the first group of independent motel owners to offer amenities such as: wall-to-wall carpeting, tile baths, televisions and telephones in every room along with 24-hour service. The adjacent Eddie's Diner, shown in the insert, opened in 1942 and was a famous Quincy eating spot until it was destroyed by fire 20 years ago in 1993. This gateway location is now home to a block of commercial businesses that includes the Quincy branch of the South Shore Bank. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Mrs. Arthur Shields of 28 Empire St., Germantown, said she and a neighbor watched three disc-shaped objects, flashing red and white lights and making no sound, swing like pendulums in the sky.

SHIPPING TERMINAL PLANNED AT SQUANTUM

The Quincy Development Commission voted to ask the Massachusetts Port Authority for a meeting on Massport's proposal to build a multimillion-dollar shipping terminal on the Neponset River at the site of the old Squantum Naval Air Station.

The QDC felt the terminal could be built in conjunction with the controversial Point Squanto development, a proposed $150 million waterfront complex of high-rise apartments, business establishments, and industrial plants.

"There is no doubt that a library in Adams Shore would benefit more people than a library located in Houghs Neck," he said.

READERS FORUM

Contractor Should Have Supervised Plow Drivers

Response to Bill Zam-zow's letter in the Reader's Forum 4/4/13: "Senior City Officials Responsible for Snow Plowing"

Well, William, I guess you spend too much time watching MY show on QATV, and not enough time watching the actual City Council meeting where Commissioner Raymondi mentioned there was a problem with the snowplowing contractor, and then, on the same week, was on again in a different forum, and again admitted there was a problem, and said that the contractor was going to be spoken to about the lack of supervision of their snow plowing workers.

As far as understanding the basic notions of managerial responsibility, I understand that two can enter into a contract, and one of the parties may not be faithful to that contract...and the other party may not know it for a certain amount of time. But, when you have the governor declaring a state of emergency, extremely heavy snowfall, loss of power, etc., all happening at the same time, it is difficult to monitor each and every snowplow. Maybe you ought to volunteer to supervise next year, William. Then I'm sure our streets will all be cleaned up by the time we wake up in the morning.

Bottom line is that the contractor should have supervised their own men and equipment, as we taxpayers were expecting them to do so. Unfortunately, the contractor the city used previously was not the low bidder this past winter, so Quincy got what it paid for. Again William, maybe you'll get involved next winter, be on the lookout for how these private contractors fulfill their obligations, and show us how it's done.

As Ben Franklin said, "idleness is the Dead Sea that swallows all virtues."

Congratulates To Rick Pitino, Jim Calhoun

Last Monday (April 1) the University of Louisville won the National Basketball Championship and when I was in the Army, stationed at Fort Dix, I attended the University of Louisville Law School.

Also, (head coach) Rick Pitino was a basketball player and graduate of University of Massachusetts, as was I. We both joined Lambda Chi Alpha, which makes him my fraternity brother.

I also had the opportunity this past week to attend a seminar featuring Coach Jim Calhoun, who also won the National Basketball Championship, while a coach at University of Connecticut.

Many years ago, when he graduated from Braintree, Jim Calhoun called me and asked for a tryout with the Koch Club. He turned out to be a great basketball player for the Koch Club and we won the Massachusetts State Semi Pro Championship. The plaque for this honor hangs in Mayor Thomas Koch's office and is on public display.

My congratulations to both these great coaches.

It has been a great pleasure for me to be associated with these great men.

In Sync Center of the Arts, 550 Adams St., Quincy, announces two new music instructors have joined its staff.

They are Liz Lohnes, a singer-songwriter from Weymouth, and Victoria Rios, a singer-songwriter from San Francisco.

Lohnes will graduate from the Berklee College of Music in May with a dual degree in Music Business and Vocal Performance. She has an extensive performance resume including releasing an album of original material as well as performing the National Anthem at Gillette Stadium.

Lohnes has been writing music for 10 years.

"I'm so excited to start teaching at In Sync, I can't wait to help my students express themselves through music," Lohnes said.

Teri Mangiaratti, In Sync owner, said, "In Sync students are in for a treat working with Liz. She is a young firecracker and extremely talented performer. Our young musicians are going to love her and learn so much from taking her classes."

Rios has spent most of her life studying music and theatre. She spent much of her teenage years performing beat poetry, at coffee house open mics, and spoken word. She has studied at the Idyllwild School of Music and the Arts, San Francisco School of the Arts, Marin Theatre Company, and the American Conservatory Theatre. She acted as artistic director of the No Holds Bard Theatre, a youth driven Shakespeare company for two years.

Rios currently lives in Quincy and is pursuing a degree in songwriting at Berklee College of Music.

"I am having so much fun teaching the In Sync musical theater classes already and cannot wait to get started with private music lessons this fall," Rios said. "My passion lives with watching children grow and learn through theater and music and In Sync is the perfect environment to nurture that growth."

Mangiaratti said:

"Having Victoria working with our music and theater students is an absolute dream. I can't wait to see what wonderful things are in store for her students."

Quincy Boy Among First In The Nation Boy Scout Benson Tai Earns New Game Design Merit Badge

A Quincy teen is among the first Boy Scouts in the nation to earn the brand new Game Design Merit Badge announced by the Boy Scouts of America.

Benson Tai of Troop 42 in Quincy earned the Game Design badge at "Merit Badge University," an event hosted by the Boy Scouts Boston Minuteman Council at Harvard University each year.

The Boston Minuteman Council hopes the exciting new Game Design Merit Badge will inspire thousands of boys to explore a career in this industry. This badge is the latest STEM-related merit badge to be unveiled by the Boy Scouts and it was designed in Massachusetts by MIT Lincoln Labs in partnership with the Boy Scouts Boston Minuteman Council.

Scouts who work on the Game Design merit badge will likely look at the games they play differently and with a new level of appreciation. To earn this merit badge, a Scout is required to analyze different types of games; describe play value, content, and theme; and understand the significance of intellectual property as it relates to the game industry.

Over a two-year period, volunteers from the game industry and game enthusiasts across the country created and tested the merit badge requirements and accompanying pamphlet text to ensure the merit badge pamphlet held the young person's interest, was challenging and fun, and required minimal out-of-pocket expense to complete.

The Scout puts his newfound knowledge to use by designing a game and creating a design notebook for this project. In his notebook, the Scout must demonstrate an initial concept, multiple design iterations based on initial testing, and feedback from blind testing. Once his concept is approved, the Scout can begin to build a prototype of his game. Testing of a Scout's game can be done at Scouting functions such as camp outings. For his game design, he can choose from a wide range of media, from cards to boards, dice, and even designing a smartphone application.

Garden Club Federation Offers Gardening Study School Course

The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, INC (GCFM) recently offered Gardening Study School, Course IV, Series 9 on April 4 and 5th at Tower Hill Botanic Garden in Boylston.

Gardening Study School presents continuing education and basic gardening information by experts in the field. Participants who successfully pass an examination of the material presented for each of four sequenced yearly courses receive a Gardening Consultant Certificate accredited by National Garden Club, Inc (NGC) and are able to participate in a state Gardening Consultant Council, as well as educational activities and field trips.

Having completed successfully four years of course study, both Cynthia Lewis and Pat Artis of the Wollaston Garden Club received their certification as Gardening Study Consultants. Anita Fasano, who is in her third year of study, will complete the school next April. Lewis is also an NGC accredited Landscape Design Consultant.

Each year's NGC course consists of 10 hours of instruction, which may include field tours of botanic or test gardens. Instruction this year consisted of lectures on "specialized styles of gardening," "techniques for growing woody ornamentals," "home irrigation techniques," "techniques for growing fruit," "nature's pollinators," and a plant identification workshop.

Wollaston Garden Club (WGC) members have been participating actively in further education in all of the national schools for the past five years. Members have received certificates in landscape design and environmental studies, and attended flower show judges school.

Three garden club members: Cynthia Lewis, Carol Fischer and Rebecca Dinsmore are also Massachusetts Master Gardeners. WGC awards partial scholarships to active club members of three years, who successfully complete each course. WGC President, Jan Clifford commended the club's national school participants who "bring such depth of knowledge and skills to both the garden club and the larger community." Meat Loaf With Rice

Although I enjoy making meatloaf any way, today's recipe is a bit different because I am adding boiled rice to it for very favorable results.

The wonderful thing about having meat loaf is the leftovers the next day. A sandwich made with meat loaf is a favorite of many.

MEAT LOAF WITH RICE

1 cup boiled rice (brown or white)
1 ½ pounds ground meat (turkey, beef, etc.)
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2 eggs

½ cup tomato sauce
1 tablespoon oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
Slices of your favorite cheese for topping (I used provolone.)

In a bowl, mix the eggs, add the bread crumbs, meat, rice and all the rest of the ingredients except the cheese slices and mix well until blended. Place the meat loaf on a greased cookie sheet shaped like a log, and place the slices of cheese over it. Or place the mixture in a greased loaf pan.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for 35 minutes or until done.

Stuffed Red Peppers With Eggplant

One of the most versatile vegetables is something cooked with peppers, red or green - it doesn't make any difference, they're all so tasty.

Today's recipe - a family favorite - is for stuffed red peppers with eggplant. They can be served as a side dish or just as an entrée.

There are a couple of steps to prepare them, but it is all worth it with the results.

STUFFED RED PEPPERS WITH EGGPLANT

4 red bell peppers
2 small eggplants (cut in small pieces)
16 ounces tomato sauce
¼ cup green olives (chopped)
¼ cup black olives (chopped)
2 garlic cloves (minced)
¼ cup Parmesan cheese plus ¼ cup seasoned breadcrumbs for topping

Enough vegetable oil mixed with olive oil for sautéing the eggplant

Place the peppers with the tops off on a greased cookie sheet and bake in a 400-degree oven for 15 minutes.

In a skillet, heat the oil and sauté the garlic and the egg plant in batches. Drain on paper towel and set aside. When the eggplant is all done, put it back in the skillet and add the olives, the tomato sauce and cook until well blended.

When the peppers are cool, stuff each one with the eggplant mixture. Top each one with the cheese and bread crumb mixture and broil for a couple of minutes until bubbly. Even with the extra procedures, you will love the results.

THIS 1880 PHOTOGRAPH taken by Eliza Susan Quincy shows the interior of the Josiah Quincy House. Historic New England is basing their preservation on this photo. The wallpaper and linoleum floors shown in the picture will be reproduced. The house also has a new furniture layout, including recently conserved early 19th century rattan and bamboo furniture imported from China.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE was built in 1770 by Colonel Josiah Quincy and his generations of his descendants lived there. Located on Muirhead Street in Wollaston, the house is now a museum. Photos Courtesy Historic New England land museum operations manager Melinda Huff said. "We have this wonderful document that includes all the furnishings, where they were, what the wallpaper looked like, what the floor covering looked like, and for historians it's really exciting because a lot of times things are a curator's best guess. But we have the real thing - we're able to re-install the house as it looked in 1880."

Historic New England's efforts began last year. The first step was repainting the house's interior based on a paint analysis. A bombe chest was also added to the collection of Quincy family furniture on the second floor, which includes a Boston high chest older than the house itself. That chest had been in Josiah Quincy's first two houses, each of those burned down but the chest survived.

The first floor's lower stair hall also has a new look. The furniture was rearranged to match the layout found in the photographs and other documents. In addition "made to import" early 19th century Chinese bamboo and rattan furniture, a settee and a chair set, was installed. Historic New England's conservation lab restored those pieces before bringing them to the Quincy House.

Huff said the next step is adding new wallpaper, flooring, and window treatments to the stair hall. The wallpaper and linoleum can be seen in an 1880 photograph of the house, and would be made-to-order for the museum. Historic New England is requesting funds from the city's Community Preservation Act funds to help pay for that part of the work.

"The whole project is about $118,000. We are requesting $44,000 from the CPA funds. The balance would be on our end, we match and in fact far exceed that amount," Huff said. "We have an anonymous donor who is really interested in making sure the Quincy House gets its due."

Historic New England did receive CPA funds, which went towards a lighting protection system and electric upgrades, last year. Huff hopes to have the stair hall work completed by the start of next year's visiting season on June 1, 2014 if they receive CPA funds again. The house will have a whole new look to it if the project is completed, but the emphasis on telling the story of the Quincy family will be the same.

"It will look remarkably different," Huff said. "You'll still hear the story of the multiple generations of Quincy family members who lived there. It wasn't only the colonel, the Revolutionary War hero, it was his son [Josiah II] who was a pretty important attorney and patriot. Josiah Quincy III was a president of Harvard - not too shabby of a legacy this family had. You'll hear the story but the house in appearance will be much different."

Part of the reason for the work is to increase visitation to the site. The Quincy House is open to the public the first Saturday of each month from June to October and private group tours can be arranged. The museum is free to Quincy residents.

Last year, 1,000 people visited the site, and Huff wants more people to visit in the future.

"It's a real jewel in our collection that has not had as much visitation as we'd like, especially from members of the Quincy community," Huff said.

Historic New England has also partnered with the Quincy Chamber and other historic sites in the city to open the Quincy House as part of Discover Quincy days. Huff credited Discover Quincy days for helping draw more people to the house.

"We love the idea of partnering with the historic sites - not only the Adams sites but all of the historic sites that Quincy has. It's really amazing," Huff said.

The Josiah Quincy House will be a site for this year's Cleaner, Greener Quincy day on May 4. Volunteers will be needed to help prepare the lawn for this summer's visiting season. Huff will give anyone who participates in Cleaner, Greener a special tour of the house's interior during the final hour of the cleanup.

Ada Rubman Celebrating A Happy 100th Birthday Sunday

By SCOTT JACKSON

River Bay Club resident Ada Rubman will be celebrating her 100th birthday Sunday.

Rubman was born on April 21, 1913 in Boston. Before moving to the River Bay Club last February she had lived in Milton, then in Florida, and most recently Randolph. Rubman was married to the late Haskell Rubman, and the couple had two children. Their daughter Myra Kaplan, who lives in Randolph and their son Jeffrey, a Burlington, Vermont resident.

Rubman worked in Boston for many years at First National Bank. When she wasn't working, Rubman had two great passions – dancing and playing mah-jong.

"She loved to dance and used to love to play mah-jong," Kaplan said.

"I danced to everything," Rubman said.

Rubman doesn't get to dance anymore, but she still enjoys watching it. Her favorite television show is the celebrity dance competition "Dancing with the Stars," which she watches every time it airs and then talks about it with her caretaker Sandra Deneault.

"Her favorite program is 'Dancing with the Stars.' She watches it all the time and then we discuss it – who we think is going to win," Deneault said.

Rubman is such a big fan of the show that one of her nieces got her an autographed photo of Len Goodman, Carrie Ann Inaba, and Bruno Tonioli – the show's judges.

"They signed a photograph for her, the three judges did. Her niece in Florida called directly into the studio and they signed a photograph for her, they know she is a big fan," Deneault said.

Rubman and Deneault also go out twice a week. Deneault drives her around the South Shore so she can go sightseeing and look at all the houses.

"We go out twice a week. We sightsee in different towns. We tour Quincy and look at houses and we get lunch and hang out at Nantasket. We drive everywhere – it's really fun," Deneault said. "We both like to look at all these house and wonder 'gee what did they do for a living.'"

They even travel during storms, like February's blizzard when they watched the waves come ashore at Nantasket Beach in Hull.

"We went down to Nantasket during the storm just to watch the waves," Deneault said. "We sat in the car and watched."

Deneault said the secret to living to 100 is not to worry and get stressed out.

"She doesn't drink and she doesn't smoke. But the main thing is she never stresses out like we would," Deneault said. "If we have an appointment and we're going to be late we're going to panic. She won't worry about it – that's a big thing."

Rubman celebrated her birthday at the River Bay Club during a party earlier this month for all residents with April birthdays. She was given a special cake, a bouquet of roses, and received a commendation from Mayor Tom Koch.

This weekend, Rubman will be going to the bat mitzvah of her great-granddaughter – Kaplan's granddaughter – on Saturday. Kaplan said her daughter waited to have the bat mitzvah until the day before Rubman's birthday. On Sunday, Kaplan's daughter will be hosting a brunch for the family.

9 Residents Honored As Jimmy Fund Walk Pacesetters

Nine Quincy residents were recently honored as Pacesetters for the 2012 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai.

Pacesetters are dedicated walkers who last year raised at least $1,250 each for Dana-Farber. The Quincy Pacesetters – Bob Benn, Amy Blue, Jennifer Costa, Elizabeth Crowley, Julie George, Alyssa Lydon, James Maki, Kevin Ng, and Laurel Wainwright – laced up their sneakers and collectively raised nearly $20,600 of the nearly $7 million in last year's Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, which supports adult and pediatric patient care and cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

On March 10, the Pacesetters were recognized at the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk's Extra Mile Brunch at the Boston Marriott Copley Place. In 2012, 1,386 of the 8,000 walkers achieved Pacesetter status.

"We are grateful to everyone involved in the 2012 Walk, especially to the Pacesetters, who are committed to raising a significant amount of money to benefit the advancement of research and treatment for all types of cancer," Ann Beach, director of the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, said.

The Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, a one-day charity walk that supports all cancers at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, gives participants the unique opportunity to walk the historic Boston Athletic Association's (BAA) Boston Marathon route and to raise money for Dana-Farber. The BAA has supported the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk for 25 years.

To register for the 25th anniversary Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk on Sept. 8, or to support a walker, visit www.JimmyFundWalk.org or call (866) 531-9255. Registration is easy and walkers can enter the discount code NEWS for $5 off the registration fee. An expected 8,500 people will participate in the event with the goal of raising more than $7 million. Since 1989, the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk has raised nearly $87 million for Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

MAY I SEE SOME IDENTIFICATION, PLEASE?

The popularity of ID bracelets in this country dates back to the early 1960s, when teenagers wore them loosely around their wrists. These silver or gold bracelets feature large links that span out from each side of a slightly arched plate upon which the wearer's name is inscribed. Today, ID bracelets are worn not only by teenage boys and girls, but also by their older counterparts. In fact, ID bracelets are so ubiquitous nowadays that they may be regarded as the jewelry equivalent of jeans. They are smart looking, casual, and hip all at the same time. Current updated versions may up the cool quotient with double-wrap chains or textured links. ID bracelets never go out of style.

Identification bracelets have long been a favorite type of jewelry among many people. There is just something special about having a bracelet that is personalized with your first name engraved or etched into it. You can buy great identification bracelets at our store conveniently located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our professional and knowledgeable staff is anxious to work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. With so many jewelry styles to choose from, you'll want one of each. Local Runners: Marathon Bomb Scene Chaotic, Surreal end of the race. Had he not stopped for that break, Foley said he was on pace to finish at the same time the bombs went off. Foley was a minute away from finishing when police stopped runners from turning from Hereford Street onto Boylston for the marathon's homestretch.

"We're doing the race going up the hill on (on Hereford) and the police told us all to stop," Foley said. "They didn't know what was going on, those police officers didn't see the explosions, they thought it might have been a manhole explosion. A couple minutes later they told us it was over."

A resident of Gloucester Street, one block east of Hereford, let Foley and other runners take shelter in their apartment after the marathon stopped. That helped him recover from the race, by getting fluids and staying warm, and let him charge his phone to contact family members.

"They let a few of us stay there, track our family's down, gave us Gatorade, and let us charge our phones," Foley said.

Foley had family members waiting for him near the finish line. They were unharmed, but witnessed all the chaos around them.

"My family was at the finish line. They saw it all happen — the explosions, body parts flying, and everyone running away," Foley said.

Foley was running in his eighth Boston Marathon, raising money for service members stationed in Iraq and Afghanistan. He never imagined a bombing taking place in Boston.

"You see it happen in other places, but you never think it will happen in your backyard," Foley said. "It's just very, very disturbing. It was surreal, I was running a good race and then it stopped. The world just stopped."

Erika Djerf, a 2005 North Quincy High graduate, was running in her first Boston Marathon on Monday to raise money for the JDRF. She was still running the race, closing in on the finish line at Copley Square, when the bombs went off. She was stopped a half-mile away from end of the course.

"I was a half mile away when they stopped the race. We didn't have any idea what was going on," Djerf said.

Djerf said her father had been tracking her progress throughout the race. He was at the 26-mile mark when he heard the explosions, and started running up the course to find her.

"He pulled me to the side and said we need to get out of here," Djerf said.

"I'm so deeply saddened by what happened. It's an emotional roller coaster, I can't get over what happened," she added.

Djerf's cousin Tracy Wilson, a Quincy attorney, normally runs the marathon. She decided not to run in this year's race and wanted to watch Djerf run instead. Wilson and another cousin were at the 26-mile mark, though they were separated from Djerf's dad and other family members. Wilson and her family might have been in the stands near the finish line if they hadn't been separated.

"Five minutes before [the explosions] I said we should go to the stands," Wilson said. "But we didn't because we were looking for other cousins and Erika's father."

Wilson and her cousin heard the bomb go off and started running west away from the finish line.

"We heard the bomb and smelled the smoke. It's crazy; you don't know what to think. We didn't see the second bomb. We just kept going straight towards Mass. Ave," Wilson said. "So many thoughts were going through our heads. We didn't know if another bomb was going to go off."

Cellphone service in the area was down, so Wilson and her cousin couldn't use a phone until they reached a friend's house in Brookline Village. From there they contacted family members and were able to get a ride back home.

All three runners say they plan to run the Boston Marathon again next year.

"I think they want you to stop your day-to-day activities," Foley said. "I'm definitely doing it next year."

"If the race had not been stopped because of this horrific tragedy, maybe not. But now, there is no doubt in my mind that I will be running Boston in 2014 with my JDRF team and crossing the finish line," Djerf said. "I will run not only for JDRF but for the victims who were affected by yesterday's tragic events."

"I would do it next year. You can't let it bother you,"

Wilson said.

The FBI is currently investigating the attack. In a briefing Tuesday morning, President Barack Obama vowed to bring whoever is responsible to justice.

"This was a heinous and cowardly act. And given what we now know about what took place, the FBI is investigating it as an act of terrorism. Any time bombs are used to target innocent civilians it is an act of terror," President Obama said. "What we don't yet know, however, is who carried out this attack, or why; whether it was planned and executed by a terrorist organization, foreign or domestic, or was the act of a malevolent individual. That's what we don't yet know. And clearly, we're at the beginning of our investigation."

"It will take time to follow every lead and determine what happened. But we will find out. We will find whoever harmed our citizens and we will bring them to justice."

Quincy Police were called in to assist in the aftermath of the attack. The department sent motorcycle officers and bomb-sniffing dogs to Boston, and officers were assigned to Quincy's four MBTA stations to help with security.

"We sent 10 of our motorcycle officers in last night, and our four explosive detection dogs and they are back in there today. We were asked to assist at the T train stations in Boston and this morning we provided our dogs at the Quincy Adams, Quincy Center, Wollaston, and North Quincy stations at rush hour, just to provide a presence," Police Chief Paul Keenan said Tuesday. "They will be in Boston as long as they are needed but I know that they are trying to wrap this up as soon as they can."

Victims of the attack were taken to nine area hospitals including Carney Hospital and St. Elizabeth's Medical Center — both are owned by the same company as Quincy Medical Center, Steward Health Care.

According to a spokesman for Steward, one injured person was treated in the Emergency Department at Quincy Medical Center Monday. The patient received some stitches, was treated and released.

Security at QMC was put on high alert, but no additional personnel were called in.

Quincy DPW Offering Home Composting Bins

The City of Quincy is offering rodent-resistant home composting bins for $45 cash or check.

Compost bins are available at the DPW rear yard Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Saturdays through mid-December from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The Earth Machine has a capacity of 11 cubic feet, the equivalent of about 4 bags of leaves. It has a sliding door at the bottom for removing compost and a locking lid. It is made from 50 percent post-consumer recycled plastic. Samples of the bins can be seen by Googling The Earth Machine.

The compost bins help hold in heat and moisture, keep animals out, and look more attractive than open compost heaps. Organic material will start to turn to compost in the bins in 3 to 6 months.

Compost, known as "black gold" to gardeners, replenishes nutrients in the soil, helps retain moisture, makes the soil easy to work, and helps plants resist disease. Compost makes plants healthy so they can overcome adverse conditions without pesticides or chemical fertilizers.

Fill the compost bin using three parts "brown" material and one part "green" material. This provides food for the compost organisms in a recipe that will not create odors.

"Brown" ingredients include leaves, straw, dried grass clippings, wood chips, sawdust, pine needles, and paper products such as paper towels, napkins, bags, plates, coffee filters, tissue and newspaper.

"Green" materials include fresh grass clippings, weeds, fruit and vegetable scraps, coffee grounds, tea bags, eggshells, manure, and seaweed. Make sure the materials are damp as you build the pile, especially the "browns."

As the pile builds, sprinkle on several shovelfuls of rich garden soil or finished compost after every 12" of fresh material.

Leaves are an important ingredient of a compost pile. Without them, a compost pile may become too wet and create odors. If you have leaves available, use them to start your compost heap and save the rest to add during the summer. Compostable food scraps and grass clippings should be buried under about 6" of leaves, where they will decompose without odor. If leaves are in short supply, add plenty of paper towels, napkins and torn up paper bags to provide the necessary carbon, and always bury your food scraps under this material.

Most of the composting work is done by soil organisms that convert organic material to humus. They need oxygen, just as we do. Lack of oxygen will slow down the composting process and cause odors. Turn the pile, fluff it with a hoe or turning tool, or build air passages into the pile to keep your compost pile aerobic and odor-free. Or use a compost bin that allows air to penetrate the pile.

In about three months, the material will start to turn to compost. The material at the bottom of the pile will be ready first. As more time goes by, the level of compost in the pile will rise until it is easy to access just below the surface.

Compost is ready to use when it looks like rich, brown soil and no longer resembles the original materials.

Maureen Flores To Receive DOVE Advocate Of Year Award

By EMILY TAFT

When North Quincy resident Maureen Flores became a survivor of domestic violence 20 years ago she had taken refuge at the Quincy DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) shelter, where she later found her calling as a Civilian Domestic Violence Advocate.

Flores will be honored as the Advocate of the Year during an April 26th Victims Rights Conference in Boston.

"I was just astounded. I didn't even know this existed. I just didn't see it coming. You think about these wonderful group of people that you work with and that are my peers. They like me and they wanted to nominate me, and that's wonderful, but then there is this whole other agency that might know my name, or I may have talked to them, but they voted for me, and that's pretty cool," said Flores. "Some days I can't believe I get paid to do this; I would do this for free."

The award recognizes an individual advocate from a public or private agency, who has made extraordinary contributions to the lives of victims and survivors.

Flores didn't always see herself working for DOVE; she originally had plans to work in the insurance industry until the day she found herself in the DOVE shelter in 1992.

"Back in the end of 92' I took my two kids and we actually stayed in the DOVE shelter," said Flores. "I pretty quickly realized the insurance industry that I thought I was going to be working in for the rest of my life wasn't what I wanted to be doing. This is what I needed to be doing. I kind of had this 'Ah-Ha' moment and was like, 'oh this is why I went through this, because this is what I need to be doing'."

Her career with DOVE began as a part time relief worker in the emergency shelters, it wasn't until three years ago that she became a civilian domestic violence advocate.

"It just started out very part time and it just kind of evolved over the years. Most of my work has been working with those that have found themselves coming to our shelter. Then three years ago I was offered a different role out of the shelter, which was probably a good thing because shelter work is kind of difficult sometimes, it's really intense," said Flores.

"Now I am down at the Quincy Police Department, still under DOVE, but my role is a Civilian Domestic Violence Advocate. It's very interesting work, the role is multifaceted so I reach out to victims who have been involved in some type of police incident that's domestic violence."

For the past three years Flores has been working in conjunction with the Quincy, Randolph, and Holbrook police departments under the Violence Against Women Act. She provides a number of services to those who have experienced recent police involvement, such as giving support, resources and information about the legal system, providing safety planning, restraining order assistance and court accompaniment, and offering trainings to police departments.

"Really just kind of cold calls like, 'Hey this is who I am, this is why I have your information, I just want to make sure you're okay, and do you have what you need and how can I help you'," said Flores.

"For everybody it's different, sometimes people want that hands on approach so I will go to court with them, I'll help them get a restraining order, I'll sit with them through the criminal process just to have somebody there with them, if that's what they need. Some people are just fine doing their own work, and some people just need a little hand-holding. Knowledge is power and this is very much a survivor led program."

Among the three departments, Flores sees around 1,200 to 1,400 police reports a year and every case she says is different.

"It's so varied that I could be reading a report that says the police came out to keep the peace, or the neighbors called and said it was loud, really kind of vague, and there isn't even an arrest type of situation. When I do talk to that person it's like this huge story, because people don't call the police every time, they try not to call the police," Flores said.

"There is this whole thing about keeping secrets within the world of domestic violence, that you're going to make it worse if you call the police, if you're not ready to make a move in your life, a change. So you don't call the police, you don't tell anyone. Even to just have someone they can talk to about what the options are for that next step, maybe there's not a step right away, and maybe this is just so overwhelming that they don't know if they can take that step. Me calling them, it just forces that conversation so at least they know there is somebody there."

Flores said that when she first started working with DOVE the cases that would come in were predominantly just domestic violence, no underlining compound issues, but more and more she has seen victims of domestic violence struggling with other issues as well, such as drug abuse or homelessness.

"Back when I started doing the work, predominantly more of the people I worked with were straight domestic violence, there were no compound issues. There might have been some unhealthy coping mechanisms but not the more difficult things we see now," Flores said.

"I know years ago people felt like we're going to make them do something that their not ready to do, and we have never really had that outlook, or view, but I think that's how domestic violence agencies were perceived. I don't give advice, it's not my situation, there's no way I could give advice. We can talk about options, and that's the way I prefer to look at it, and I think that is more palatable to people."

Not only is Flores one of only three DOVE civilian domestic violence advocates in Massachusetts, she is also busy as a member of the high risk table through the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office. The team, which consist of agencies involved in making changes and being supportive of victims of domestic violence, recently had success in a case where Flores said everyone played the part they were suppose to.

"Everybody did their part, everybody did a great job," said Flores. "We had success and he got 10 years, and I was lucky enough to be working with that victim, survivor, and it was a great way that we continued to make sure that she got what she needed and he got what he deserved."

Flores said she doesn't plan on retiring or ever not being a part of the DOVE program.

"I can't imagine doing a different job. How can you do a different job when the job that you have just comes so second nature to you and is so much apart of your heart, and about who you are, how can I think about doing anything else," said Flores. "I would love to end domestic violence. I just want people to know (this exists). I can remember not knowing, not knowing that any of this existed. I was in the shelter but I still didn't recognize that I was a battered woman. I don't want anybody to not know, that they don't have to live like this, there is always options."

Flores can be contacted on her cell phone at 617-653-4226 or the Quincy Police Department at 617-745-5863.

Scout Extravaganza April 26-28

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy Boy Scouts and Girls Scouts will be holding their first annual Scout Extravaganza on the weekend of April 26th to the 28th at Pageant Field to raise awareness about the scouting program and what it has to offer youths in the Quincy community.

The extravaganza, only open to the public on April 27th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., will allow Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts to come together in one single event. Quincy residents can stop by anytime during the allotted hours on the 27th, with a food donation, to see a number of different programs and talk with unit leaders and have fun trying traditional and not so traditional scout activities.

"This is our first one in recent history," said Diane Trubiano, Cubmaster Pack 42. "The event is free to Quincy Residents on Saturday that bring a nonperishable food item for donation to the Quincy Crisis Center. It is our partnerships with organizations like the Quincy Crisis center that help us build the community for our scouts."

Scouts will participate in Boy and Girl Scout activities such as a pinewood derby, rope bridges, outdoor cooking, tent sites, field games and water bottle rockets, and a campfire on Saturday evening, among many others.

"Friday night and Sunday the extravaganza is open to Scouts only. Scouts will be spending the weekend spending time together through fellowship activities, games, meals, among other things," said Trubiano. "The extravaganza is an opportunity for the different programs and units in Quincy to come together and build strength in our scouting community."

During the event they will also be accepting registrations for both programs, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts for youth of all ages.

"We are expecting to host approximately 300 people from the various Scouting Programs and have maybe 500 or so day visitors come and see what we are all about," said Trubiano. "One thousand people would be great, but I'm not sure if there is enough parking at Pageant. Fliers went home to 7,500 youth to let them know about the day."

The scouting program supports youth from the ages of 6-18 years of age in providing character development in a fun and educational environment. The program helps to shape and develop the citizenry and community leaders of tomorrow.

"Every month we offer programs to boys and girls that expand their skills and consciousness in the areas of citizenship, academics, sports, nature, outdoor skills, and faith. Through their accomplishments in these areas they develop their own self-esteem as well as respect and compassion for others," said Trubiano.

"The Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts organizations strive to be active community members but all too often people say they did not know we are in this community. It is our intention through this event to let the residents of Quincy know the Scouting Programs are alive and well here and making a difference in the lives of hundreds of youth."

Most programs are year round and each unit, Pack, Troop or Crew, sets its own schedule.

For more information visit the Girl Scouts online at www.girlscoutsquincy.org and to find a Cub Scout Pack, Boy Scout Troop, or Venture Crew visit www.beascout.org.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

IMPLANTS FOR MULTIPLE-TOOTH REPLACEMENT

Many patients have benefitted greatly from single-tooth dental implants, which more closely approximate the root structure and crown of a natural tooth than any other tooth-replacement method. As effective as this technique is for restoring the look and function of a missing tooth, it can also be utilized to restore up to an entire dental arch. Using dental implants to restore a whole new row of teeth is somewhat analogous to erecting a picket fence. At regular intervals, fence posts (titanium implants) are embedded into the ground (jawbone) to serve as foundation points. Cross members (of rigid acrylic or titanium framework) are attached to the posts, followed by the attachment of pickets (teeth). Strength, durability, and beauty are implant hallmarks.

If you are missing one or more teeth and would like to smile, speak and eat again with comfort and confidence, there is good news! Dental implants are teeth that can look and feel just like your own. A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient, one on one. When was the last time you had your teeth checked by a professional? Call us now at 617-479-6220 and schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

More than 3,000 people are killed each year in crashes involving a distracted driver and an estimated additional 416,000 are injured in car crashes involving a distracted driver. Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton helped bring the mobile to Quincy and said that it is a great service to Quincy teens.

"This is a fantastic service for kids, especially new drivers," said Minton. "Think about the many times you have driven and something has happened without being distracted, and now add your phone, or a distracttion in there and the results could be much worse."

Robert Marchionne of Albert Marchionne Insurance Agency, Inc., in Quincy, said that the mobile is something that is not only great for young drivers but also the entire community.

"Driving is not the time for multi-tasking and even hands free can be distracting," said Marchionne. "This simulator provides a great service to the community, mostly young people, but also the community at large."

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, sending or receiving a text takes a driver's eyes off the road for an average of 4.6 seconds, the equivalent of driving the length of an entire football field at 55 miles per hour, blind.

"This has become such a problem," said Albert Marchionne, Jr., of Albert Marchionne Insurance Agency, Inc. "Everyone of us witnesses distracted driving on a daily basis on our way to work. You look over at the car next to you and most likely that driver is looking down at their phone, or reading a newspaper. This is a great way to try and change those habits."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

HEADS UP FOR GIRL SOCCER PLAYERS

Recent widespread pronouncement of the National Football League's concerns about concussions suffered by professional players may lead one to think that only burly guys sustain concussions. However, parents should take careful note of the fact that the number of young female soccer players suffering concussions account for the second largest amount of all concussions reported by young athletes. Girls make up 48 percent of the more than 3 million youngsters registered in US Youth Soccer leagues, so it's only reasonable to assume that a large number of girls are in danger of sustaining concussions due to heading the ball. Parents and coaches are urged to limit this part of the game to a minimum, at least in practices.

When accidents happen lives are changed forever. Injuries can range from minor scrapes to more serious broken bones and trauma. Some injuries are obvious, but soft tissue injuries are often not noticed at the time of the accident. Chiropractors know how serious an injury can be, and can help you get back on your feet and back in the game. Could safe and gentle chiropractic care be beneficial to you? At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, your good health is our main concern. Call 617-472-4220 today to schedule an appointment. Our office is located at 112 McGrath Hwy, Quincy. Chiropractic is a scientifically sound and time-proven natural way to health. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Both boy and girl athletes may derive a lot of benefit from a chiropractic assessment that may uncover imbalances that might affect athletic (and everyday) performance.

A Call To Veterans Continues

By GEORGE NICHOLSON Commander
Quincy Veterans Council

The last article I wrote in The Quincy Sun, around the Veterans Day time-frame, was a call for the veterans of Quincy and neighboring communities to come out of the woodwork and join the established veterans organizations. The quality, the sacrifice and the commitments of our service in uniform to this country cannot be allowed to simply fade away and dry up on the vine.

We have been places and seen things that make us appreciate, far more than any of our friends, families and neighbors, just how much we have and lucky we are, here in America. Our experiences cannot be forgotten or our nation will have learned nothing.

Sequestration is in place. A by-product of that fact is the danger to federal and state veteran benefits and services. This year's crop of new representatives to Congress has fewer veterans among them than hoped for and that means a naturally smaller, truly representative active voice among those decision makers. Always keep in mind that the more members these organizations have to show that they represent to Washington, the more Washington listens to us.

Statistically, for every veteran there is also an average of between two and four other family members of voting age. That means that with 28 million veterans in this country, we have the potential to influence 120 million votes!

Keep in mind, by way of example, that it was through the combined efforts of the major veterans organizations, led by The American Legion that, in 1944, overcame a reluctant Congress, and brought into being one of the most profound, nationally beneficial and productive pieces of legislation that any government in the world has ever seen or implemented, namely, the G.I. Bill. That historic legislation alone clearly establishes the indisputable value of the veterans organizations to the American veteran and to America as a nation. Our disabled brothers and their families need our help and support. They need us to be there for them now, just as they were there for us back then. Our children and our communities need us also and benefit most when we step forward in volunteer and benevolent activities.

A great way to accomplish these things is and always has been through the many programs and services offered by and among the veterans organizations. When you watch the parades of Veterans Day and Memorial Day here in the city of Quincy now, you see fewer and fewer veterans out in the line of march. One legitimate explanation for those decreasing numbers is the increasing age of the active members of most of the veterans organizations here in Quincy. The bulk of the active membership among those organizations in our city right now, are comprised of Vietnam and Korean War veterans. There are only token numbers of younger veterans, among them, who represent the time-frame from the post-Vietnam era to the current Afghan war.

We have, according to official census records, more than 5,000 veterans in the city of Quincy alone. (A potential of 20,000 votes in Quincy!) While it is time for the next generation of veterans step forward pick up the torch and carry on, there is still plenty of time for every veteran of every era who has the time and the ability to step forward and join as well.

In order to step forward, several questions have to be answered.

Why are there so many veterans organizations and how do they differ from each other? Which ones would I be eligible to join? How do I make contact with someone from that organization to learn more about it or join? What do they require of me for membership? What would be expected of me, as a member by the veterans organizations? Here are some answers to those questions.

Almost all of the major veterans organizations today, including the newest ones from the Gulf and Afghan wars, are officially recognized and chartered by Congress. The primary purpose and objectives of most of the organizations are universally the same; the care of our veterans and their families by the preservation and constant improvement of benefits and services to them; support for our active military; defense and security of our nation and the welfare and support of our children and our communities.

The differences among the veterans organizations are defined by the criteria for membership and to a lesser extent, the programs they run.

I will give you a brief rundown of some of the distinctions between the requirements for some of the major veterans organizations only, as there are too many to detail here.

The eligibility requirements for some of the smaller veterans organizations are fairly well implied in the name of the organizations. Virtually all of the organizations require no less than a discharge under honorable conditions and the presentation of documentation of proof of service (DD 214). Virtually all of the organizations have online websites that you can peruse for individual details on eligibility.

The American Legion is open to all veterans who have served on active duty, including guard and reserve duty during the periods of war as defined in their congressional charter.

The VFW also requires wartime service that was conducted on foreign soil and for which a specific campaign medal was awarded to you.

AMVETS requires that you have served honorably in the Armed Forces of the United States any time for World War II, right up through the present time.

The Disabled American Veterans (DAV) require service during any period of war, especially if you are injured or disabled to any degree as a result of your military service. It should be noted, however, that having a disability is not a requirement for membership in the DAV.

Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA) requires active duty during this period; The Marine Corp League requires only that you have served in the Marine Corps; The Jewish War Veterans of the USA (JWV) seeks veterans of the Jewish faith who have served America; The Italian American Veterans (ITAM) organization, by its charter, does not require that a veteran be of Italian ancestry; Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) require service during the Vietnam era.

As I stated earlier, there are many other smaller veterans organizations and associations whose membership requirements are obviously more limited and restricted.

As an honorably discharged veteran, you are eligible to join as many of the veterans organizations for which you are qualified as you may choose. You can be as active and involved in any capacity as you see fit. If being an active member is not feasible for you at present, then join and support just as a card-carrying member.

Many of the veterans organizations have subordinate/ancillary components to them such as Ladies Auxiliaries and Sons chapters. Some organizations allow for associate/supporting non-veteran memberships at their post home or chapter levels. Here in the city of Quincy, we have five American Legion posts, one VFW post, one DAV chapter, a Jewish War Veterans chapter and two Marine Corps League chapters as our primary composition of veterans organizations.

We also have a composite group made up of representatives of all these organizations in the city known as the Quincy Veterans Council. I have assembled the names and phone numbers of representatives from each of these organizations on the Council and have arranged with the Quincy Veterans Services Agent, Mr. Tom Stansbury, to leave these contact names and numbers with his office as a central contact point. If you call Mr. Stansbury at 617-376-1193, he will put you in touch with a representative of any of the veteran organizations in which you might be interested.

All things change with time. You adapt and move on, or you fall by the wayside and perish. The Internet, Facebook and Twitter have all made communications very easy. The problem is that these venues also promote isolation. In spite of these changing times, there is still no substitute for visibility and camaraderie.

As veterans, it remains absolutely vital that we remain active, that we remain visible and that we continue to impact and influence strongly the future and stability of our nation. The tasks that once belonged to and were carried on by our fathers, as veterans, are now passed on to us. We need your experience and influence in the shaping and sustaining of America's future.

We look forward to having you among us and to the contributions your presence makes to our mutual purposes and objectives. You are the key to our revitalization. That Band of Brothers that is the veterans of the City of Quincy have battles we must continue to fight and victories that we must yet achieve for the sake of our fellow veterans, our families, our community and our nation. Please join us...and bring a fellow vet along with you!

Tips for Driveway Improvements

An attractive, well-kept driveway can help a home make a good first impression, provide protection against flooding, and even add value to your investment. But replacing a driveway can be a costly endeavor.

Better Business Bureau advises home owners to take the time to choose a contractor you can trust. When looking to hire a contractor for your driveway, BBB recommends the following tips:

Check references. Ask for local references and verify that the contractor is in compliance with all local licensing, bonding and insuring requirements. Always check out a contractor on bbb.org before doing business with them. Before you agree to a paving or paving repair job, there are three things to check: the status of the contractor's license, whether the contractor's bond is current, and the contractor's complaint resolution history with BBB. You may want to make sure that the contracting company is a member of an industry trade association such as National Asphalt Pavement Association.

Get it in writing. Be sure that the contract spells out which party is responsible for grading and subgrading, equipment and materials, labor, pavement thickness and smoothness, etc. Make sure the payment schedule is satisfactory and that there is a clear guarantee or warranty for the work. Also, get in writing an agreement that your yard is to be returned to pre-construction condition. Don't sign an agreement without understanding it.

Know your rights. If you hire a contractor, pay by check or credit card when the work is completed to your satisfaction. If you are dealing with a traveling contractor, be extra cautious and make sure to ask for identification and note the license plate number on the contractor's vehicle. If you get "buyer's remorse," you may be able to change your mind after the contract is signed:

In the U.S., the Federal Trade Commission has a three-day cooling off rule for in-home purchases.

In Canada, most provinces have a ten-day cooling off period for door-to-door purchases.

For more tips, visit bbb.org/news.

Leah Ryan, Ciara Forde Score 3 Goals Each Red Raiders Rally Falls Short Against Fontbonne

By BILL GRIFFIN

There were three fine stories and they almost added up to memorable victory for North Quincy's girls lacrosse team.

Captain Leah Ryan had three goals and a brilliant field-length scoring rush. Sophomore Ciara Forde, who is playing in her first season ever of competitive lacrosse, scored three goals. Sophomore goalie Marguerite Belcher was quick and sure in net and kept her team in position to make an exciting rally late in the second half.

Despite the effort, Erin Ferrara scored seven goals and Fontbonne held off North's strong finishing kick for a 16-12 non-league win at Veterans Stadium last week.

"The first half was sluggish, but we didn't give up. We kept playing with energy and we finished strong," said coach Megan Therrien whose team ended the week at 1-4.

There is a bit of magic with timeouts and Therrien's team. She called timeout with the Red Raiders down, 7-1 in the first half. North tightened up its defense, and closed with a 3-1 burst to narrow it to 8-4 at the half. North trailed 13-4 seven minutes into the second half. Another timeout. More magic. North went on 7-1 run to close within 14-11 with six minutes left in the match.

"A little bit strategy, a little bit inspiration," smiled Therrien. "In the first half, we made some adjustments like settling our passes and being patient with our shots. In the second half, I just wanted to be sure they came out of the timeout energized."

Not to worry. Ryan supplied the energy with her rush through the Fontbonne team for a goal which not only cut the lead to 13-5, but completely changed the flow of the game.

NORTH QUINCY'S Caitlin Coneran passes the ball to a teammate as a Fontbonne defender looks to break up the play.

"Absolutely, Leah's goal got us going," said Therrien. "She's such a great leader and she wants to win so much. The girls follow her and when she scored that goal, you could feel the lift it gave us."

Kristin Abban (two goals) scored on a free shot. 13-6. Ryan whirled out of the corner and fired one home. 14-7. Forde scored on a rush off a faceoff which Ryan controlled at midfield. 14-8. Ryan flew home off another faceoff. 14-10. Forde drove home low finish on a rush off a faceoff once again won by Ryan. It was 14-11 and North was right there.

"We controlled the draws, Leah controlled the middle of the field, and our wings attacked," said Therrien. "I can't believe how well Ciara is playing in her first year.

She has great speed."

Fontbonne halted the charge with two goals before Molly Brown scored on a high finish with 4:45 left to make the final 16-12. It would have been a good deal closer without the work of Fontbonne goalie Katie Porter, a Quincy native.

"What we need to do now is to have two halves like the second half," said Therrien.

Belcher was excellent in goal. She stopped two clear breakaways, four point-blank shots in front of the net and one free shot. She played good position and she moved well to the ball.

"She also cleared very well and talked to the defense to get us in the right spot," said Therrien. "She's quick and she knows how to play the shot with her body."

ford, Abban and Forde scored for the Red Raiders in the first half. Histen made a strong rush, cut through defense and scored with a low finish. Clifford scored on a hard, low shot, and Forde finished a rush off the left wing. Abban stole a pass, moved along the right wing and cut to the middle for the score.

"We started slowly, but after we made our adjustments, I thought we played well," said Therrien.

Earlier last week, North fell to Pembroke, 14-1. Ryan scored the goal and Histen played well on defense. Gabby Doody stepped up from the JV's and played a strong game in goal.

The Red Raiders will travel to Hingham April 24 and Hull April 26 and return home Monday, April 29 for a 3:45 p.m. game against Dedham.

Mike Finn Scores 4 For North Quincy

By BILL GRIFFIN

The next time someone tries to argue that there is nothing special about the North Quincy vs. Quincy rivalry, remind them of last week's lacrosse match between the two archrivals.

Quincy scored six unanswered goals by six different players in less than six minutes early in the third period and then survived remarkable performances by North Quincy forward Mike Finn and goaltender Bennie Chau for a thrilling 9-8 victory over the Red Raiders at Veterans Stadium.

"We share the same practice field, there's a camaraderie between the two teams, but when we step on the field, something different happens," said Quincy coach Bob Foley.

"Every time we play them, it's like this," added North coach Michael Joyce.

North used a smothering defense to build a 5-1 half-time lead. It looked like it would take Quincy six days to score six goals, but the Presidents came out flying for the second half rattling off goals like a gambler rattling off winners on a hot streak at Foxwoods. Aidan Pugsley, Pat Dowling, Sean Brennick, Mitchell McGowan, Brian O'Callaghan, and Jake Hallisey all hit the jackpot in the first 5:47 of the third for an stunning 7-5 Quincy lead.

The first and second halves were two completely different worlds.

"We were flatfooted and we needed to be more patient on offense instead of just driving shots into the defense," said Foley. "I talked to them about adjustments, then I left them alone to talk among themselves. I had three things written on the board. One of them was to ride the wave."

The Presidents caught the wave and rode it. There was an assembly-line quality to Quincy's goals. Max Hurlley would win the faceoff at midfield. The Presidents would take clear possession. The passing would be crisp and clean. They would cycle the ball around until there was a crease in the North defense. They would find it. They would score. The pace? Better than a goal per minute.

"The faceoffs were crucial. Max was tremendous," said Foley. "It gave us possession and it kept their attackers waiting. I think it cooled them off."

North would come back, but the only reason they were within range was Chau. In the second half, he stopped 11 blue-chip scoring chances. That's not 11 shots, that's 11 near-certain goals. He stopped breakaways, wraparounds, rebounds, point-blank shots from the slot, and skipping drives through screens. He is only a sophomore and he is something to see.

"It is amazing with the number of shots he has seen, that he makes those saves," said Joyce. "I can't believe it. He's our All Star. It's his first year on varsity, his second playing lacrosse and he makes saves a Division 1 goalie can't make."

Finn (four goals) brought the Red Raiders back. He clicked off a Chris Gorman (three goals, two assists) feed from the corner of the post to cut it to 7-6 at the end of three. After McGowan (two goals, three assists) and Dowling (three goals, one assist) upped it to 9-6 with 6:46 left, Finn entered into his own little world and nearly won the match.

"He's a gifted offensive player," said Joyce. "He has great vision and a hard shot. In the fourth period, we got our toughness back and trusted each other."

Finn, another sophomore, whirled around from the back of the net and finished a low wraparound. It was 9-7 with 6:08 left. Finn slipped home a gorgeous one-motion, no-look back-hand flip to the far corner. It was 9-8 with 3:46 left.

It was high drama in the cold, gathering darkness. Finn and Gorman buzzed the net. Quincy freshman goalie Ryan Tucker made two tough saves. O'Callaghan sailed from one end to the other clearing the ball and killing time for Quincy. North had chance after chance. Shots were blocked, shots skimmed by the corner of the net, shots sailed just high over the crossbar. Sticks cracked together. Bodies tumbled to the turf. In one final charge, Finn lowered his shoulders and slammed to the Quincy goal, but was turned back as the final horn sounded. It was great stuff.

"Our defensemen and midfielders (Ryan) Higgins, (Andrew) Cooke, (Gavin) O'Hare, Brennick, Pugsley and O'Callaghan played great in the final minutes," said Foley.

O'Callaghan was brilliant. He controlled the middle of the field with his speed, power, and toughness. He started the offense with precise, touch passes and backboned the defense with his stickhandling and clearing rushes. He is another one of those gifted sophomores in the city and he made his coach do something Foley rarely does.

"I gave him the game ball. I almost never do that. For me, it's all about team," said Foley.

Gorman had three goals, Finn one and Nolan Greene one in the first half which was controlled by the Red Raiders' defense led by Cornelius Koch, Pat Janeiro and Brendan Cox. Gorman scored two seconds before halftime for a 5-1 lead.

"We communicated in the first half. We stopped talking in the third period and it hurt us," said Joyce.

When it was over, Foley and Joyce cleaned around their benches and chatted about the great game their two teams had just played.

"It's hard competing against friends, but that's what this rivalry is about," said Foley.

Quincy finished the week at 2-3 and will meet Bishop Fenwick Thursday. The Presidents visit Hanover Wednesday, April 24 and return home Wednesday, May 1 for a 3:45 p.m. match against Dedham.

Earlier last week, Quincy fell to Scituate, 18-1 and to Silver Lake, 20-2. Reynolds scored in both games. O'Hare scored against Silver Lake, and O'Callaghan was a defensive standout against the Lakers.

Pembroke beat North, 16-2. Greene and Gorman scored for the Red Raiders. Hull stopped North, 17-2. Gorman and Finn scored for North.

North ended the week at 0-5 and hosts Abington Monday, April 22 at 3:30 p.m.

The Red Raiders travel to Hingham Wednesday, April 24 for a 4 p.m. match.

North Quincy Right-Hander Dominates Scituate In 5-1 Win Turner (11 K's) Powers Red Raiders

By JEFF OHLSON

The Red Raiders (2-1) dominated Scituate last Thursday afternoon at Adams Field to a final score of 5-1.

The star of the game for North Quincy was Red Raiders pitcher Brian Turner who held Scituate to one run over a complete game in which he fanned 11 Sailor batters, which is just two strikeouts shy of the record for a North Quincy pitcher in one game.

The win was the second straight for North who defeated Duxbury the night before by a score of 5-4.

The story for the game and for the Raiders was Turner. The sophomore sensation turned in an unbelievable performance in the first varsity start of his career for North Quincy. Turner was nearly flawless over seven frames, as he only allowed two hits against an aggressive Scituate lineup.

North Quincy coach Rick Beach spoke highly of Turner after the game.

"Brian pitched very well tonight, he did everything you ask of your starter to do on a nightly basis. Really kept them down and allowed us to build a lead, keeping pressure off of the offense," said Coach Beach.

Pacing the offense for North was shortstop Pat Verhault who went 1 for 3 and scored three runs in the game. Pat Gould also played well for North scoring two runs while drawing two walks in the game and throwing out a would be base stealer in the fifth inning.

Coach Beach said he likes what he's seen out of his offense as of late.

"We left a lot of guys in scoring position in our first game of the year and it really cost us in that game. Today we really capitalized on the opportunities that we had and as a coach you have to be happy with that. Just have to hope that going forward we continue to do that," said Coach Beach.

The first and fifth innings of the game were where the Raiders really did their damage offensively as they put up two runs in each frame.

In the first inning, Pat Gould walked to start and Pat Verhault then singled which was followed by another single by Josh Hayward for the first run of the game. North added another run on a sacrifice fly.

In the fifth inning, the pace was once again set by the top of the lineup as Pat Gould walked again and then stole second base. Back-to-back errors by Scituate allowed the Raiders to score two runs.

The rest of the game was all Brian Turner who made any effort that Scituate made to score look futile. Turner himself didn't even realize how dominant he was until after the game.

"I didn't realize I had that many strikeouts until after the game when someone mentioned it," said Turner. "It's unbelievable to be up here on varsity, I never thought that I'd be doing this my sophomore year and to be able to come through like this for the team is a great way to start things."

If Turner can continue to pitch as well as he did Thursday night as North Quincy's third starter, then the season outlook for the Raiders will be a bright one as the team already totes two solid pitchers in Andrew Currie and Josh Hayward, who is the team's number 1. Coach Beach had nothing but positive things to say about his other pitchers.

"Andrew is a great athlete and he would have come into close today even though his arm is sore but we didn't need him and we had Josh up but now we can save him for our next game. We have some good depth and hopefully that is just something that carries us forward into what we hope will be a very successful season," said Coach Beach.

Scott Graham Navy Training Graduate

Navy Seaman Scott M. Graham, son of Judith A. Graham of Quincy, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill. with honors.

During the eight-week program, Graham completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, fire-fighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." The exercise is designed to galvanize the attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of honor, courage and commitment.

Graham is a 1995 graduate of North Quincy High School.

PAT GOULD steals second base in the fifth inning to help spark a Red Raider rally. Gould reached base on a walk.

SHAWN GRADY connects for a one-out single to centerfield in the bottom of the 6th inning against Scituate. The Red Raiders defeated the Sailors, 5-1, for their second win of the season.

Dedication, Hardwork Hallmarks Of Q-NQ Girls' Hockey

The Quincy-North Quincy girls' ice hockey team brought together a special group of young ladies whose trademark was hard work and dedication.

"They played their hearts out for us and themselves," says head coach Stephen Burgio. "They never gave up or quit even when it got tough. They supported one another and grew closer as the season progressed."

The team comprised of 17 student-athletes from Quincy and North Quincy High School was saddled with some injuries and illness early on but the girls never quit.

"We never changed our approach and entered every game expecting to compete and win," Burgio said. "This attitude is a testament to the girls and their desire to excel. The coaches fed them a lot of hockey in practice and no once was there a complaint. They went so far as to add their own off ice conditioning program which included cardiovascular workouts and shooting practice."

"As a team I saw these girls come together and support each other as a family. They were united on and off the ice and stood up for one another on a daily basis. Their were nine senior players on the roster and each played their role on the team whether that role was as a Captain on team or a leader in the locker room, I knew I could count on them."

This year's roster included four NQHS seniors who served as captains: Brianna Mullaney, Katie White, Kennedy Harding and Leah Ryan.

The team posted a 2-13-4 record but really made its mark as a team never quit.

"Although, we became increasingly competitive and the girls never quit on me we were never able to completely overcome the injuries. It was their never quit attitude and their competitive nature that made this year a success," Burgio said.

"The intangible that the parents noticed and expressed to me as well as the happiness that the girls felt became the success of our season. I was pleased to hear that many girls came back to the team when they heard I was going to coach and many more stuck around because of the positive attitude that the coaches used as their approach to making these girls better hockey players and hopefully better people.

"I will miss the girls I am losing but will use them as examples of hard work and dedication. This will be part of our philosophy moving forward. We will not only focus on giving it your all on the ice and making the sacrifices to be a good player but also giving it your all off the ice and makes the sacrifices it takes to be a good person."

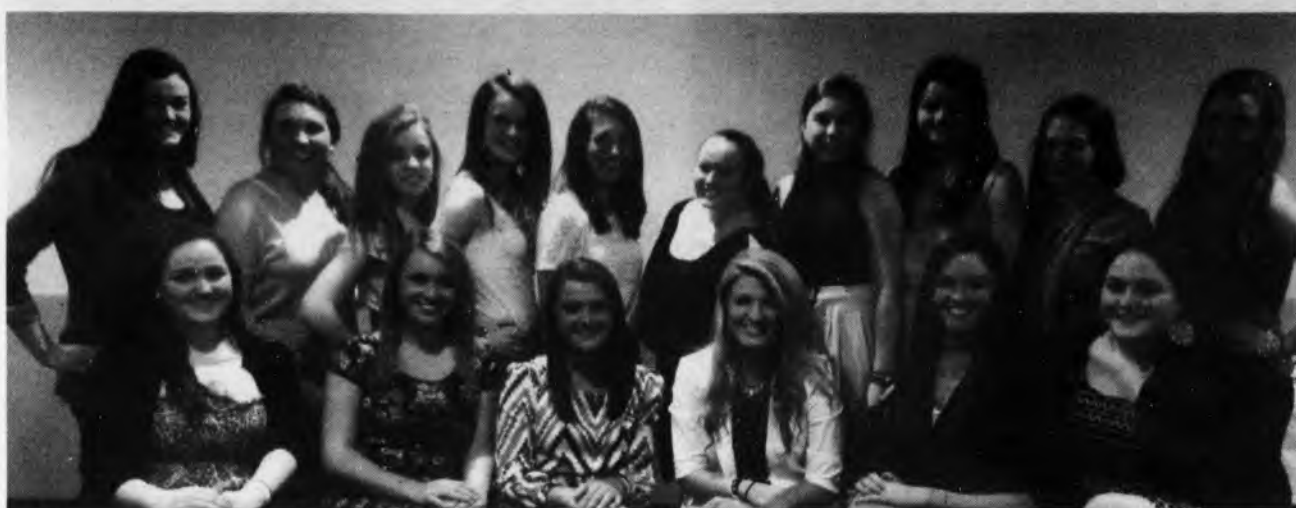

Three captains for next year have been named: Natalie O'Donovan, Julia Donovan and Kelly Donahue.

Here's what Coach Burgio has to say about next year's team leaders:

"Natalie missed most of the season due to injury but that didn't stop her from showing up to every practice and watching what we were doing trying to learn our system so she could be ready to hop in when able. She also attended every game and was on the bench working with us and cheering on her team. Once she was cleared to play she made immediate contributions on the ice scoring goals and assists as well as strong defensive play on our end. It is this dedication to the team that made her an easy choice to be one of next season's captains."

"Julia was a sophomore this past season and showed her strong personality on and off the ice. Her leadership ability was immediate apparent in her play. As the season progressed Julia became more of a leader in the locker room as well. She showed us that she has the ability to lead by example and was often willing to put the team ahead of herself. Her assertiveness will be key going into the next season and we are hoping it will rub off on everyone else on the team."

"Kelly was also a sophomore this past season but she was a force on defense. She played solid in our zone and did everything we asked of her, even playing forward on a few occasions. Kelly's leadership qualities are expressed in her positive "can do" attitude. She is always smiling and sees the good in everyone and everything. She keeps the teams spirits up and has a great presence off the ice. She will be the Ambassador of good sportsmanship for our team. It is that quality that will unite the incoming players with the returning players and provide us with the same sense of family they created this year."

North Quincy Junior Fans 14 In Red Raiders' 12-0 Win Natasha Sautter No-Hits Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

She knew something was happening. She was having fun and throwing the ball well. It had all felt good, right from her warmup. Batters came up, batters sat down. There was strikeout after strikeout. Nobody was hitting the ball. There were no runs and few baserunners. Nothing was said, but something was unfolding for North Quincy junior lefty Natasha Sautter.

About the third or fourth inning, she had a thought. Scituate had no hits. Not a one.

Sautter finished off her no-hitter, striking out 14 and leading the Red Raiders past Scituate, 12-0 in a Patriot League contest called after five innings last Thursday.

"She was fantastic. This is the first no-hitter I've seen since I've been here at North," said fourth-year coach Kerry Ginty. "Her control was terrific and her poise was impressive. We've worked on focusing on her location and she was just peeling off the corners of the plate."

When she understood what was happening, Sautter chose to live in the moment. There were no nerves, worry or pressure. This was softball and softball was fun.

"I wasn't nervous. I was happy," said Sautter. "I love to pitch. I knew right from my warmup that I had my good stuff and it wasn't just me. My teammates backed me up with good plays."

Sautter was being kind to her mates. There were no spectacular plays to save the no-hitter. There were only two balls hit into fair territory. She struck out 14 batters in five innings. There are only so many outs. One batter reached when a third strike squirted free. Second baseman Kelly Thompson and third baseman Lauren Magoon handled the only two defensive chances flawlessly. Magoon's came on the final play of the game, and Ginty admitted to a second of worry.

"When I heard contact, my heart jumped a beat," said Ginty. "Lauren made a good play. There were smiles and high fives when it was over. Her teammates are going to give her an autographed game ball."

"She was happy, but calm after the last out. It wasn't boisterous. Natasha has been pitching since freshman year and she's developed this calm, poised demeanor on the mound. It was almost like she wasn't aware of it. She just pitched. I didn't say anything. I didn't want to plant any doubts."

"I did know about it," smiled Sautter who pitched a no-hitter for an eighth-grade traveling team. "I was happy when it was over and I liked having my teammates around me."

It was Sautter's third game in four days. There was a bit of fatigue, but the cold which turned more bitter as the game rolled along bothered her more. Sautter has developed a screwball with a spin which moves away from a right-hand hitter. It was difficult to gain a feel for the pitch in the chill of the late afternoon.

"It's hard to pitch when it's cold," said Sautter who gave up a total of one run in her last two starts against Duxbury and Scituate. "Your hand gets stiff and it's hard to get a good grip and control the ball. I wasn't tired, but I was cold."

It may not have been an ideal day for softball, but it was an ideal day for no hits, 14 strikeouts, and a memory Sautter will long remember and enjoy.

Bats Coming Alive For North Quincy Softball

By BILL GRIFFIN

The first week was full of promising play for North Quincy's softball team in Patriot League action.

There was shutdown pitching, timely hitting and good defense, especially in the infield.

The highlight of the week was Natasha Sautter's no-hitter in a 12-0 win over Scituate. North hit the ball well in a 14-7 loss to a strong Middleboro team in the season's opener. Against Duxbury, Michaela Lennon outdueled Sautter in a 1-0 pitching gem.

"I'm very happy. I thought we had a great start," said coach Kerry Ginty. "Our bats came alive which is very good, especially early in the season. Natasha pitched great and we played well against two of the stronger teams in the league in Middleboro and Duxbury."

Sautter had plenty of offensive help from her friends against Scituate. The Red Raiders jumped to a 4-0 lead after one to give Sautter all the support she would need. Freshman catcher Sarah Franklin, who sparkled defensively throwing out two base stealers earlier in the week, had a double, single and two RBI. Senior second baseman Kelly Thompson had three hits and scored twice while Madison Hally had two hits and scored twice. Hally and Thompson had strong offensive weeks while Thompson (second), Liz Kelly (short), and Lauren Magoon (third) played good defense..

Abby Mayo and Christine Kelliher chipped in with timely hits against the Sailors.

"I think that fact we were able to get an early lead made it easier on Natasha," said Ginty.

The Red Raiders, who were trapped inside by the cold wet weather in March, surprisingly stung the ball against Middleboro. Kelly went 4-4 with a double and an RBI. Hally had a two-run single and a double while Thompson had two hits, a double and three RBI.

"That was a strong performance against a good Middleboro pitcher," said Ginty. "We had 12 hits. Liz, Madison and Kelly each had extra base hits. We swung the bats well for our first game of the season."

Lennon and Sautter combined for a beauty in the Duxbury game. Sautter gave just six hits and fanned four, but Lennon was excellent. She struck out 11 and fired a three-hitter. In her previous game, she struck out 17.

"She's one of the best pitchers in the league. They scored off a one-out triple. Natasha pitched a fantastic game," said Ginty.

Sophomore Christine Campo used her speed to get two of the hits off Lennon. Campo bunted for a single. Thompson, who hit safely in all three games, chipped in with a double, but the Red Raiders couldn't bunch their hits and break through against Lennon.

North (1-2) is at Whitman-Hanson Monday, April 22 after the school vacation week.

Quincy Youth Basketball Directors Honored By Council

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy Youth Basketball's board of directors were honored at a recent City Council meeting in recognition of the organization's 10th anniversary.

On hand for the commendation were Quincy Youth Basketball President Chris Eleey; Treasurer Susan W. Eleey; Directors Lisa Covais, Michael Cook, and Stephen P. Golden; and Directors Emeritus Michael Covais, and Gail and Moe Duffy.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin listed off a number of attributes that organized sports teach children, including teamwork, respect for opponents, and how to win with class or be gracious in defeat. He said Quincy's residents are fortunate to have a number of adults who help run leagues that instill those values, including those behind Quincy Youth Basketball.

"We are very fortunate here in the City of Quincy to have hundreds of adults who volunteer and give themselves in order to provide our youth with the opportunity to participate in and reap all the benefits of organized sports that I have enumerated," Coughlin said. Without their sacrifice these programs and these opportunities would not exist.

"Tonight we pause to recognize some of those adult mentors who 10 years ago built the foundation for what has become a very, very successful Quincy Youth Basketball program. Today, this well established in-house league involves 400 children in grades 1-8. Grades 1 and 2 participate in a co-ed instructional program stressing basic skills and drills. Boys and girls divisions exist in grades 3 to 5 and 6 to 8. The Presidents Travel Division of Quincy Youth Basketball evolved after seven seasons of consistent growth as well as positive interest in the creation of a travel division."

"The objective of Quincy Youth Basketball is and has been and continues to be to instill in the youth of the City of Quincy the ideals of good sportsmanship, honesty, loyalty, courage, and respect for authority so that they may be well-adjusted, stronger and happier children who will grow to be good, decent, healthy, and trustworthy citizens," Coughlin continued. "Quincy Youth Basketball strives to meet this objective by creating an environment where winning is stressed but not at the cost of having fun or team member participation by providing an opportunity to participate that is commensurate with each child's ability and by providing qualified adult leadership."

Councillor Doug Gutro was a co-captain of his J.V. basketball at Quincy High. He agreed with Coughlin that participating in organized sports plays an important role in the development of children and teenagers.

"It really helps give you some anchor and stability in life, and direction and maturity and discipline. It's extraordinary," Gutro said. "I like, many of you and many of those folks in home that have participated in organized sports or youth sports really understand the value that these youth programs have."

Gutro's two sons play in the league, and he said it has made an impact on their growth as individuals.

"They've made their way up through Quincy Youth Basketball," Gutro said. "They've had Chris Eleey, who has done extraordinary things for them - for their ability, for their confidence, their morale. What all these folks have done is transform lives - small lives that grow up to do great things."

"It just warms my heart that we have Quincy Youth Basketball here to guide so many kids. It's boys, it's girls, it's travel leagues. I went to the championship games even though my boys didn't make it and we got to witness some extraordinary games at different levels. You got to see their excitement, the discipline, and the passion, and the dedications

- not just of the coaches but of these folks here who we are recognizing, the members of the board of directors."

Councillor Joe Finn thanked the board members for the time and effort that they've put into the league since its inception a decade ago.

"I did get to see firsthand the effort and the energy that goes into this. I don't think I ever went to a practice or a game where I didn't see Mr. and Mrs. Eleey and Mrs. Covais working at that some how," Finn said. "It just absolutely amazing the amount of time and care that you've put into this. We're very grateful because the kids have such a positive and good experience."

Quincy Softball Off To 2-2 Start

By BILL GRIFFIN

So far, so good for Quincy High's softball team.

The Presidents are 2-2 over their first two weeks of action and coach Greg Sommers likes what he has seen from his club.

"I'm very happy with the way we've played," he said. "Our defense has improved, especially in our last game against Hingham. If our defense can keep us in games, we'll be right there with everyone in the (Patriot) League."

Sophomore Saxon Bresnahan pitched a two-hitter and struck out 12 to lead Quincy past Hingham, 10-0 in a league contest last week. Earlier in the week, the Presidents fell to Silver Lake, 9-0.

In other action, Quincy rolled past Scituate, 14-0 and fell to Fontbonne, 3-0 in an excellent pitchers' duel.

"We hurt ourselves with unearned runs against Silver Lake, but our defense was 100 percent improved against Hingham," said Sommers. "We made no errors, and played steady, solid defense."

Bresnahan made it easy for her defense by accounting for 12 of the 21 outs with strikeouts. She mixed a good fastball with a curve and screwball. She has worked well with a fellow sophomore, catcher Angelina Avitable, and the two have developed a fine connection over the first two weeks.

"I think Saxon was a little upset about the Silver Lake game, and it made her throw harder against Hingham," said Sommers. "She and Angelina are a good combination. They have a good feel for the game and for pitch selection."

Devon Varmahmoodi had two hits, scored three times and added an RBI against Hingham. Sophomore Emma Kelly had two hits and three runs scored, and junior Bethaney Walker had a pair of hits and an RBI.

Against Silver Lake, Varmahmoodi had a pair of hits and played an excellent centerfield. Bresnahan fanned five in a complete-game outing.

In the romp over Scituate, second baseman Taylor Parry had a pair of hits, scored twice and drove in three runs. Devin McMahon added two hits, scored three times and had an RBI. Varmahmoodi walked three times and reached base each time she batted.

Bresnahan and junior Kelsey Tucker combined for the shutout. Bresnahan didn't allow a hit and fanned six over the first four innings. Tucker did a strong job finishing up for the Presidents.

Against Fontbonne, Bresnahan held the Ducks scoreless through the first five innings. Fontbonne pushed across a run in the sixth which proved to be the game-winner.

Bresnahan has been an important bright spot in the early going. She has two shutouts in four games and allowed just three runs against Fontbonne. Unearned runs hurt her in the Silver Lake game. She has been everything a coach could expect from a sophomore stepping into the role of ace.

"It takes poise to assume the No.1 pitching spot as a sophomore. We've had excellent pitchers in recent years and Saxon is doing a fine job of stepping into their spot," said Sommers.

Avitable has been solid behind the plate. Varmahmoodi has made the difficult switch from catcher to centerfield smoothly and her willingness to take on a completely different position has been a huge boost for the Presidents.

"I told her before the year started that I needed her defense in the outfield and she has done everything I asked. She's a fine senior leader," said Sommers.

Quincy hosts Hanover Monday.

High School Sports Highlights

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a double treat for the Quincy girls' lacrosse team against Silver Lake.

The Presidents completed the 17 minutes of a game which was suspended due to inclement weather with a 9-5 victory last week behind three goals from Gabby Zorkers.

Quincy then defeated the Lakers in the complete-game nightcap, 8-6 behind four goals from Kayla McArdle and outstanding all-around play from Sam McArdle.

"Sam and Kayla were excellent throughout the whole match," said coach Tim Lewis. "Kayla scored in the final minute to give us an insurance goal and stop any chance of a Silver Lake comeback."

Courtney Ryan and Eileen Skudrus played strong defensive games for the Presidents.

In other action, Whitman-Hanson dropped the Presidents, 11-5 despite three goals by Kayla McArdle.

"We had a very short bench for that game and the girls played hard," said Lewis.

Olivia Wallace and Jenny Scarnici played well on defense for Quincy.

Quincy is 3-3 and will host Hanover April 24.

North Quincy's volleyball team swept to a pair of 3-0 victories.

25-22 behind senior Mike Tran who had 15 kills and 10 digs for the Red Raiders.

Junior Efthim Butka had 12 kills, five aces and two blocks while Oresti Bega had 29 assists.

Andrew Sok added 15 digs while Vinny Tran and Matt MacPhail played fine games in the victory.

North Quincy also rolled past Boston Latin, 25-16, 25-17, and 25-11. Tran had 14 kills while Bega ran the offense well with 30 assists.

Sebastian Francois chipped in with seven kills and six blocks. MacPhail and Butka were powers at the net, combining for 15 kills.

In girls' tennis action,

North Quincy fell to Duxbury, 3-2.

Tiffany Leung scored a victory for North at No.1 singles with a 6-0, 6-4 decision. Malorie Devoe won 6-2, 6-1 at No. 3 singles.

Scituate defeated the Red Raiders, 4-1 later in the week. North is 1-1 and travels to Whitman-Hanson April 22.

The championship game of the Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament will be played Thursday at Adams Field at 2 p.m. The consolation game will be played at 11 a.m.

Weymouth and Milton complete the tournament field.

On Thursday, April 4 at approximately 11:30 a.m., Officer Mike Brandolini was dispatched to a West Quincy address to investigate a possible child neglect incident. Upon arrival, the officer spoke with the female caller, who was holding a nine-month old baby boy. Moments later, Detectives Pieper, McIsaac, and Grazioso arrived to assist.

The caller said that the baby boy was not hers, that she was watching him for a friend. She said that the mother left the baby with her on Monday, April 1, at approximately 5:30 p.m., claiming that she (the mother) "had to do some business with her ID card" and would be right back. The caller said that she had been constantly trying to contact the mother on her cellphone but she would not answer.

Officer Brandolini called for a Fallon ambulance to respond to the scene and examine the baby. The EMTs determined that the baby was in good health with no apparent injuries. As a precaution, the baby was transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth for a more extensive exam.

Meanwhile, Officer Ron McKim responded to a Quincy address where the mother could be, but she was not there. Officer Brandolini dialed the mother's cellphone and a woman answered and confirmed that she was the mother. She sounded groggy as if she was intoxicated or on drugs. The officer told the mother he wanted to talk with her about leaving the baby since Monday. The mother claimed she left her child there at 6 a.m. that morning. When told that her son was going to go to the hospital for an exam, the mother became enraged, yelling into the phone that it was "b@##$%^&" and she then stated to someone that was present with her that "the b@##$% called the cops on me." She said she was in Braintree and would be there in minutes.

Soon after, a vehicle pulled up and the mother stepped out screaming, "where's my baby?" When told that the baby was at the hospital again, the mother looked over to the porch area and observed the caller standing there. The mother became enraged and began screaming obscenities at the caller at the top of her lungs. The mother then began to run full speed toward the caller, fully enraged and screaming at her. Fearing that an assault was imminent, Officer Brandolini grabbed the mother, who was now berserk with rage and screaming at the caller.

In the attempt to restrain the mother without harm, the mother and Officer Brandolini both fell heavily to the ground, landing on the lawn. Det. McIsaac and Officer McKim assisted in restraining the mother, who was still attempting to get at the caller.

The mother, a 24-year old Quincy resident, was handcuffed and placed under arrest for "Disorderly Conduct." The mother sustained a bloody nose during the scuffle, so Fallon Ambulance responded to the cellblock area to treat her. Officer Brandolini called the Department of Children and Families to report the child neglect incident.

Nice Work!

'Living Our Faith' Mayor's Breakfast Theme May 2

Coinciding with the National Day of Prayer, Quincy's Prayer Breakfast is scheduled for Thursday, May 2.

The event is sponsored by Quincy's Mayor Thomas P. Koch. This year's theme is 'Living our Faith' and will feature local speakers from a variety of faith traditions.

"The Prayer Breakfast has really evolved since we first started," said Mayor Koch. "The participation we see from various houses of worship comprises many faith traditions, and it is a wonderful expression of the rich diversity that exists in this great City."

For the past three years, the breakfast has brought together representatives from many houses of worship, government officials, as well as local leaders in business, community and religious life. The event is organized by a steering committee of religious leaders and interested community members.

"The planning meetings thus far have revealed a strong foundation, consistent energy, and a deep desire to serve Quincy's social service agencies," said committee chairman Rev. Eric Hillegas of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church in Quincy. "The Mayor's Prayer Breakfast is a vital demonstration of shared fellowship and service by Quincy's faith communities. I'm encouraged and excited by the growing interest and participation of Quincy's faith leaders and social service organizations."

Proceeds from the event will benefit both The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion/Quincy Crisis Center and Interfaith Social Services.

Rev. David Wooster executive director for the Sanger Center also commended the committee's efforts.

"Partnership, community, neighbors - this is what Quincy is about and the Prayer Breakfast is a reminder that these things come from our faith. The Prayer Breakfast is a welcome antidote to the flood of bad news that sometimes distracts us from the good that is happening in our community every day," Rev. Wooster said.

Interfaith Social Services decided to combine their South Shore Women's Prayer Breakfast with the Quincy Prayer Breakfast.

"We have been hosting the Women's Breakfast each spring for the past 14 years," said Rick Doane, Interfaith's executive director. "It made sense to combine these two great events so that more people could gather in the spirit of interfaith prayer for the well-being of our community."

"The whole South Shore is invited to the breakfast, it's not just limited to people in Quincy."

The breakfast will be Thursday May 2, 2013 and is being hosted by the Tirrell Room in Quincy.

The menu will feature a full breakfast buffet with vegetarian option. The program and breakfast run from 7 to 8:30 a.m.

Tickets are $35 for an individual ticket and $250 for a table of 10. One attendee will walk away with a door prize of gift certificates and other merchandise donated by local businesses.

To order tickets online go to: www.InterfaithSocialServices.org.

Rainbow Smelt Arrive In Town Brook In Small Numbers

By PAT ARTIS

It has been a really cold late winter and early spring, and local environmentalists from the Quincy Environmental Network and Wollaston Garden Club have been monitoring the arrival of the rainbow smelt (osmerus mordax) in the Town Brook.

Brad Chase, from the Mass. Division of Marine Fisheries, has found a low density scattering of smelt eggs near Mechanic Street over the newly-constructed substrate of the brook; and moving further into the culvert Chase saw about 12 adult smelt holding in the current and one large eel trying to eat the smelt. Downstream almost no eggs have been found, contributing to an overall light egg deposition in Town Brook for this time in April.

Chase said he hopes that "we will see a movement of fish soon."

Smelt have played a big

role in our local marine economy and ecosystem, as early as colonial times, and throughout the years – signaling the end of winter and the beginning of spring.

Investigations of Massachusetts smelt runs have found that spawning begins between late February and mid-March. Smelt need an ideal water temperatures of 39 – 43 F degrees to return to their spawning habitats.

Historically, in the Town Brook, this has been during March and mid May. Smelt are anadromous, living most of their lives in the sea, but traveling into fresh water to breed, moving in schools during the night, on full moons and high tides.

Smelt travel up streams, within a mile of an estuary or bay, spawning and laying their eggs, in day-lighted areas, along a stream bed. They need a water level of at least 3 cubic feet per second for successful spawning; their sticky eggs adhering to objects they touch. Eggs are left unattended and hatch in 1-4 weeks, depending on water temperature.

Unlike herring, the smaller weak-swimming smelt do not jump dams or climb fish ladders, but lay their eggs right in the stream bed. Lack of swift-flowing riffles and deep pools for resting fish, has been one of the biggest challenges in keeping the smelt population strong in Town Brook.

In the future, ensuring a proper flow of water into the brook, protecting the brook from storm-water run-off and road salt/sand use near the brook, and restoring and planting shrubs and trees along stream banks are all things that will help the rainbow smelt population survive and thrive.

Concerned residents are hopeful that the Town Brook Enhancement project will provide great viewing areas in the future along the pocket parks on either side of Mechanic Street.

Perhaps a spring festival welcoming back the smelt to Quincy will become a local annual event for residents.

Pat Artis is the past president of Wollaston Garden Club, a retired history coach and teacher in the Boston Public Schools, and a long-time resident of Quincy.

30% Turnout Seen Here

U.S. Senate Primary Tuesday

By SCOTT JACKSON

A turnout of up to 30 percent is expected in Quincy on Tuesday as voters across the state whittle down the field of candidates vying for a U.S. Senate seat to two.

Two Democrats and three Republicans are competing in the primary election for a spot in the final election, to be held on June 25. The winner in that election will fill the seat held by John Kerry. Kerry represented Massachusetts in the Senate from 1985 until Feb. 1 of this year, when he officially resigned his seat to become President Barack Obama's new Secretary of State. Kerry, a Democrat, was his party's nominee in the 2004 presidential election, losing to incumbent President George W. Bush.

Gov. Deval Patrick appointed Democrat Mo Cowan as interim senator following Kerry's resignation. Cowan previously served as Patrick's chief of staff from January 2011 to November 2012, when he left to return to the private sector. Cowan opted not to run in the special election.

The winner of June's special election will serve until the term expires on Jan. 3, 2015.

DPW Meeting DEP Mandate

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Department of Public Works is on its way to meeting all the requirements mandated in a consent order after being cited by the state for noncompliance, according to the engineer tasked with overseeing the efforts.

In October, the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) cited the DPW for numerous violations they noted during a visit in November 2011. Those violations included not cleaning up waste oil that spilled into a containment berm quick enough; not labeling and storing hazardous waste properly; dumping catch basin cleanings onto the ground, thus allowing wastewater to enter the Town River; and allowing wastewater to enter the Town River when street sweepers were rinsed off.

In the consent order, Quincy and the DEP agreed

Local Youngsters Raise $4,476 For Young Victim Of Marathon Tragedy

By EMILY TAFT

In the wake of the Boston Marathon twin bombings last Monday, four Squantum Elementary School fourth graders decided they wanted to do something to help, so they opened a lemonade stand and then had a bake sale.

The kind-hearted gesture also generated some generous donations in the community. By the time their fundraising was over last Friday, the four girls had raised $4,476.57 for the family of Martin Richard. The young Dorchester boy was among three who were fatally injured in the terrorist bombing.

"The idea of the lemonade stand began on Tuesday morning (April 16) when Ciara woke up to the sad news of Martin Richard and said, 'Mom, I want to do a lemonade stand to raise money for this boy. I bet we could raise $100'," said Diane O'Connor, mother of 9-year-old Ciara O'Connor. "I said, 'Call your friends, I will go to the store and get what we need.' She called Lauren Manning, Brigid Norris and Mary Loney and off to the corner we went with our lemonade, table and signs. The outpouring of support at this stand

Memorial Square Dedications, Vietnam Memorial Ceremony Today

Three Quincy residents killed in action during the Vietnam will be honored today (Thursday).

Memorial squares for Army Specialist Fourth Class James Michael Barry and Marine Corps Lance Corporal David Owen Sullivan will be dedicated, and a memorial square for Marine Corps Lance Corporal James Henry Cavicchi, Jr. will be rededicated.

The day starts at 11 a.m.

at the corner of Phipps Street and Kendrick Avenue with the rededication of the memorial square for Cavicchi.

The dedication for Barry will take place at 11:45 a.m. at 89 Gilbert Street.

At 12:30 p.m., the memorial square for Sullivan will be dedicated at 83 Safford Street.

Speakers will include family members of the men being honored.

A memorial ceremony will also take place at 2 p.m. today at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay.

G. Patrick Murphy, a Vietnam veteran and federal judge since 1998, will serve as guest speaker. Mayor Tom Koch, Cong. Stephen Lynch, state Sen. Keenan, and Joe McCain – a Navy veteran, actor, and brother of U.S. Sen. John McCain – are also scheduled to speak.

Medicine Free Safe Disposal Day Saturday

The Mayor's Substance Abuse Task Force in conjunction with the DEA, Impact Quincy and the Quincy Police Department will again host a free prescription disposal day Saturday, April 27 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea St. (behind the Quincy Police Station.)

"The Prescription Take Back Day is an important event in that it allows for residents to safely dispose of unwanted or expired prescription drugs but also presents an opportunity to engage our young people and create awareness of the dangers associated with improper use and access to medication," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

Studies show that youth can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the home medicine cabinet. Plus, proper disposal of substances are vital to protect the water supply and the environment.

All residents are invited to bring unused or expired prescription and/or over-the-counter medications to the disposal event. The process is anonymous; you can blacken out your name or put everything into a plastic bag. Community members simply drive up to the event and give their substances to a police officer.

Needles (sharps) and aerosols cannot be disposed of at this event. However, Manet Community Health Center sponsors a sharps disposal kiosk at their 11 West Squantum Street location during regular business hours. In addition, the Quincy Police Department hosts a permanent drug disposal kiosk, available free, 24/7 for anonymous drop-off.

For more information, contact Arlene Goldstein at Impact Quincy 617-471-8400 x155 or Kristen Powers in the Mayor's Office at (617) 376-1990.

City Council C-Mart Meeting May 20

A City Council meeting to discuss a proposed North Quincy C-Mart originally scheduled for this week has been postponed to Monday May 20 at 6 p.m.

City Council President Michael McFarland said the meeting, which had been scheduled for Tuesday, needed to be postponed because members of the council had scheduling conflicts and would not have been able to attend.

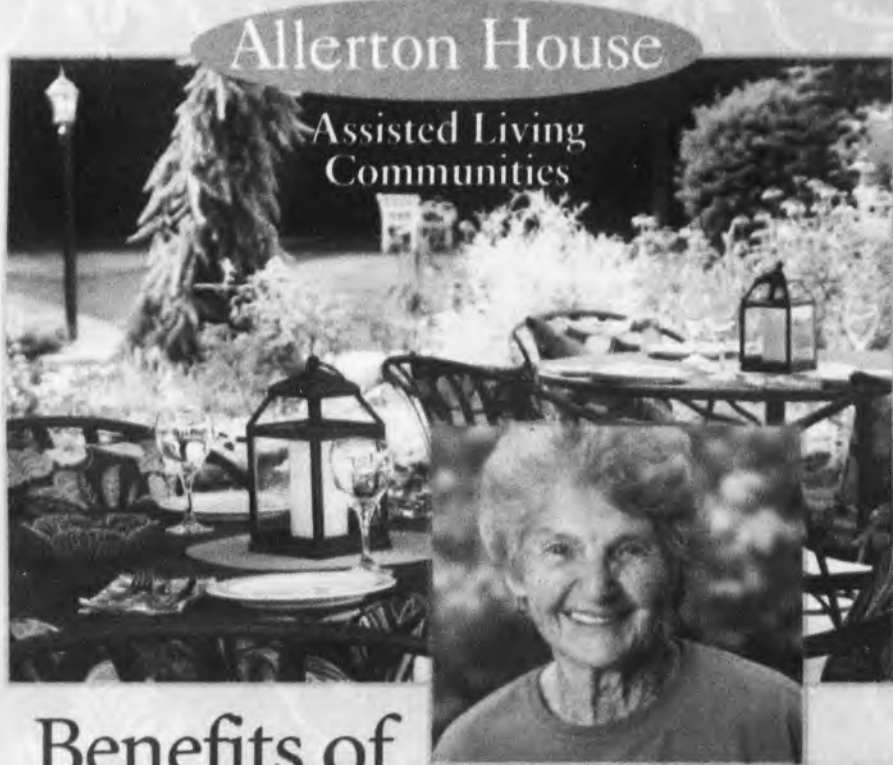

C-Mart owner Michael

Fang is asking the council, acting as Quincy's Special Permit Granting Authority (SPGA), for permission to convert the former Boston Gear Works building on Hayward Street into a new headquarters for his company. His plan calls for 25,000 square feet of retail space, a 6,400 square foot warehouse, and also has room for his corporate offices.

In 2009, the council rejected a similar plan by a 7-1 vote, with those opposed citing traffic concerns. Fang appealed that decision in court, and a settlement between him and the city remanded the issue back to the council. As part of the agreement, Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee was ordered to recuse himself.

The deadline for the council to vote on the plan is June 20, but a vote could take place May 20. According to SPGA rules, six votes are needed to approve the project.

Moment Of Silence Observed At Meeting

City Council Remembers Boston Marathon Victims

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council observed a moment of silence before Monday night's meeting in honor of the victims of the Boston Marathon bombing on Patriot's Day.

Council President Michael McFarland started the meeting by asking his colleagues to remember the three victims killed and the more than 180 injured in the attack. He also gave his thanks to first responders and medical personnel for their actions in the immediate aftermath of the attack and to government officials and others who helped the Boston and rest of the state and country cope with the bombing.

"First of all I'd like to remember the victims of the marathon bombing, those who died and those who were injured, and all their families," McFarland said. "Secondly I'd like to give thanks to all the first responders and all the volunteers in the medical tent - the doctors, the nurses, the technicians - who were critical in saving lives.

"When they got up last Monday morning and went to work or to volunteer at the marathon, they had no idea what the day would bring. We are fortunate in Boston to have the best medical care in the world.

"Thirdly, to our police, to our fire, to our EMS personnel - their quick response and their highly trained skills were put to the ultimate test as they were put in harm's way last Monday. The professionalism shown by our public safety officials quickly stabilized the area and got both participants and guests to safety.

"And fourth, the leadership provided by so many federal, state, and local officials, sporting events, entertainers, and private citizens. Not only to keep us to safe but to keep us proud to be Americans, proud to be free - Boston proud."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest thanked the Quincy Police Department for their efforts. The department sent explosive-sniffing dogs and motorcycle officers to Boston and patrolled MBTA stations in Quincy after the bombing.

"We had officers in our K-9 unit and our special operations unit in town in Boston around the clock. They logged a lot of hours in support of the Metro Boston region," Laforest said. "I just wanted to thank those officers who were in Boston responding and those who were back filling in here in Quincy. We really are very appreciative of them."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin thanked members of the military who were brought into Boston to assist with security throughout the week.

"If you looked into the background of a lot of those images from Monday forward what you saw was a lot of citizen-soldiers. There wasn't really much in terms of recognition of what they did, but I know personally how involved they were because my son-in-law was called up and deployed for a number of activities throughout the whole week, including security for the president and perimeter guarding at the scene in Boston," Coughlin said.

TODD RUGGERE (background) visited Furnace Brook Golf Course on Sunday in his quest to have a Sam Adams beer in each of the 351 cities/towns in Massachusetts in 365 days to raise money for Dana Farber. Wollaston Center Planning Topic At Community Meeting Tonight

A community meeting hosted by the Planning Department, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes is being held tonight (Thursday) to discuss the future of Wollaston Center.

The meeting is being held from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room at Eastern Nazarene's 180 Old Colony Ave. campus. It follows up on a meeting held in November where residents and business owners in the community weighed in on what they want Wollaston Center to look like in the future. MAPC used that information to conduct a study to see how the area could be rezoned to accommodate residents' requests.

"They conducted a market study. What that is going to help us do is decide what we need to do in terms of zoning in order to achieve the type of development that

There's never been a better time to buy a first home

Three reasons why:

- 1) Rates are at all-time lows - a huge advantage for first-time homebuyers. Your money goes further. And you get to lock in historically-low monthly mortgage payments.

- 3) With Colonial Federal's First-Time Homebuyer Program, you get: > A reduced downpayment with no PMI required > A mortgage with a competitive rate > You work one-to-one with our responsive lenders, professionals who want to help you get into your first home > All from a local neighborhood bank specializing in helping people buy homes since 1889.

This is an outstanding opportunity - most likely once-in-a-lifetime - for first-time homebuyers. Is that you...or someone you know? Come see us. Or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

Koch 4th Term Kick-Off May 16

Mayor Thomas Koch will make it official Thursday, May 16 when he kicks off his re-election bid for a fourth term at the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

No surprise there. The mayor will complete six years in office at the end of this year and is seeking another two-year term to continue work on some of his administration's goals and projects since coming into office in January, 2008.

As for an opponent this fall, it doesn't appear he will have one at this juncture anyway.

Politically it's been a very quiet spring with only two races drawing opponents so far: Mike Healy is running against Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, and Noel DiBona is seeking one of the three seats up on the School Committee.

Sure, there's plenty of time for someone to get in the mayor's race. Nomination papers are not available until May 7 and are due Aug. 13.

But the clock is ticking on the time needed to mount a serious challenge against Koch. Money must be raised and volunteers and supporters organized to wage a viable campaign against an incumbent mayor who has been elected three times by comfortable margins.

Koch says regardless of whether he has an opponent, he'll be running hard for a fourth term.

"We're going to keep moving forward and preparing for a race and whether we have a race or not I have to communicate with my volunteers and get our vote out," he says.

The mayor says he enjoys campaigning and discussing the issues with citizens.

"I enjoy campaigning. Part of the process of being in this business is that it's a people business and that no more manifests itself than out on the campaign trail. Whether I have an opponent or not I'll be out there. I go to an awful lot of things now and there's probably not a lot more that I could add to my schedule. I enjoy interacting with people."

Canvassing the city also gives the mayor a chance to explain issues one-on-one with voters.

"It's good to get out there and listen to people and hear what's going on. It's also a chance to straighten people out to what their perception is and what the reality is on some issues, like the downtown project. It's okay if you disagree with me, but let's agree on the facts."

Mayoral races are also fueled by the issues.

And at the moment, there doesn't appear to be any hot-button issues that could fuel a serious challenge against Koch in the fall.

Most eyes are focused on the downtown redevelopment project. And many political observers agree the mayor's political fortunes are tied to this ambitious and much heralded project. The first phase -- the construction of Merchants Row in the area of 1400 Hancock Street -- is expected to begin in late spring or early summer after asbestos remediation and demolition work is completed.

During a fourth term, Koch said he envisions further progress on the downtown in the area of the Parkingway.

"We'll see more demolition of buildings and construction of new buildings and new garages and new business located there."

"The years 2014 and 2015 are going to be big years for the downtown," he said.

But the downtown project would not be the only iron in the fire during a fourth Koch term.

For starters, a completely renovated James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) will reopen. So too would Coddington Hall near Quincy High School.

The openings would trigger the relocation of city and school employees into new office space.

Coddington Hall will be used for staff of the School Department, the Quincy Planning Department and School-City Information Technology Department.

When the City Hall Council Chamber reopens in the McIntyre Center, Municipal Finance will move into the space vacated by the Planning Department in the glass City Hall annex building.

The City Clerk's office -- now located at 1259 Hancock Street in the Munroe Building -- will move to the second floor of the City Hall annex. The Election Office and City Council Office set up in space vacated by the Information Technology Department.

Equipment like ballot boxes will be stored in the annex basement.

"We have to work out the specifics and how the offices will be laid out but that's the plan," Koch said.

Other items on the mayor's agenda:

• A new Sterling Middle School. An application has been submitted to the Massachusetts School Building Authority seeking 80 percent reimbursement for a new Sterling Middle School built on grounds near the current school. The SBA will assign a contact person to work with the city and begin analyzing Sterling and what options exist for a new school.

"I believe in my heart that we will have a new Sterling and that the building is too far gone," Koch said. "I believe once the analysis is done, the conclusion will be a new building on the current site."

The city has also submitted an application to the SBA for 80 percent reimbursement of the cost for new windows at three schools: North Quincy High, Merrymount and Wollaston. The plan is to update windows at three or four schools per year until they are all updated for energy-efficiency, heating, more natural light into classrooms and aesthetics.

Koch said many school windows installed during the 1980s featured glass that's faded and scratched to the point very little light shines through.

"We have to continue to invest in these public assets. They are owned by the public and we have to maintain them," the mayor said.

Continued infrastructure work -- including seawall repair and drainage improvement -- would be a top priority.

The city would also tap a $10 million community fund negotiated by the Koch administration and the city's downtown developer - Street-Works -- for public improvements.

"We are now underway on planning improvements for our gateways and parks and some of our school grounds so when this money hits it will be during my next term that we will be spending it. We'll be seeing some major investments in our public spaces and recreation areas and our school grounds," Koch said.

For instance, Faxon Park, an old park, needs a lot of attention, the mayor said.

"We have not been able to spend a lot of time or resources on Faxon Park. There's a friends group that we've worked with and we're now working on our master plan to really clean it up. There are a lot of dead trees that need to be trimmed and a lot of briars that are overgrown. We need a controlled program to clean up the briars. We also need to open up the fire road so if there's a brush fire you're not worried about homes in the area."

Other improvements to Faxon Park include bringing water in, lighting the roadway and rehabilitating the park.

Koch also noted there's a master plan for Merrymount Park that ties in that space with the Quincy Shore Reservation with walking trails.

Gateways of the city -- such as the Neponset Bridge area and Fore River Circle, should be landscaped.

"I want people to know when they're in Quincy. I hear all the time that they know they're in Quincy because the streets are so clean but I want to bring it to the next level about the beauty with the landscaped improvements. It's not just for the visitors. It's the people who live here who enjoy that."

Koch says there is not one "burning" issue that he hears repeatedly from Quincy citizens.

"I'd say where you are in life -- whatever your situation may be -- drives what those issues may be for you. It may be a broken sidewalk or a dead tree in front of your house that may be the most important issue to you with city government. We've made great strides in trying to clean that list up but there's more to do."

"Or maybe you've had a family member affected by the drug issue so that becomes a real meaningful issue to you."

"It really comes down to the individual stuff."

Taxes, the mayor says, are always an issue.

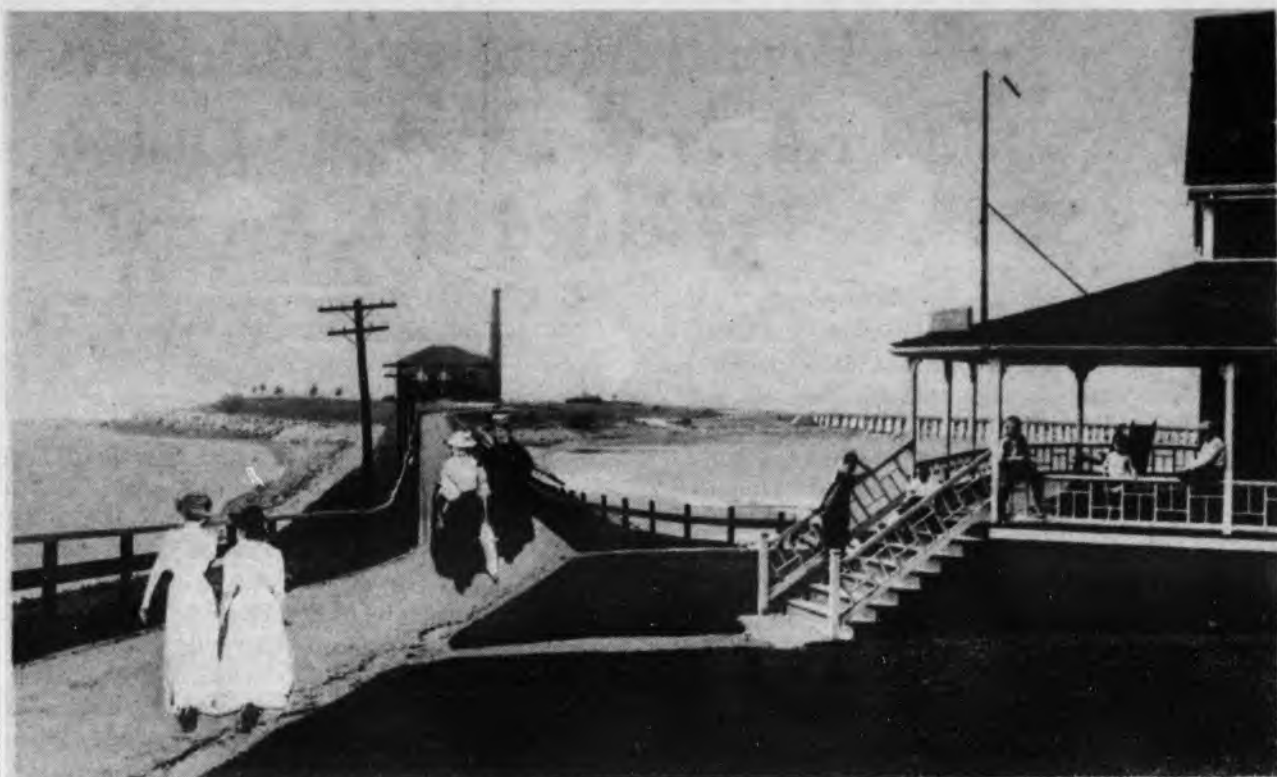

"There are people out there who never want to see their taxes go up, don't make the nexus between services and what's paid. To provide a safe city costs money. To provide and excellent school system costs money."

"In these times, we haven't done a Proposition 2 1/2 override. Our levy capacity there's still $16 million to $17 million on the table that we're not taxing. Most cities and towns are at the levy limit. That to me speaks volumes of how good a job we've done at keeping the growth slow. Getting things done but we're not whacking the taxpayer."

"I think there is an expectation from the average folk that their taxes are not going down, they're going to go up a little bit every year. They go up a little bit that's manageable but if you have to go up dramatically or you need a Prop 2 1/2 override, I think that's when people get pretty worked up and upset."

"We've tried to keep it pretty stable going forward."

The roadway leading out from the left foreground was built on top of the high level sewer line that ended at the pumping station on the island. LaRaia To Veto Layoff Ordinance

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia said he would veto an ordinance passed by City Council that would limit his ability to fire employees.

The ordinance, proposed by Council President Arthur Tobin and unanimously approved the council in a special Friday night meeting, would stop the mayor from firing any permanent employees as part of cost-cutting measures unless all temporary and provisional employees were fired first. The measure would not apply to Quincy City Hospital workers.

"My solicitor says the ordinance is illegal. I am going to go along with my solicitor and veto it," LaRaia said.

City Solicitor Thomas F. Williams explained that the ordinance circumvented Civil Service rules regarding firing employees for budgetary reasons and treated hospital workers differently, thus denying them equal protection under the law. He also said the council lacked the ability to restrict the mayor's power as the appointing authority in the city.

Tobin proposed the ordinance in the wake of widespread reports that LaRaia was set to layoff 18 police officers in a move to cut expenses. At the special council meeting Tobin cited a number of political advertisements used by LaRaia during his mayoral campaign promising more officers on the street.

"He should be held accountable for what he promises," Tobin said.

Councillor James Sheets said he would be willing to go to court if necessary to keep the ordinance intact.

"If it is necessary for the council to go to court to protect the security of the City of Quincy, then so be it, we will fight for the ordinance," Sheets said. "I have no intention of standing around and seeing the fire and police protection reduced in Ward 4. I am prepared to fight for it."

BARRY, KELLY OPPOSE FIRE HOUSE CLOSING

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry and Councillor Leo Kelly both said they were against the rumored closing of the new fire station in Germantown for budgetary reasons.

"I've heard the rumors about closing a fire station, although not necessarily the one in Germantown. That doesn't mean it is going to be done, though," Barry said. "As chief I would strongly recommend, advise and urge that a fire station not be closed."

Kelly said the rumors were causing "heartache to many people." He penned a letter to Mayor LaRaia, urging the mayor to reassure Germantown residents that the firehouse would remain open.

"The feeling of protection and well-being that is generated with a station in this area makes me strongly insist that you let it be known immediately if the closing of the Germantown fire station is only a rumor," Kelly said in the letter.

$10,000 Grant To Target Underage Drinking

The Quincy Police Department will receive a $10,000 grant to combat underage drinking. They are one of 25 local police departments that have been awarded on a competitive basis that varied between $5,000 and $15,000 on the size of the community.

"This grant provides much needed funding to target the problem of underage drinking," said Quincy Police Captain John Dougan. "Whether you are underage, plan to sell to a minor, or buy alcohol for a minor, this funding will aid us as we work diligently to enforce the law."

A total of $203,000 in funding from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention were awarded to Massachusetts for distribution through the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security's Highway Safety Division (EOPSS-HSD).

The grants will fund a variety of law enforcement activities including stings/compliance checks for minors in bars, restaurants and retail locations and "Cops in Shops" programs. Lieutenant Peter Turowski, Quincy Police Liquor Inspector, will be conducting the compliance checks beginning in May and continuing through the end of the summer. Through a combination of these techniques, departments will be able to analyze and crack down on both minors who seek to circumvent the law and those people and businesses that enable them.

"Teens and parents need too be reminded that underage drinking is not a game. It's deadly serious," said Dougan. "Parents need to know that hosting a party where alcohol is served to minors is both illegal and extremely dangerous for the minors and others in the community. Parents should also know they'll face all legal liabilities."

Although much progress has been made in the last two decades, alcohol-related crashes are still too common among young people. According to NHTSA statistics, in 2010, nationwide, 30 percent of 15-20 year olds killed in automobile crashes had a blood alcohol content of .01 or higher; 25 percent had a BAC of .08 or higher. Compounding the problem, 71 percent of young drivers who had been drinking and were killed in crashes were unrestrained.

Any loss or injury on our roadways is one too many. The Quincy Police Department, in partnership with EOPSS, NHTSA and DOJ recognizes that traffic crashes are preventable, and is committed to using this grant to reduce the number of motor vehicle related fatalities and injuries in Quincy because any loss of life or injury on our roadways is one too many.

New Jackie Robinson Film Rekindles Fond Memories

I recently noted that there is a new movie about the great Jackie Robinson, the baseball player.

In the early 1970s, when I was District Attorney of Norfolk County, I put on an anti-drug seminar at Archbishop Williams High School. I also noted that Jackie Robinson's son had died of a drug overdose, so I invited Jackie to come and speak at the drug seminar.

Jackie and his wife came to Quincy and my wife Sandra and I went out to dinner with them. We had a wonderful time.

derful time.

Jackie gave an inspiring speech at the drug seminar regarding his son and I will be forever indebted to him for his contribution to the seminar.

RECIPIENTS OF THE 2013 John F. Kennedy Make A Difference Award include Kania Grant and Erin Fallon of the Broad Meadows Middle School.

Among Nearly 100 Middle School Students Honored At JFK Presidential Library

Broad Meadows Students Kania Grant, Erin Fallon Presented JFK Award

Nearly one hundred middle school students from across Massachusetts were recently honored with the John F. Kennedy Make A Difference Award at the JFK Presidential Library and Museum in Boston in recognition of the volunteer work the students have performed in their communities.

Among the recipients were 8th grade student Kania Grant and 7th grade student Erin Fallon, both of Quincy's Broad Meadows Middle School. Kania and Erin were recognized for their leadership in their "After School Activism Club" known officially as Operation: Day's Work or ODW for short.

ODW member students vote to partner with a global organization each school year to bring education, protection, health care, nutritious food and hope to poor children, especially girls in developing countries. In past years, ODW members have voted to partner with organizations like Good-Weave-Nepal, Partners in Health-Haiti among others. Specific partnership projects funded by ODW include: education and rehabilitation of rescued child laborers in Nepal, livestock and literacy for poor children in Zimbabwe, Haiti and Ethiopia.

Kania and Erin planned and ran a Fall, "fun" fund raiser, an ODW Halloween Dance, for this year's ODW "Charity of the Year" which is The Kenyan School House Project. The dance run by

Erin, Kania and the entire ODW club attracted half the student body and raised over $700 towards the education of forty-one rescued child laborers who attend The Kenyan School House. www.odwusa.org

The John F. Kennedy Make A Difference Award is given to students who are nominated by a teacher or principal for an outstanding contribution made to their school, neighborhood, town or the global community. Some of the other student projects include: helping students with disabilities, working at senior centers and food pantries, organizing recycling centers, relief efforts for Hurricane Sandy, anti-bullying projects and many more. Student awardees hail from schools in Barnstable, Boston, Dracut, Everett, Longmeadow, Provincetown, Winchester and Quincy.

At the ceremony, each student received a personalized certificate recognizing their work on the project for which they were nominated.

"First Lady Jackie Kennedy believed that every person can make a difference and each of us should try," said Library Director Tom Putnam. "These students are also an inspiring example of President Kennedy's timeless call to action."

Special guest speakers at the ceremony included state Treasurer Steve Grossman and Mark Reilly, Comcast Senior Vice President for Government & Regulatory Relations.

The John F. Kennedy Make A Difference Award program is sponsored by the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum. The John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum is administered by the National Archives and Records Administration and supported by the Kennedy Library Foundation, a non-profit organization.

Portabella Mushroom Meatloaf

My daughter Rita oftentimes brings me something that she has cooked for her family for me to have. It can range from any kind of an entrée, side dish or a delicious cake or pie that she has baked.

And last week, she brought a piece of turkey meat loaf. Well, when I tasted it, it was so smooth and moist, I called her immediately to find out what her secret was.

She told me she had added portabella mushrooms to the mixture, so today I am sharing this with all of you — hoping you will try it.

MEATLOAF WITH MUSHROOMS

1 pound ground turkey
4-5 baby portabella mushrooms
¼ cup dried breadcrumbs (or slice of bread)
1 medium onion (chopped)
2 cloves garlic (chopped)

3 tablespoons olive oil for sautéing and some for topping

1 egg

Salt and pepper to taste

First, place the mushrooms in a food processor or blender. (It makes about ¼ cup when done)

In a pan, heat the oil and sauté the garlic and onion until softened. Set aside.

In bowl, mix the egg, salt and pepper, the breadcrumbs and mushrooms. Add the garlic and onion sauté along with the meat and mix until well blended.

Place on a greased cookie sheet and shape the meatloaf liked a log, rub olive oil on the top for a nice crust and bake in 350-degree oven for 30-35 minutes or until done.

Or place the meatloaf in a greased loaf pan and top it also with the oil.

Raisin, Pecan Cake

There comes a time when I am baking, I am also looking for a quick and easy way to make a cake.

I found a great recipe for a delicious fool-proof frosting and then I decided to use it to frost an easy cake to make it special.

Other than the butter, the cake is non-dairy.

SPICE CAKE WITH CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

1 cup raisins
¼ cup pecans or walnuts
1 cup light brown sugar
1 stick unsalted butter or margarine
1 ¾ cups cake flour
2 cups water
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves

½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon baking soda

Boil the water with the raisins for about 5 minutes. Add the butter and let cool for a few minutes. Add all of the other ingredients and mix well. Place either in a cake pan or loaf pan and bake in a 350 -degree oven for 30 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean from the center of the cake.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

1 stick unsalted butter (softened)
Eight ounces cream cheese (softened)
1 pound powdered sugar
¼ cup milk

Mix the butter and cream cheese together. Add the sugar and the milk a little at a time until mixture is smooth. When cake is cool, frost and refrigerate until time to serve.

At Fundraiser May 3 At Tirrell Room Quincy Teen Mothers Program To Honor Steve Moynihan

By EMILY TAFT

In March of 1978, the Quincy Teen Mothers Program began helping teenage girls receive an education while taking care of their newborns or toddlers, and Quincy resident Steve Moynihan was there as one of the founding members of the program.

"The reasons we wanted to honor Steve are many," said QTMP President Kathy McCluskey. "He is one of a few members of the board that has been with QTMP since its inception in 1978."

"Due to an influx of new people joining the staff and board of QTMP, we thought that they should know about his hard work and dedication. We want him to know how appreciated he is," McCluskey said.

"I've known Steve since 1995 when I joined the board of directors, Steve was the president. Steve is not retiring, he is still on the board but his good deeds and generosity should be recognized."

Moynihan will be recognized for his work with the program during a fundraiser for the Quincy Teen Mothers on May 3 at the Quincy Lodge of Elks Tirrell Room. He was the director of Business Affairs for Quincy Public Schools when he first got involved in the program.

"I was surprised at first to find I would be recognized," Moynihan said. "I appreciate the thought and I am honored. We don't encourage teenage pregnancy but we take care of the problem educationally," he said.

"I've been with the QTMP since the very beginning. It was originally a part of my job. The superintendent of schools at that time originally formed a non-profit corporation. The superintendent was president and he asked me to be treasurer."

STEVE MOYNIHAN

"The state required us to dissolve the corporation, so we made it into an adjunct of the school and I continued as treasurer. I have been a board member, treasurer and 14 years as president. In the beginning it was just another small little job and it just turned into a long time commitment."

The program is offered by Quincy Public Schools to help teenagers, which find themselves pregnant or with a toddler, earn a high school diploma. The program, which is housed in Bethany Church, has been around for over 30 years.

"The program is recognized all over the state and in parts of the country. There are a lot of communities that have used it as a model," said Moynihan. "There have been almost 400 girls that have graduated from the program. We get a lot of help, from donations, fundraising, and grants, which makes it the least expensive program in the Quincy Public Schools."

After 31 years as the director of Business Affairs, Moynihan retired but he has continued to be active on the QTM board and throughout the program.

"He played Santa every Christmas and made sure we were always raising funds for the girls and their babies," McCluskey said. "He put together a golf tournament for five years and he made sure his friends from the Knights of Columbus participated. Steve organized the annual boat cruise fundraiser in 1991, which is still going strong but now it is on land."

The boat cruise, which Moynihan helped organize, is the only fundraiser for the program.

"We do receive a lot of contributions, including the Boston Harbor Cruise, which started when I was president. Father Bill McCarthy came up with an idea to have a dinner cruise on Boston Harbor, for a $100 a person, which I thought he was crazy for asking that much, but we pulled it off," said Moynihan.

"We shared the profit with the Woodward School, Quincy Teen Mothers, and an organization called Jason's Place. As a result of that I recommended to the board we do our own cruise, and rain or shine we had our own cruise up until last year."

Moynihan said that because of the weather always being an issue during the fundraiser, the board decided last year to do the event on land with a cruise ship theme.

The event, which Moynihan will be recognized at, will take place on May 3rd in the Tirrell Room from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Admission is $30 for dinner and dancing.

For more information or tickets contact Noreen O'Connell at 617-984-8704 or Kathy McCluskey at 617-471-7695.

THE GORGEOUS GREEN GEMSTONE

It makes eminent sense that the gemstone known for its unparalleled green color should be the birthstone for May, often called the greenest month of the year. Unlike the blue variety of beryl, aquamarine, emerald does not appear as a perfect, flawless crystal. Emeralds are known for their "inclusions," which are small fractures and other imperfections in the green crystal that are valued for giving emerald its personality and character. Taken as a whole, these inclusions are referred to as "jardins" (French for "gardens"), which continues the play upon the green theme. When viewed without magnification, the inclusions take on the velvety appearance of a lush garden as light is diffused throughout the internal structure of this fabulous gemstone.

Make your friends green with envy when you wear sparkling emerald jewelry. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to uncover our wide and varied selection of jewelry sure to please. U.S. Senate Primary Tuesday

1973 to 1976. He has both a bachelor's degree and a law degree from Boston College, and served as a private practice attorney before turning to politics. Markey served in the Army Reserve from 1968 until 1973.

Markey's campaign website is edmarkey.com.

The three Republicans competing in the primary are:

• Gabriel Gomez, age 47, of Cohasset. Gomez was born in Los Angeles and raised in Yakima, Washington. After high school he attended the U.S. Naval Academy, where he earned a bachelor's in systems engineering in 1987. After the academy, he attended two years of Navy flight school and was a Navy fighter pilot from 1989 until 1991. He then volunteered for SEAL training, and was a Navy Seal from 1991 until 1996.

After leaving the Navy, Gomez earned an MBA from Harvard. He has worked in the financial sector since then, most recently as a principal at Advent International, a Boston-based private equity firm. Gomez started at Advent in 2004, and resigned earlier this year to run for the Senate seat.

Gomez' campaign website is gomezforma.com.

• Michael Sullivan, age 58, of Abington. Sullivan served at the U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts from 2001 until 2009. From September 2006 to 2009 he was also the acting director of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF). Prior to being appointed U.S. attorney by President Bush, he was the Plymouth County District Attorney, a position he was first appointed to in 1995. Sullivan served as a state representative from Abington from 1991 until he was named district attorney.

Sullivan grew up in Holbrook and attended Boston

College and then earned a law degree from Suffolk University. He worked for Gillette before working as a private practice attorney prior to being appointed district attorney. Since leaving his post in the Justice Department, Sullivan has worked as a partner at the Ashcroft Group, a law firm founded by former U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft.

Sullivan's website is mikesullivanforsenate.com.

• Rep. Dan Winslow of Norfolk, who turns 55 in May. Winslow has served as a state representative since 2011. He attended Tufts University for his undergraduate degree and then Boston College Law School. Winslow was a private practice attorney from 1983 until 1995, when he became a trial court judge in Wrentham. In 2002, he left the bench to become chief legal counsel to former Gov. Mitt Romney from 2002-2005.

Winslow returned to private practice in 2005 as a partner at the Duane Morris law firm, his clients with the firm included Scott Brown's 2010 senate campaign. He then worked as senior counsel at Manhattan-based Proskauer Rose's Boston office, before leaving to run for Senate. Winslow was born in Northampton and raised in Amherst.

Winslow's campaign website is danwinslow.com.

Polls will be open Tuesday from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. City Clerk Joe Shea anticipates between 28 and 30 percent of Quincy's 63,815 registered voters – between 17,868 and 19,144 total – will cast ballots in the primary. The total number of registered voters has increased because state now requires communities to count both active and inactive voters when calculating the number of registered voters.

Absentee balloting is ongoing through noon on Monday before the election. Only those who will be outside the city on election day or unable to make it to a polling location can vote absentee. Applications for absentee ballots are available on Quincy's website at quincy.ma.gov – residents can vote also absentee in person at the City Clerk's office at 1259 Hancock Street.

Tuesday's primary and the final in June are expected to cost a combined $210,000. Quincy will pay the cost up front, according to Shea, and the state will then reimburse the city.

"The city has to put the money in. It's a state mandate so we'll get it back," Shea said. "We've gotten communications from the Department of Revenue that we'll get it."

Wollaston Center Planning Meeting

we'd like to see there. The neighborhood at the first meeting gave a lot of great ideas – they basically told us what they want to see," Kristina Johnson, the Planning Department's director of transportation planning, said.

"That was brought to MAPC, they did the study and looked what worked and what could work," Hughes added.

The results of the study will be presented at tonight's meeting and those in attendance will be able to comment on the results. The process is similar to the one the city went through before committing to redevelop Quincy Center, though the changes in Wollaston will be smaller in scale.

"This process that we're going through is very similar to what we did in Quincy Center where we start with a neighborhood vision for revitalization or what we're calling in Wollaston re-envisioning," Johnson said. "We're looking to improve on the great neighborhood that it already is based on using the MBTA as a catalyst for new development to come into the neighborhood. This is the first step in the process, just like in Quincy Center back in 2003 when we sat with the neighborhood and conducted the charrettes."

Illustrated Lecture On Artist John La Farge Sunday At Library

Dr. James L. Yarnall, a leading authority on the 19th-century American artist John La Farge, will present a free illustrated lecture Sunday, April 28 at 3 p.m. in the community meeting room at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The lecture will be followed by a guided tour of the La Farge stained glass windows located in the library's historic H.H. Richardson building, the former Crane Memorial Library.

Dr. Yarnall is a professor at Salve Regina University. Between 1982 and 2003, he worked closely with the La Farge family as director of the catalogue raisonné of La Farge's work in all media.

In early 2012, Ashgate Press published his most recent book entitled John La Farge, A Biographical and Critical Study, the first biography of the artist in a hundred years. The cover of the book features "The Old Philosopher," one of the windows La Farge created for the Quincy's Crane Memorial Library.

to a number of conditions the city would need to meet to remedy the violations or face a $38,782 fine.

Carter Fahy, an engineer with Crown Colony-based Environmental Partners, was retained by the city to oversee the DPW's efforts to fix the violations, including creating a new operations and management (O&M) plan to govern day-to-day operations of all employees working at the DPW yard, from Commissioner Dan Raymond down. Fahy told the City Council's Public Works Committee Monday that many of the requirements in the consent order had already been met.

"Certain aspects of the administrative consent order – cleanup of some minor waste oil spillage, erecting berms and signage – those have all been addressed," Fahy said. "We've been in constant communication with DEP. We submitted the O&M for their review and we haven't gotten any feedback from them – we did that back in January. But DEP in fact was down at the site about two or three weeks ago just to spot check, see how things we're doing, and they said 'you're proceeding in the right direction.'"

"Basically the city was given certain requirements, they had to get certain things done by a certain number of days, and they've met all those benchmarks."

The DPW had stopped accepting hazardous waste

– used oil and mercury thermometers, for example – except on designated hazardous waste days to comply with consent order. Fahy said the city worked with another firm, Clean Harbors, to remove stored hazardous waste. And he submitted paperwork to allow the DPW to accept hazardous waste going forward.

"I've been down there making sure if they were to accept it tomorrow they'd be able to do it. I did on-site training with the people who are going to be managing that and today I actually submitted a registration to the DEP for permission for the city to re-commence acceptance of waste oil and mercury, fluorescent bulbs and thermostats – things like that," Fahy said.

Waste oil had seeped into the ground, and the city was ordered to clean that up. Fahy oversaw the removal of 60 tons of contaminated soil, which he said cost the city about $5,000 to haul away and dispose of.

The DPW was also cited for dumping catch basin cleanings and street sweepings and letting them stay there for an extended period of time. Fahy said street sweepings are now being placed in dumpsters right away. The DPW also spent about $40,000 to remove the catch basin cleanings on site, and was looking for a way to handle those cleanings going forward.

"My understanding was about $40,000 was spent for the disposal of the historic catch basin cleanings. There is still some that remain, but those are being managed effectively onsite," Fahy said. "The DPW and DEP are actually in communication trying to come up with a more cost effective solution to manage the catch basin cleanings that are on site – possibly mixing it with some compost for some restricted uses."

The DPW still has two major requirements to meet. They have until the start of October to install a new vehicle wash station and to re-grade the yard to better control storm water treatment. In the interim, the city has taken temporary steps to fix both problems.

"The two remaining requirements are the erection of a vehicle wash station, which is due at the beginning of October, and re-grading of the site to better allow storm water treatment on site," Fahy said. "With regard to storm water treatment, there is interim erosion controls that have been put in place – they've said that's fine for now – and we'll go from there."

"With regard to vehicle wash stations, it's due Oct. 1 but the DEP has allowed the city to wash vehicles on site with some onsite management of their wash water – draining to catch basins but routinely cleaning out those catch basins on a bi-weekly basis."

Fahy estimated that it would cost between $40,000 and $50,000 to install the plumbing components of the new vehicle wash station. The vehicle wash will be built as an extension of an existing building, and Fahy could not say how much the extension itself would cost. Fahy also said the DPW should be able to do the re-grading in house using equipment it already owns.

The DEP also cited Quincy for violations during the construction of the city's new track at Faxon Field, including spillage of debris into the abutting wetlands and the use of fill material to compress the track site to help drive water out.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins said those issues were quickly addressed.

"There was some spillage into the wetlands during the construction period and that was addressed the next day. A siltation fence was repaired, the spillage was removed and they (the DEP) were fine with that," Timmins said.

"The other issue was some issue with the fill," Timmins said. "It was explained to them at the time that what they saw at Faxon Field was all being removed – you may recall that we used preload and all the preload that they found at that occasion was taken from the Quincy High School site and was all removed from the site – it's long gone. The DEP officials were advised of that at the time, they monitored the removal process."

The city failed to meet one condition related to the new track. An equalization pipe had been installed under Russell Park, but no notice of intent was filed with Quincy's Conservation Commission. According to the consent order, the city had to file a notice within 30 days.

Timmins said that a notice of intent was filed, but not within the 30 days, because the city needed to wait on calculations relating to the pipe.

Community Preservation Act Could Be Funded By Other Sources Including Hotel/Motel Tax

Gutro Seeks Ballot Question On Changing CPA Funding

A possible change to Quincy's Community Preservation Act funding could be on the ballot in November.

CPA money can go to a variety of projects including open space protection, historic preservation, affordable housing and outdoor recreation. Currently the city's CPA account is funded by a one percent surcharge on property taxes and the state matches a percentage of the total. Voters approved the surcharge in a ballot question in 2008.

The state amended the Community Preservation Act last year to give communities the ability to add income from other revenues, such as hotel/motel tax, meals tax, or excise tax to their CPA accounts. That new income would also be eligible for a state match.

Councillor Doug Gutro introduced a resolution at Monday's council meeting asking City Solicitor Jim Timmins to draft a ballot question that would go on November's ballot if the council approved it. Gutro, who worked with the statewide Community Preservation Coalition on the issue, said other communities have submitted the issue to voters since the amendment was enacted.

"Since the passage of amendments to the Community Preservation Act statewide last year several communities have come forward and put on the ballot and passed what's known as the blended CPA," Gutro said. "The blended CPA allows other municipal sources, in addition to property tax levy, to be considered by the state for matching funds."

Gutro noted Quincy already dedicates revenue from the hotel/motel tax to uses that include open space preservation and parks in recreations and those funds could be matched if voters approve the ballot question. Hotel/motel tax receipts also go towards seawall repair and tourism, neither of which would be eligible for the CPA match.

"We in the City of Quincy have several sources, including the hotel/motel tax, that historically has been used for some CPA eligible expenses," Gutro said. "In 2012 our local CPA surcharge revenues were about $1.2 million and we received $339,617 in a state match—that's not money paid for by local taxpayers. In addition to that we derived over $1 million in hotel/motel tax revenues but before the change to the CPA we could not put that in and be considered for a state match."

Gutro indicated that he wants the ballot question approved by the council before the summer recess starts at the end of June. Doing so would allow voters extra time to familiarize themselves with the issue.

"It would be a value, and my desire would be to have action taken by the City Council in June before we recess for the summer. I think it gives an opportunity then for five months to educate the voters on what it's all about," Gutro said. "There are so many ballot questions that we look at two days before we have to cast a vote and we don't quite know so if we could get it approved for positioning on the ballot...I think that would give voters ample time to be educated on the issue."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who is vice chairman of Quincy's Community Preservation Committee, said adopting the provisions of the amendment would benefit the city greatly.

"As Councillor Gutro indicated it is an important and valuable step that we can take. I think we are going to benefit from it across the board," Coughlin said.

Fundraiser For Boston Marathon Victims After Quincy Half Marathon May 5

By EMILY TAFT

The Half Door Pub, 1516 Hancock St., Quincy Center, will hold a fundraiser following the May 5th Quincy Half Marathon to aid victims of the Boston Marathon bombings.

Proceeds from the fundraiser will be donated to One Fund Boston which has been established to help the people most affected by the marathon tragedy.

"I just really wanted to do something and I think offering a space and opportunity for all my fellow runners to join together after our own run would be fantastic," said Quincy resident and event coordinator Sarah Lewis. "I felt like I needed to do something and this is a great way to provide an avenue for runners to donate," said Lewis who will be running in her second Quincy Half Marathon.

"I am really happy with how willing people have been to give to this cause. The support I am getting from Quincy and the surrounding towns has been overwhelming."

Doors to the pub will open at 10 a.m. May 5 and there will be a $5 cover charge, a free buffet, raffle prizes and a possible silent auction for some prizes. Raffle prizes, which will be done in the afternoon, include Red Sox tickets, restaurant gift cards, yoga passes, and 18 holes at Presidents Golf Course, among many others.

The 13.1-mile road race starts at 8 a.m. at Quincy High School and proceeds through Merrymount, back to Quincy Center, then into Wollaston, North Quincy, and Montclair, before ending at the city's new track next to the high school. The event raises money for running programs in Quincy Public Schools, the Quincy Track Club, South Shore YMCA, and the Dana-Faber Marathon Challenge.

For more information on the Quincy Half Marathon visit halfofquincy.com.

To donate to Lewis's cause visit <https://onefund-boston.org/> or contact Sarah Lewis at sarah.ruth.lewis@gmail.com.

raised $444.00."

Ciara said she wanted to do something for that particular family because she knew that Richard's mother and sister were also seriously injured in the blasts.

"We knew this family was going through some hard times and not only did they lose a son but the mother and sister were also seriously hurt so we wanted to do something," said Ciara O'Connor. "The whole family is hurting and the young boy was our age so it hits a little closer to home for all of us. We want them to know that they are in our prayers."

After raising the $444 the girls and their families went to present the donation to The Fat Belly Deli in Dorchester, which is raising money for the Richard Family, and found themselves receiving even more donations while eating lunch there.

"We understood that the Blasi's Cafe/Fat Belly Deli was a location taking donations for this family. We decided to go there and drop off the donation. Once there, the staff and patrons began adding to the fund. It was now up to $567.00," said O'Connor.

"When we realized that people still wanted to donate, who had missed our lemonade stand, we decided to do a combination bake sale, lemonade stand and hold it somewhere more visible. The girls realized they could keep going and possibly reach a goal of $1,000."

"On Wednesday the moms went shopping and together with the girls stayed up until midnight baking goods and making signs. We were set up at the corners of East Squantum Street and Huckings Avenue and the rest is history. When we brought the check to the deli the owners, Maria and Kenny, couldn't believe how much the girls raised and were so proud of them, they even set up a private room for us to eat dinner."

The bake sale and lemonade stand lasted from noon to 5 p.m. last Thursday and during that time they more than doubled their second goal of $2,000. Within 12 minutes of opening their stand on Thursday the girls had already raised over $100 and O'Connor said that people were stopping at the site and dropping off $100 bills not asking for anything in return.

"It was non-stop. There were so many people that showed up, a hundred showed up to donate," said O'Connor. "It has just been an unbelievable experience. We found ourselves asking what can we do and this is a great way for us to deal with this and it has helped them (the girls) deal with it. It is really touching to see how many people came and it showed how truly generous this city is and the support the victims are getting from Quincy. To think that it was just a lemonade stand and a goal of $100 has turned into something so much bigger."

O'Connor and Trish Loney, the mother of 10-year-old Mary Loney, said that when their daughters wanted to do something to help they didn't hesitate to help them make that happen.

"We can't imagine what these families are going through," said Loney. "Anything we can do to help we will. We are so proud of our girls for taking this on."

O'Connor added, "It is hard for us as grown-ups to understand the events that happened at the marathon. I can't imagine what the kids are thinking."

The next step for the girls is to sell bracelets at their school in hopes to raise even more money for the family.

"The girls would like to continue raising funds for this family, a family they never met, but understand their pain," said O'Connor. "I feel as though when the girls see the beautiful face of eight-year-old Martin, they see the face off all their eight-year-old friends and they can relate. Their next step is possibly selling wristbands or notepads with the image of Martin's sign reading, 'No more hurting people, Peace'."

O'Connor added that they are still receiving and accepting check if anyone still wants to donate. To donate contact Diane O'Connor at finbarr.diane@comcast.net.

"On behalf of the girl's parents, we would like to say thank you to all who have supported this effort and have given so generously to this important cause," said O'Connor.

"We are very proud of our girls."

Neighborhood Meeting Tonight On Alba Deli Request For Beer/Wine License

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest will conduct a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. in the temporary City Council Chamber regarding a request by Alba Deli at 1085 Hancock St. for a beer/wine license.

Alba Deli has been a full service restaurant serving breakfast, lunch and dinner for more than three years. Laforest said Alba Deli is at a competitive disadvantage to other area restaurants due to its inability to serve beer and wine. For that reason, Alba Deli is seeking a beer and wine license from the City of Quincy to better serve its customers and increase its food service business.

"Alba Deli has been waiting for approximately two years for a restaurant beer and wine license to become available. If approved, my client intends to use the license to expand its dinner and weekend service," Laforest said.

The matter is scheduled for the License Board meeting on Tuesday, May 7th at 4 p.m. in the City Council Chamber. Anyone can attend the license board meetings to express support or opposition to proposed applications and comments can be submitted to City Clerk Joe Shea 1305 Hancock Street or by email jshea@quincy-ma.gov.

QUINCY CENTER FIELDER Devon Varmahmoodi turns to throw to second base after catching a long flyout during the Presidents' 3-2 loss to Hanover Monday.

Quincy Softball Edged By Hanover, 3-2

By BILL GRIFFIN

All the pieces were in place for a happy ending.

After an uneven first inning, sophomore righthander Saxon Bresnahan settled in with a dominating pitching performance. For the final six innings, Quincy's defense was sharp and steady. For the final three innings, the Presidents sprinkled the field with hard-hit line drives.

They had runners on second and third with two outs in the bottom of the seventh trailing by one run. Taylor Parry smacked a hard ground ball up the middle. If it goes through, two runs score and Quincy wins. It would be a happy ending, a day of softball in the cold rewarded with victory. It was so close.

However, Hanover pitcher Callie MacDonald stabbed the grounder and threw to first for the final out to hold off Quincy, 3-2 in a Patriot League game played at Mitchell-McCoy Field Monday.

"We played a good ball game after the first inning," said coach Greg Sommers. "The kids kept battling and we hit the ball well late in the game. We just couldn't get the big one to drop in for us."

The Indians did all their damage with three unearned runs in the first without benefit of a hit. That was their offense. That was enough.

"We gave them extra outs and we can't do that. Hopefully, we learned that today," said Sommers. "Take away the first inning, it's an excellent ball game and we win."

Bresnahan was outstanding against a hard-hitting Hanover team. She gave three hits and fanned 13. She struck out the side three times and was tough with runners on base, stranding six for the game. She deserved better.

"She really settled in and Hanover is an excellent offensive team," said Sommers. "Her control was good after the first and she hit her spots very well."

Her fastball was crackling and she mixed in a changeup for several of her strikeouts. She kept the ball down and did a good job living on the corners of the plate for the final six innings of the game.

"The changeup is an important pitch for her," said Sommers. "She needs have confidence in it to keep the hitters off her fastball. She had a good one today."

Her defense supported her well after the first. Devon Varmahmoodi and Dana Varmahmoodi made fine plays in center and left. Catcher Angela Avitable and shortstop Rachel Papile combined for the defensive play of the game in the fifth. With Hanover's Janet Taylor on second, third baseman Devin McMahon was playing shallow. When Taylor tried to steal third, Avitable fired a strike and Papile hustled over to make the catch and tag for the out.

"Angela has an excellent arm and Rachel has about three things she's trying to do at once in that situation. She did a good job getting over for the tag," said Sommers.

Papile, McMahon and freshman Nicole Jorgensen had the hits for Quincy.

HERE'S THE HEAT - Quincy pitcher Saxon Bresnahan gave up only three hits and fanned 13 Hanover batters but the Presidents bowed to the Indians, 3-2, at Mitchell-McCoy Field Monday afternoon.

The Presidents nearly had at least three more. Ashley Faiella had a hard drive to short which turned into an out in the fourth. Hanover centerfielder Marissa Toponi ranged back to get deep drives by Avitable and Faiella in the sixth and seventh. Faiella's shot led off the seventh. If it had fallen, the Presidents are looking at a much different inning.

"I thought for sure that one of the them would go over her head," said Sommers.

Quincy scored twice in the fifth. Leann McColgan led off with a walk. Jorgensen lofted a drive to right center for a double and one run.

Jorgensen moved to third on a ground ball and scored on a wild pitch to cut the lead to 3-2.

In the seventh, McColgan walked with one out. Pinch runner Emma Kelly stole second. Jorgensen was hit by a pitch and both runners moved along on a ground ball. Parry then drove a hard grounder up the middle, but MacDonald was in position to grab it and end the game.

"Give the girls credit. We got down two runs, but they didn't give up. We found out we can't give extra outs to good teams," said Sommers.

Quincy is 2-3 and hosts Duxbury Thursday at 4 p.m.

SOLEMN SALUTE - Leo Cardarelli, Past Commandant of the William R. Caddy Detachment #124 and a China Marine veteran, pauses as Taps is performed at Sunday's Memorial Service for PFC William R. Remembering Supreme Sacrifice At Caddy Memorial Day

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

PFC William R. Caddy and three other Quincy Marines killed during the Battle of Iwo Jima 68 years ago were remembered for their heroism and supreme sacrifice at the annual Caddy Day Memorial Service Sunday afternoon.

About 150 veterans, city officials, residents and family members gathered at Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Drive across from Wollaston Beach as a brilliant sun shined against a deep blue sky during the moving tribute and solemn remembrance.

As color guard units framed the small cobblestoned park, a wreath was placed at a granite memorial dedicated to PFC Caddy by his niece, Sherri Holleran and Caddy Detachment #124 Marine Corps League Paet Commandant Dan Dewey. Flags from the color guard units fluttered in the wind while those gathered paused to pay respect and honor the former North Quincy High School student who was killed in action at the age of 19.

PFC Caddy was assigned to the 5th Marine Division. On March 3, 1945, during the Battle of Iwo Jima, an enemy grenade landed near PFC Caddy. He smothered the grenade with his body. The blast killed him but PFC Caddy's bravery and sacrifice saved the lives of his platoon leader and platoon sergeant.

PFC Caddy was presented the Medal of Honor posthumously. He was the 72nd Marine of World War II to receive this nation's highest military decoration.

Three other Quincy Marines killed during that battle that began on Feb. 19, 1945 and ended March 26, 1945 were also remembered.

They are:

PVT Malcolm McPherson - Killed in Action - Feb. 19, 1945; PVT John W.

Jackson - Killed in Action - March 3, 1945; and PVT John R. Koski - Killed in Action - March 12, 1945.

In all, 6,821 U.S. troops were killed and 19,217 were wounded during the Battle of Iwo Jima.

Caddy Detachment Commandant Marc Connolly said the Detachment organizes the Memorial Ceremony to commemorate the exceptional courage and individual valor of our country's soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines - who fought in the Marine Corps' most epic battle, Iwo Jima.

"While victory for the Marines was never in doubt, its costs, in American lives, was," Connolly said. "Because there are no words that can properly express the gratitude - due to those fighting men - it is only right that we should stand together and attempt a proper tribute to our valiant warriors, including four young Marines from Quincy, who were tragically killed in action, during the battle for Iwo Jima."

Leo Cardarelli, Past Commandant, Caddy Detachment and a World War II China Marine, recalled the history of Caddy Memorial Park that dates back a half century.

In the early 1960s, James R. McIntyre, a Caddy Detachment member and at the time a Quincy state representative, was instrumental in getting legislation passed that renamed Treasure Island Park, a local recreation area on Quincy Shore Drive, in honor of PFC Caddy.

Fifty years ago this fall, in October, 1963, the PFC William R. Caddy Memorial Park was officially dedicated with one of the largest parades ever held in Quincy.

Hundreds of Marines in the Quincy and Greater Boston area and beyond marched in the parade that also featured 14 marching bands. Among the Marines marching were 125 from South Weymouth Naval Air Station, 110 from Charlestown and 40 who were aboard the Heavy Cruiser Buffalo that was berthed in Boston at the time. There were also 40 Marines from recruitment stations in the area as well as 125 from the Caddy Detachment in Quincy.

Also participating in the parade was General Keller Rockey, the Commanding General of the 5th Marine Division during the Battle of Iwo Jima.

Cardarelli noted that the first physical memorial to PFC Caddy was an oversized bronze marker that was placed on top of a small hill overlooking the current park area. But that marker was stolen some time later.

With the MDC's support, a granite monument was placed in an area closer to the street and more in public view. Behind the memorial stands a large flag pole that flies the American, Marine Corps and POW/MIA flag.

Cardarelli said many of the Marines who were present at that first memorial service have passed on. He thanked the Marines who went to battle in future wars including Korea, Vietnam, Afghanistan and Iraq who have "come home and continue to honor and hold this ceremony."

George Nicholson, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, said the PFC Caddy Memorial Service was the first veterans' ceremony he attended after returning from Vietnam. He said PFC Caddy's valor was innate, not trained.

"He died because there were two other comrades in a fox hole and PFC Caddy acted on instinct to save the lives of those two comrades," Nicholson said.

Before the ceremony began, a moment of silence

Red Raiders Rout Milton In Tourney Final

North Quincy 11 - Milton 4

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a senior team playing in the spring of its final high school season. It is the last roundup. At North Quincy, it is a time to win games, make moments and bring home tournament championships.

Senior shortstop Pat Verhault led a brilliant show of two-way, hitting-and-defense baseball, and Andrew Currie finished with four shutout innings to lead the Red Raiders to an emphatic 11-4 decision over Milton in the championship game of the Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament at Adams Field last week.

"We talked to the kids about leaving a legacy and this game was a good statement," said North coach Dan McHugh whose team won this tournament in 2011. "We have 12 seniors and we want to have things to remember. We beat Quincy in the tourney and that's always special. Against Milton, our bats came alive and we played real good baseball."

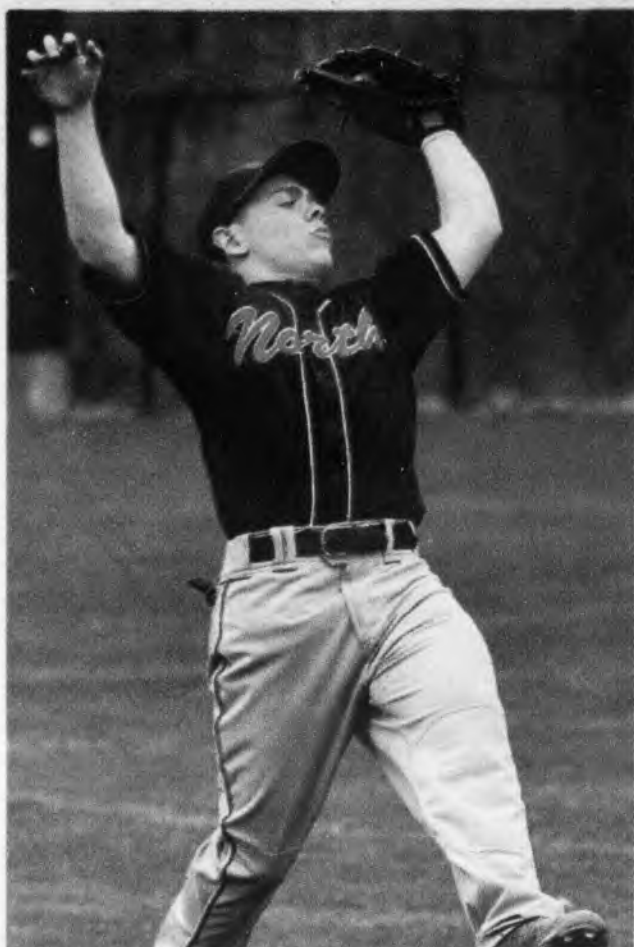

Once again the Red Raiders made no errors and they rapped out 12 hits. In the middle of it all was Verhault who played exceptional baseball in the tourney. If the tourney had an MVP, he would be it. Against Milton, he was on base four times, had two hits, stole three bases, scored three runs and added an RBI. For the tourney he went 4-6, scored five runs, stole four bases, had four hits, and drove in two runs. Any questions?

"I'm one of the captains and I always want to ignite us, get us going. It's my responsibility. That's what I try to do every game," said Verhault.

Defense? He probably saved the Quincy game with a stab and off-balance, one-hop throw from deep in the hole in the seventh inning. In the sixth against Milton, he handled a ball which exploded at his feet in the hole and turned it into a 6-4-3 double play. In between, he was rock solid on routine and difficult plays at one of the busiest spots on the baseball field.

"This means a whole lot to us," he said. "We won it as sophomores and to win again on our own field is special to all of us. We want to leave behind some good memories."

All three phases of the game clicked for the Red Raiders. No errors in the game, no errors in the tournament, a fistful of hits and runs, and a battler in Currie who was tough and sharp once he had a lead to protect. They added a four-run and a five-run rally. They simply played good baseball.

"In the tournament, our pitching, hitting, and defense came together. Hopefully it carries over when we get back in the league," said McHugh.

Verhault had plenty of company on defense. Scott Higgins made a diving, shoe-top catch in right in the first. For the second straight came catcher Pat Gould threw a hard strike to second to catch a base stealer. Danny Gould ranged far to his left in centerfield for a good running catch in the fourth. Once again, they made all the plays.

"I have a lot of confidence in our defense, especially the outfield. When the ball goes up, we have a good chance to get it," said McHugh.

Bryan Turner and Mike Alibrandi (four hits, a sacrifice fly, four RBI for the tourney) each had a pair of hits. Josh Hayward slugged a triple and Currie scored three times (five for the tourney). The only discouraging spot was Nick McGaughey (2-2 against Milton, three hits, three RBI for the tournament), who had been hitting nothing but line drives, left with a shoulder injury after falling rounding third in the third inning.

"Nick has been right on the ball. If he's missing for any length of time, it's a huge loss," said McHugh.

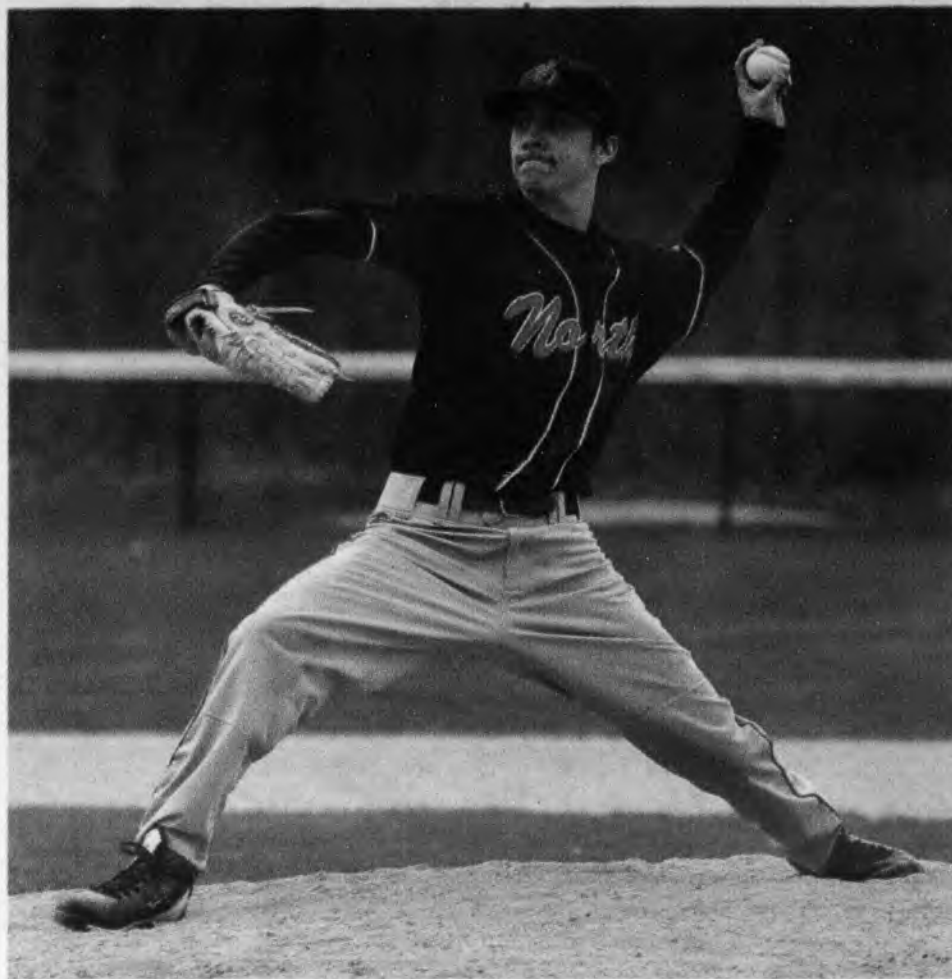

Currie, a junior lefty, gave four runs in the first three innings, but finished strong. He struck out six, did not walk a batter, and retired seven of eight batters in a stretch when North took control in the middle innings. After the Red Raiders went ahead, 5-4 in the third, Milton couldn't touch him. He set up his fastball with off-speed stuff and his control was excellent.

"He's such a competitor. You can't get him out of there," said McHugh.

Milton scored twice in the second and third. McGaughey singled in a run in the first. The Red Raiders went up for good at 5-4 with four in the third with a rally featured by a Hayward triple and singles from McGaughey, Turner, and Dan Gould. The Red Raiders finished it with five in the fourth. Shawn Grady, Pat Gould, Verhault, and Alibrandi had key hits in the rally.

North finished the week at 4-2 and hosts Pembroke Wednesday at 4:00. The Red Raiders travel to Hingham Friday.

Sparkling Defense, Timely Hitting Carry Raiders Past Presidents

By BILL GRIFFIN

Defense wins games.

In high school baseball, if a team can make all the plays and force the opposition to earn runs with base hits, the team will win many games. Pitching still rules, but clean defense turns good pitching into great pitching and that is always a good thing.

North Quincy made the routine, difficult and acrobatic plays and added just the right touch of timely hitting to down city rival Quincy, 6-4 in the opening round of last week's baseball tournament at Adams Field.

"Solid defense makes all the difference for a team, and our defense has been steady all year," said North coach Dan McHugh whose club played errorless ball against the Presidents.

Senior shortstop Pat Verhault (two hits, two runs scored, an RBI) made the best and most important play in the bottom of the seventh. With Quincy in the middle of a two-run rally which cut North's lead in half, Verhault went deep in the hole to grab a hard ground ball from Tyler Beach. Verhault lost his balance, spun and fired a one-hop, waist-high strike which Josh Haywood handled at first for the out. It was highlight-film material.

Quincy's Matt Davis followed with a single to put runners on first and second. If Verhault doesn't make his play, Quincy is looking at a big inning. Defense does win games.

"It was an immense play for us," said McHugh. "Pat has been solid for us in the middle of our defense. He's a senior leader."

It was the most noteworthy play, but not the only defensive gem of the afternoon for North.

--- In the second, catcher Pat Gould (two hits, a run scored) rifled a strike to second to nail a base-stealer and end a two-out threat.

--- In the fourth with two on and one out, second baseman Shawn Grady handled a grounder, smartly tagged the runner and flipped to first for an inning-ending double play.

--- In the fifth, Davis slugged a triple to left center to put Quincy up, 2-1. When he tried to stretch it into a home run, North threw him out at the plate with an 8-6-5-2 relay which may never be seen again. Danny Gould ran down the deep shot at the fence, threw to Verhault who fired to third baseman Mike Alibrandi who threw to catcher Pat Gould who blocked the plate for the out at home. Is all that clear? Another run saved.

---In the first with runners on second and third, Alibrandi handled a hard short at third for the final out. In the third, he charged a bunt, scooped it barehand and threw out Beach at first with one out and a runner on base.

Add it all up and North's defense may well have saved five runs. Defense does win games.

"It was definitely the key for us today. We made the plays a veteran team should make and it made the difference," said McHugh.

Hayward went the first 5 1/3 and scattered 10 hits to earn the win. As he did in the opener against Marshfield, he was tough with men on base. Sophomore Bryan Turner got two outs to escape a jam in the sixth and Andrew Currie pitched the seventh to finish it.

"Josh really competed and Turner got two big outs for us," said McHugh.

In the 4-0 loss last Saturday to Silver Lake, North hurt itself by stranding base runners.

"We needed to get better with men on base," said McHugh.

With two out and the score tied 2-2 in the sixth, Alibrandi (two hits, one RBI) delivered with a single to put the Red Raiders up for good. Nick McGaughey cracked a one-out single and Currie (two runs, two RBI) beat out a potential double-play ball for insurance runs in the seventh.

"We'd been leaving runners stranded," said McHugh. "We struggled against Silver Lake with runners on, but we got the key hits today against Quincy."

The Presidents hit the ball. Quincy had 11 hits. Davis had a monster game with a triple, two singles, a run scored and three RBI. Johnny Marsinelli and Bobby Salvucci had a pair of hits apiece. Beach had a single and hit the ball hard three times. Robbie Munroe, Mike Pugsley and Alex Heffernan also had hits for the Presidents.

"I thought our offense was good, we just didn't get the big hit," said assistant coach Matt Edgerly. "Mars-inelli and David had big days. They've hit the ball consistently for us."

Right-hander Dillon Darcy worked six solid innings for Quincy giving four runs and four hits. He featured a good fastball, mixed in his breaking stuff and struck out three.

"He threw well. He has a good fastball. He changed speeds and mixed up his stuff well," said Edgerly.

North scored one in the first on a Dan Gould sacrifice fly. Quincy went up, 2-1 in the fifth. Marsinelli singled and scored on a wild pitch. Davis drove in Beach with his triple to give Quincy the lead.

Currie and Alibrandi had RBI in the sixth for a 3-2 North lead. McGaughey and Currie drove in runs to up it to 6-2 in the top of the seventh. Davis had a two-run single in the Quincy seventh to make the final, 6-4.

In the loss to Silver Lake, Alibrandi pitched six strong innings, giving just two earned runs. Currie had a pair of hits and two stolen bases.

Hannigan's 2-Run Single Lifts Presidents Over Weymouth, 5-3

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy needed a big hit.

The Presidents had rapped out 11 hits, good for only four runs in the first-round loss to North. Against Weymouth, they stranded nine base runners and despite three-bases loaded chances, they stood deadlocked with the Wildcats at 3-3 in the bottom of the sixth inning.

They needed a base hit to break open a ball game.

Pinch hitter Tom Hannigan stepped up and delivered. He laced a soft liner into left for a two-run single which lifted the Presidents past Weymouth, 5-3 in the consolation game of the Quincy/North Quincy Baseball Tournament at Adams Field last week.

"We've been looking for the big hit for a couple of games and Tommy gave it to us," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan. "I was happy because we hung in there against a tough pitcher and gave ourselves a chance to win."

Quincy trailed, 3-0 entering the bottom of the sixth. A single by Tyler Beach, an error, and a perfect bunt single by Johnny Marsinelli loaded the bases. One run scored on an error. Robbie Munroe, Mike Pugsley and Padraig Geaney ran deep counts and worked walks for two more runs and a 3-3 tie with two outs.

Up stepped Hannigan as a pinch hitter.

"He's lefty hitter against a right-handed pitcher and I liked that," said Bryan. "He usually gets his bat on the ball. He had two hits against Randolph. I thought he had a good chance and he ended up winning the ball game for us."

His two-run single gave a richly-deserved win to sophomore righty Greg Paulo who went the first six, giving just three hits, no earned runs and fanning four. He gave no walks. He mixed a good fastball with a terrific curve and pitched with an intelligence which is rare in a sophomore. He moved the ball around and changed speeds. He had an idea for every pitch.

"He was looking at a 3-0 hole and hadn't given up an earned run," said Bryan. "His curveball was much better than his first start. His composure on the mound is excellent for a sophomore.

Senior righty Chris McMahon finished the seventh. He threw well from the side and was helped by a 6-4-3 double play turned by Beach, Pugsley and Mike Gendreau. Pugsley hung in against a hard slide to turn the pivot at second, and Gendreau made a good stretch and scoop to finish the DP.

"It's a team's best friend. A double play lifts one team and deflates the other. We did a good job turning it and I think it stopped their inning," said Bryan.

Weymouth starter Ryan Jones had a big-time fastball and a decent curve. The Presidents didn't reach him until the sixth, but they ran up his pitch count with quality at bats. Wildness hit in the sixth and Hannigan finally solved him with his clutch shot to left which scored the winning runs.

"He's an excellent pitcher, but we hung in against him. We had good at-bats and we were patient at the plate in our big inning," said Bryan.

Salvucci and Marsinelli each had a pair of hits for the winners. Marsinelli also added a pair of stolen bases — not too shabby for a catcher. He had four hits, worked three walks and scored a pair of runs in the tournament. He makes contact and works a good game behind the plate.

"He's a great hitter," said Bryan. "He always gives you a good at-bat and usually makes good contact."

It is worth noting that the many of the main contributors are underclassmen. Matt Davis, who had three hits including a booming triple against North, is a junior. Marsinelli, Hannigan, and Pugsley are also juniors. Salvucci, Beach, and Paulo are sophomores. The best is yet to come for this team and a win was exactly what Bryan's young club needed.

"It was a good to get," he said. "It showed them all the things we work on in practice can pay off in a win."

Quincy finished the week at 2-3 and travels to Duxbury Wednesday. The Presidents host Middleboro Friday at 4:00.

One Of The Finest Div. 3 Players Ever

Catherine O'Connell: Basketball's About Team, Not Points

By BILL GRIFFIN

She is one of the finest players in the history of New England Division 3 women's college basketball.

Yet when Quincy's Catherine O'Connell is asked about her numbers and achievements, she speaks of family, great and true friends, the joy of being a teammate, and an improbable shot which produced her 1,000th career point at Newbury College and gave her a funny story to tell which will last a lifetime.

"I don't like to think about numbers," said O'Connell. "Basketball is a part of what I am. Without basketball, I wouldn't be the same person. It's had that kind of influence in my life. It started with my family and I made friends I never would have met without basketball."

Her four-year resume as center at Newbury is impressive.

She is the school's all-time leading scorer with 1,339 points and all-time leading rebounder with 1,531.

She ranked fourth in rebounding in the country as a senior with an average of 15.0 per game. As a junior, she was first in the country in rebounding.

She had a game against Leslie College which reads like something out of a fable. She had 33 points and 32 rebounds. It was part of a week in which she had 69 points, 69 rebounds and nine blocks which would be a neat season for most players. She earned player of the week honors in her league (New England Collegiate Conference), in the region (ECAC and New England Women's Basketball association), and in the country (a berth on the Division III team of the week).

She was selected first-team All Star in her league and played in the NEWBA All Star Classic.

She finished her career with 69 double-doubles in points and rebounding, just 14 behind the all-time Division 3 record of 83 held by Kathryn Stockbower of Swarthmore.

"My best memory of Newbury is being part of something," said O'Connell. "Being a teammate is such a great feeling and that's what I will take away from my college experience."

It all started in the backyard with family. Catherine's older brother John and sister Elyse were basketball players. Her father, Matthew, knows and loves the game. There was a hoop in the backyard. It was Catherine's home. She would play in sun and snow, in winter, spring, summer and fall.

'BASKETBALL IS a part of what I am,' says Quincy's Catherine O'Connell who recently concluded her Newbury College career as one of the top Div. 3 players in New England.

"Every day, every night," her father smiled. "We would shovel a path to the hoop in the winter. Mostly we just had great fun playing, but we did work on fundamentals like how to post up and following through on her shot."

Elyse and John played in the Sacred Heart Youth League. Before she was old enough for kindergarten, Catherine would go to the games and skip out onto the court to steal a shot or a dribble during idle moments.

"She played basketball before she could walk," said her mother Mary.

O'Connell played and coached in the Sacred Heart program. She played at North and graduated in 2009. It was a time of good friends and good basketball. The friendships have endured. O'Connell renewed one of them at the NEWBA All Star when, surprise, she looked down to the bench and saw and old teammate from North.

"It was Sibohan Carnell. She played for Keene State," said O'Connell. "It was just like old times. Nothing had changed. We sat on the bench and talked. Sometimes, we forgot to pay attention to the game and kept talking about stuff. Just like high school."

There was also inspiration and grief in her time at North.

"My brother John passed away when I was a freshman," she said. "I promised myself that everything I would do on a basketball floor, I would do for him. It made me work as hard as I could to make myself better."

When asked about her years at Newbury, O'Connell talks about team and about rebounding. She is most proud of her development as a rebounder. It is no surprise that this appeals to the team player in her. Rebounds frequently go to the player who wants them the most, the player who can take an elbow and do the hard work of basketball. A team player.

"It was never about the points. It's better when the points trickle down to every player. It makes for better basketball and a better team," she said. "I took pride in my rebounding. It's not something everyone wants to do, or something everyone thinks is a big deal, but it was the part of my game that meant the most to me."

And there is the story about the 1000th point. O'Connell did most of her work close to the basket. Three-point jump shots were for other people. Against Gordon College early in the season, she needed two points for her 1000th. There were a few seconds left in the game. She took a couple of steps over midcourt and Kwanasia Fredricks passed her the ball.

"I just chucked it up without even looking, just chucked it up for the fun of it" she remembers. "I didn't even follow or watch the shot. I just walked away until I heard the crowd roar. I turned around and it had gone in. It was a three-pointer. It's the only three point shot I have ever made. Ever."

She majored in sports management is currently interning with Quincy Public Schools Athletic Director Jim Rendle.

"I'm learning a lot and I would love to get my foot in the door in the Quincy Public Schools," said O'Connell.

If she needs something to talk about in an interview, she could talk about basketball, rebounding, and a fistful of honors. Then she could talk about the important things like family, friends, and being part of a team. One last suggestion. Don't leave out the story about the 1000th point. That is a deal-clincher. The job is yours!

Boston Marathoner Thankful, Counts His Blessings

Hassan Haydar Completes Last Marathon Moments Before Explosions At Finish Line

By BILL GRIFFIN

Almost 40 years ago as a young man of 27, Hassan Haydar came to America to escape the endless violence of Lebanon. As a marathoner at age 63 in Boston last week, he came within an hour of running back into the terror he thought he had left behind on the streets of Beirut.

Haydar completed the marathon in 3:32. If he had been an hour slower or the bombs had exploded a short time sooner, he would have been at the finish line in the middle of an horrific scene he knew all too well from another lifetime in a place halfway around the world.

"An hour later and I would have been at the finish line like everyone else," said Haydar. "I would have been high-fiving and sharing the moment with all the runners around me."

Instead, he turned in a remarkable time for a man in his 60s running his 13th straight Boston Marathon. He found his car, drove home to Quincy, and sat down in his living room. His wife told him that he should watch what was on the television.

"It was incredible. I couldn't believe it," said Haydar. "I thought of all the times I was right there looking for my family, my wife, my daughter, my cousin. My family sat in those grandstands in every Boston Marathon I ran except this year. This year, everybody had something else going on."

Haydar arrived in the United States after two years of civil war in Lebanon from 1975-1977. As horrendous as last week was for all Americans, imagine it lasting for two years. That was the life Haydar thought he had left behind.

"I fled from that violence," he said. "It was unbelievable. That was a bomb going off every two minutes, both sides were shelling the city. We went a year without electricity. There was no money, no work."

The goal each day was to survive.

"We spent all day looking for a bit of food or water. So much was destroyed," said Haydar. "One of the most important things was to find a basement if you weren't lucky enough to have one. It was the only place to escape the shelling."

Lebanon still suffers from terror and violence. Haydar is confident that it is different in America, that a united people will defeat the monster that stepped from the shadows in last week's marathon.

"In America, we will overcome it," he said. "The public is united. The people will stand together and defeat the sick lunatics who would do something like this."

This is Haydar's last Boston marathon. He made the decision before the race. It had nothing to do with the terror. He ran the marathon wearing a T-Shirt which displayed the message that this would be his final race.

"I've accomplished what I wanted to do. I want to go out at the top of my game," he smiled.

Haydar had a once-in-a-lifetime year in 2012. At age 62, he ran the marathon distance 29 times, including 26 straight Sundays from April to October when he covered the historic route from Hopkinton to Boston. He won his age group at the Bay State and Cape Cod marathons. He won his age group in the Cape Cod half-marathon. He won his age group in his emotional return to the Beirut Marathon.

He didn't start running marathons until he was 50, but he packed a lifetime of achievement into 13 years.

"I've been blessed to have the experiences I've had," he said.

He always enjoyed the people he met and the stories they told as much as his time, victories and records. That is why he loved the international flavor of Boston. During his last race, he chatted with runners from Michigan and the Netherlands. Standing in line to get his credentials, he made conversation with six people. All six were from out of state. Boston is the marathon the whole world comes to visit.

"There are runners from 100 countries and 44 states," he said. "I've met so many interesting people with so many intriguing stories. As a runner, I know that I should always pray and count my blessings."

This photo was taken at the corner of Stuart and Arlington Streets, about three blocks from the finish line and about an hour before two terrorists detonated two bombs. The explosions killed three people and injured more than 170. The bombing ordeal ended after law enforcement killed one of the terrorists in a shoot-out and the other was apprehended in Watertown.

Walk To Cure Diabetes May 11

Quincy Public Elementary Schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, along with families and friends of those afflicted, will participate in "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes" Saturday, May 11 (rain or shine).

The schools include: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Parker, Lincoln Hancock, Montclair, and Wollaston.

Organizers said the schools are partnering with JDRF to raise funds to help find a cure for a disease that affects millions of children and their families, including many elementary aged students in the community.

Neighbors and friends are invited to help participate by donating to this cause.

More than 18 million Americans are affected by diabetes. Each year, 15,000 children are diagnosed in this country with Type 1

(also known as T1D), which is insulin dependent, and that number continues to grow. It is one of the most costly chronic diseases among children and there is no cure.

ANGER HITS BACK

Because chiropractors are trained to view the human body as an interconnected whole, we are well aware of the human mind's ability to affect physical health. Evidence continues to accumulate showing that emotions can trigger pain and even disease. One recent study delving into the mind-body connection reveals that, when people get angry, their back pain intensifies. This physical manifestation of emotion is thought to occur as a result of anger activating neural pathways, which transfer mental tension to the muscles that encase the spine. It may also be that anger stifles the production of endorphins, brain chemicals that help to quell stress and pain. Chiropractic treatment takes the body's interconnectedness into account when addressing causative factors of pain.

Snug Harbor Wins George Dunn Basketball Tournament

The 2013 Quincy Recreation Department George Dunn Basketball Tournament Championship belongs to Snug Harbor as they defeated defending champions Atlantic 57-39.

The tournament, which is for high school age participants, saw Snug Harbor's Rafael Santana lead the team scoring with 17 points, followed by Ronnie Watts with 15. Jordan Creech took the pressure off the two leading scorers and chipped in 12 points. Reda Laftih had a powerful three-point shot later followed by a takeaway layup that helped him contribute five points to the scoreboard. Mohammed Hassan and Abraham Hoti followed through with rebounds and created space by passing the ball, which allowed them to toss in three points each. Javon Moore netted two points that finalized the score. Coach Tom Dow commented on his team's strong performance with defense and ball handling skills throughout the game.

Coach Joe MacRitchie's Atlantic team fought back in the second half after falling behind in the first. Despite their highest scorer Jackie Chen's 17-point effort, the team was unable to come up with a victory. Juaquan Phoenix contributed 10 points for Atlantic and Mike Soricelli chipped in three. Zi Zhang, Matt Alexander, and Raymond Ching all added to the scoreboard with two points each. Will Zhang was noted for his rebounds and sturdy passes that contributed to his team's baskets.

Leading up to the championship game, Atlantic overcame the Point Webster team 53-51 in an energetic game that went into overtime. The game's final score was a close call as Max Joseph of Point's team launched the ball at the basket in the game's last seconds — as the ball bounced off the rim it was clear Atlantic would move forward. Joseph was Point's leading scorer, with 23 total points, including seven from the free throw line. Ryan Turpin had eight points, followed closely by DJ Feliciano with six. Steven Quinn tossed up a shot behind the three-point line, which landed perfectly to end the first half. In the second half Danny Nguyen had a similar experience, landing a three-pointer after making a perfect cut to the ball. Pat Devins was praised for rebounding and was rewarded with four points on the scoreboard. Demetrius Wilkerson and Brandon Ho each chipped in two points. Veteran recreation leader Richie McAllister was thrilled with his team's performance throughout the game. Anthony Tortomasi and Richie Turpin were great helpers with the team's rebounds. Joseph Moseley and Justin Monterio were praised for getting the ball inbounds and making strong passes. Michael Boretti, Anthony McShane, and Xavier Vasquez donated firm defensive skills that led to smooth plays.

In another game leading to championship game action, Snug Harbor defeated the Merrymount team in another close game, 41-36. Tim Keenan led Merrymount in scoring with 21 points, more than half of his team's total. Scott Mele helped his teammates by chipping in six points, Quinlan Evans donated five points to the scoreboard and Pete Saccoach had four. Garret McMorrow did a great job transition the ball up court and held strong with steady defense. Paul Carson coached the Merrymount team.

In prior tournament action Merrymount defeated Squantum in a tight scoring game, 59-56. Exavier Romero was Squantum's leading scorer with 23 points. AJ Shaughnessy showed strong support with 18 points. Joe Gaglione can be recognized for netting six points of his own and Andrew Kiley and Erico Rosa chipped in four apiece.

The tournament is played each year to mark the conclusion of the winter open gym program supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department from November to April. The tournament is over 50 years old and in 1997 was named for longtime Recreation Supervisor and Youth Coach George Dunn, who passed away at an early age from cancer. Participants represent the neighborhood gyms they attend, and come from public, private and parochial schools. Athletes cannot participate in the tournament if they played on a high school varsity team during the winter season.

In a postgame ceremony Recreation Director Barry

Welch presented trophies and certificates to the members of both finalist teams. He presented the George Dunn Trophy to coach Tom Dow. The Dunn Trophy is engraved with the championship team and the championship coach's name and remains on display year-round in the main office of the Quincy Recreation Department. The game was videotaped for rebroadcast by the Recreation Department and can be seen on QATV.

"double-double"—16 points and 13 rebounds.

Forbes was a two-time Catholic Central League All-Star; a 1980 Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic; and was chosen for the 1980 State Coaches' All-Star Game.

He played college basketball and was a member of the NE Junior College championship team. He joins his older brother Peter, (Class of 1976) in the AWHs Hall of Fame.

"Our inductees represent the very best that AWHs had to offer and their season and career accomplishments have stood the test of time," said Dennis M. Duggan Jr., Esq., AWHs President.

Event At Faxon Field Benefits Quincy Track Club

About 40 athletes, some from as far as Waterville ME, attended a Javelin clinic April 16 at Faxon Field.

The clinic was sponsored by USATF-NE, the New England district of the National track and field governing body, and the Quincy Track Club. Athletes from Milton, Weymouth, Norwood, Hingham, Pembroke, Rhode Island and New Hampshire were also in attendance. Included were 12 high school and middle school athletes from Quincy.

Petranoff is a two-time Olympian (1984 and 1988) and lives with his family in Cranston, R.I. Also in attendance was his daughter Leigh who attends the University of Illinois and is an NCAA All-American in the javelin.

Both Tom and Leigh conducted sessions on proper technique and training methods.

North Quincy Head Coach and Quincy Track Club Director Geoff Hennessy assisted in the sessions as well as USATF-NE Managing Director Steve Vaitones. The clinic was made possible by a grant from the National USATF office in Indianapolis as a way to encourage grass roots development of youngsters, specifically in the javelin. As an added benefit of hosting the clinic the Quincy Track Club will receive part of the clinic fees collected April 16.

The Quincy athletes attended free of charge.

"We intend to use the money to assist young athletes in the purchase of track shoes," said Hennessy. "Many events require specialized shoes, be it javelin, shotput or highjump, and runners need competition spiked shoes too. We hope to defray the cost of those shoes for deserving athletes."

In addition, Vaitones donated several pairs of spikes to the high school programs.

the Presidents.

On Sunday, April 14th, at approximately 11:50 a.m., Officer James Parisi was on patrol on Quincy Shore Dr. As he drove through the public parking lot across from 939 Quincy Shore Dr., he saw a green Saab Sedan with Rhode Island plates. Inside the vehicle were two people slumped over in the front seat.

The Officer checked the registration on the cruiser's computer, which showed that the registration was not only expired, but belonged on a green Pontiac. As Officer Parisi turned his cruiser around to approach the car and check on the occupants, a male passenger exited the vehicle and began walking down the beach. The female driver was still behind the wheel, so the Officer knocked on the window and asked if everything was okay. After stating that she was fine, the Officer requested her registration.

After a brief search, the driver said that she could not find the registration and that the car belonged to her mother. The Officer then checked the vehicle's VIN number, which showed that the Saab belonged to a male. When the Officer told the driver the name of the owner, the driver responded, "Oh-He's my mom's boyfriend." The information also showed that the Saab's registration was revoked for not having insurance. As the Officer waited for the driver to provide her license to him, she was asked where she was going and where she was coming from. She said she just dropped off her daughter off at her mother's house near the Rhode Island border and decided to sit on the beach. The Officer believed that this was a strange answer given that Quincy is not close to the border and the displayed plates do not belong on the vehicle. The driver explained that she has been living with her father in Quincy for six weeks. After dropping her daughter off, she drove to "a couple of Quincy businesses" to do some errands before coming to the beach.

The driver handed the Officer a Rhode Island driver's license, which was valid. The Rhode Island license plates attached to the Saab were registered in her name. When asked if there was any reason, such as a recent purchase, why her plates would be on the Saab. She told Officer Parisi that she didn't know and that her mother must have done it. The Officer told the driver that the car would have to be towed because it was not properly registered.

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

The Officer initiated a search of the vehicle and found a hypodermic syringe containing a brown fluid believed to be heroin, along with two plastic bags, which contained a thin rope and a spoon with small pieces of cotton covered in a brown substance. Officer Parisi had reason to believe that the substance was heroin. During a further search of the car, Officer Parisi found a second hypodermic syringe with the same brown fluid as the first underneath the passenger seat. In the pocket of a jacket that the female driver said belonged to her was an unused syringe. The driver said the unused needle was hers from three months ago when she used to use heroin. She said she does not use anymore.

She claimed no knowledge of the heroin in her car and said they must belong to her boyfriend—the male who exited the car and walked to the beach. She identified him, said that they have been dating for three years that he does heroin and she has been trying to help get him clean. For her defense, she said he must have loaded one of the needles when he was out of her sight earlier. Both needles were within easy reach of the driver as she sat in the driver's seat.

Based on information available, Officer Parisi believed that he interrupted the couple as they were preparing to inject themselves. The drug evidence was seized. Found inside the driver's purse was a Massachusetts EBT card in her name along with two credit cards not in her name. One card was a MasterCard in a male's name, which she said belonged to her boyfriend's father. The second card was an American Express Delta Skymiles card, which the driver had no explanation for initially, then said that her boyfriend put it in her purse. She denied using these credit cards however; she did add that her boyfriend is on the Massachusetts most wanted list for credit card offenses. The boyfriend had an extensive criminal record, including several arraignments for larceny as well as Breaking and Entering.

The female driver, a 27-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Possession of a Class A controlled substance, Knowingly being present where heroin is kept, Unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, Attaching plates and Receiving stolen property."

Nice Work!

NICE WORK! Also goes out to Officers' Mark Millane and Matt Tobin who responded to a domestic violence call last week. En route to the call, the female caller reported that her husband was attempting to hang himself in the basement. Upon arrival, Officer Tobin immediately entered the residence to find the caller attempting to hold her husband up off the ground as he was hanging from a rope tied to a ceiling beam. The rope was wrapped around the husband's neck three times. Officer Tobin grabbed the husband and held him up to keep the airway open. Officer Millane then entered the basement and immediately grabbed hold of the husband and held him up while Officer Tobin cut the rope. Once down, the husband struggled to get free but was handcuffed and transported to Quincy Medical Center for psychiatric help.

RULES OF THE ROAD:

Truck or Bus Approaching—If a large vehicle is coming towards you on an undivided road, stay to the right. You will avoid being sideswiped or shaken by air turbulence. At intersections, take extra care in judging the speed of the oncoming vehicle. Trucks and buses cannot slow down easily if you cut in front of them to turn.

Buses: Be very careful near public transport buses and trolleys. Buses stop often. Be courteous and allow signaling buses to pull away from bus stops. Be cautious of pedestrians entering or exiting buses or trolleys. State law is very specific about driving near trolleys and their tracks:

You must not drive closer than eight feet of a trolley passenger step when the trolley is letting passengers on or off.

Look for oncoming trolleys before crossing any tracks. Do not turn in front of a trolley if one is approaching.

Keep a safe distance between your vehicle and a trolley if the trolley is sharing the roadway. Remember, a trolley's path is limited to the tracks. A trolley driver cannot swerve to avoid you.

Slow-Moving Vehicles

Most farm vehicles, construction rigs, and other slow-moving vehicles have orange warning signs attached to the back. If you approach one, reduce your speed and use caution. Treat them similar to bicyclists and pedestrians. Leave plenty of space around the vehicle if you plan to pass.

Funeral Processions: You must yield the right-of-way to all vehicles in a funeral procession until they have all passed. It is illegal to cut through or disrupt any vehicles in a funeral procession.

Road Workers and Repair Crews:

Nationally in 2010, 576 people were killed in crashes that happened in work zones. Although road construction and maintenance sites are often well posted with warning signs, if you are thinking about passing, remember that a tractor may be pulling more than one trailer.

Grill's Drippings Stain Patio Bricks

Q: The patio bricks underneath my grill tend to catch a lot of grease and oil drippings. I clean up after every barbecue, but there are still stains on the brick from the grease. How can I get these up without bleaching out the spots? -- Rick in Savannah, Ga.

A: With porous surfaces like brick and concrete, oil stains can set in and be tough to get out. Your instinct to avoid using bleach or another type of acid to clean up the stains (like lemon juice) is right on. These can just make things worse and can discolor some types of paving.

Clearing the grease stain may take a few attempts with a number of cleaning agents. Start with the least harmful materials, most of which can be found in your kitchen or garage.

First, fill an old coffee mug with warm water, a couple of tablespoons of dish soap and a teaspoon of salt. Grab a clean synthetic scrubber brush (like a dish-washing brush). Scrub the stain with the soapy water and rinse with warm water, repeating a few times and letting the bricks dry out to see the results in between each try.

If that doesn't clear the stain, you can try an oil-stain cleaner purchased at your local home-improvement store. Some DIYers recommend applying an engine degreaser and letting it sit for about an hour, but test any cleaning agent or degreaser on an inconspicuous spot first.

The sad truth is that it's unlikely any cleaner, commercial or homemade, will completely clear away the grease stain. More powerful or acidic cleaning agents could damage the brick, so they should be avoided. If the stain is really bad, consider replacing the brick. If it's not too bad, clean the area as best you can and cover it with a grill mat to prevent further staining.

HOME TIP: To prevent your grill's grease and oil drips from staining your patio or deck surface, place a grill mat underneath, and clean up spills promptly.

Medal of Honor Citation Honoring William R. Caddy

PFC William R. Caddy was presented the Medal of Honor posthumously Sept. 8, 1946 at a ceremony held at Montclair School where the young private had attended school.

The award was presented to his mother by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo, Commandant of the First Naval District on behalf of President Harry S. Truman.

Here is the text of the citation:

The President of the United States takes pride in presenting the MEDAL OF HONOR posthumously to PRIVATE FIRST CLASS WILLIAM R. CADDY UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE for service as set forth in the following CITATION:

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty while serving as a Rifleman with Company I, Third Battalion, Twenty-sixth Marines, Fifth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces during the seizure of Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, 3 March 1945.

Consistently aggressive, Private First Class Caddy boldly defied shattering Japanese machine-gun and small-arms fire to move forward with his platoon leader and another Marine during a determined advance of his company through an isolated sector and, gaining the comparative safety of a shell hole, took temporary cover with his comrades. Immediately pinned down by deadly sniper fire from a well-concealed position, he made several unsuccessful attempts to again move forward and then, joined by his platoon leader, engaged the enemy in a fierce exchange of hand grenades until a Japanese grenade fell in the shell hole.

Fearlessly disregarding all personal danger, Private First Class Caddy instantly threw himself upon the deadly missile, absorbing the exploding charge in his own body and protecting the others from serious injury. Stouthearted and indomitable, he unhesitatingly yielded his own life that his fellow Marines might carry on the relentless battle against a fanatic enemy. His dauntless courage and valiant spirit of self-sacrifice in the face of certain death reflects the highest credit upon Private First Class Caddy and the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his country.

was held in honor of all those affected by last Monday's bombings at the Boston Marathon that killed three people and injured more than 170. A police officer from MIT was also shot and killed after being ambushed by the two bombing suspects.

Mayor Thomas Koch said veterans — like those first responders at the bombing scene near the marathon's finish line — possess a great spirit of generosity, courage and sacrifice.

"Many of those first responders at the Boston Marathon bombing scene are America's finest, running toward danger and not away from it. Many were also veterans who continue to protect and defend our country today," he said.

Among the veterans attending Sunday's service was Christo Apostle, a World War II Navy Corpsman and survivor of Iwo Jima.

Color guards participating in the ceremony included units from the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Fire Department, Massachusetts State Police, Detachment of Massachusetts - Marine Corps League, Morrisette American Legion Post and the North Quincy High School Air Force Jr. ROTC Cadets.

Dan Clark sang the National Anthem and "The Marines Hymn." Mary Crowley recited the Battle for Iwo Jima.

The Caddy Detachment also made arrangements to provide a memorial wreath for the Punch Bowl, at the National Cemetery in Hawaii, where PFC Caddy is interred.

Markey, Gomez Nominated

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Cong. Edward Markey lost Quincy by nearly 6,000 votes but easily turned away Cong. Stephen Lynch statewide to win the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate in Tuesday's special primary election.

On the Republican side, political newcomer and former Navy SEAL Gabriel Gomez narrowly placed Quincy in his win column but won the GOP nomination convincingly over two challengers with legislative and government experience.

Markey and Gomez will face off in the special final election for U.S. Senate Tuesday, June 25. The winner will fill the seat vacated by former Sen. John Kerry who resigned in February to become Secretary of State in President Obama's Cabinet.

Kerry's term expires Jan. 3, 2015. The winner of the

Cleaner, Greener Cleanup Saturday

The 24th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy celebration will be held on Saturday, May 4th, announces Mayor Thomas Koch.

The cleanup will occur at beaches, marshes, neighborhood parks, playgrounds, schoolyards and open space areas citywide from 9 a.m. to noon.

Koch will host an appreciation cookout at Pageant Field following the cleanup.

The annual cleanup draws close to 1,500 volunteers each year. Last year, more than 20 various public areas were designated as cleanup sites, many at the suggestion of residents who worked together in targeting areas in their neighborhoods ultimately improving the aesthetic conditions of their surroundings.

Jazmin Eltoury Achieves Girls Scouts' Highest Honor

Only Second Local Girl To Receive Gold Award

By EMILY TAFT

This past March, Quincy resident Jazmin Eltoury joined an elite group of Girl Scouts when she received the Girl Scout Gold Award becoming only the second girl in Quincy to obtain the Girl Scouts highest achievement.

"I actually was getting my bronze award when the first girl from Quincy was getting her gold award, so that's how it all started. That's when I knew I wanted to do it," said Eltoury. "It's kind of cool knowing that there are so many Girl Scouts but only a few make it to this rank. I started working on my gold award when I was a cadet, which is the rank before an ambassador. It's been about a year for the whole project to come together."

The Girl Scout Gold Award is the highest achievement in Girl Scouting. A national award with national standards, it represents girls' time, leadership, creativity and effort contributed to making their community better.

Eltoury, who is a junior at Quincy High School, has been involved with the Girl Scouts for over 11 years, starting as a daisy and moving her way up to the rank of a Girl Scout ambassador. In order for Eltoury to receive the Gold Award she had to choose an issue or skill and take action in her local community to educate and inspire the people in the Quincy community.

"What I did was create a program for communities, teen groups, in Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy, for kids to come and be able to shoot archery, learn parts of the bow and arrow and make targets. I had a Girl Scout group come, and a regular teen group from the Germantown Neighborhood Center come and we went to the Weymouth Sportsmen's Club," said Eltoury. "First I got my bronze award in elementary school (fourth or fifth grade), and then I built up to my silver award in seventh or eighth grade, which was the beginning of archery where I just did a little thing at the club and made a little video on YouTube and got service hours. Then I added on by reaching out to other communities and got more people to come and be more aware of what they can do. So each year I built on top of it."

Eltoury originally became involved in archery by tagging along on her older brother's Boy Scout trips to the club.

"My brother as a Boy Scout would go to the club with the Boy Scouts and I would tag along as the little sister, and that's when I got introduced to firearms. When they built the new range at the club is when I started shooting archery," said Eltoury. "It is completely safe and they have tons of instructors. I have been going there since I was eight years old."

Receiving the Gold Award will allow Eltoury to enter the Air Force at a higher rank, which was part of the reason she decided to try and achieve the award.

"My mom kind of pushed me to keep going. I think that the aftermath of it, knowing it will help me in college, and it puts me at a higher rank in the Air Force, which I want to go into, so that definitely pushed me more," said Eltoury.

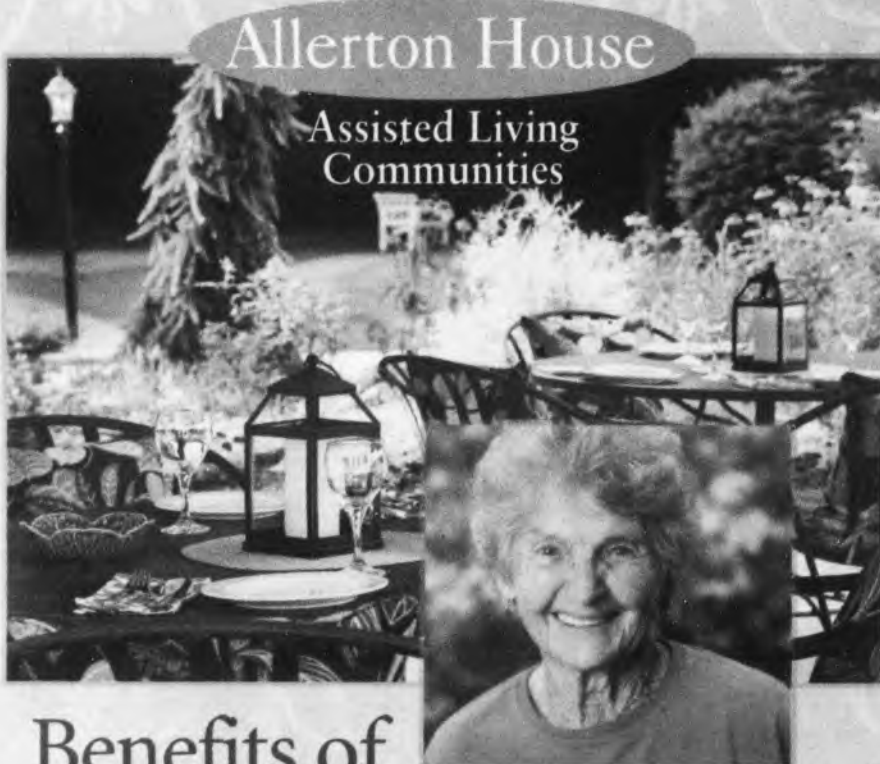

"I received a stack of commendations and citations, there is so many of them, along with a Gold Award Pin, which my parents received as well. It is really good for college, and I get the higher rank in the military because I received the gold award. I didn't know that until I was getting approved. It was exciting to have everyone there at the ceremony. Mayor Thomas Koch was there, (QHS) Principal Frank Santoro was there, and my family. I felt accomplished, but then again I felt relief because it was crazy trying to get all the hours. I did over 100 hours."

Eltoury said that being a part of the Girl Scouts has helped her grow into who she is today, and she hopes younger girls will see that moving up in Girl Scouts can benefit their future.

"Most kids don't want to go on to that level of Girl Scouts. It's hard work but I think if they see that some girls have done it, and how it can benefit their future, they might want to," said Eltoury.

"Being in the Girls Scouts has taught me to try my best and just go for my goals. It has made me more well-spoken being around so many adults and troop leaders when I was younger, and having younger kids below me to teach. It definitely, for the better, put me in the right direction and kept me busy."

On Roof Of Distribution Center In North Quincy

4,000 Solar Panels

Power Boston Scientific

By EMILY TAFT

Boston Scientific's international distribution center in Quincy is now being powered by nearly 4,000 solar panels that sit atop of its roof, making them have the third largest rooftop solar installation in Massachusetts.

"Today's a celebration of work between many organizations and is an important step towards advancing our commitment to the people we serve, the community where we operate, and the environment," said Vice President of operations for Boston Scientific David Sapienza.

The rooftop of the distribution center on 500 Commander Shea Blvd., which was once home to the Jordan Marsh Warehouse Building, has been covered with 3,900 solar panels, powering what is the equivalent of 145 homes for an entire year.

"It's a 1.28 megawatt solar energy system, that generates on average about 1.7 million kilowatts hours a year. That's enough electricity from this facility to generate electrical support for about 145 homes for an entire year," said Tim Pratt the Executive Vice President, Chief Administrative Officer, General Counsel and Secretary for Boston Scientific.

"This is the third largest solar project in the commercial and industrial category in Massachusetts, but it isn't just about this solar installation. Our commitment is really far broader than that. What we want to do as a company is not just talk it up we wanted to walk the walk, we do it not just in this way, but in a number of different ways in our company."

The panels, which power 25 percent of the facility, cover 120,000 square feet on the facility's roof, which is 850,000 square feet in size.

"This is truly a great day for the city, for the commonwealth, and certainly for the nation. This site has come a long way since its inception in the 1960's and Boston Scientific continues to lead the way in so many ways," said Mayor Tom Koch.

"We're grateful for the jobs you provide to this community, we're grateful for the taxes you provide, which helps us put teachers in the classroom, policemen in the street, and we're grateful for your commitment to the school system through the partnership program."

The addition of the new panels help Governor Deval Patrick's 2007 initiative to aspire to see 250 megawatts of solar-generating capacity in place by 2017.

"Boston Scientific is certainly recognized as a leader in the Bio-Tech industry in Massachusetts, which is clearly very important to the economy in Massachusetts but today we are celebrating their leadership in the clean, green, energy revolution that is going across the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," said Rick Sullivan, Secretary of Massachusetts office of Energy and Environmental Affairs.

"Because of the policies that Governor Patrick and the legislature put back in place in 2007 and 2008, we have encouraged the growth of the solar industry particularly here in Massachusetts. When Governor Patrick took office in 2007 there was about three megawatts of solar installed; he challenged us as a commonwealth, by the year 2017, to install 250 megawatts. We have installed, since the governor has been in office, 243 megawatts, so we will actually hit the goal some four years early.

"We recognize the importance of investing in our own homegrown energy, so that you can take an asset, like this building, where the roof wasn't really producing a whole lot, but is now producing enough solar energy to provide about a third of the energy needs of this building, and 25 percent of the entire complex."

A VIEW ATOP the Boston Scientific international distribution center in North Quincy shows part of the 3,900 solar panels that have been installed on the roof of the building located at 500 Commander Shea Blvd. The panels are strong enough to provide enough electrical support for around 145 average sized homes for an entire year.

There's never been a better time to buy a first home

Three reasons why:

- 1) Rates are at all-time lows – a huge advantage for first-time homebuyers. Your money goes further. And you get to lock in historically-low monthly mortgage payments.
- 2) The eastern Massachusetts real estate market tends to be resilient. Prices here have stabilized... or are starting to move up. Waiting now could cost you later.
- 3) With Colonial Federal's First-Time Homebuyer Program, you get:
 - > A reduced downpayment with no PMI required
 - > A mortgage with a competitive rate
 - > You work one-to-one with our responsive lenders, professionals who want to help you get into your first home
 - > All from a local neighborhood bank specializing in helping people buy homes since 1889.

This is an outstanding opportunity – most likely once-in-a-lifetime – for first-time homebuyers. Is that you...or someone you know? Come see us. Or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

'The Year Of The Question'

City Clerk Joe Shea calls it "The Year of the Question."

He's referring to this fall's city election that could feature at least three questions on the ballot on Election Day Nov. 5.

And at this point, three questions would outnumber contested races. Only the Ward 4 council seat and school committee have attracted opponents to incumbents.

Efforts are underway to post three questions on the ballot. Two of the questions have already received some play in the local media but the third could generate voter interest in its own right.

The first question that is apparently destined for the ballot is the initiative petition that would change the length of the mayor's term from two to four years. If approved, voters would elect the city's first four-year mayor on Election Day in 2015.

Petitions for the four-year mayoral term have been circulating for months by the petition's proponent, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Quite a few petitions have already been turned in to the City Election office for certification. That process will begin in earnest after the special U.S. Senate election June 25.

About 3,150 signatures — or at least five percent of the city's 63,000 registered voters — are required in order for a question to appear on the ballot. The deadline to submit petitions is Tuesday, Aug. 13.

The second question that could land on the ballot this fall targets the Community Preservation Act and how it is funded. Councillor Doug Gutro has asked City Solicitor Jim Timmins to draft a ballot question that would go on the ballot this fall if the council approves it.

Gutro said other communities have amended their CPA to what's known as a "blended CPA." This allows other municipal resources, in addition to property taxes, be considered by the state for matching CPA funds.

Quincy already dedicates revenue from the hotel/motel tax to uses that include open space preservation and parks and recreation and those funds could be matched if voters approve the ballot question. Gutro said he wants the ballot question approved by the council before the summer recess starts at the end of June. This would provide time for voters to familiarize themselves with the issue, he said.

And now a movement has surfaced for a third question.

It would be a non-binding "survey" asking voters whether they support consolidating the city's two high schools.

School Committeeman Paul Bregoli is coordinating the school consolidation ballot question. He said exact language of how the question will be posed is still being worked out but it will go something like this:

"Shall the Quincy School Committee combine North Quincy and Quincy High Schools into one high school?"

Bregoli, who advocates one high school, says the question is more like a survey.

"We're asking people if this is a good idea or a bad idea. The results may be surprising to some people."

Bregoli says most of the folks he has discussed this issue with support one high school. His plan would keep both North Quincy and Quincy High Schools open but all students in grades 9 and 10 would attend North Quincy and all students in grades 11 and 12 would attend Quincy High School.

The top reason Bregoli wants one high school: to unify the city.

"Having two high schools in a city just doesn't make sense anymore," he says. "A lot of towns who had two high schools now have one. Weymouth, for example, has one high school."

He says the ballot question will ask the question people have had on their minds for the last 20 years: should Quincy have one high school?

"Let's find out if there is support for this and if there is, let's do something about it," Bregoli says.

He also plans to ask the school committee to form an ad hoc committee to study the feasibility of consolidating the two high schools.

"It won't be an easy task (consolidating the high schools) but we have some very smart school administrators who are savvy enough to figure this out," he says.

If there is support for the measure at the ballot box, and the logistics are worked out, Bregoli foresees a vote being taken by the School Committee perhaps as early as next year.

OUR SURVEY SAYS . . . — We posted a question on The Quincy Sun's website (www.thequincysun.com) regarding the four-year mayoral term.

If you believe in polls and want a four-year term for the city's chief executive, you'll be encouraged by the results. The final tally showed support for a four-year term by a 2-1 margin.

Of the 367 respondents, 248 or 67.5 percent said "yes" they support a four-term mayoral term. Some 112 or 30.5 percent voted "No" against the four-year term while seven had no opinion.

ONE INTERESTING side note regarding the four-year term ballot question could be its "effect" on this year's mayor's race and in 2015.

Some political observers believe no one will challenge Mayor Thomas Koch this year and any with mayoral aspirations will hold off until 2015. If the four-year mayor's term is approved by voters this fall, that could bring out a bevy of mayoral contenders in 2015 since the first four-year term would be up for grabs.

Mayoral contenders who don't get in the mayor's race in 2015 would have to wait until 2019 to have another shot at the third floor corner office at City Hall.

We asked Mayor Koch if he bought into this theory.

"I don't know. I'd like to believe if I don't have a major, formidable opponent this year, it's because we're doing some great things for the city and there are a lot of good things happening."

"Certainly I'm not responsible individually for all of that but we've set an agenda, we've set a vision and we're moving that agenda forward and I've gotten great cooperation from my colleagues in government. I think things are going well."

"That doesn't mean everybody's happy. I'm not suggesting that but overall in these times when you look at cities our size in this Commonwealth — show me anyone who's doing what we're getting accomplished."

"You need three things to run for mayor: money, organization and issues. What are the issues today? What would people be raising? We're building schools, we're improving infrastructure, we're moving on the downtown, we're improving public safety. There's always room for improvement."

"I know in this business you're not going to get everybody. At the end of the day, I would put my supporters, workers and volunteers against anyone else. I am so fortunate to have such loyal supporters."

Koch could very well get a "free ride" to a fourth two-year term this fall.

Voters approving a four-year mayoral term in November could set the stage for a very active mayoral race in 2015.

Koch said his position on the four-year term is "let the people decide."

"I am running for my fourth two-year term (this fall). I've lived with the two-year term. There are folks who believe there should be a four-year term and they make a good argument for that."

"I wouldn't support a home-rule petition to change the term from two to four years. If it's going to change, it ought to be decided by the voters."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 postcard shows a steam-powered passenger train approaching the old Wollaston Depot on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad's Old Colony Line. This view north from the Beale Street Bridge shows a horse-drawn waiting taxi just beyond the Wollaston sign in the foreground. This station was designed in classic 19th century Victorian style; capped with a handsome clock tower complete with a wrought iron weathervane and trimmed in ornate iron filigree. Built in 1870 on the other side of the tracks it was first named the Wollaston Heights Station as it was built to serve the new Wollaston Heights residential community being built on the hills of Wollaston. The developers offered one-year free train service to Boston as an incentive for homebuyers. The large building on the left was the Knights of Honor Hall. In 1969, the MBTA demolished the 100-year-old railroad depot to make way for the present modern Red Line station here today. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

$200K Flood Damage Rebate Expected

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Office of Emergency Preparedness was expected to approve an application by the City of Quincy for nearly $200,000 in storm and flood damages incurred during a storm that struck from Feb. 18-20.

The storm dumped several tons of debris on beaches; caused road washouts, land erosion, vehicle damage, sewer line breakdowns and even a rat infestation. Leaks were also reported in Quincy City Hospital and the Thomas Crane Library, and houses needed to be pumped out.

Temporary and emergency work totaled $117,642.34 and permanent work cost $77,370.10, according to Mayor Walter Hannon.

Although much of the repair work had been completed, the promise of the funds will mean more jobs could start, the mayor said.

100 SCOUTS CLEAN MONTCLAIR PEAT BOG

Some 100 Boy Scouts from 10 Quincy troops participated in an intense cleanup of the Montclair Peat Bog under the direction of Troop 19 Scoutmaster Francis Boudreau.

The Scouts removed more than 50 truckloads of dead branches and trees from the bog, which were ground up into the Forestry Department's wood chippers to be used as mulch. The Scouts also hauled away three truckloads of debris including barrels, cans, scrap metal, and wire.

The operation was phase one of a campaign to lessen fire hazards in the area, provide a nature study area and open the stream for birds and wildlife.

Mayor Hannon and his staff prepared 240 sandwiches and 10 gallons of punch for the Scouts and their adult leaders.

LEADERS VOW FIGHT FOR SHIP CONTRACTS

U.S. Sens. Ted Kennedy and Ed Brooke and U.S. Reps. James A. Burke and Louise Day Hicks pledged to extend every effort towards expediting contracts for the General Dynamics Shipyard at Fore River.

In response to a recent telegram from the Quincy Taxpayers Association, the members of the Massachusetts delegation informed QTA President Dr. Philip L. McCarthy of their efforts on behalf of the yard.

Burke stressed the importance of the shipyard to the state's economy and said he had met frequently with shipyard management, the Defense Department, and Navy officials to help find contracts. He said the contracts were "very much in the forefront of my efforts since I have been in Congress."

The association also sent a telegram to President Richard Nixon, but they had no response from him.

Thanks Powers For Help Repairing Street Light

This is a letter of thanks to Kristen Powers of Constituent Services, for the fast service she gave to the area of Montilio and Willard Streets.

We have had a street light out for the longest time, perhaps four years. This area is near West and Willard Streets, and a very dark section.

I have asked Rep. Bruce Ayers as well as City Councillor Brian Palmucci, and their hands were tied.

I contacted Kristen Powers, and less than two weeks, the light is on. How is that for service? Thanks again to Mayor Tom Koch for hiring this fine young lady, as she has proven she has the right stuff.

Kristen, thank you from the neighbors of Montilio and Willard Streets.

Walk To Cure Diabetes May 11

Quincy Public Elementary Schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, along with families and friends of those afflicted, will participate in "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes" Saturday, May 11 (rain or shine).

The schools include: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Parker, Lincoln Hancock, Montclair, and Wollaston.

Organizers said the schools are partnering with JDRF to raise funds to help find a cure for a disease that affects millions of children and their families, including many elementary aged students in the community.

Neighbors and friends are invited to help participate by donating to this cause.

More than 18 million Americans are affected by diabetes. Each year, 15,000 children are diagnosed in this country with Type 1 (also known as T1D), which is insulin dependent, and that number continues to grow. It is one of the most costly chronic diseases among children and there is no cure.

Egg Rolls With Pork & Shrimp

There are times when we are all sitting around wondering what to make for dinner that is out of the norm. My daughter Rita made one of my favorites: egg roll that can be filled with anything from veggies, seafood and meats.

Today's recipe is filled with pork and fresh shrimp plus the veggies of course.

EGG ROLLS

- 1 package of egg roll skins
- ½ cup celery
- 1 cup shredded cabbage
- 3 large fresh shrimp (cooked and diced)
- 1 cup ground pork
- 3 scallions (finely chopped)
- 3 tablespoons peanut oil plus more if needed)

- ½ cup water chestnuts (finely chopped)
- 1 clove garlic (minced)
- ¼ cup low sodium soy sauce
- 1 ½ cups water

Put the celery and cabbage in the water and bring to a boil. Drain. In a skillet, heat the oil and add the shrimp and the pork. Cook until done. Add the rest of the ingredients and cook for about five more minutes.

You can use the amount of skins it will take for the filling. In each of the egg roll skins, place three tablespoons of the mixture in the center. Seal the ends with water. In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and then the egg rolls until they are golden brown. Drain and serve hot.

Stuffed Peppers With Turkey Sausages

While talking to my niece Anita in Arizona, she sometimes gives me a recipe of something she thought came out extra good.

And so it was last week when she had made stuffed peppers. I think most of us who make them usually make them whole, but she cuts them in halves – which I also do. It makes them easier to cook and to serve as well.

She also used turkey sausages, which gave them a most delicious flavor.

STUFFED PEPPERS WITH TURKEY

- 2 large red Bell peppers
- 2 large green Bell peppers
- 4-6 turkey sausages (take skin off)
- 2 cups cooked brown rice

- 3 tablespoons parsley
- ¾ cup of either tomato juice or tomato sauce
- 1 small onion (chopped)
- Shredded cheddar cheese (or a favorite)
- 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
- ¼ cup vegetable oil

In the hot oil, sauté the onions, and add the sausage meat until cooked. Add the rice, parsley, tomato and the Parmesan cheese. Cook until well blended. Cut the peppers in halves and fill each one with the mixture. Sprinkle the shredded cheese over the top and bake in a 350-degree oven for 25-30 minutes.

John Yazwinski To Receive Quincy Lions Service Award

The Quincy Lions Club has selected Father Bill's & MainSpring CEO John Yazwinski as the recipient of its 2013 "Frank McCauley Community Service Award."

Yazwinski will receive the award at a special club luncheon Thursday, May 16 at noon at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd. Tickets for the luncheon are $25 per person and may be purchased online at www.quincylionsclub.org.

Quincy Lions Club President Charles Phelan said Yazwinski was selected for the award in recognition of his efforts to end homelessness across the South Shore.

"When people think of Father Bill's, they often think of the emergency shelter – but the services offered by Father Bill's & MainSpring extend far beyond that," Phelan said. "Under John's tenure, Father Bill's has made a commitment not to just manage homelessness, but to work toward ending homelessness."

In addition to provid-

ing emergency shelter and meals to individuals and families facing homelessness, Phelan noted, Father Bill's & MainSpring is one of the leading developers of affordable, permanent housing on the South Shore. The agency also provides job training and work programs, and offers special services targeted at veterans in need.

"In 2012 alone, Father Bill's & MainSpring helped nearly 600 families find permanent housing," Phelan said. "John's efforts to help struggling individuals and families become self-sufficient make him amply deserving of the Frank McCauley Community Service Award."

A Norton resident, Yazwinski joined Father Bill's in 1996 and was appointed executive director in 1999. He became the organization's president and CEO in 2007. He holds a bachelor's degree in marketing from Bentley University.

In 2010, the Quincy Lions Club recognized former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley's 50th anniversary as a member of the club with the creation of the "Frank McCauley Community Service Award." Presented annually, the award honors a local resident, activist or community leader who has demonstrated a commitment to being of service to others and the community, consistent with the Lions motto, "We Serve." Previous recipients include former QCAP Executive Director Rosemary Wahlberg, Quincy Sun Editor Robert Bosworth and Bettyanne Lang, manager of material assistance at Interfaith Social Services.

Affirms License Board Vote To Deny All Alcohol License

ABCC Upholds Tilted Kilt Decision

By EMILY TAFT

The chairman of the license board and councillor representing the area for a proposed Tilted Kilt Restaurant said the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission made the right call in denying a request for an all alcohol license for the eatery.

License Board Chairman Joseph Shea and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall said they were happy to learn the ABCC upheld the Quincy License Board's decision to deny the license at 227 Parkingway in Quincy after ruling the restaurant – known for waitresses clad in short plaid kilts and bikini-like tops – would be detrimental to the spiritual or educational activities of St. John's Church and its parishioners.

"I believe the decision to deny the Tilted Kilt its license is the right one for the residents," Croall told The Sun. "It was a pretty lengthy process and the residential community came together and their work paid dividends."

"There was noticeable opposition from the residents that I represent so I took a half-day off of work and testified on their behalf. I am happy to hear the good news."

Shea, who also serves as the city clerk, said that he was happy they had won the case.

"It's pretty straight forward and simply stated in the decision letter that we had the right to deny them," said Shea. "It says we have a right to deny them because the restaurant would be detrimental on the spiritual or educational activities of the church. We presented our evidence and the church testified and the board upheld our decision."

In a letter dated April 25th, which was mailed to the License Board, City Solicitor James Timmins and Louis Cassis, attorney for the licensee, the ABCC concluded, "Based on the evidence, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission approves the action of the Local Board of Quincy in denying the application of Waxy's Quincy, LLL, (doing business as) The Tilted Kilt for an alcoholic beverages restaurant type license issued pursuant to Chapter 138, section 12, to be exercised at 227 Parkingway, Quincy."

The license board originally voted in favor of the license during a July 17 meeting, but after some review realized that St. John's Church was not informed of the meeting.

During a second hearing in August the board heard testimony from over 20 residents, 17 of which were against granting the license due to the attire of the restaurant's wait staff and its proposed location; three spoke in favor and one person spoke as a neutral party. The board voted against the license with a 3-2 vote, with board members Jay Duca, Police Chief Paul Keenan and Shea voting against the license and voting for the approval were Fire Chief Joseph Barron and co-chairman and city Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele.

On Jan. 30th the ABCC heard over four hours of testimony from Shea, Croall, City Solicitor Timmins, Waxy's Quincy LLC owners Gordon Hyde and Ashok Patel and their attorney Louis Cassis, along with St. John's Deacon Paul Lewis and Fort Square Presbyterian Church Pastor John Culp.

Shea testified that the board determined, after the hearing, that Tilted Kilt would be detrimental to the spiritual activities of the church, and that they determined that it could not make the required finding pursuant to M.G.L. c. 138, section 16 C, that Tilted Kilt would not have a negative or detrimental impact on the spiritual or educational activities of the church.

Deacon Paul Lewis, a permanent Deacon at St. John's Catholic Church is stated as testifying that, "he has no objection to hamburgers and beer. The objection of St. John's Church is to the attire worn by the wait staff, which is counter to the teachings of the Catholic Church, its practices and beliefs, and its view on the theology of sex and procreation."

Tilted Kilt owners argued that there was no evidence presented to the board to show how the premises were detrimental to the spiritual activities of the church.

"The action of the Board, in denying Waxy's application by basing their decision on opinions of various church members, was tantamount to providing the church with veto power. Waxy's further argues that the provisions of G.L. ch. 138, section 16C require the Local Board to state, in writing, the reasons why the granting of this license would be detrimental to the spiritual mission of the Church; and in addition, that there was never a discussion of the merits of how the Local Board found that the placement of this license would interfere with the spiritual activities of the church," the decision letter reads.

Tilted Kilt owners also submitted a number of exhibits in hopes to overturn the board's ruling, including photographs of the interior of the restaurant and its waitress uniform, a menu and a Google Earth photo/image representing the area and distance of 227 Parkingway, the proposed location of the restaurant, and St. John's Catholic Church.

The decision letter states that the ABCC finds that St. John's is a church within the definition of G.L. ch. 138, section 16C, and finds that the board properly applied the provisions of G.L. ch. 138, section 16C, in denying the Tilted Kilt application because the board, after the hearing, did not make a finding in writing that the application was not detrimental to the spiritual or educational activities of the church, therefore the ABCC found the board to have properly denied the Tilted Kilt application.

Owners Hyde and Patel could file an appeal in Superior Court within 30 days of the ABCC's decision. Attorney Cassis could not be reached for comment on whether or not they would be doing so.

special election in eight weeks will be eligible to seek a full six-year Senate term in 2014.

Turnout in Quincy – like many other communities – was low Tuesday. There were 13,460 ballots cast in the two primaries, a voter turnout of 21.23 percent of the city's 63,395 registered (active and inactive) voters.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said there were no problems at any of the city's 31 polling precincts Tuesday. Results were tallied by 8:50 p.m. by city election workers.

In the Democratic primary in Quincy, Cong. Markey of Malden was outpolled by fellow Cong. Stephen Lynch of South Boston who has represented Quincy and the new 8th District since January.

Lynch – who was backed by many local leaders including Mayor Thomas Koch, the city's State House delegation and other elected Democratic officials – received 8,653 votes. Markey's vote total was 2,682 votes, a margin of 5,971 votes.

Markey – who was first elected to Congress in 1976 – was projected the winner of the Democratic Primary shortly after 9 p.m. With 92 percent of the vote reporting at press time, Markey had 58 percent of the vote (about 283,386 votes) while Lynch – a Bay State Congressman since 2001 – had 42 percent of the vote (209,252 votes) state-wide.

Gomez, a Cohasset resident and former Navy fighter pilot who later served as a Navy SEAL from 1991 to 1996, was projected the winner of the Republican nomination at 9 p.m. by the Associated Press. He defeated former state representative and U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan of Abington and Rep. Dan Winslow of Norfolk.

In Quincy, Gomez received 911 votes or 43.95 percent. Sullivan was second with 879 votes or 42.40 percent and Winslow a distant third with 215 votes or 3.28 percent.

Statewide with 92 percent of the precincts reporting, Gomez had 51 percent of the vote (84,346 votes.) Sullivan was second with 36 percent (60,320) and Winslow third with 13 percent (21,570 votes.)

There were 40 write-in votes in the Democratic primary and 68 write-in votes in the Republican primary in Quincy.

THE HALO EFFECT

No matter what the budget, we always seem to want a diamond that is bigger than we can afford. For those wanting to get the most value and excitement for the money spent, there is the "halo setting," which visually optimizes the look of any diamond. This setting first became popular in engagement and bridal jewelry after World War I, when the bold and opulent Art Deco aesthetic arose as a reaction to wartime hardship. Halo settings feature a single large center diamond surrounded by a border of smaller stones, which serve to visually expand the look of the central diamond. In effect, the halo setting tricks the eye into believing that the diamond is larger than it actually is.

Mary O'Brien Among Marathon First Responders

By SCOTT JACKSON

Wollaston resident Mary O'Brien was one of the countless volunteers who rushed in to help after two bombs ripped through the crowd at the Boston Marathon.

O'Brien, a nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, was volunteering for the Boston Athletic Association during the race. In the past she was stationed in the medical tents west of Boston along the marathon route. This year, she was a runners assistant, helping runners find belongings they left on buses.

"I have volunteered over the years many times but usually because I'm a nurse I volunteer for one of the medical tents. Usually I was out in the Natick and Wellesley area," O'Brien said. "This year I was in the Boston area, but actually in a non-medical capacity. As a runners assistant my job is to help the runners find the bus that had the bags of dry clothes."

As a runners assistant, she was assigned to the area known as "the chute," about two blocks east of the finish line. When the first bomb exploded around 2:50 p.m. that afternoon, O'Brien heard the explosion, saw smoke starting to rise and knew the explosion was set intentionally. The second explosion, a block west of the first and about 15 seconds later, confirmed her suspicions.

"There was a loud explosion and a lot of smoke. I knew what it was because of the location - right before the finish line in the family viewing area - and because it was four hours into the race," O'Brien said. "Then there was a second explosion and that pretty much confirmed what it was."

O'Brien sprinted to the finish line with a wave of first responders, BAA volunteers, and others who came in to assist. Once there, she used a wheelchair to bring five victims to safety.

"I started to run towards the finish line. There was what they call a wheelchair lane that's kept open for runners that needed to be wheelchaired because they couldn't walk any further," O'Brien said. "That was pretty open so I ran down the wheelchair lane to the finish area."

"When I got to the finish area I was able to team up with a young woman who had a wheelchair. Together we basically wheelchaired victims from the bombing site into the medical tent, dropped them off in the medical tent, and then went back out to get another victim. There was kind of this wheelchair brigade almost, with wheelchairs going out with many different people. We were wheelchairs people who were well enough to sit in a chair and then other people were putting other patients on stretchers."

Because she was two blocks away from the finish area, O'Brien didn't arrive on scene until a couple minutes after the explosions. She was amazed at how calm the scene was by then.

"I had to run about two blocks so by the time I got there I was amazed at how calm it was. People were quiet, patients were quiet, everyone was cooperating," O'Brien said. "It developed into an instant team. Everyone was doing a little piece that made the whole thing work."

While everyone was calm and working together, O'Brien said the injuries she saw looked like something out of a warzone. The bombs killed three people and 264 more were injured, including more than a dozen who would lose limbs as a result.

"It was a warzone. It was pretty horrific. We just kept moving people as quickly as we could," O'Brien said. "There were a lot of first responders, and a lot of people giving first aid. We were kind of the transport, taking people who already had some first aid into the medical tent as fast as we could."

O'Brien now works as a professional development specialist at MGH. In that capacity she helps train new nurses and orientate them to the hospital. Before that, O'Brien worked as an emergency room nurse and was one of the first paramedics for Boston MedFlight, a helicopter service that flies patients with grievous injuries to trauma centers in Boston. The injuries O'Brien saw on Marathon Monday reminded her of injuries she'd seen in the ER and on MedFlights.

"I have seen injuries like this before. By trade I'm an emergency room nurse and I have worked in the emergency room. I was also one of the original flight crewmembers of Boston MedFlight. I was one of the original flight paramedics," O'Brien said.

The Marathon bombing wasn't the first terrorist attack O'Brien responded to. She was previously a member of MA1 Disaster Medical Assistance Team (DMAT), a group of doctors, nurses, and other medical personnel trained to respond to major disasters. The team was mobilized in the wake of the September 11, 2001 attacks and sent to World Trade Center site to assist in rescue efforts.

"We were deployed to Ground Zero on 9/11. We got there the next day on the 12th. We set up medical triage areas on each area - two were tents, one was a bombed out deli, and the other was a lobby of a bombed out bank," O'Brien said. "Unfortunately there were no survivors by the time we arrived so we spent 11 days treating the rescuers. People who have respiratory problems that breathed in the dust, who had foot problems because they got cut climbing through the rubble, eye irritation, those types of things."

Merrymount School Student Nicole Buckley Raises $530 For Autism Speaks

At the end of March, Merrymount School fourth grade student Nicole Buckley approached her teacher, Lorie Hammerstrom, about raising money for Autism Speaks during April, Autism Awareness Month.

Nicole has a 4-year-old cousin who has autism. Nicole and her teacher came up with a plan to make and sell friendship bracelets.

Nicole invited fourth and fifth grade students to give up their recess time during lunch to make friendship bracelets. The students spent three weeks making bracelets to sell. Then Nicole went from classroom to classroom with her classmates and invited all of the students at the Merrymount School to buy a bracelet for $3 to help raise money for Autism Awareness month.

Students had created about 150 bracelets and raised $530. The students were amazed at the generosity and support shown by their classmates. The excitement in the room was electric as Nicole went up to announce on the loudspeaker how much was raised.

"Nicole has a generous heart and spirit and the drive fourth and fifth grade teachers were so proud of this student led effort to show compassion and support for others."

Eastern Bank's Bob Rivers To Receive Medallion Manet Community Health Center Dinner, Auction May 9

Manet Community Health Center will host its annual Dinner and Auction Thursday, May 9 at the Boston Quincy Marriott, 1000 Marriott Dr. Quincy, in the Grand Ballroom beginning at 6 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

The Dinner and Auction comes at a critical time when community health centers like Manet are under pressure to implement new primary care and payment initiatives, before the Affordable Care Act's 2014 deadline. To meet increasing demands for access to primary care, Manet is adding two new physicians in May. Plus, it is expanding its facilities inside Quincy Medical Center, in North Quincy and in Hull, while tailoring new programs and services particularly for seniors and public housing residents, including specialty services, behavioral health, pharmacy services and a Manet Vision Center.

Support for Manet runs high. In 2012, Manet Community Health's patient satisfaction ratings topped 91%. A national study reported by Kaiser Health News and USA Today, also in 2012, gave Manet good grades for effective care for expectant mothers, newborns and patients of most other ages.

Another study published in the Archives of Internal Medicine found that Massachusetts' federally-funded health centers saw a 31% increase (134,000) in patients between 2005 and 2009, even as growing numbers of residents obtained coverage under the state's health reform law. Seven years post reform, Massachusetts health centers are serving some 820,000 state residents, having increased their ranks by more than 200,000 since 2005. To that end, 14,478 Manet patients were seen during 53,475 patient visits in 2012, which represents a 5.4% increase in patients and a 3.9% increase in patient visits in one year.

Support from public and private sources also runs high. In addition to garnering over $5.5 million in capital funding in 2012 to support building renovations, last year's Dinner & Auction raised $109,000 in one evening for Manet's Annual Fund. This helped to subsidize unfunded mandates and wrap-around services including health benefits counseling, language translation and interpretation and clinical care management.

"Manet is the South Shore's partner for a healthier life," said Manet Community Health CEO Henry Tuttle. "We work toward health parity by giving our patients the tools they require to achieve a healthy future, in many cases, a future out of poverty."

Manet Community Health operates five practice sites, four in Quincy and one in Hull.

"Our annual Dinner & Auction is most important to us because with the continuing financial support of our government, community, funders and friends, we can expand our essential programs and services to meet our patients' and communities' needs," Tuttle added.

The Manet Medallion will be presented at the event to Bob Rivers, president and COO of Eastern Bank. Rivers will receive Manet's most prestigious honor for his and Eastern Bank's commitment to the community health center movement, said Joseph Reardon, Chairman of the Manet Community Health Board of Directors.

"Eastern Bank's philosophy on community involvement is closely aligned with ours - we both move our communities forward - because we know we can only succeed if our patients, clients and customers succeed," Reardon said. "Eastern Bank's support for community health reflects its mission to serve the underserved. QMC, Morrissey Host Senior Summit

Safe, Healthy Aging Focus

Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey and Quincy Medical Center President Daniel Knell hosted dozens of area elders at a regional Senior Summit Friday, providing experts and information from their organizations on safe, healthy aging.

"Our central topics were prescription drug safety and the impact of emotional changes as we age," District Attorney Morrissey said after the event, which was held in the auditorium of the Council on Aging's Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street April 26.

"Quincy Medical Center is very pleased to collaborate with the Norfolk County District Attorney's office on this program, which is geared toward our common goal of ensuring the health and safety of the residents in our community — especially our seniors," said Daniel Knell.

Quincy Medical Center's head of psychiatry, Peggy Johnson, MD, Louise LaRaia, RN and Mental Health Counselor Heather Petitpas gave presentations discussing how to recognize depression, and other emotional problems that can be tied to aging, in your friends or in yourself — and how to engage help.

DA Morrissey and two members of his staff were joined by Weymouth pharmacist David Morgan and Mary Maguire from AAA of Southern New England to present "Prescription Drugs: What You Don't Know Can Hurt You," exploring the impact of prescription medications on driving, physical safety, and their role in fueling the current epidemic of opiate abuse. "Prescription medicines have just as much effect on the body as alcohol," Morgan said. "It is just as dangerous as drunk driving," and can sometimes affect night vision, balance and reaction time.

"We very much appreciate Quincy Medical Center, AAA and the City of Quincy for helping us bring this Summit to local seniors," District Attorney Morrissey said. "Crime and injury prevention is an important piece of what modern law enforcement needs to do, and we are most effective when we are working hand-in-hand with community partners."

Information and resources on these and other personal safety, security and wellness topics can be found at www.norfolkda.com and www.quincymc.org.

One Of Five Rivers With Alarming Low Catches Below-Normal Smelt Run In Town Brook

By PAT ARTIS

Historically, people in Quincy have valued the rainbow smelt as an easy-to-catch, abundant source of protein after the long winter. Rainbow smelt were so plentiful a hundred years ago that regional farmers caught them by the barrelful and had enough to use as bait, and even spread on their fields as fertilizer.

According to Brad Chase of MA Division of Marine Fisheries who for many years has been monitoring Town Brook and other local smelt runs, "the smelt run has been slow in Town Brook this year."

Chase explains that Marine Fisheries have kept smelt fyke nets in six Massachusetts rivers to monitor the smelt populations for the past nine years. Smelt fyke nets, having a 2.5 foot hoop entrance and 3.3 foot wings are set upstream for two days; and a larger net, with a 4.4 foot box frame entrance and 4.4 foot wings, is set facing downstream for three days. Both nets have 1/4 inch delta mesh throughout the net.

Fish are counted, measured, and released weekly during spawning season. Smelt spawning season locally runs from late February to mid May. Chase says "Five of the six rivers being monitored have had alarmingly low catches this year - the lowest that we have seen for these five rivers."

According to Chase, the one exception is the Fore River in Braintree; it has had average catches in terms of numbers and seasonality. Interestingly, the monitoring nets used for determining this, are close to Town Brook in Braintree, and Town Brook is a part of the Fore River Watershed.

QEN and Wollaston Garden Club citizen-monitors have yet to see any smelt this season. In early March of 2011 and 2012, hundreds and hundreds of smelt were easily seen by these monitors, pooling in the rifts and deep areas of the brook, west of the Bigelow Street Bridge and along the brook near Mechanic Street and Revere Road. The construction areas, in which smelt eggs have been found and a dozen smelt and one eel observed this year, have been off-limits to the public.

These citizen-monitors are concerned that the construction at the Town Brook Enhancement site during this past winter may have impacted the arrival of the smelt; they are, however, pleased with the city's latest announcement of a $250,000 project at Center Street, re-directing Crown Colony area ground water, into the Town Brook.

One of the MA Department of Environmental Protection's Order of Conditions upon the City of Quincy is to increase the base flow of water into the brook. For many years the brook has not been averaging the 3 cubic feet per second (cfs) water flow, ideal for smelt spawning, but currently is well below 2 cubic feet per second. This long-awaited water flow project is in its final design stage, and is slated to be completed this summer, according to Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines.

Chase said he is encouraged by the moderate densities of eggs found along the new substrate of the brook at Mechanic Street; and though the numbers are far below normal, the smelt have successfully spawned at locations (former Legion site) unavailable before this year. He laments that egg deposition downstream along Miller Stile has been very poor.

The MA Department of Marine Fisheries has provided the City's environmental consultant with a letter of authorization to monitor smelt in Town Brook and worked to design a monitoring plan; this information should be helpful to see how the smelt run is going and to evaluate the new habitat.

"I keep waiting for the smelt to show up and in a few weeks (mid May) it will be too late - too soon to say why we are seeing such poor catches," Chase said. "The early news from smelt researchers in NH and ME is that they are seeing catches well below average too."

Regionally, the identifiable threats to the smelts are: loss of suitable spawning habitat, unfavorable changes in ocean conditions such as water temperature or predation, and fishing pressure. Citizens should get to know their local smelt runs and insist that local officials protect these valuable habitats.

Squares Dedicated To Three Vietnam Veterans KIA

- Lance/Cpl. James H. Cavicchi, Jr., U.S.M.C. Memorial Square At Phipps Street & Kendrick Avenue
- Spec. 4 J. Michael Berry, U.S. Army Memorial Square At 89 Gilbert Street
- Lance/Cpl. David O. Sullivan, U.S.M.C. Memorial Square At 83 Safford Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three young men killed in action more than 40 years ago during the Vietnam War were remembered last week at ceremonies held across the city.

A square was dedicated to each of the men with family members watching. Each of the ceremonies, held on April 25, was a solemn affair – a wreath was laid, members of the 2nd Marine Division Association fired a three-volley salute, DAV Cavanagh Chapter Commander Robert LaFleur played "Taps," and Rev. John Carl Swanson of Union Congregational Church and the Morrisette Post's Naseeb "Moe" Morad offered a prayer and a song, respectively. Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, served as master of ceremonies at each dedication.

The day began at the corner of Phipps Street and Kendrick Avenue opposite Faxon Park. There a square was rededicated to Marine Corps Lance Cpl. James Henry Cavicchi, Jr. Cavicchi was killed in a helicopter crash on March 21, 1966 near Quang Ngai, about 200 miles north of Saigon when he was 21 years old. The square had been dedicated to him originally on Aug. 14, 1976. Speaking on Thursday, Rep. Tackey Chan said rededications offer a chance to remember family members of those killed, such as Cavicchi's sister Carol Cavicchi-Deal, who was in attendance.

"These rededications are very important because they remind us of the people who are here," Chan said. "There's a memorial and a sign here for an important person, but no one is more important than someone that's part of their family, that's a friend, that's a schoolmate, that's a classmate – someone you've known long before they joined the military.

"I'm very proud to participate in this rededication and also put a reminder out to people that it's more than just going into service to protect our freedoms – it costs somebody someone they loved very much at home."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, chairwoman of the City Council's Veteran Services Committee, said everyone present benefited from the sacrifice Cavicchi, and his family, made.

"I cannot pretend to know the sacrifice that Lance Cpl. Cavicchi and his family made for this country but I am proud to be here today and I am honored to be here and say that I am grateful for his sacrifice and that we are all the beneficiaries of his great and ultimate sacrifice.

Hughes also thanked the dozens of veterans and others – more than 50 total – who were present at the dedication for Cavicchi and the other dedications held later in the day.

"I appreciate you being here because the show of support, not only for the Cavicchi family but for our country and our men and women who serve day in and day out to protect us and to protect our liberties, is immense and is impressive," Hughes said.

Cavicchi had enlisted with the Marine Corps in 1962 and was stationed in Cyprus and Cuba before serving in Vietnam. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall read a letter Cavicchi wrote in 1962 soon after he started basic training – Cavicchi was 18 at the time.

"I know now what we are here for and why others before us were here – to keep America strong and free from all aggressors. As time goes by we become an efficient unit. I am sorry I cannot send anything from here but the greatest gift we can give to our loved ones is freedom," Cavicchi wrote in the letter. "This is why we are here – to keep this country great and free."

"There's absolutely nothing I could say to follow that up," Croall added.

The next dedication was held at 89 Gilbert Street in honor of Army Specialist Fourth Class James Michael Barry. He was killed in an early morning attack on April 9, 1972 near Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam; four others were killed in the attack and 19 were wounded. Barry, 21, was just two weeks away from returning home when he was killed and was posthumously promoted to the rank of sergeant. Barry's sister, Wanda Barry-Garcia, said her brother would be blushing if he knew the dedication was taking place.

"I can only imagine my brother blushing at his being part of center stage today. He most likely would have just shot me a look for saying he is deserving of today's dedication. As to him, he was simply honoring his country and performing the duties he felt responsible to fulfill," Barry-Garcia said. "That was so Michael."

Barry-Garcia also reminded the crowd that, as a college student, her brother could have avoided the war but chose to enlist in the Army because he felt service was necessary.

"My brother was a man of conviction and this included his belief in his country and his obligation to serve. Michael was not drafted; he was a college student at Assumption College with a free pass to stay out of Vietnam," Barry-Garcia said. "He had options for law school on of commendations after he was killed in action in the Vietnam War on April 9, 1972, including a Bronze Star, a Purple Heart, and a National Defense Service Medal.

the horizon but he could not let go of his firm belief that in order to become the politician he aspired to be one day he could not ignore what he felt was his mandatory duty to serve."

Sen. John Keenan echoed those sentiments, reminding those in attendance that the anti-war movement was at its peak when Barry chose to join the Army.

"Sgt. Barry was deployed to Vietnam at a time when thousands were marching upon Washington and other cities to protest the war; when the Vietnam veterans against the war were testifying in Congressional hearings; when the anti-war fervor was truly at a pitch," Keenan said. "What's remarkable is that this brave young man from Quincy, amidst all that turmoil and strife occurring throughout the country, went to the other side of the world and fulfilled his very personal sense of obligation.

"I don't know whether Sgt. Barry had thoughts about the war – about what was going on in his nation's capital – but I do know he showed incredible courage, dignity, and honor in answering his nation's call."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the sacrifice made by Barry and countless other veterans over the years has helped make the United States the greatest nation in the world.

"My wife and I are parents of about a week old daughter. I can't help but think that she was born into the greatest nation in the world," Palmucci said. "A nation that has been built through the hard work, the dedication, the sacrifice of those like Sgt. Barry who

Federal Judge G. Patrick Murphy Guest Speaker At Vietnam Veterans Memorial Service

'Live Responsibly, Honorably For Our Fallen Comrades'

By SCOTT JACKSON

In a ceremony to honor the 48 Quincy residents killed in the Vietnam War, Federal Judge G. Patrick Murphy told surviving veterans it was incumbent on them to live responsibly and honorably out of respect for their fallen comrades.

"We didn't survive because we were smarter or tougher or because somebody else made a mistake," Murphy, a Marine Corps veteran who fought in Vietnam, said. "We survived for reasons we can never explain and it is the ultimate height of arrogance to believe that we survived because we were something special. Many of the Marines that I knew were better Marines, bigger Marines, smarter Marines, and tougher Marines than I could ever be. And yet I am here."

"All of us — veterans who are here and still alive — in a very real way have to stand in and substitute for those that didn't get back. We do not have a license to ruin our lives, to wreck our lives in self pity, to stay drunk, to stay high, to get in a fistfight every time we would like to — we don't have that license. Instead we have to live our lives responsibly and honorably and with joy because life is a gift."

Murphy, chief justice of the U.S. District Court in Southern Illinois, was the special guest speaker at the ceremony held at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower in Marina Bay on April 25. The 110-foot tall clock tower was dedicated in 1987 and is inscribed with the names of the 48 Quincy residents killed in the war. Murphy looked back on all the changes he has seen in his lifetime and said those killed in the war didn't get to see many of them.

G. PATRICK MURPHY, a Marine veteran of the Vietnam War and chief justice of the U.S. District Court in Southern Illinois, was the special guest speaker for the Marina Bay ceremony. He told his fellow veterans in the crowd that they had a special duty to act as substitutes for those who didn't survive the war. "We have to live our lives responsibly and honorably and with joy because life is a gift," he said.

"Democrats and Republicans and Methodists and Catholics and heathens lived on the same street and it didn't seem to be much of a problem — they even watched the election returns together. I can remember a time when there hadn't been Elvis Presley; it's hard to imagine they had this thing called the 'Hit Parade.' The Beatles had not been heard of. There were no cellphones," Murphy said. "Lyndon Johnson was the President of the United States. I doubt that anyone had ever heard of Gerald Ford or Jimmy Carter, and Richard Nixon is someone who didn't make it out in California. All of the presidents that have served since then were unknown to the people that lost their lives.

"They had no way of knowing that the world would change in the way it has. Iraq? No one had ever heard of Iraq. Iran, Afghanistan — none of these things existed. When I look here and I look at you and I think about this vast expanse of time — that is the measurement of the loss, because after all you just have a certain time on this earth. All that was lost."

Another guest speaker was Joe McCain, who served on the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise early on during the Vietnam War and then worked as a reporter. McCain is the brother of U.S. Sen. John McCain of Arizona. Their father, Admiral John McCain, Jr., was commander of the Pacific Fleet during the Vietnam War.

Speaking to the crowd at Marina Bay, McCain recalled a vision he had after his father died in 1981. In it, his father went to the Elysian Fields, a place the ancient Greeks believed all soldiers went after their deaths. McCain felt all soldiers, including those from Quincy immortalized on the clock tower, went there in death as equals.

"He was a career submarine admiral of 46 years service. When he died I had an image of him stepping into a kind of glen and before him lying on the grass was an ancient soldier with a battered shield propped up on it and as dad approached he lifted his sword and said 'welcome home admiral,'" McCain said. "I've always imagined him spending the ages with soldiers of all eras who had died in battle or served full careers. So it is how I like to think of all soldiers, including these 48 men who lost their lives."

"But that's just an image in my mind that I had one day so who knows. But I do know where they gather and it is at this very place. Notice they are formed up in two files of 24, not by service, not by medals, not by rank — for they are all equals now. They served and lost their lives because of, or in, Vietnam. And they talk to us, I believe, if we listen. 'We served. We did our duty for our country. And we died, but we served. Remember us.'"

Over 200 veterans, local officials, and residents were on hand to watch the 90-minute ceremony. It was organized by Lawrence Norton, president of the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, to keep alive the memory of those killed.

"If you received this letter and an invitation to be here, on the bottom it says 'through us they will live forever.' No truer words were ever spoken," Norton said. "Until the day we die we're going to be here."

Rev. John Carl Swanson — pastor of the Union Congregational Church and a retired Navy lieutenant — gave the invocation for the memorial ceremony. He quoted the book of Ecclesiastes, saying that they who died without leaving a name for themselves would be remembered for their acts. The 48 Quincy residents and thousands of others from across the nation killed in Vietnam would be remembered for their service and not because they have buildings or mountains named for them.

"Today we honor those who really have no name. None of the names in back of me have a federal building. There's no 4,000 footer in New Hampshire named after them," Swanson said. "But we honor them, and by extension the legion of others who have shown fidelity to the flag, camaraderie to their friends, family, and comrades, and above all faith in the United States."

Mayor Tom Koch noted many Vietnam veterans did not receive their proper respect when they returned home from the war. He thanked Norton and the rest of the organizers for paying proper respect to the fallen Quincy residents.

"As the Vietnam veterans came home to this country they were not treated with respect, with the dignity and the gratitude they deserved," Koch said. "I think we've done quite well honoring the veterans in the tradition of this great city."

Sen. John Keenan said the ceremony held at Marina Bay had two purposes — to honor the veterans and keep the memory of them alive.

"For many years I've had the great honor of joining you here to remember those listed on the clock tower behind me — those brave men of Quincy who have paid the ultimate sacrifice. We've come here today to offer prayers, support, and healing to their families," Keenan said. "We do come here today to not only honor these men and their families, but we honor as well our obligation that they never be forgotten."

Keenan's colleague on Beacon Hill, Sen. Mike

Rush of West Roxbury, echoed those sentiments.

"Today is a solemn and important reminder to the families of the American heroes that lost their lives in southeast Asia, and to the veterans that served alongside them, and those veterans that followed in their hallowed footsteps, and those who still have not come home, that we will never forget. Our fallen heroes require the continued attention of a grateful nation," Rush, a veteran of the Iraq War and chairman of the joint veterans affairs committee, said. "Today as we pause we are mindful of the Vietnam veterans that made today and tomorrow possible."

Speakers at the Marina Bay ceremony also used the event to reflect on the bombings that took place during the Boston Marathon on April 15. McCain asked that the crowd keep in their thoughts and prayers the three people killed at the bombing and an MIT police officer allegedly killed by the same perpetrators three days later. He asked that their names be honored along with the names of the 48 residents on the wall, which were read aloud in a roll call.

"Every year we honor these men by calling out their names. For this year I want to add four — Krystle Campbell, Martin Richard, Lu Lingzi, and Sean Collier," McCain said. "This is our city. We are not going to let anyone dictate our freedom. Stay strong."

Murphy said the people of Illinois respected the people of Boston and all of Massachusetts for how they handled themselves in the aftermath of the bombings.

"It would be impossible to gather here today and not at least recognize our particular circumstances and just tell you how much those of us in my hard-bitten, gritty part of the world admire you folks here in this part of the country and the way you've handled this," Murphy said. "We are not afraid. We will play. We will pray. We will assemble and respect our dead on our terms."

The mayor praised how the Greater Boston community reacted to the attacks.

"The other day when we all observed the tragedy of what happened in Boston and saw the people come together — veterans, first responders, citizens, civilians — and just react as great Americans with the great spirit of generosity," Koch said. "We've seen that generation, after generation, after generation."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

STOPPING GUM DISEASE IN ITS TRACKS

If your gums are red, swollen, and bleed easily, with little or no discomfort otherwise, you are likely suffering from the mildest form of periodontal disease. "Gingivitis" is usually caused by poor oral hygiene and may be reversed with treatment by the dentist and hygienist, followed by continued attention to good oral hygiene at home. Failure to address the problem early on almost assuredly will lead to the more serious form of gum disease known as "periodontitis." As the bacteria-laden film known as "plaque" hardens to form "tartar" that releases toxins above and below the gumline, the gums become inflamed and begin to separate from the teeth. Without professional treatment at this point, teeth may loosen and fall out.

Part of our commitment to serving our patients includes providing information about gingivitis, which then helps them make more informed decisions about their oral health needs. We believe every patient should always be fully in charge of their own dental health, and that we are here to help them. We stress the importance of preventive dental care for the entire family. Your total emotional and physical well-being is as important to us as your teeth. We will do what is best for you, and will not compromise. Call us at 617-479-6220 and schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If periodontitis is allowed to advance without treatment, it is possible that gum tissue will die and underlying bone may degenerate.

Quincy Vietnam Combat Veterans Memorial Service

MAYOR TOM KOCH thanked the organizers of the annual memorial ceremony at Marina Bay for giving Vietnam veterans the respect they didn't receive when they returned home after the war. "As the Vietnam veterans came home to this country they were not treated with respect, with the dignity and the gratitude they deserved," Koch said. "I think we've done quite well honoring the veterans in the tradition of this great city."

LAWRENCE NORTON, president of the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, was responsible for organizing the memorial ceremonies held throughout the day on April 25. He vowed to continue them as long as possible. "Until the day we die we're going to be here," Norton said.

JOE MCCAIN, a Vietnam veteran who served on the USS Enterprise, said the men immortalized on the clock tower behind him were all equals, no longer sorted by rank or service. "They talk to us, I believe, if we listen. 'We served. We did our duty for our country. And we died, but we served. Remember us,'" McCain said.

CAROL OSTLUND, a former schoolteacher in Brockton, sang the "Star Spangled Banner" at the opening of the memorial ceremony in Marina Bay.

ROBERT LaFLEUR, commander of the Cavanagh Chapter of the DAV and a Vietnam era Navy veteran, played "Taps" following the wreath-laying.

killed in Vietnam moments before the wreath was placed at the foot of the clock tower.

THE 2ND MARINE Corps Division Association's firing detail shot a three-volley salute following the wreath-laying in front of Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

THE NAMES OF the 48 Quincy residents killed during the Vietnam War are inscribed in The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower. The 110-foot tall tower was dedicated in 1987 in a ceremony with Ret. Army Gen. William Westmoreland as the keynote speaker.

MORE THAN 200 veterans, residents, and local officials attended the 90-minute ceremony at Marina Bay. Here they stand for the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Kelly, Sautter Power North Quincy Past Hingham, 13-1

NORTH QUINCY'S Liz Kelly eyes a pitch that she drilled one of her two hits in the Red Raiders' 13-1 win over Hingham last Friday at Mitchell-McCoy Field. Kelly knocked in four runs and scored four runs in the win.

24 Runs, 28 Hits In Two Games For Red Raiders North Quincy Hammers Hingham, Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

She is the complete player.

The two most demanding defensive positions to play in softball are shortstop and catcher. Liz Kelly plays both. Kelly hits for power, she hits for average, she drives in runs, and she races around the bases with swiftness and intelligence. She knows the game the way a coach knows the game.

Kelly put the full range of her talent on display, junior Natasha Sautter fired a three-hitter and North Quincy hit the ball hard from the top to the bottom of the lineup for a 13-1 win over Hingham in a Patriot League contest at Mitchell-McCoy Field Friday.

"I'm very happy with the way we are playing," said coach Kerry Ginty after her club won its second straight to even its record at 3-3. "We're improving. Our hitting is more balanced, Natasha had excellent control and our defense played well. We're on the right track."

It starts with Kelly. She had a triple, single and two walks from the leadoff spot in five trips to the plate. She scored four runs, drove in four, stole two bases and scored from first on an infield error. Her only out came when Hingham shortstop Arden Laliberte robbed Kelly with a tough catch of a soft liner into left in the sixth. Power, speed, patience, base hits, and RBI. That about covers it.

"She's had a great year," said Ginty of her captain who is a four-year starter and a three-year Patriot League All Star at shortstop. "She's hitting near .600 and she's had at least two hits in each of our games."

Before the game, North found out it needed a catcher. Kelly will catch. She worked a clean game behind the plate, no passed balls, one wild pitch. She rifled a knee-high strike to second trying to nail a base stealer in fourth. She connected well with Sautter who is was in a comfort zone from the first pitch to the last. Kelly handled herself as if she could play any position.

"She could play any position," said Ginty. "We've only asked her to play short and catch, but she could play anywhere on the field. She has such a great knowledge of the game and she is an exceptional athlete. I have complete trust in her. She just jumped in behind the plate and did the job."

Sautter was terrific. She gave three singles, struck out ten and walked only two batters. She mixed in an occasional changeup and had fine control low in the strike zone. When Sautter faced two threats --- second and third in the fourth, a runner at second in the fifth --- she went to the strikeout pitch to finish both innings.

"She was in control. When she needed the strikeout pitch, she had it," said Ginty. "We've been working with her on her location and she hit the corners all day."

For the second straight game, North thumped the ball. The Red Raiders had 17 hits in an 11-6 win over Pembroke earlier in the week. North had 11 hits against Hingham which adds to 24 runs and 28 hits in two games. The top three in the order (Kelly, Caitlin Bulger, and Kelly Thompson) combined for six hits, eight RBI, four runs scored and were on base 11 times.

"We've been getting good offense from the top of the order, now the rest of the lineup is starting to drive them in," said Kelly.

Bulger, Thompson, and Courtney Campo each had a pair of hits. Bulger and Thompson had two RBI apiece. Campo added two stolen bases, scored a run and drove one in. Christine Kelliher (single, RBI, run scored) and Madison Hally (single, run scored) also helped the attack. Lauren Magoon scored three runs.

"Kelly Thompson has been getting her bat on the ball all year," said Ginty. "We try to use Courtney's speed. She's a good bunter. She can bunt for a hit and move runners along."

North combined errorless defense with the hitting and pitching. Sautter accounted for 10 of the 18 outs with strikeouts, but North was steady and sure in the field. Hally had an excellent catch of a pop in foul territory and made a diving grab on a soft sinking line drive at third base.

"Christine Kelliher also did an excellent job at shortstop," said Ginty.

North had one in the first, three in the second, one in the fourth, four in the fifth, and two in the sixth. Hingham scored in the fourth. The game was called in the bottom of the sixth.

Freshman Sarah Franklin led the offense in the Pembroke win with three hits and four RBI. Bulger had two singles and a double. Kelly, Thompson, Abby Mayo, Hally and Magoon each had a pair of hits. Sautter went the distance for the win.

In other action last week, North fell to Whitman-Hanson, 10-4 despite three hits and an RBI from Campo. Franklin added two hits, a sacrifice and a walk. Kelly had a pair of singles.

Magoon had a walk and Mayo added a sacrifice in a two-run rally which Kelly capped with a two-run single.

Hally also had a hit for North. Sautter struck out five on the mound for the Red Raiders.

North will travel to Haverhill Monday, May 6.

Quincy Falls To Duxbury In Classic Pitchers' Duel

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was pitching at its finest.

A run was more rare than a snowflake in July. A hit was reason for a parade. A walk, a wild pitch, or a stolen base were major offensive explosions.

The shade of difference between Duxbury senior Michaela Lannon and Quincy sophomore Saxon Bresnahan was most slim. The small edge went to Lannon who struck out nine and scattered five singles for a 2-0 Patriot League win over the Presidents in a classic duel of gifted pitchers last week at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

"I can't say enough about Saxon," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers. "She keeps getting better and better. She faced one of the best pitchers in the league and she matched her."

Bresnahan threw low and hard which almost always works well. Her control was spot-on. She not only had a perfect game with two outs in the fourth, she dismissed the first 11 hitters without allowing a ball hit out of the infield. When she kept her fastball down, she was unhittable.

"When she hits her spots, when she stays low in the strike zone, she is tough," said Sommers.

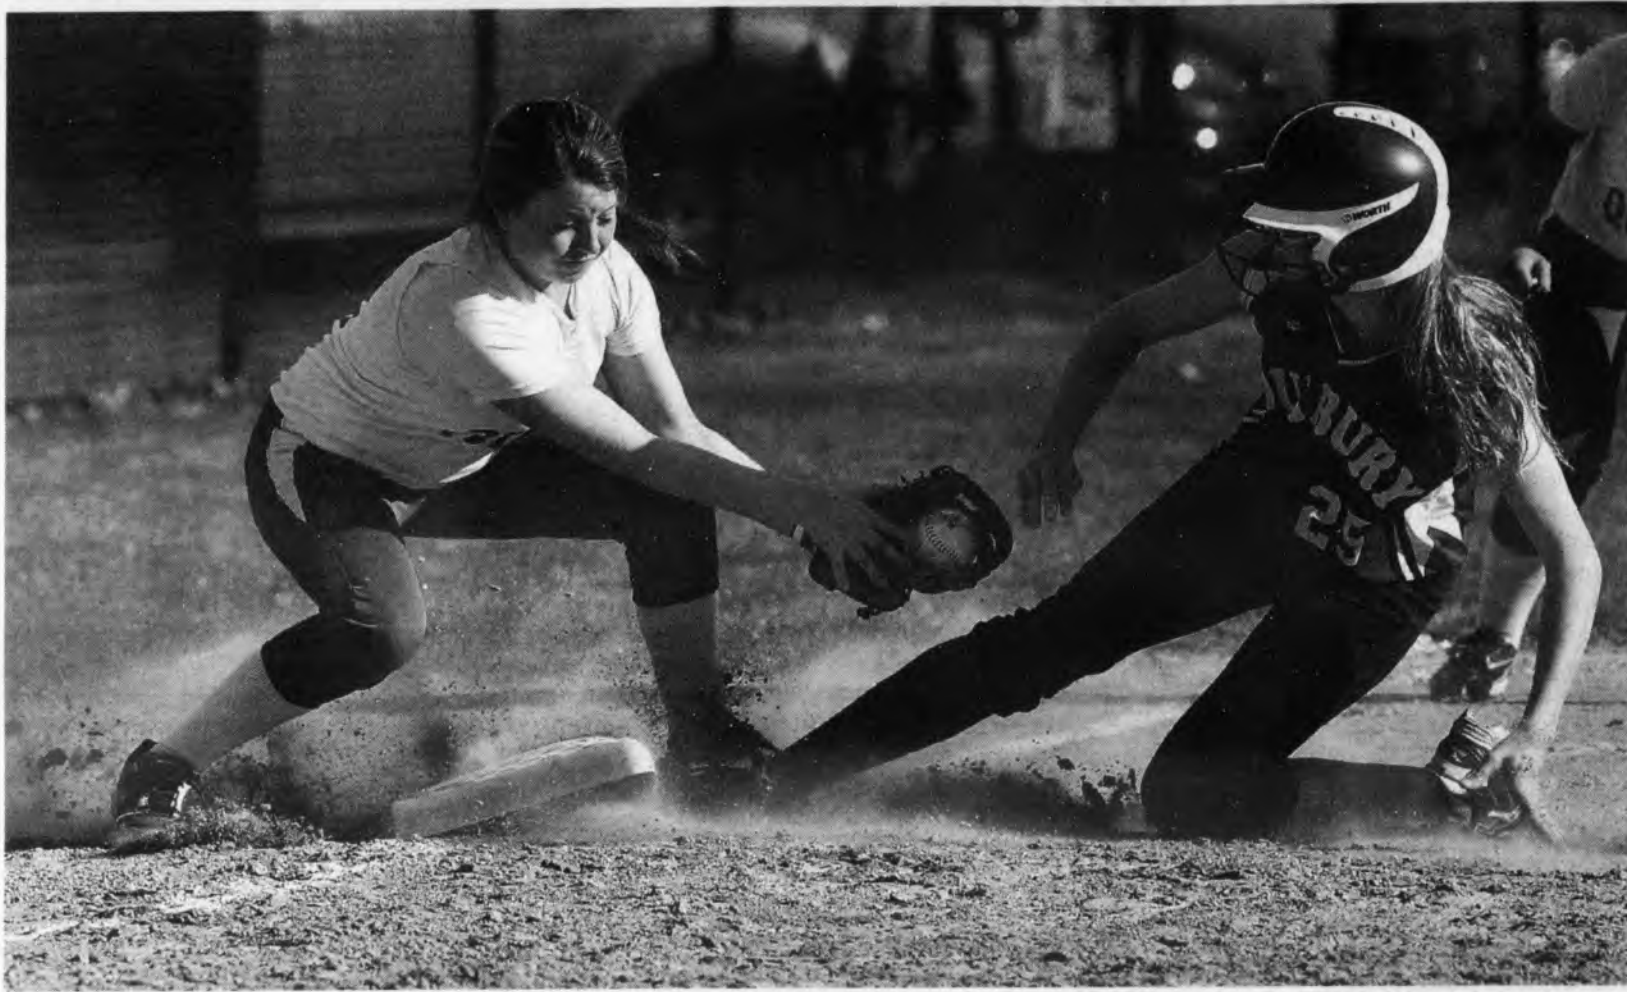

"We couldn't get to her low fastball. We just kept swinging over it," said Duxbury coach Rod Laniewski.

Not only did she have great stuff, she showed poise and mound presence beyond her years against one of the best pitchers in the league in Lannon (7-0, four shutouts at the end of last week). She struck out seven, gave five hits and did not walk a batter. After she breezed through the first 11 batters, she hit some rough patches and she stayed in control.

"She has the ability to adjust, to go with something different if a pitch isn't working," said Sommers.

"When Michaela was a sophomore, she wasn't as good as the Quincy pitcher. That girl has a bright future and I told her that after the game," said Laniewski.

Not only were there few hits and fewer runs, there were no errors in the beautifully-played game. Quincy's defense was worthy of Bresnahan's effort. In the third, third baseman Devin McMahon charged hard on a bunt, scooped and threw a strike to get Hannah Hutchinson on a bang-bang play at first. In the seventh, catcher Angelina Avitable made a strong throw and second baseman Taylor Parry turned a quick catch and tag to nail a base stealer. In the same inning, Parry moved quickly to her

"Our defense is solid. I've said all along that our defense will keep us in games and so far, it has," said Sommers.

Ashley Faiella had terrific game in right. In the fifth she ranged deep into right center and ran down a drive by Alyssa Kates. In the sixth, she made the play of the game. Caitlin Tvrok laced a sinking liner into right. Faiella charged hard, and dove headfirst to grab the line drive at the top of the grass. The play would look good on a highlight film.

"Ashley is quick and she gets a good read on the ball," said Sommers. "That was a great play."

In two games, in 14 innings last week, Bresnahan struck out 21 batters, walked two, allowed eight hits, and gave the two earned runs. In 11 of the 14 innings, she didn't allow a run. She didn't get a win, but if she keeps that hard fastball low and gets offensive support, the victories will surely come.

"Saxon has done everything we've asked. She works hard at her pitching," said Sommers.

Against Duxbury, Caroline McSherry and Christine Curley broke up the perfect game with back-to-back doubles for a 1-0 lead. Duxbury scored another in the sixth without the ball leaving the infield on a bunt single, stolen base, wild pitch, and a sacrifice fly in foul territory just off first base.

That was it.

"We just lacked the timely hit. We had a couple of chances, but couldn't get the hit when we needed it," said Sommers.

Avitable walked and Rachel Papile beat out a bunt to start the fifth, but Lannon ended the threat with a pair of strikeouts. In the sixth Parry walked and sophomore Emma Kelly beat out an infield hit, but Lannon escaped on a two-out popup.

"I think the key is get more hits early in the game. That will build their confidence," said Sommers.

McMahon had a pair of hits for the Presidents while Devon Varmahmoodi, Papile and Kelly added a hit apiece.

Quincy finished the week 2-4 and will host Scituate Wednesday, May 1 at 4 p.m.

Presidents Edge W-H In Extra Innings, 5-4

*Paulo Scores On Wild Pitch In 8th Inning
After Marsinelli RBI Single Ties Game In 7th*

By BILL GRIFFIN

The richly-deserved win was earned by a clutch single when Quincy was down to its final out, two innings of shutdown relief pitching and a wee bit of luck in extra innings.

Junior catcher Johnny Marsinelli tied the game with a two-out single in the seventh, Ken Sorenson made the comeback possible with two clean innings of relief, and Greg Paulo scored the winning run on a wild pitch to give the Presidents an exciting 5-4 victory in eight innings over Whitman-Hanson in a Patriot League game played at Adams Field Monday.

"It wasn't a perfect game, but what I liked best was that we battled. We didn't have the best luck early in the game, but the kids hung in there and came back," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan.

Quincy trailed, 4-3 entering the seventh. Pdraig Geaney worked a walk to start it. Tyler Beach bunted him to second and with two outs Brayan had the guy he wanted, Marsinelli, at the plate in the big moment when the game was to be decided.

"He's the guy you want up," said Bryan. "He's good in big situations and he puts his bat on the ball."

Marsinelli, who entered the game hitting over .500, took a one-strike fastball on the outside corner, drove it over a leaping shortstop (Shane Devlin), and Beach raced around with the tying run. Two outs, down by a run, bottom of the seventh, and the hitter delivers a line-drive single. Not bad. Not bad at all.

"Tyler's sacrifice was a big play," said Marsinelli. "I was just looking for a pitch I could get into the outfield. I like fastballs and I like the ball away. That's what I got. I thought he (the shortstop) was going to catch it for a second."

Matt Davis started the winning rally with a single. Paulo reached on a fielders choice and made the winning trip around the bases on three wild pitches. It was good fortune, but in the sixth Quincy hit into terrible luck which shut down what would have been a huge inning. Things do even out.

"Give Matt Davis credit for starting the rally," said Bryan. "He struggled early, but I had him lay down a bunt and sometimes that gets you out of a slump. He hit that single hard."

Sorenson retired six of the seven that he faced and the only batter to reach took first on a wild pitch on a swinging third strike. He threw strikes. He mixed a wide good assortment of stuff from a variety of angles and had the Panthers swinging a instant late or an instant early.

"He has good control and he gives them a different look," said Bryan.

Righthander Dillon Darcy had his second straight strong start. He gave seven hits, three earned runs, struck out three and walked just one. He hit his spots with his fastball and mixed in a good curve. He pitched well enough to win most games.

"We made a couple of mistakes behind him that we need to clean up, but he threw well again," said Bryan.

Quincy hit the ball. The Presidents had 11 hits. They were led by Robbie Munroe who had three hits, including two booming doubles, and drove in two runs. Marsinelli and Davis each had a pair of hits while Beach, Paulo, Mike Pugsley and Mike Carnavale had single hits. The keys were Davis and Munroe in the middle of the order. They combined for five hits, two RBI and a run scored.

"Marsinelli is going to do what he does and get his hits, but Davis and Munroe have to hit for us to win and they hit the ball hard today," said Bryan.

Marsinelli also had a fine defensive game behind the plate. In the fifth, he pounced on a swinging bunt which dribbled in front of the plate and threw a strike for the out at first. In the same inning, he stayed with a tough wind-blown popup which floated directly into the sun for an out.

"The play on the tapper was a big play and there are no easy popups with the wind we had today," said Bryan.

W-H carried a 4-1 lead into the sixth. Munroe had doubled in Paulo in the second for Quincy's run. In the sixth, Quincy loaded the bases on singles by Carnavale, Marsinelli and Davis. Paulo then hit a laser shot which went directly to Devlin at short who turned it into a double play. A batter cannot hit a ball harder and it turned into two outs.

To its credit, Quincy didn't give in. Munroe and Pugsley singled for runs to cut it to 4-3 and set the scene for Marsinelli and his drama in the seventh. However, if Paulo's drive is a foot in either direction, Quincy might still be batting.

"I was wondering after that one too. It could have been a big inning for us," said Bryan.

In action last week, Hanover stopped Quincy, 6-1. Darcy pitched six solid innings, giving just one earned run. Paulo had a double and a walk while Beach and Davis had singles. Alex Heffernan drove in the Quincy run with a fielders choice.

Duxbury edged Quincy, 3-2. The difference was a squeeze bunt in the fourth which produced two runs for the Dragons. Munroe, Pugsley, Tom Hannigan, and Geaney bunched singles in the fourth for Quincy's runs. Geaney had two hits in the game while Marsinelli added one. John Leveile and Sorenson combined for a strong pitching performance.

Middleboro stopped the Presidents, 6-3. Beach had a double, single and a walk for Quincy. Davis had a single and a walk while Marsinelli added a single. Paulo, Chris McMahon and Mike Saccoch shared the pitching for Quincy.

Quincy is 3-6 and will host Pembroke Friday at 4 p.m.

North Quincy Rebounds With Win Over Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was the perfect day for a big first inning, a smart pitcher who knew what to do with a big lead and an outfield that could range far and deep to haul in fly balls.

North Quincy stung line drives all over the field in a six-run first and Andrew Currie spun a crafty four-hitters to help the Red Raiders rebound from a brutal loss with a 6-2 win over Pembroke in a Patriot League contest last week at O'Rourke Field.

The win was a testament to the experience and resilience of a veteran team as much as it was to baseball ability. In its previous game, North held a 4-1 lead with two outs and an 0-2 count on the batter in the seventh inning only to see Whitman-Hanson push across five runs for a wrenching 6-4 defeat. A lesser team might have dwelt on the loss. North answered with six in the first.

"It was great to see the big first inning. We made a statement," said coach Dan McHugh. "We talked a lot about not dwelling on the game, learning from it and moving forward."

There was nothing mysterious about the fast start. North hit everything hard, rapping out four hits, belting a deep sacrifice fly, stealing a base and earning a walk. The Red Raiders sent ten batters to the plate. Even the outs were hit hard. There would be no spillover from Whitman-Hanson.

"I thought we came out with a purpose in the first," said McHugh.

Pat Gould lined a singled, Pat Verhault ripped a double to left center and Josh Hayward worked a walk to load the bases. Nick McGaughey beat out an infield hit for a run. A wild pitch scored another and a Currie ground ball made it 3-0. Danny Gould lifted a sacrifice fly and Brendan Therrien laced a single for a 5-0 lead. An error made it 6-0 and Currie had enough to put the pitching on cruise control.

"I liked the balance. From the top to the bottom of the order, everybody hit the ball in the first," said McHugh.

Currie knew what to do with the big lead. The junior lefty threw strikes, pitched to contact, walked just one batter and let his defense help him, especially his swift outfield which ran down seven fly balls for outs. He saved his strikeout pitch for when he needed it. He had two strikeouts, one to escape a second-and-third jam in the third and the second to finish the game and end any lingering doubts about seventh-inning problems.

"He's so smart," said McHugh. "He changes speeds and he knows his defense will help him. He knows he can throw strikes because if they hit the ball, his defense can go get it for him."

His fastball was good, his curveball was better and he kept his breaking ball low in the strike zone. When he went with the high fastball, Pembroke hit fly balls and North caught them.

"I thought his best pitch today was the curveball. He had them off balance with it," said McHugh.

The defense was not flawless as it was in the vacation-week tourney, but it was excellent, a perfect partner for Currie in protecting the big lead. Sophomore left fielder Brian Turner went back twice for running grabs on the most difficult chance an outfielder can have — the ball hit directly over his head. Danny Gould made two difficult plays in the gap look easy with his speed and jump on the ball. Scott Higgins was solid in right.

"Those were difficult plays Turner had and Danny has such great vision and range," said McHugh.

McGaughey handled

a hot shot at third in the second. Verhault made a big-time play in the hole at short in the sixth. Shawn Grady went far to his right for a ground ball in the fifth, and Hayward had two fine scoops at first.

"Hayward made two big plays when we needed them which saved errors at first," said McHugh.

McGaughey, Therrien and Verhault each had two hits for North. All three drilled the ball, but McGaughey, in particular, continued to hit nothing but line drives. He is that big thumper all teams love in the middle of their lineup. Unfortunately, he aggravated a shoulder injury and had to leave in the third.

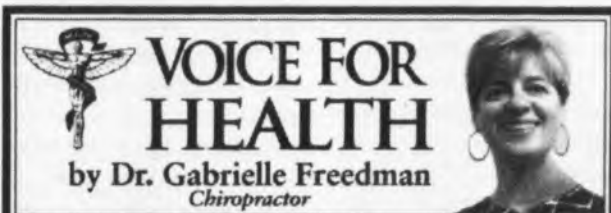

"He's had the injury before. He knew what to do, he knew he had to come out right away," said McHugh.

The Titans' Kevin Jones settled in with a nice curveball after the first and blanked the Red Raiders the rest of the way. Pembroke scored singletons in the fifth and seventh. The Titans had a runner on second in the seventh with one out, but Currie ended it with a fly-ball and a strikeout.

"After Whitman-Hanson, we talked about finishing games," said McHugh.

Turner pitched his second strong game of the season against W-H before mistakes cost North in the seventh. McGaughey and Grady each had a hit and an RBI. Pat Gould, Verhault, Turner and Mike Alibrandi added hits for North.

"Turner pitched a gem. His ERA was under 1.00 for his first two starts," said McHugh.

HOW SLEEPING POSITION AFFECTS HEALTH

By habitually sleeping in positions that exacerbate certain types of pain and medical conditions, individuals may not be getting the rejuvenating rest they need at night. For instance, while sleeping on one's back may make digestive and respiratory (snoring) problems worse, it may prove beneficial for those with back pain. As a general rule, people with back problems are advised to sleep on their backs so that their spines are aligned as if they were standing straight. At the same time, back sleepers should avoid overly plump pillows that thrust their heads forward and soft mattresses that cause their spines to bend backward. The chiropractor can offer as much advice about proper sleeping position as proper posture.

Are you getting the correct rest when you sleep? Chiropractic is the health care profession that focuses on disorders of the muscu-loskeletal system and the nervous system, as well as the effects of these disorders on general health. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we may be able to help you and your family feel better naturally, without resorting to the use of drugs or surgery. We're currently accepting new patients, and welcome you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Ask Dr. Freedman how to reduce snoring! With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Those suffering from lumbar spinal stenosis may want to sleep with a pillow beneath their knees (while on their backs) or in a fetal position (while on their sides) to open spaces in their spines.

NQ Boys' Volleyball Rallies To Defeat New Bedford

By JEFF OHLSON

North Quincy (10-0) came into Monday night's boys' volleyball match undefeated and they would leave that way as they defeated New Bedford 3-2, but New Bedford gave the Red Raiders a serious run at their unbeaten streak.

After losing the first game of the series, North Quincy found themselves in a very unfamiliar position. The Raiders would rally in the second game though, showing fans the team that they knew from a 9-0 start to the season after a 15-1 campaign last year. With game 2 tied 15-15, the Raiders went on a monster 10-2 run that included three points by Andrew Sok who played well in the whole series.

North Quincy head coach Jason Cai loves having Sok out there.

"He's a driving force for us, when he's going well out there, everyone kind of falls into place and gets comfortable. It's a great thing to have leaders like that and it makes my job easier as a coach," Cai said.

North Quincy has five seniors on the team: Felix Man, Mike Tran, Matt MacPhail, Andrew Sok and Sebastien Francois — and all five are co-captains.

"Senior leadership is just so important, and we're very lucky to be able to throw those five guys out there on the court and know that they are going to do the right thing and make plays. Not only will they make plays, but they can also pick each other up and help each other get through tough stretches. It's a huge advantage for us against any team we play," Cai said.

North Quincy also dominated the third game of the series as the Raiders used a 12-5 run to go up 24-14. During the 12-5 run, Matt MacPhail was key as he had 4 points and Sebastien Francois was also solid with 5 points and some massive spikes. The Raiders would take the third game 25-17.

In the fourth game, however, New Bedford got off to a really strong start and kept North off balance en route to a series extending win, ANDREW SOK and the North Quincy boys' volleyball team rallied to defeat New Bedford 3-2 Monday. With the victory, the Red Raiders have won 10 straight matches this season.

25-22.

"I think we were just a little tired out there, just a little off. The guys have had a few days off this past weekend and we looked a little rusty at times," Cai said. "We would definitely like to come out sharper next game and that's probably more on par with what we're used to seeing from our team. The communication was really off at points tonight and usually that's one of our strengths."

The fifth game of the series in volleyball is different than the first four as it acts as overtime. The teams play to a score of 15 instead of 25 and they switch sides at the first team to 8 instead of staying on the same side all game.

In the fifth game, the Red Raiders came out really strong and jumped to a 12-5 lead and were led by Matt MacPhail who had three straight aces at one point and a ferocious spike to end the contest at 15-6. Francois also played extremely well in the final game with several blocks and a few spikes for a total of 5 points.

"I think we woke up at the end there and really showed how good we are and can be. It was an inconsistent effort tonight, but a win is a win," Cai said.

As for remaining undefeated, Coach Cai doesn't see a lot of value in number of wins if they don't translate to postseason success.

"Who cares really? If we don't do anything after the regular season then it doesn't mean anything. Postseason wins are all that matter at the end of the day and I don't think anyone remembers that you went undefeated during the regular season if you can't close out in the post season," Cai said.

Red Raiders Bow To Boxers

By JEFF OHLSON

North Quincy baseball lost to Brockton Saturday, 8-3 and did so by playing a sloppy game in the field and not being able to capitalize on opportunities at the plate. North Quincy coach Dan McHugh was clearly disappointed with the game his team played.

"It's not how you wanna go out and play the game. It's just not what you practice for, it's not what I as a coach want to see, and I'm sure it's not how the players want to perform. Just all around, not our best game, we left a lot of opportunities out on the bases when we were at the plate and we gave Brockton a lot more chances to hurt us than you ever really want to give a team," McHugh said.

For the Raiders, Dan Gould was a main spark offensively as he was 1 for 2 with a double and a walk. Cole Barrett pitched well but just couldn't catch any breaks on the mound. Barrett pitched the whole game, surrendering eight runs to Brockton, but only half of the runs were earned.

McHugh said the effort from Barrett kept North Quincy in the game.

"He pitched and it wasn't always there behind him but he kept going and for the most part kept us within striking distance despite everything going wrong," McHugh said.

North scored two of its three runs in the first inning on the strength of a Pat Gould single followed by a Pat Verhault single to bring Gould home. Mike Alibrandi then singled later in the inning to bring home Verhault. North Quincy scored their third run in the third inning when Nick McGaughey singled and was brought home by consecutive groundouts.

Brockton scored a run in every inning after the Boxers went down in order in the first and didn't fail to score again until the seventh when the game was already in control. Brockton scored three runs in the fifth to put the game away.

The loss for North Quincy comes after a defeat at the hands of Hingham High School on Friday night, 2-0. Josh Hayward pitched very well for the Raiders giving up only two runs.

"Josh pitched very well. It was just one of those games where you leave a few guys on base and you really don't get a chance to make up for it later in the game. Hingham had a great kid on the mound and he really kept the offense quiet," McHugh said.

North Quincy traveled to Hanover Monday, hosted Silver Lake Wednesday at 4 p.m., visits Middleboro today (Thursday) and hosts Hanover next Monday, May 6 at 4 p.m.

Sarah Norton: Greyhound Advocate

Quincy Resident Adopts, Promotes Breed

By EMILY TAFT

Fourteen years ago, Quincy resident Sarah Norton adopted her first dog, and first greyhound. Since then she has adopted nothing but the breed and has even become an advocate for them.

"I just fell in love with the breed, and really couldn't get enough," said Norton. "When I first learned about them I was so impressed that I felt like the world just needs to know about them and what fantastic pets they make."

Norton, a board member of the Greyhound Project, helps promote April as National Adopt a Greyhound month. The Greyhound Project is a volunteer, non-profit organization that promotes the welfare and adoption of greyhounds.

"For many years, the Greyhound Project sponsored an annual gathering of thousands of greyhounds in Delaware," said Norton. "I attended in 1999 and was amazed that something that fun and that big could exist and I had never heard of it, so I volunteered to do some PR (public relations) for them and shortly thereafter they invited me to join the board."

"We just try to raise awareness and help them (adoption groups) get more dogs adopted. It really has caught on. A lot of adoption groups have been getting a lot of PR around the country. It's a good time to get out and meet greyhounds. Spring is a good time to adopt a dog in general because you are able to spend time out doors and bond over the summer," Norton added.

The Greyhound Project helps greyhound groups around the nation, including local adoption agencies, Greyhound Pets of America in Middleboro, Greyhound

Adoption Services in Salisbury, and Greyhound Friend in Hopkinton. The project started after greyhound-racing tracks began closing leaving many without homes.

"It's an absolutely beautiful sport to watch, but it is also a fairly controversial sport. I use to be pretty avidly into racing and I am now a fan of racing when it is done right," said Norton.

"They start training to race when they are 18 months old and then they race from the age two and have to retire before they turn six. The problem now that exists is there are too many dogs for the number of homes, and that's really the reason the Greyhound Project exists and it's why we created National Adopt A Greyhound month, back in 2009, just to raise awareness about what fantastic pets they make."

"All the tracks in New England have closed, but there are many tracks in the South and the biggest problem is getting the dogs up here and into groups, but there are plenty of dogs available for people looking for greyhounds."

Norton said greyhounds make wonderful pets and are big "couch potatoes," but they aren't for everyone.

"They are wonderful, wonderful pets. They are incredibly lazy, they prefer a couch but they will take whatever they can get, and they have no idea how big they are, and they are very affectionate," said Norton.

"A lot of people assume they are hyper because of the racing background, but they are the opposite. They're sprinters, they're not endurance dogs so a little bit of exercise and they are out."

"There are people who like to let their dogs off-leash and this is not that kind of dog. Unless you have a completely fenced in area they really can't be let off-leash. Greyhounds aren't one of those dogs that find their way home, so they really need to be on a leash."

Eleven racing tracks have closed around the nation within the last three years because of legislative initiatives and the economy, and 13 more will be closing in Florida pending legislation, leaving as many as 1,000 dogs at every track looking for new homes.

In addition, there are greyhounds that have retired from still active tracks around the country looking for homes. For more information and a list of adoption centers visit www.adopt-a-greyhound.org.

"It would be wonderful if there were enough homes available for all retiring greyhounds and adoption groups were no longer needed," said Norton. "In the meantime, my hope is that people are generous in their efforts to assist the more than 300 groups in Massachusetts and across the country."

On Tuesday, April 23, at approximately 3:30 a.m., Officer Ed Bagley was dispatched to a "Breaking and Entering in progress" at an address in Germantown. As he and other Officers responded to the location of the incident, Quincy Police Communications broadcast that the suspects involved just fled the location in a white motor vehicle.

As Officer Bagley neared Quarterdeck Road, he observed a white sedan, with four occupants, leaving the area. The Officer turned around and began following the vehicle as he ascertained more information about the incident.

It was then learned that one of the suspects involved in the Break And Entering had confronted a person living in the home, told them that he had a gun and was going to shoot someone. Officer Bagley had reason to believe that this could be the vehicle due to the lack of traffic at the hour and that the vehicle met the description, so he chose a well lit area and with the assistance of other Officers, stopped the suspect vehicle on Palmer Street at Sea Street.

Officer Bagley ordered the driver of the vehicle to shut the vehicle off and remove the vehicle keys. Due to concerns about shooting someone, all persons in the vehicle were ordered to put their hands on their head. Each suspect was then removed individually. The four male occupants were removed, searched and secured in the rear seats of Quincy Police cruisers for Officer safety. Once the occupants of the vehicle were secured, the vehicle was searched for a potential Firearm, but no weapons were found.

Officers searching the vehicle did notice in plain view in the rear passengers seat a silver lug nut Wrench. At this time, Lieutenant Robert Gillan and his K-9 partner arrived on location. This particular K-9 is trained in searching for firearms. The K-9 reacted positively to the trunk area of the vehicle; however no firearm was located in the trunk. Once the vehicle was searched and the suspects in this incident were secured, Officers went to the location of the incident and found a broken front facing screen and window. Officers also noticed windows in the rear of the unit had been smashed out along with the rear door and window being shattered.

Officers spoke to the tenant who said that she was asleep with her two small children when she was awakened by a loud bang at the front of the home. She said that she started to go down stairs when she heard the shattering of glass in the rear of the apartment. She looked around the corner into the kitchen and first saw glass all over the floor. She then saw four males unknown to her in her kitchen. She then stated that the males, upon seeing her, fled out to the rear parking area and entered a White Toyota sedan.

Officers then interviewed the victim's boyfriend, who said that he came down to the kitchen too and saw the four males. He said that he attempted to confront them, but one of the males claimed to have a gun so he backed off. Officers then interviewed a neighbor who confirmed hearing the bang and shatter noise. He said that he looked out and saw the four males throwing rocks and bricks at the house. He observed the males enter the back door/kitchen area briefly, then heard one of the males yell, "Hey Igor - lets get out of here."

He said there was a brief verbal exchange between the suspects and a male who resides in the apartment, but this ended abruptly when one of the suspects yelled, "I have a Gun." The suspects then drove off.

Based on the information from the witness and the victims, Officer Bagley placed the four suspects under arrest for "Burglary, Possession of Burglary Tools and Malicious Destruction to a Dwelling." The Silver Lug Nut Wrench that was located in the rear seat of the vehicle was taken into evidence as a Burglary tool and placed into evidence. The suspects, ranging in age from 19 to 23, were from Framingham and Marlboro.

Early indications were that this was not a random crime. Nice Work!

RULES OF THE ROAD Parking Regulations

Parking regulations are generally determined by state law. They are enforced by local cities and towns.

If you park in a business or residential district, your vehicle must be no more than 12 inches from the curb. The only exception is if angled parking is allowed.

Parking spaces are often marked by white road lines. You must park your vehicle between these lines. You may not take part of two spaces.

In Massachusetts, you may not park your vehicle in certain places.

- In a zone posted with a NO PARKING, NO STOPPING, or NO STANDING sign
- In a bus stop (as of April 2009, the penalty for parking in a posted bus stop is $100)
- In a taxi stand
- In a zone and at a time posted for street cleaning
- In a posted loading zone
- Within 20 feet of an intersection
- In a crosswalk, in front of a driveway, or in front of a handicap-access ramp
- In a zone posted for HP-DV parking only (unless you have disabled person plates or placards, or disabled veteran plates). The fine for a first offense is $300. The fine for wrongful use of a disabled person or veteran plate or placard is a minimum of $500.

The steps in parallel parking:

- Within ten feet of a fire hydrant or fire lane
- On a sidewalk, curb, center traffic island, or median
- During a weather or roadway emergency
- Facing the wrong way against traffic
- On a state or an interstate highway, unless authorized
- On the Massachusetts Turnpike (fines range from $15 - $100)
- On a roadway in a rural area or outside a thickly settled district
- In a traffic lane next to a row of parked vehicles ("double parked")
- To make nonemergency repairs to your vehicle

You may get a citation with a fine for violating a parking regulation. The fines for most of the violations listed above are set by city or town ordinance and will vary depending on the city or town.

Unpaid parking tickets can stop you from renewing your license or vehicle registration.

Wood Deck Stain Vs. Water Seal

THIS IS A HAMMER
By Samantha Mazzotta

Q: The house I just bought has a wooden deck in the back that has turned gray over the years. It's otherwise structurally sound. My question is, should I seal the deck against further water damage, or just stain it to the color I want and not worry about sealing it? -- Judy H., Waycross, Ga.

A: It's really up to you. Just staining the deck will give you the color you want, although in high-traffic areas the stain could wear away quickly. Many deck companies recommend using a combination stain/sealer product, which is basically a sealer with pigment added. The advantage of this, they say, is the sealer provides additional protection against water and weather damage, while the stain helps reduce fading from UV rays.

Sealers should last at least a year, with some lasting up to three years. You have a choice of either water-based or oil-based sealer; many professionals recommend oil-based products, which last longer.

Since you've just purchased the house and might not know when the deck was last maintained, consider having a professional deck contractor inspect it. Find out if there are any hidden issues, whether the deck needs maintenance prior to staining or sealing it. The deck will likely need to be cleaned and may need to be sanded and pressure-washed prior to sealing or staining.

Once you've inspected and cleaned the deck, you can apply a stain or sealer (or both). If you decide to stain, pick a few sample colors that are a few shades darker or lighter than the shade you want. This is because different types of deck wood can cause the color of the stain to appear different from the swatch color. Test each sample in an inconspicuous place and pick the best color for your wood.

Apply the stain or sealer on a dry day when the temperature is above 50 degrees F. Don't apply it in direct sunlight. Ideally, two dry days will help the stain or sealer dry completely and evenly, so check the weather forecast and plan accordingly.

Stir the sealer (don't shake it -- bubbles will form in it) or stain and apply a thin coat to a couple of boards at a time using a long-handled paint roller. Don't overapply -- the finish will not dry correctly and will feel tacky for days, at least.

If the finish puddles up, use another roller or a broom to spread out the puddles. To stain or seal corners, use a paintbrush. If you feel a second coat is needed, apply it in the same way, very thinly. Let the finish dry for at least 24 hours.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking advice isn't always easy for self-assured Rams and Ewes who think they know what's best. But it wouldn't hurt to listen to what close colleagues have to say.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You know how to balance life's practical aspects with the poetic. This gives you a special edge this week in both your professional endeavors and your personal life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Focus on keeping a balance between your home-related activities and your workplace responsibilities. Be mindful of both without obsessing over one or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans is likely as you discover more facts about a possible commitment. Continue to ask questions and, if you're not sure about the answers, demand proof.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be careful not to let that Leonine pride keep you from seeking wise, experienced counsel before making an important decision. A family member once again seeks your help.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That surge of Virgo energy drives you to take on more work assignments. Be careful you don't overdo it, or you might find yourself overdone: i.e., burned out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your decision to be upfront with colleagues on a touchy matter causes some consternation at first. But in the end, your honesty wins their trust and admiration.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) As in the past, someone again wants to share a secret with you, knowing it will be safe. But do you really want to be this person's confidante? Think about it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As one of nature's straight shooters, you seek to correct misconceptions about a project. Do so, of course, but without giving away too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative pursuits continue to be strong in the gifted Goat's aspect. New friendships can come from sharing these experiences with like-minded art aficionados.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolve lingering grumblings over your way of doing things by keeping your mind open to suggestions while continuing to show how your plans will work.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The perceptive Piscean might find that changing course in midstream isn't as workable as it would seem. Explore this option carefully before making a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to share your love of life's good things brings joy to many, including, of course, yourself.

Howard E. Kavanaugh, 77

Retired Warehouse Manager

By LAURA GRIFFIN

At the services held Monday for Howard Kavanaugh, friends and family remembered the man who devoted his life to his church and to the wonderful family he raised during his 50 years living in Quincy.

Few spoke of him, though, without recalling his lifelong passion for sports and the miles and miles of daily walks that made him a familiar sight in every corner of the city. In fact he was so well known that local candidates would offer him their campaign t-shirts during election season.

"I'll miss seeing him walking around Quincy," wrote one visitor to his guest-book while another said, "You are probably already walking laps in heaven..."

Howie, as he was known, was just short of reaching his 50,000-mile goal when he died April 24 at Quincy Medical Center. In recent months, he'd been recovering from injuries after being struck by an automobile in Wollaston and was unable to resume his 8-10 mile daily walks.

"Sorry, he never made his 50,000 walking goal, but he can finish up in heaven," wrote a friend. Those walks took him to every street in the city as well as stops at nursing or local homes as he never forgot sick friends.

Few followed sports, especially basketball and track, as closely as Howie or could match his mental file of statistics that went back 60 years. No season was more delightful for him than March Madness.

Howie was much more than his walking or his sports as he and his late wife Joan were active parishioners at St. Mary's Church, West Quincy where his services were held this week. He rarely missed his Monday duties helping at the rectory and, despite being sick, volunteered to prepare the church this past Holy Week.

For many, he set an example for fatherhood. In his early years, he worked two jobs but always had time for his children's events and in recent years, he rarely

HOWARD E. KAVANAUGH missed his grandsons' football games.

In January, Howie lost his beloved wife of 52 years, Joan (Holbrow) Kavanaugh. Since that loss, he often spoke of the emptiness after her death. A friend described how tears came to his eyes recently when he recalled how he and Joan so enjoyed their last movie together, "Water for Elephants."

The oldest of 13 children of the late Patrick and Elizabeth, Howie took his leadership role seriously. In the 1958 through 1960, he served in the Armed Forces in Puerto Rico. A former warehouse manager for Crimson Tech, Howie retired in 2001.

He leaves four children, John and his wife Carolyn Kavanaugh of Glen Ellyn, IL, Donna and her husband Brian Dennehey of Weymouth, Carolyn and her husband Steven O'Neil of Reading and LTCMDR Michael Kavanaugh M.D., U.S.N. and his wife Roberta of La Mesa, CA. and his grandchildren, Patrick, Christopher, Ryan, Timothy, Nicholas, Jill, Grace and Maggie.

Howie was the brother of Robert and his wife Claire, Kenneth and his wife Mary, Paul and his late wife Claudia, Edward "Ted" and his wife Kathleen, Douglas, Patricia Melvin, Elaine and her husband Michael Lang, Marie and her husband Frederick Bolwell, Carol Kavanaugh, Stephen and his wife Mary, Kevin and his wife Susan and John and his wife Patricia.

The Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated in Saint Mary's Church, 95 Crescent St., West Quincy, Monday. Services were arranged by Dolan Funeral Home, 460 Granite Avenue, East Milton. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Identity Theft: It's No Joke

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Identity theft is no joking matter. Identity thieves victimize millions of people each year.

Identity thieves have some sly tricks to obtain your personal information. They do it by:

- Stealing wallets, purses, and your mail;
- Posing by phone or email as someone who legitimately needs information about you, such as employers or landlords;
- Stealing personal information you provide to an unsecured site on the Internet, from business or personnel records at work, and personal information in your home; or
- Rummaging through your trash, the trash of businesses, and public trash dumps for personal data.

Don't be fooled by identity thieves; take the proper precautions. Be sure to safeguard your personal information, such as your Social Security number and mother's maiden name. If an identity thief scores this information, it could result in more than monetary loss for you as a victim—it also can hurt your credit score and record.

You can help protect yourself by not carrying your Social Security card with you and not providing your personal information to unknown sources over the Internet or by phone. Be sure to shred any documents, bills, or paperwork before you throw them away. Most important, never reply to an email claiming to be from Social Security that asks you for your Social Security number or other personal information. If you are contacted by someone claiming to be from Social Security and you have doubts about the validity of the caller, you can call us at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778).

If you think you've been the victim of identity theft, you should contact the Federal Trade Commission at 1-877-IDTHEFT (1-877-438-4338); TTY 1-866-653-4261. Or go to www.idtheft.gov and click on the link for "Report Identity Theft."

laid down their life so that my daughter could be born into the freest nation – into the beacon of hope and democracy in this world.

"And I thank him for that and I thank all of you for being here to dedicate this memorial so that we never forget the sacrifice he made."

The final dedication took place at 83 Safford Street. The square there was dedicated to Marine Corps Lance Cpl. David Owen Sullivan. He was killed on Feb. 14, 1969 during action near Unninghat Fire Support Base close to Vietnam's border with Laos. Sullivan's two sisters – Diane Leach and Patricia Sullivan – both spoke at the dedication. Leach remembered telling her classmates about her brother, and how they would simply walk away when they found out he was killed in Vietnam.

"I'm older now and I have something to say. No one who dies for what they believe – especially when they die protecting other people – dies in vain. I don't care what your politics are or what your religious beliefs are – that's not a death for no purpose," Leach said. "He didn't die in vain."

Sullivan said her brother, the youngest of the three, always looked out for his sisters growing up.

"He was always pulling me out of whatever fire or trouble I got into. Many times he'd say to my mother 'no mom I did that. Patty can't take being punished but it's okay I'll do it for her.' He was my champion, even as a little kid," Sullivan said.

Only 20 years old when he was killed, Sullivan was posthumously awarded a Silver Star by for the actions that led to his death. Sullivan threw a grenade into a machine gun nest occupied by four North Vietnamese soldiers. The grenade killed two of the soldiers and the other two ran away. Sullivan chased and killed them both, before he was mortally wounded by sniper fire.

Rep. Bruce Ayers said the courage Sullivan showed that day was truly remarkable.

"Lance Cpl. Sullivan was decorated with a Silver Star for his service. This medal symbolizes his courageousness. To have courage in the face of danger, defending something not only for one self, but for an entire nation is truly remarkable," Ayers said.

Sullivan enlisted in the Marines despite having contracted polio in his right leg when he was younger. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said Sullivan showed the same indomitable spirit in overcoming his polio that he later showed on the battlefield halfway across the world.

"He demonstrated an indomitable spirit in the face of the challenge that that presented," Coughlin said. "He continued to exemplify that spirit on the battlefield where he fought shoulder-to-shoulder with his brothers in arms against the proliferation of communism, a system structured on principles that are clearly antithetical to the principles we as Americans hold dear and that our nation was founded on."

FY14 Spending Plan Calls For $9M More In Education, Public Safety, Infrastructure

Koch $257.81M

Budget Up 4.4%

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Tom Koch's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year would increase city spending by 4.4 percent—an increase that would allow the city to hire more teachers and police officers and is projected to cost the average homeowner less than $100 on next year's tax bills.

The mayor presented his budget for FY14, which begins July 1, to the City Council Monday night. It calls for spending a total of $257.81 million, compared to the $246.96 million FY13 budget. Koch said the goal of the budget was to promote stability and make up for budget cuts that occurred in the wake of the recession that started in 2008.

"It's a budget that creates stability government-wide and it continues restoration from those budget cutting years during our recession period. There are some increases in various areas that bring us back—not fully—but bring us back to certain levels," Koch said.

Most of the proposed increased, nearly $9 million, would go to three core areas Koch identified—public education, public safety, and public infrastructure.

Tree Planted In Memory Of Student Who Lost 5-Year Battle With Leukemia

'Abby' Ochieng Remembered At Merrymount School

By EMILY TAFT

Teachers and students of the Merrymount School held a tree planting ceremony on April 26th in memory of student Absalom "Abby" Ochieng who lost a courageous five-year battle with leukemia.

"He was a really special boy, he fit right in and was always smiling and upbeat. He touched everyone and became a part of our school so quickly," said Kate Baldwin, a Merrymount third grade teacher and organizer of the tree planting. "We wanted to find a way to remember him and planting a tree was the best way."

Ochieng and his family moved to Quincy from Kenya when he was eight years old. He got sick in fifth grade and went into remission allowing him to go on to attend Central Middle School and Quincy High School

65 Police Marathon Bombing Responders Recognized

At Quincy Law Day Ceremonies

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sixty-five police officers from Quincy and elsewhere on the South Shore were recognized for responding to the Boston Marathon bombing and its aftermath during Quincy District Court's Law Day.

Among those honored were 15 members of the Quincy Police Department – Lt. Thomas Corliss, Lt. Robert Gillan and K9 Roman, Det. William Ward, and Officers James Bordan, Paul Brown, David Cooper and K9 Deco, Paul Foley and K9 Rex, Thomas Ford, James Greene, Edward J. Hartnett III, Christopher McDermott and K9 Tucker, Michael O'Brien, William Plant, James Silcox, and Scott Smith. The court also recognized officers from the Braintree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Milton, Weymouth, and Randolph Police Departments and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department. In addition to the police officers, 74 Fallon Ambulance employees were also acknowledged for their efforts.

First Justice Mark S. Coven noted that the court had previously honored victims of the attack by holding a moment of silence on April 22, one week after the bombing happened. On Law Day, the court chose to honor first responders from communities within its jurisdiction, who Coven felt hadn't been recognized enough.

"Two weeks ago at the request of Gov. Patrick we at the Quincy District Court – in every courtroom, in every office, and every lobby in the courthouse – rose as one in a moment of silence as a tribute to those people who were killed and injured at the Boston Marathon," Coven said. "Today we seek to honor those people who put their lives at risk responding to that great tragedy."

"What has not been reported, or at least adequately reported, was the number of men and women from the South Shore communities who joined their brother and sister responders in the City of Boston, the Town of Watertown, and the City of Cambridge to seek out the perpetrators of the great violence our cities endured."

Coven added that Law Day was an appropriate day to recognize the first responders, because of how

SIXTY-FIVE police officers from the Norfolk County communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Holbrook, Milton, Quincy, Randolph, and Weymouth and the county sheriff's office who responded to the Boston Marathon bombing and its aftermath were recognized during Law Day at Quincy District Court on much value is attached to the law in Massachusetts and the nation.

"We thought it would be appropriate to recognize these people at our Law Day ceremony and it was appropriate to do at Law Day. Unlike the terrorists who would attack us, we are ruled by the laws of Commonwealth and the Constitution of the United States," Coven said. "We're also a nation of deep kindness and generosity and a country of great enduring spirit."

Following his benediction, Rabbi Mendel Gurkow of the Shalom House of Chabad of the South Area in Stoughton, reflected on the marathon bombing. He said responding with acts of kindness would help eradicate evil.

"It's been almost three weeks since our very core was shaken by the marathon bombing in Boston. I don't have to tell you how it impacted the city, the greater Commonwealth, and the greater country," Gurkow said. "We trust our finest – members of law enforcement and many agencies – to do their best to get to the bottom of this and avert any future attacks. But each one of us as individuals, we need to do our share. At a time of intense darkness and evil, we must respond with strong light. Every act of goodness and kindness does its magic to eradicate evil in this world."

The "Bully" Who Always Says, "YES!"

IBEW, Local 103, represents over 7,000 members in the Greater Boston area, each having his or her own interests, hobbies and life stories. Over the years, Local 103 has never turned down a request from the public for assistance. Whether providing use of our 20,000 square-foot function hall for a benefit fundraiser or community event, or for the use of our 300 square-foot, electronic billboard to promote a worthy cause, Local 103 has said, "YES!"

"Our community should congratulate members of Local 103 for volunteering their time and effort at the Germantown Neighborhood Center. When I see families showing up at the food bank in the early morning and children being sent off to camp its a credit to Local 103 for volunteering their expertise at a time when finances were tight."

- Leo Kelly, Former City Councillor
Ward 1, Quincy, MA

Over its 100-year history, Local 103 has woven itself into the fabric of Eastern Massachusetts, from raising millions for the Jimmy Fund and Dollars Against Diabetes, to building homes with Habitat for Humanity or by sending volunteers to Haiti to build a vital hospital; Local 103 has always said, "YES" to causes that benefit our community, especially its children. From coaching youth sports, to cleaning streets, rewiring homes, and improving fields and parks, Local 103's 400 Quincy families have always answered the call of civic duty. Below you will find a sample of the projects the "bully" Union has said "YES" to over the years. In particular, when the YMCA reached out to Local 103 regarding The Germantown Neighborhood Center, our volunteers said, "YES," and the work was done for nothing. In fact, former Business Manager of Local 103, Dick Monahan, received commendations in 2010 from both Mayor Koch and the South Shore YMCA for leading the volunteer effort.

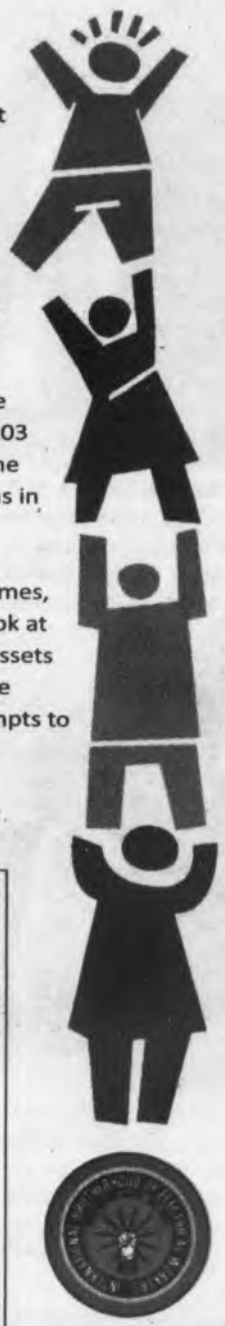

The South Shore YMCA touts itself as a partner within our community that relies on strong Christian values. However, in better economic times, and given the chance to hire those same Quincy workers it relied on so heavily in the past, the Y chose to abandon those values. A quick look at the Y's books (<http://www.guidestar.org>) provides a staggering look at Paul Gorman's overflowing YMCA coffers. The Y's documented net assets were in excess of $30 million in 2010 alone, while its gym memberships remain the highest in Quincy. These figures exemplify the difference between a truly dedicated community partner like Local 103 volunteers, and one, like the YMCA, more focused on its bottom line as it attempts to hide behind a lofty "mission" statement about social responsibility, while its supporters call people names.

Accusing Local 103 of bullying is a stale and tired ploy we've come to expect, but don't take my word for it. Look closely at Quincy's Athletic Teams and Boy Scout Troops this Spring; do you really think you'll see Paul Gorman, Callahan Construction, LT Development or Suburban Electric? You will be sure to see, however, the members of Local 103 coaching, teaching, cheering, or hanging scoreboards and mounting lights; the same members who also spend their paychecks dining at local restaurants and coffee shops. Take a moment to notice the "bully" who's making our community a better place for your children to live. And in the end, consider what motivation someone would have for trying to hang a moniker like "bully" on the electricians who always say, "YES!"

Local 103 IBEW is proud of its support for these local charities.

From installing the Quarry Hills scoreboards to helping with the Quarry Hills concession stand to sponsoring a team in the Babe Ruth division, the Local 103 IBEW has always been a tremendous supporter of our league. Thank you!!"

$1M Increase In Local Aid Expected

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy will likely receive a boost of at least $1 million in local aid from the state in the upcoming fiscal year, according to members of the city's Beacon Hill delegation.

The city is expected to receive a total $41.8 million in education and general government aid from the state in the current fiscal year, FY13, which ends June 30. That includes $23.6 for education and $18.2 million for general government.

That number would increase under both Gov. Deval Patrick's proposed plan and the budget approved by the House.

Gov. Patrick's FY14 plan would give the city approximately $45.1 million in those two categories — $26.4 million for education and $18.7 million in general government aid. The House approved a budget with less local aid than Patrick's proposal, but it would still represent an increase. The House's budget gives Quincy nearly $42.9 million total — $23.4 million for education and $18.7 million for general government aid.

The Senate will start working on its budget next week. Sen. John Keenan, speaking at Monday's City Council meeting, said the Senate's budget will likely match the House's local aid number, and possibly exceed it.

"It is unlikely, as was in the House, that the Senate will match the governor's number. It's our hope we'll at the very least do what the House did or maybe improve it, the goal being to do the best we can for municipalities — for police, for fire, for teachers and seniors and all those important local budget items," Keenan said.

Separate from education and general government local aid, Quincy is expected to receive more in Chapter 90 funds from the state, which goes towards road repairs. The city received $1.9 million in Chapter 90 money last year and used that money to repave 10 streets.

Both the House and Senate have approved increasing the amount of Chapter 90 funds available in FY14 to $300 million statewide, compared to Patrick's proposed statewide amount of $200 million. Under the House and Senate plans, Quincy would receive $2.9 million in Chapter 90 funds. It's unknown if the governor will approve the increase, but House Majority Leader Ron Mariano is confident the Legislature would override any veto.

"The governor may veto this," Mariano said. "He has said all along that there isn't enough money in our package to sustain the additional $100 million. He hasn't said anything about the Senate package, so we're hoping against hope he won't veto this. If he does I'm quite sure we'll override it but that sets back time to get this money out the door and it's a delay we would rather not have."

By EMILY TAFT

Three adults and one child were left temporarily homeless after a two-alarm fire at 91 Vassall St. in North Quincy early Tuesday morning. The fire caused over $200,000 in damage to the two-unit building, fire officials said.

According to Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth, the Fire Department received a 911 call around 3:20 a.m. Tuesday morning with a report of a tree fire. Quincy Police arrived on scene to find the top floor of the two-unit dwelling on fire.

"The fire started on the second floor porch and spread inside. We started fighting the fire on the first floor. The second floor and the attic are completely damaged, while the first floor, which had no occupants, has water damage," said Smyth. "The occupants were assisted out with the help of Quincy Police."

Smyth added that it took firefighters an hour and a half to knock down the heavy fire. One firefighter was treated for a shoulder injury and released and no other injuries were reported. The occupants, two elderly women, an adult male, and a child all lived on the second floor; the first floor was vacant according to Smyth.

An American Red Cross team is providing assistance and temporary housing for the four occupants.

Striding Towards Healing

They came from all over to run a road race.
To continue the healing.

And to try to resume some level of normalcy.

Some 1,200 runners took to the streets at Sunday's Quincy Half Marathon - 20 days after the Boston Marathon bombing tragedy that killed three victims near the finish line at Copley Square. The tragedy also claimed a fourth life several days later when the bombing suspects assassinated an MIT police officer.

By now, everyone knows the rest of the story and each "new development" in this terrorism incident is reported by TV, radio and daily newspapers.

If you've tired of hearing about the sheer horror of that day - and the degenerates responsible for it - then Sunday was for you.

For on this sunny and cool morning, it was all about running. And spectating. And enjoying freedom.

But it was also about bonding and showing support for the four killed and hundreds wounded by the bombing. Many runners wore t-shirts emblazoned with the message "Boston Strong" - two words that have united a city, state, region and nation in the aftermath of that horrible afternoon April 15.

Others chose to show their solidarity wearing Red Sox hats. At least one runner carried a small American flag in her hand all along the 13.1-mile route that meandered through city streets and concluded at the Faxon Field Track Facility on Coddington Street.

Runners crossing the finish line were met with cheers and applause.

Each one a winner - regardless of time - because each helps us heal.

Two runners who competed Sunday agreed that the events that occurred about seven miles from Quincy would not deter them from lacing up their sneakers.

And they had a message for anyone who is finding it difficult to cope with the Boston Marathon tragedy.

"You can't stay in bed all day, you have to get out," said Brendan Lynch of Dorchester. Lynch was the overall race winner crossing the finish line at 1:15:31.

"A lot of us committed to running this race in March and a lot of us thought we were going to defer (to next year) but ended up running it. You have to move on but you can't forget (the tragedy)."

Sarah Stirling of Weymouth finished second in the women's division with a time of 1:27:20.

She still finds it difficult to put into words feelings generated by the Boston Marathon bombing.

"It's unbelievable. There are no words to describe it nor explain it."

Sunday, Stirling said, illustrated one of the positive effects from Boston.

"It's getting more people to come out and understand the running community. It's not about winning or losing. It's about community and staying together and staying strong."

Stirling signed up for the race on Saturday. She was driven to run more so because of what had happened in Boston.

"It made me want to run more. I wear blue or yellow every time I go running because of that. It sounds silly but it helps. It's all about community."

Her message to those struggling to cope: "Get out there and run. There are people who can't do it so just do it. Walk or run but just do it for those people who can't and do it for yourself."

Lynch completed this year's Boston Marathon in 2 hours and 45 minutes - well before the finish line became a war zone.

"We were at the Park Plaza Hotel when the bombs went off. It was just horrible," he said.

Lynch lives less than a half mile from the family of Martin Richard. The handsome eight-year-old boy with an infectious smile was the youngest of the marathon victims. Lynch said he doesn't know the family personally but has probably seen them in the community.

"It's very sad. Running doesn't even matter to me anymore after this. Nothing matters," he said a few moments after crossing the finish line first Sunday. "You come out here and forget about that for a while but at the end of the day, all you see on the TV are these two scumbags who set off the bombs."

"Enough already. Let's raise some money for the One Fund and for the cause (to help the victims of the tragedy)."

The 35-year-old Lynch who has completed the Boston Marathon seven times says he's undeterred to make it eight next April. But it will be a while before he's emotionally ready for training again.

"There's a long way to go for the healing process but let's still run Boston. I think about Boston but as far as training for it will be a while before I do that."

The half marathon was almost a "hometown" race for Lynch since he trains a lot running on Quincy streets. He said he was impressed with the new track facility - the end of this year's race.

"I had seen it before from the road lots of time but this was my first time running on it. It's an unbelievable surface. You get a nice bounce," he said.

He also was pleased with the support the community gave to passing runners along the course route.

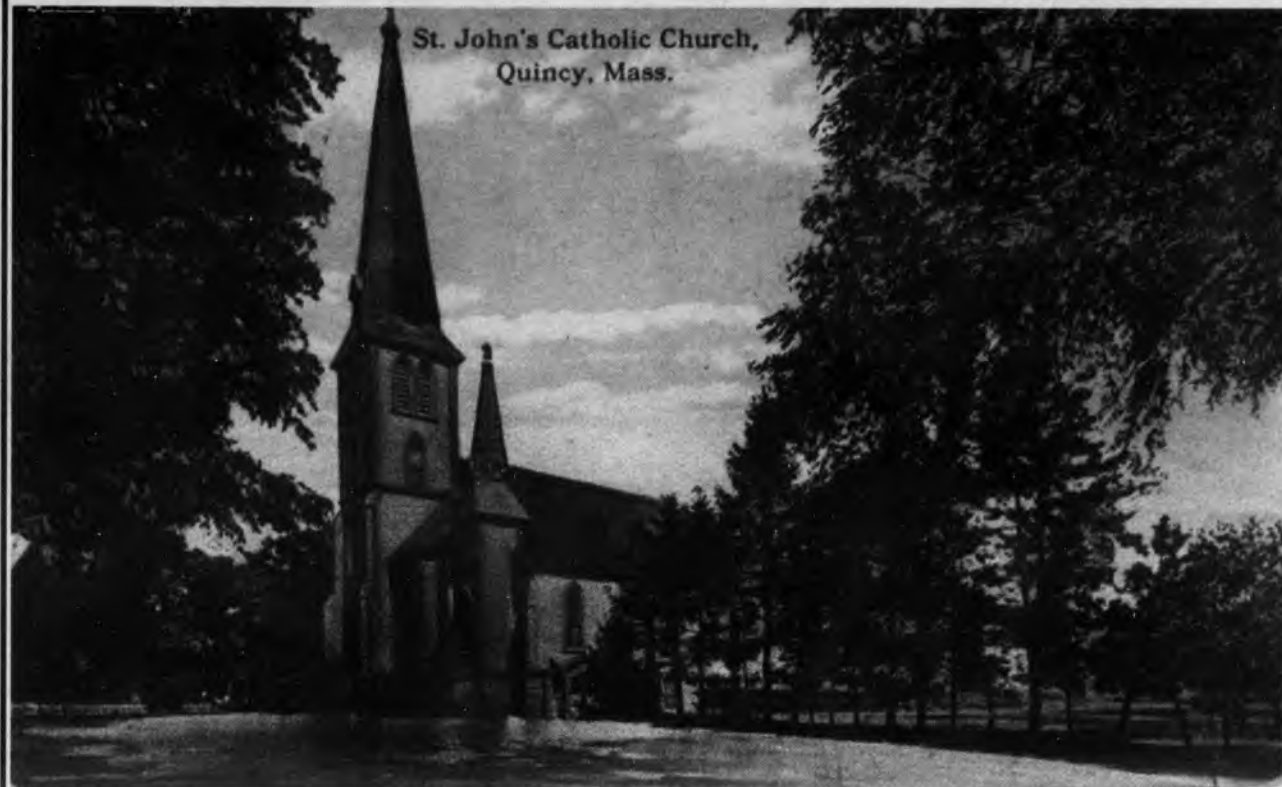

"For 8 a.m. on a Sunday morning, there were people out there cheering and beeping horns which I don't really see in a lot of races. It's a nice course. They did a good job blocking off the traffic."

Lynch was asked if he had a message for anyone who has been affected by the marathon tragedy so much that they don't want to participate in road races or attend as a spectator.

His reply was as swift as his gait.

"We just have to come here and not be afraid. You can't live in fear yet be aware that there are evil people out there and they're looking to disrupt freedom. They think freedom is a bad thing. They don't have what we have here."

Scenes From Yesterday

St. John's Catholic Church,
Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS A 1917 postcard view of St. John's Catholic Church on School Street in Quincy Center. It was built 160 years ago as a mission church to St. Mary's in West Quincy. The site selected for it was a lot of land that previously had been home to one of the Episcopalian Christ Church buildings that was destroyed in a fire a few years earlier. But, in a protest, a radical anti-Catholic group known as the "Know Nothings" tried to block the sale of the property to the archdiocese. After a senseless battle, the church was built in 1852. Ten years later as Quincy's Catholic population grew, the mission was made a standalone separate parish. The new parish later spawned the establishment of three other mission churches of its own. When it was built the St. John's building had just the one large center steeple until 1874 when the two smaller steeples, one on each side, were added reinforcing its classic Gothic style. This is the oldest wooden church building in Quincy. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Residents Asked To Help Fight Drugs

By SCOTT JACKSON

The number of drug arrests in Quincy was on the decline, but Quincy Police were asking residents to help 'put a pusher out of business.'

In the first four months of 1973 Quincy Police made 63 arrests on drug related charges, down from 79 such arrests during the first four months of 1972. In all of 1972 there were 311 drug related arrests, compared to 368 the previous year.

Those numbers could be misleading, however, because a new law dropped "being present" where narcotics were found from a list of offenses, likely cutting the number of arrests made in drug raids.

Despite the drop in drug arrests, the Police Department still called drugs a serious issue in the city. Police Chief Francis X. Finn asked that residents be vigilant, and notify the department of anyone they suspect of selling drugs.

"A few minutes of a citizen's time could be enough to put a drug pusher out of business," the chief said, while urging residents to not conduct their investigations.

Narcotics weren't an issue in Quincy until 1968. No drug arrests were recorded 1963 or 1964. Two such arrests were recorded in 1965 and 11 in each 1966 and 1967. In 1968 that number jumped to 93.

FIREFIGHTERS TO BE HONORED

Rolls of Merit were to be awarded to Quincy Firefighters Thomas Field and Robert Craig at the Quincy Firemen's Ball.

Field and Craig were selected for their heroic actions in rescuing a resident of Dorchester Avenue in Boston from her burning home while giving mutual aid to the Boston Fire Department. The two of them found the woman unconscious and badly burned in her second floor apartment. They carried her out, administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heart massage, and saw her off to the hospital.

STUDENTS RETURN FROM LONDON

Twenty Quincy High-Voc. Tech students and their chaperones returned home after a weeklong trip to London.

Students on the trip were able to visit historic sites in London and beyond, including St. Paul's Cathedral, Canterbury Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, the British Museum, Windsor Castle, and Buckingham Palace where they watched the ceremonial changing of the guard. Latin students in the group busied themselves by translating inscriptions in the castles and churches.

The group also took a daytrip to Shakespeare country including Oxford University and Stratford-on-Avon where they saw the Royal Shakespearean production of "Richard II." During their last full day in London, the Quincy contingent attended a Tudor Banquet.

Quincy Community Action Fundraiser May 14

The Clifford Marshall Foundation and I are sponsoring a fundraiser on May 14th at Alba Restaurant from 6 to 9 p.m.

I am on the Board of Directors of Quincy Community Action Program, which is a non-profit organization that helps disadvantaged people in Quincy and the South Shore. One of the programs run by the agency is an emergency food center.

In the last couple of years the demand for food from our emergency food center has increased significantly due to the economy. We are seeing families that we never saw in past years due to people being out of jobs for an extended period of time. We also see repeat customers who suffer from disabilities that prevent them from being able to support themselves. This increased demand is exacerbated by a cut back in government funding due to the economic climate. These twin factors have created a crisis where we cannot keep up with the demand to feed the most needy members of our community. Consequently, we are holding a fundraiser to raise money privately to help feed our neighbors.

One of the lessons that we all learned from the Boston Marathon bombing is that good far outweighs evil in our society. There was story after story about people who stepped up to help those who were hurt and their families. As a member of our community, I am asking for your help to support our neighbors in need. If you can't make the fundraiser and are willing to make a donation it would be greatly appreciated. Cash donations enable us to provide the most food to our neighbors because we can buy food from food banks at a large discount compared to what you can buy food at a supermarket.

Every $100 we raise will feed five households for a week. If you can't attend the fundraiser, donations can be sent to QCAP, 1509 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA, 02169.

We have an opportunity to directly help our neighbors in need. If many of us give just a little, we can make a true difference in our community.

'Downsizing Your Stuff' Topic At Crane Library May 14

Why do we acquire and save more possessions than we need?

What happens when our stuff starts to own us?

Why can't we just throw things away?

Find out at a free and entertaining presentation Tuesday, May 14 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

With his upbeat and unique approach, Dave Downs explores the many reasons that our drawers, closets and garages get filled with stuff. Downs offers helpful hints for managing this difficult problem along with colorful stories that engage and inform.

Participants will leave knowing that if we are thoughtful about what we acquire, what we keep and what we discard, we will start to reverse the tendency to bury ourselves in "treasures."

Recipient of the "Best Exhibitor Award" at The New England History Festival, Downs is a retired school teacher with a master's degree in Creative Arts in Education.

For example, there was one man from Gloucester, Mass. who was in the 23rd Massachusetts Infantry and participated in several battles. Another one from Connecticut was in the Battle of Gettysburg.

EMILY HAJJAR

After an exciting three day election period, Emily and her running mate Zac Broughton of Salem won the election with 51% of the vote. Campaigning on the issues of cheaper parking, reasonable construction and affordability of higher education they were able to get a strong base of votes.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Fettucine Alfredo With Sautéed Scallops

It's hard to figure out but some of my grandchildren do not enjoy tomato sauce on their pasta. I guess it's because I like it so much.

So some of the time, I will make both kinds of pasta, some with tomato sauce and some without. Today's recipe is one we all enjoy and that is an Alfredo sauce.

I made it last week with scallops and everyone enjoyed it.

FETTUCCINE ALFREDO WITH SCALLOPS

For the sauce 1 stick of unsalted butter
¾ cup Parmesan grated cheese
½ pint heavy cream (you can use half & half if preferred)
1 pound fettuccine (you can also use the ones made with wheat)

1 pound scallops (I used the large ones)

2 tablespoons butter

2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Melt the butter, and slowly add the Parmesan cheese making a roux. Then add the cream and heat slowly until hot, but not boiling.

Cook the pasta according to directions. While the pasta is cooking, and in the hot oil and butter, sauté the scallops turning until browned on all sides. Set aside and keep warm until the pasta is done. When the pasta is drained, add the sauce tossing until all the sauce is absorbed.

Top the pasta with the scallops and serve with additional Parmesan cheese if desired.

Stuffed Dates With Prosciutto

I was invited for dinner at my daughter Ann Marie and Davey's house and she made the most delicious treat for an appetizer-stuffed dates.

I have had them done in many ways but these were different and so tasty.

10 slices prosciutto

3 tablespoons mascarpone cheese

3 tablespoons goat cheese

Mix the two cheeses together until smooth. Remove pits inside the dates and stuff each date with the cheese.

Wrap each one with the prosciutto, and place them under the broiler for a few minutes until the prosciutto is a bit crispy. Easy to make and delicious!

Letter Carriers Food Drive Saturday

The National Association of Letter Carriers is making it easy to donate food to the hungry this Saturday. All that area residents need to do is leave a bag of food next to their mailbox; their letter carriers will transport it to local sorting sites.

Many food pantries on the South Shore are anxiously awaiting these donations so that they can feed hungry local residents.

The South Shore Hunger Network is made up of representatives from all area emergency food programs.

They meet monthly to collaborate, receive trainings and share best practices. At a recent meeting they were discussing preparations for the food drive and all of the coordination it takes to sort, box and transport the food for distribution to clients, as well as problems with donations of expired food.

"This food drive is one of our single biggest sources of food donations each year," said Rhiannon Kimball, Food Pantry Manager for Interfaith Social Services. "As school lets out more parents with kids come to get help from the food pantry, we need this food to keep up with the demand. However, we hope that people will look at the expiration date on the food before they donate. If it is expired please throw it away. We don't want any expired food slipping through the system and possibly making someone sick."

On Saturday May 11th, letter carriers will be collecting bags of food left near mailboxes throughout the United States for distribution to emergency food programs in their area.

Walk To Cure Diabetes Saturday

Quincy Public Elementary Schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, along with families and friends of those afflicted, will participate in "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes" Saturday, May 11 (rain or shine).

Gathering time is 9:30 and the walk begins at 10 a.m.

The schools include: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Parker, Lincoln Hancock, Montclair, and Wollaston.

Organizers said the schools are partnering with JDRF to raise funds to help find a cure for a disease that affects millions of children and their families, including many elementary aged students in the community.

Neighbors and friends are invited to help participate by donating to this cause.

More than 18 million Americans are affected by diabetes. Each year, 15,000 children are diagnosed in this country with Type 1 (also known as T1D), which is insulin dependent, and that number continues to grow. It is one of the most costly chronic diseases among children and there is no cure.

For more information, contact Robin Franceschini at 617-984-8781 or Stephen/Jennifer Golden 617-413-8323.

Meghan White, Lindsay Schrier Retreat Leaders

During April vacation, 11 Quincy and North Quincy students recently participated in a leadership retreat in Cape Cod at the Rotary Youth Leadership Awards (RYLA).

Meghan White and Lindsay Schrier had received the award last year, and had returned to help run the leadership weekend as Student Leaders. They both helped plan the retreat, and out in over 170 hours of community service preparing it. They both received an Outstanding Service Award this year for the work they had done while preparing the event.

The other nine students went to their very first RYLA this year, and experienced workshops on communication, teamwork, and community service. Steven Hyunh is from Quincy High and won the Courage Award.

The RYLA Student Leaders had been fundraising all year for End Hunger, a non-profit that gives prepared meals to food pantries. At this year's RYLA, all of the students volunteered and packed over 50,000 meals for End Hunger.

HYPER Robotics Hosting Tournament May 18

The Quincy Public Schools HYPER Robotics will host "The Presidents Cup" Lego Robotics Tournament Saturday, May 18 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Quincy High School gymnasium.

The event, sponsored by Bluefin Robotics of Quincy, is free and open to the public.

This year's game, "Diabolical Data Dash," was created specifically for middle school competition by a game design committee of high school students and volunteers from the HYPER Alumni Association. This year's competition features seven team entries from the five Quincy middle schools.

Diabolical Data Dash will be played on a four foot by eight foot playing field where teams are challenged to design and build robots to complete tasks such as "retrieve random ram" and place "terabytes on a tower." In addition to robot performance, teams will present research projects on innovative data storage and will be awarded for programming, teamwork, and academic research.

COILED AND READY TO STRIKE

Serpents are among the oldest and most widespread mythological symbols, often evoking the duality of good and evil, poison and medicine, fertility and rebirth. The fact that snakes represented passion and desire was hardly lost on historical figures ranging from Eve to Cleopatra, and even Queen Victoria, whose engagement ring was the golden representation of a snake with an emerald-set head. Today, whether coiled in ring form or wrapped around the wrist or upper arm, the serpent motif is treasured for its ability to incite raised whispers and stimulate desire. Any women with a classic mindset and a penchant for the unusual may want to turn her attention to serpent-inspired pieces that are sure to draw attention.

The Chinese New Year started February 10, and according to the Chinese Zodiac, 2013 is the Year of the Snake. Serpent-inspired rings, bracelets and necklaces have slithered their way into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. When it comes to animalistic jewelry, few styles are as enthralling as snake-inspired pieces. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and allow us to assist you in purchasing a snake-inspired piece to add to your collection.

Planning Board Reviews Marijuana Moratorium, Construction Proposals

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Special permits, site plan reviews, and medical marijuana were the topics of discussion at last Wednesday's meeting of the Quincy Planning Board.

A moratorium, which is allowing for city-level considerations regarding the legal, land use, public safety, and public health impacts of medical marijuana dispensaries shall remain in effect until the end of December 2013, however current zoning ordinances prohibit the establishment of such facilities in Quincy.

The number of facilities allowed to operate will be limited according to Urban Renewal Planner Robert Stevens.

"The Medical Marijuana Law, as it stands today, allows for up to 35 dispensaries across the state with a minimum of one and maximum of five per county; 28 communities make up Norfolk County but Quincy has the largest population so it is likely there will be a proposal at some point for one or even two facilities," he said. "At that time, the state regulations will be in place and the city will have enacted zoning regulations aimed at addressing legal and land use issues as well as protecting public safety and the public health."

The centers, which will be not-for profit entities, will acquire, cultivate, and distribute medical marijuana to patients who qualify for treatment.

"Having the cap on the number of facilities is one of the more important lessons learned from other states who have allowed medical marijuana. The thought of facilities opening on every street corner, as reported in some California communities, is a frightening proposition," said Stevens, who indicated that 61 percent of Quincy citizens voted to allow the use of medical marijuana in the last election.

The application of Ultra Electronics Ocean Systems, Inc. of 115 Bay State Drive, Braintree, for a special permit under Quincy Zoning Ordinance Title 17, Section 3.1.3 Major Nonresidential Use, requested the development of a 3,642 square foot metal infill building along with the modification of two existing buildings — one being 4,900 square feet and the other 2,824 square feet — at 150 Bower Rd.

According to Vice President of Operations of Ultra Electronics Ken Kern, the facility will be used for the manufacturing, repair, and storage of sonar transducers, as well as office space.

The company is in the business of manufacturing, developing, and designing undersea defense electronics equipment and systems, and is notable for supplying the U.S. Department of Defense with such devices for over 50 years.

"When a submarine comes into dock, they [the Navy] need to have at least 90 percent of those transducers working," said Kern. "We need a large area to hold those while we go into the testing analysis, and determine what would need to happen to repair the faulty transducers."

"Whatever fails, they want to pull off and replace with new ones and then send those to us to remanufac-ture."

The site itself is distinctive according to Stevens.

"The site has a septic system; very rare," he said. "I think it's an endangered species in the city of Quincy at this point."

"The applicant, at his own expense, inspected the [septic] system and provided the inspection report to the Planning Department. It did come back as a system that was in failure," said Stevens. "I have forwarded that information to The City of Quincy Health Department. They are the governing body on septic systems."

Following the failed inspection, the system must be brought into compliance to allow the project to proceed.

Additionally, federal contracts must be obtained before any work can take place. "That is obviously going to be a determination factor on whether they move forward with the build-out of this new building," he said.

The Braintree Planning Department, during a March 15 public meeting, took a vote of no jurisdiction in regard to the site, which encroaches on the city's land. Despite this, all abutters — even those residing in Braintree — have been sent notifications informing them of the possibility of construction in the area.

A 'Hot Topic' From The Quincy Fire Department Mulch: Know The Danger

By ROGER KINEAVY
Quincy Fire Captain

Spring is finally here. A time for celebration? You bet! However, it is also time for us, in the fire service, to remind those we serve about the dangers unique to this time of year.

Mulch, those wood chips we spread around our gardens and yards, while aesthetically pleasing, pose fire problems that are generally unknown by the public at large. Mulch fires are a common occurrence during Spring and Summer. What makes these fires particularly dangerous and worthy of special attention is the close proximity between spread mulch and the structures we live and work in.

Mulch is a combustible material that can be easily ignited by improperly discarded smoking materials. Hundreds of small fires and large fires are started this way every year. The risk is what starts as a small outside mulch fire can quickly spread to buildings and climb the exterior. The fire can get a good start before people are made aware by smoke alarms, sprinkler systems activating or someone noticing.

Several large incidents, in Massachusetts alone, have moved State authorities to implement a regulation to reduce the danger involved. A May 2008 fire in Peabody was caused by a discarded cigarette that ignited mulch near an apartment building. The fire, which extended to the apartment building displaced 800 people and caused 6.7 million dollars in damage.

A similar fire occurred in Braintree in April 2012. This fire was also the result of improperly discarded smoking materials igniting mulch outside an assisted living center. The fire caused the early morning evacuation of many older adults, some of whom suffered smoke inhalation injuries.

The new regulation, which took effect on September 1, 2012, prohibits the new application of mulch within 18 inches around combustible exteriors of buildings such as wood or vinyl but not brick or concrete. Residential buildings with six units or less are exempted from this regulation. (527CMR17.00).

While single family residences, as well as smaller multiple family residences, are exempt from this new regulation, it would be a very good idea for these homeowners, as well, to take similar precautions. These precautions include keeping wood mulch 18 inches away from combustible exteriors of buildings such as wood or vinyl siding, using crushed stone or similar materials as a barrier around the foundation, and providing proper receptacles for smoking materials.

Enjoy this season, but always be mindful of the dangers present.

Glennon Emcees Community Development Conference

Quincy Planning Department's Community Development Director, Sean Glennon, served as emcee of the National Community Development Association's (NCDA's) New England Regional Spring Conference, held last week in Worcester.

The mission of NCDA is to assist local governments to achieve high-quality, locally responsive programs for making communities better places to live and work, particularly for low and moderate income people. The New England region of NCDA receives nearly a quarter of a billion dollars in block grant funding each year from the federal government.

of Housing & Urban Development; Hon. Setti Warren, Mayor of Newton, MA, and Chair of the United States Conference of Mayors' Housing & Community Development Committee; and Congressman Jim McGovern, representing the 2nd Congressional District of Massachusetts.

After his remarks, Glennon presented McGovern with a plaque in recognition of the Congressman's support and advocacy of block grant programs.

Glennon, who was elected as Chair of NCDA's regional board of directors last Fall, also gave a presentation at the conference, entitled, "Communicating with Congress," based on a session of the same name that he attended at NCDA's Winter legislative meeting in Washington, D.C., this past January. Glennon also serves on the national board of directors of NCDA as co-Chair of the organization's national Technology Committee.

"NCDA is very fortunate to have Sean representing the organization in this capacity," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "Likewise, we are very fortunate to have Sean working on our behalf, bringing in millions of dollars in federal resources that assist tens of thousands of Quincy residents each and every year."

Firefighters Care Package Drive Saturday

The Quincy Firefighters Local 792 will be holding a care packages drive for troops overseas on May 11th from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. in front of the Kennedy Center on East Squantum St.

"A Quincy resident, who is overseas in Afghanistan, contacted us about the care packages," said Firefighters Union President Ernie Arienti. It seems that the troops aren't getting the care packages like they use to so we decided to do something to get some over there."

Arienti added that the local 792 will cover the cost of mailing the packages and hopes to gather a number of different items they need and would like overseas. A trailer will be set up on site to store the items donated before firefighters box and ship them.

Some of the items they are looking to collect include; food, snacks, drinks, powder drink mixes such as Gatorade, Kool-Aid, and Crystal Light, tuna and chicken salad (in foil pouches or ready to eat kits, no cans), beef jerky, Slim Jims, Sunflower seeds, Pumpkin seeds, small sized toiletries (no hotel samples), DVD Movies (new or used, recent releases only), stand along air fresheners, small flashlights, pre-paid phone cards, paint brushes, small tool kits, dust masks, bug repellent (in plastic pump bottles only), and tools (including staple guns and Leathermen).

Some popular, top request items include protein powder, protein bars, K-Cups Coffee and tea, iTunes gift cards, and Amazon.com gift cards.

"We are just looking to collect as much as we can and send as many packages as we can over to them," said Arienti. "If people find that they can't come by and drop something off on May 11th they are encouraged to drop them off at any fire station."

For a full list of items visit www.iafflocal792.org.

before the cancer came back and he lost the battle in April 2012 at the age of 15.

Merrymount School was the first school that he attended and where he learned to speak English, which Principal Ann Pegg said was perfect by the time he left the school.

"When Abby came here his English was very little," said Pegg. "By the time he left here in fifth grade, his accent was almost gone and he spoke English very well. He loved living in the United States. He was proud to be in this country and he loved Merrymount School."

According to Joseph DiStasio, arborist and co-owner of Green Tech Tree Care, the tree planted at the ceremony was a Snow Fountain tree. DiStasio said that planting a tree and placing the dirt on the roots of the tree is an honorable act to do for someone you love.

"Putting dirt on a tree in memory of someone is an honorable gesture that can never be repaid," said DiStasio.

Classes from the third, fourth, and fifth graders of Merrymount School were in attendance along with Ochieng's mother Catherine Awuor and family friend Desiree Russell who participated in planting the tree. Students and faculty sang a few songs and performed a number of poems during the ceremony.

"In Abby's memory we plant this tree, because like a tree he was strong in his heart and in his character," said Pegg. "He was beautiful and always had a positive, kind word for everyone."

of a second identical tank is currently being reviewed by the fire department.

Hours of construction are to be Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., with no construction or deliveries to take place on Sunday.

Also taken into consideration was the application of Hresko Associates, Inc. of 110 Broad St., Boston, for the proposed conversion of a currently mixed-use, residential and business structure located at 77-83 Newbury Ave., into a 6-unit, strictly residential building.

The land, legally owned by Huang MJ Construction of 69 Appleton St., Quincy, currently consists of a two-story building which is "underutilized" according to architect Phillip Hresko.

The bottom floor is home to a laundromat, and what was at one point a beauty salon. The top floor consists of two rented apartments.

Hresko presented his plan, which calls for the addition of units atop the laundromat, as well as more living space to be included in an addition to the back of the structure. The space inhabited by the businesses will be converted to "comfortable, reasonable apartments," each containing two bedrooms.

"This is a rather unique application," said Planning Director Dennis Harrington. "The reason it's a site plan review is because it is residential in a Business A zone, and it does require this mandatory site plan review."

A meeting-goer, who wished to remain unidentified, raised concerns regarding designated parking for the new residences. Harrington noted that all parking would be street-level, public parking.

"The issue comes down to regulations: the parking and dimensions. This project needs every dimensional relief one could have...we'll still have to go to the Zoning Board of Appeals on dimensional issues and parking," said Harrington.

Despite this, parking studies have been waived.

Chairman William Geary offered words of praise, indicating a need for increased housing in an area within walking distance of public transportation.

"We have a substantial Asian and Chinese community up there. They are looking for housing and they do appreciate the new construction," he said. "The residents of that area heavily use public transit."

Harrington indicated he was eager to press forward with the proposal.

"This project has been delayed, to some degree unnecessarily, and we'd like to move it along," he said.

Revised Zoning Codes Next Step For Wollaston Center Redevelopment

By SCOTT JACKSON

Planners looking to redevelop Wollaston Center have proposed a series of steps the city could take to make the area more attractive to developers.

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) recently completed a study outlining ways to make the area more attractive. The study found that parking requirements, minimum lot sizes, and mandatory setbacks in the city's zoning regulations limit development in Wollaston Center. In response, the MAPC suggested reducing the minimum lot size to 5,000 square feet for mixed-use and multi-family developments, remove front and side yard setbacks, and change residential parking requirements to a minimum of 0.5 spots per unit and a maximum of one per unit.

The MAPC study also called for a transit oriented development (TOD) overlay district for the Wollaston MBTA station and its parking lot. According to the study, a parking garage could be built on the side of the lot to the north of Woodbine Street, and a mixed-use development could be built on the other side. To do that, the six-story height restriction in the area would need to be lifted. The study also suggests widening sidewalks on Beale Street from Old Colony Avenue to Greenwood Avenue near the station to make it more pedestrian friendly, and possibly allow new businesses like food carts to open.

The MAPC unveiled the results of the study at a recent meeting with residents. Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes said many of the suggestions, such as lifting height restrictions and allowing denser development, would help revitalize the area.

"Height restrictions down there are extremely limiting. Some of the density down there is just limiting in terms of attracting development," Hughes said. "Certainly the MBTA parking lot is a major player in anything that happens down there because this is really about revitalizing the business corridor thereby making things residentially better."

Residents at the meeting did express some skepticism, especially about reducing parking spaces. Hughes said it was important for residents to keep in mind that the MAPC study is only the first step, and the city isn't fully committed to making the changes yet.

"I thought it was a good exchange of ideas. There were a lot of residents represented. It was a nice way that they did things. They gave people a chance to look at some of the presentations, some of the schemes and some of the things they came up with," Hughes said. "I got a lot of emails afterwards from folks, it's really important to note that this is just the beginning of the conversation about what could be down there, not what we are doing."

The next step will be for the Planning Department to work on their own proposal for revised zoning codes that would then be submitted to the City Council for review and approval.

"The Planning Department is going to put some type of scheme together that the mayor and the Planning Department together can bring to the council - a zoning plan to make development happen and make it attractive to private development," Hughes said.

Equality Under The Law Theme At Quincy Law Day

Former MA Attorney General Frank Bellotti Keynote Speaker

By SCOTT JACKSON

Equality under the law was the main theme of this year's Law Day celebration at Quincy District Court, which honored law enforcement personnel and community leaders from municipalities within the court's jurisdiction.

In her Law Day motion Siobhan E. Foley, president of the Quincy Bar Association, said equality under the law has made the United States a beacon to other nations. In addition, two historic events that furthered the goal of equality have major anniversaries this year. The first, the Emancipation Proclamation, freed slaves in rebelling states during the Civil War. President Abraham Lincoln first announced the proclamation on Sept. 22, 1862 and it came into force 100 days later on Jan. 1, 1863. A century later, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech on Aug. 28, 1963 on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in front of 250,000 supporters.

"The promise of equality under the law is what has made America a beacon to other nations," Foley said. "This year, 2013, marks the 150th issuance of the Emancipation Proclamation. In 1963, during the proclamation's centennial, Rev. Martin Luther King stood in front of the Lincoln Memorial and called for our nation to live up to the great promise of equality for all. Five decades later, the inspiration words of his 'I Have a Dream' speech continue to resonate and challenge all of us to live up to our national ideal of equality under the law."

The keynote speaker for Law Day, held Friday, was Francis X. Bellotti. The courthouse was renamed in honor of Bellotti, a longtime Quincy resident and former lieutenant governor and attorney general, last September. He said that nowhere else in the world is equality more evident than in the U.S., adding that the democratic system would not exist without courts and law enforcement.

"This is particularly significant because nowhere else in the world is the equality articulated in the proclamation more evident than it is in what I believe to be this wonderful democracy," Bellotti said. "I guess we have to realize, and we don't always realize, that the lawyers, judges, clerks, court people, prosecutors, and police are all part of the system without which we wouldn't have any rights."

"Perhaps because of the adversarial nature of what we do, the most criticized professions are the law and politics. And yet without the laws that members of the House and Senate and the governor enact, and without the decisions of judges, and without the enforcement of the police, democracy wouldn't exist. We very seldom think of that."

Those rights we as Americans have, Bellotti continued, are often taken for granted. Law Day is a time to remember those rights and recognize the system that protects them.

"Our security, providing us to live the life of our choice free from fear, and the right to complain, to vote out the government we don't like and to say whatever we want no matter how obnoxious it may be – these are the rights that are guaranteed by lawyers, judges, and the enforcement of police," Bellotti said. "We take so much for granted, but on Law Day it's important to recognize that we live in a government that's constantly being redefined – a government whose sole purpose is to take care of its people and not to oppress it."

"Around the world people revolt. It can't happen in this country because the laws, which are so much a part of our daily lives, are so important that they transcend the importance of any one individual or any group of individuals."

"Each of us has the right and ability to affect government and its direction, much more than any other country in the world. This particular government within which we live constantly changes – sometimes it's Democrat, sometimes it's Republican. But ultimately there is a balance and that's what I think is the wonder of this democracy. Law Day should be a wonderful time to reflect on the fact that we live in the best government in the world."

Because of how important the court system is, Bellotti said he was disappointed with how much judges are paid. He noted that Mintz Levin, the law firm he now works at, pays new lawyers more than veteran judges make.

"It's amazing to me that judges are so poorly compensated. A first-year associate at Mintz Levin makes more than a judge that's been practicing law for 20, 30, sometimes 40 years. They're so much a part of this democracy it amazes me that we don't properly compensate them," Bellotti said. "Maybe that will change – I hope so."

Before Bellotti's address, officials presented seven awards to individuals within the court's jurisdiction for public and community service.

The James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award, named for the late mayor and state senator, was presented to William Lawless and Alfred J. Saluti. Clerk-Magistrate Arthur Tobin and Sheila McIntyre, the late mayor's wife, presented the award, which is given annually to those who make a "selfless contribution in service of their fellow man." Lawless and Saluti were recognized for their work with the homeless and needy.

"These two gentlemen have given their time and energy for the past 30 plus years by operating a food pantry for the needy, providing dinner baskets with all the trimmings at Thanksgiving for the elderly and the less fortunate," Tobin said. "They provide toys and games and food and clothing for the less fortunate at

'WITHOUT THE LAWS that members of the House and Senate and the governor enact, and without the decisions of judges, and without the enforcement of the police, democracy wouldn't exist. We very seldom think of that," said Quincy Law Day Keynote Speaker and former Massachusetts Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti. Quincy Sun Photo/Emily Taft

Christmas and they prepare and serve hot meals each month for the homeless and the needy in the shelters.

"They have served on the board of Father Bill's as directors for the past 10 years and they also operate the St. Vincent de Paul Society at St. John's Church in Quincy. I have known both of these gentlemen for over the past 30 plus years, and I can personally attest to their tireless energy, commitment, and compassion for their fellow man."

Tobin and First Justice Mark S. Coven presented the Quincy Court Jason and Marion Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award to Steven, Paul, and Marc Feldman – sons of the late Jason and Marion Feldman – and Melvin Needel, Marion's second husband. The Feldman's owned a music store in Quincy Center and were also active in the community.

"Jason and his family were very active and helpful to the Quincy District Court, helping young people get on the straight and narrow and get a job so they could pay off their obligations and restitutions. Mrs. Feldman and her family actively participated in our Law Day ceremonies for the past 30 years," Tobin said. "The Quincy District Court is most grateful to the Feldman family for all their kindness and support throughout the years."

District Attorney Michael Morrissey presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Andrew H. Lynch. Lynch began working in the district attorney's office as an intern, and now oversees civil rights prosecutions as well sexual assaults and domestic violence cases.

"Years ago Andrew started in the office as an intern. He returned as a student NORFOLK COUNTY District Attorney Michael Morrissey (left) presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Andrew Lynch. Lynch began working with the DA's office as an intern, and is now the assistant district attorney in charge of civil right's prosecutions, as well as domestic violence and sexual assaults cases.

MARIAN McGOVERN (left), retired colonel/superintendent of the State Police, received the Mark S. Charbonnier Award. Charbonnier was a state trooper shot in the line of duty. His friend and classmate Lt. Kenneth Halloran of the State Police helped present the award to McGovern, who served 31 years with the department before retiring.

FRANCIS X. BELLOTTI (right), former lieutenant governor and attorney general, was the keynote speaker at the Law Day ceremony last Friday. It was also Bellotti's 90th birthday, and he was given a birthday cake by the court's staff, including Clerk-Magistrate Arthur Tobin (center). The courthouse was renamed for Bellotti in September.

prosecutor and then secured a position as an assistant district attorney. During this era of cutbacks and tight staffing he has moved beyond general cases to cover sexual assaults and domestic violence. He has accepted the designation of being our specialized civil rights prosecutor," Morrissey said. "He has been exceptionally generous with his time, making himself available to victims, police, and fellow prosecutors wherever there is a need. He is readily available to accept difficult and complex cases."

Morrissey also presented the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement to 10 police officers from four communities. Dana, a Metropolitan Police officer, was shot and killed during a routine traffic stop in 1984.

Four of this year's recipients were from the Braintree Police Department. Det. Joseph Molloy was honored for chasing down two armed suspects that robbed a Weymouth bank and fled in a Jeep. Officers Brian Adams, Paul Campbell, and Robert Chin responded to a report of an uncontrolled guest. The guest charged at the officers with a knife and the three subdued without the use of lethal force.

Three of the award's winners are from the Randolph Police Department. Det. Sgt. Anthony Marag, Det. Jason Fisher, and Det. Michael Tuitt form the department's youth violence unit. Morrissey said the youth violence unit helped drive down the crime rate in Randolph over the last three years, and cut the number of identified youth gangs in the town from three to zero over the same time period.

DR. PETER KURZBERG received the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award. Kurzberg has been superintendent of the Braintree school system for 22 years. He previously served as the director of special education for the town's schools.

Two Weymouth Police officers — James P. Flanagan and Scott K. Harrington — were honored their actions after responding to a domestic violence call. The suspect rammed Harrington's vehicle, but the two officers continued their pursuit. The suspect eventually hit a telephone pole, knocking the driver out and causing the car to burst into flames. Flanagan then forced himself into the locked vehicle and pulled the driver to safety.

The final recipient of the Dana Award was Milton Police Det. Louis B. Bullard. Bullard apprehended two suspects who shot a college student. Shortly after that Bullard found the suspects' vehicle, a sedan with a missing door, and alerted his fellow officers of the vehicle's location. Other officers found the remaining two suspects after combing the area the vehicle was found in.

Tobin and Foley presented the Alfred P. Malaney

Award to Judge Kevin J. O'Dea. O'Dea began his legal career with the Army's Judge Advocate General (JAG) Corps, eventually becoming the chief military justice for the XVIII Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, N.C. O'Dea later served as a prosecutor in Middlesex County, and then as an assistant U.S. attorney where he worked as lead counsel on 35 cases. O'Dea became a judge in 2001.

Marian J. McGovern, retired colonel/superintendent of the State Police, received the Mark S. Charbonnier award presented to her by Tobin and State Police Lt. Kenneth Halloran. McGovern served with the State Police for 31 years. She began her career as a trooper, and then became a detective responsible for investigating a variety of cases and even went undercover to investigate organized crime. In December 2009 McGovern was named colonel/superintendent, becoming the first female head of the State Police.

The final Law Day award was given to Dr. Peter A. Kurzberg, superintendent of the Braintree School Department, who received the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award presented to him by Tobin and Coven. Kurzberg has been superintendent in Braintree for the past 22 years and is retiring this June. In addition to his work with the schools, Kurzberg has been involved with numerous community groups in Braintree and the South Shore.

Koch Budget Calls For $9M More In Education, Public Safety

The remaining increase is divided up among the remaining departments; the Library and Veterans Services Departments each receive an extra $300,000, for example. Department heads and members of the mayor's staff would all get pay raises of about three percent. According to Koch, whose salary will remain the same, this is the first raise they've gotten in six years.

Under Koch's budget, the School Department would receive $91.15 million in FY14, an increase of $3.6 million. The mayor will present a detailed budget to the School Committee, which he chairs, at an upcoming meeting; the City Council only sets the bottom line for the department's budget and the School Committee is responsible for divvying that money up. Koch did tell the council that the extra money would go towards meeting new state mandates and hiring teachers to keep class size down as enrollment increases.

"This increase will deal with level service, will deal with the new state mandates that are required, including the core curriculum changes. It will absorb some of the federal grant cuts that we're seeing. It will provide resources for some new teachers — we're very prioritized in the school system, I think all the School Committee members are in agreement that class size is very very important," Koch said. "You'll see some additional classroom teachers as we respond to our growing enrollment, particularly at the elementary level. There will be some new teachers and new programs beyond that as well."

The budget plan calls for spending $46.67 million, an increase of $4.3 million, on items that fall under the umbrella of public safety. That includes the Police, Fire, Animal Control, Inspection Services, Emergency Management, and Traffic Departments. The Police Department will receive an extra $1.9 million, which will allow for the hiring of six new patrol officers and one new sergeant. Also included is $150,000 for training and money for new equipment.

"In the Police Department we'll be adding some new positions. There'll be six new patrolmen added to the budget, and one new sergeant funded in the budget," Koch said. "There will be additional funding for equipment, and additional moneys for training. As we've seen recently it is so important to keep up with public safety — that's paramount for any community. Public safety comes first, I believe, and all else falls behind."

Koch's spending plan also gives the Fire Department an extra $1.7 million. That money is slated to go towards an expiring federal grant that currently pays for nine firefighters, added overtime money to keep stations open more, and new equipment.

"This year in September we lose the federal money for nine firefighter positions. This budget will absorb the salaries for those nine positions come September," Koch said. "In addition there is roughly $200,000 in additional money for the overtime line to try and keep staff levels so no piece goes out of service and additional funding for other equipment for the firemen and their needs, whether it's clothing, whether it's oxygen bottles and equipment they use to deliver services to families in the city."

Koch also told the council he would soon ask for an additional appropriation to help deal with any issues that could arise during construction of the new Quincy Center. The mayor also plans to ask the council to approve a bond allowing for the purchase of a new ladder truck, which would cost around $1 million.

Departments falling under the umbrella of public infrastructure, which includes the Public Buildings, Parks, and Public Works Departments, would receive a total of $22.6 million, an increase of $1 million.

Koch's spending plan calls for raising the Public Buildings Department's budget to $4.9 million from $4.2 million. The new money allows the department to hire more maintenance staff, like electricians. It also creates two new $91,000-a-year jobs — energy manager and energy technician. The mayor said those two positions would allow the city to manage its energy equipment for less than its maintenance contract with Honeywell would have cost.

"We've gone through the process with Honeywell. I don't want to get into it tonight, but having left that behind now without the maintenance contract I believe this budget will deal with some of those issues, maintaining our buildings in a far more efficient and less expensive way going forward," Koch said.

Red Tide Hits Hummock Cove Area

By EMILY TAFT

Red tide is the reported source of the smell residents have been concerned about in the Hummock Cove area for the past few weeks.

"We received a preliminary report that there was some red tide in that area," said Jim Fatseas, executive secretary to Mayor Thomas Koch. "We had a professor from UMASS out there on Saturday looking into the matter."

"Over the past several weeks I had received a number of phone calls reporting a raw sewerage odor coming from the Hummock Cove area at the intersection of Quincy Shore Dr. and East Squantum St.," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee. "As soon as I received two back to back calls I called the DPW. I want to thank the mayor's office for getting the right help out there to determine what it was."

According to McNamee, lab results from samples taken by the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) have come back positive for red tide.

"The odor that has been reported from residents in that area is coming from decaying marine life, which causes red tide," said McNamee. "This has been a long standing situation spanning a number of years where we had this. The MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resources Authority) used dye packs to determine leaks in the sewer line, but they determined the line has integrity when no dye was shown in the water."

Red tide produces an odor that is due to the decomposition of coastal marine organisms that have been killed by an algal bloom. Red tide is potentially harmful to human health; they can become seriously ill from eating oysters and other shellfish contaminated with red tide toxin, but not all red tides have toxins or are harmful. McNamee said that he doesn't believe there is a threat to the public's health.

"I don't think there is any public health threats because of this," said McNamee. "Almost on an annual basis since I can remember this has been happening in that area. As far as I know, at this point, there is nothing that can be done, it just has to run its course."

which he said would cost the average single-family homeowner less than $100 annually on their property tax bill in 2014. Those tax bills won't be set until later this year.

The budget also anticipates $3.2 million in new growth, and an extra $1 million in local aid from the state. Local receipts, moneys received from excise taxes and various fees, is expected to remain stable.

The City Council's Finance Committee — chaired by Councillor Joe Finn — will begin reviewing the budget next Monday, May 13. Further budget hearings are scheduled for May 28 and June 11. Meetings will start at 6:30 p.m. The council can only cut money; they lack the authority to add money to any line item.

QUINCY'S ROBBIE MUNROE robs Pembroke's Corey Brandon of a hit in the third inning with a spectacular running catch in right field. The Presidents defeated the Titans 6-2 for a Patriot League victory at Adams Field last Friday. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Paulo's 3-Hitter Powers Presidents Past Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

Baseball can be a simple game. Pitch the ball, hit the ball, catch the ball, and good things will almost surely happen.

Sophomore Greg Paulo used a knee-buckling curveball to toss a complete-game three-hitter, Quincy pounded out eight hits and three long sacrifice flies, and third baseman Bobby Salvucci headlined a four-star defense to lead the Presidents to a 6-2 win over Pembroke in a Patriot League contest Friday at Adams Field.

"Overall, this was a good game for us. Day-by-day, game-by-game you can feel things coming together. Guys are starting to take charge and we're playing better baseball," said coach Pat Bryan of his rapidly improving ball club which came within a run of a three-game sweep last week.

Paulo controlled the game. Not only was there action on his curve, he kept it down and on the corners. He blended in a good fastball and he threw strikes. He fanned four and walked just one. Paulo had a no-hitter after three, gave two runs and three hits in the fourth, but finished the inning with a strikeout on a picture-perfect curve. Take away the fourth inning and he gave no hits and no runs.

"He kept them off balance with his curve, but the big thing was he started the game throwing strikes," said Bryan. "I tell the pitchers if they can give us a shutout first inning, it gives us a big lift. Paulo did that for us today."

Quincy belted the ball.

Tyler Beach, Johnny Marsinelli (seven hits in three games), and Paulo had a pair of hits apiece. Beach had two RBI and ignited the offense with a tough, two-out at-bat in the second. Robbie Munroe had a single and two RBI. Alex Heffernan and Salvucci drove in runs. Marsinelli scored twice. The Presidents stole four bases.

"We hit the ball well all through the lineup," said Bryan whose team scored 18 runs in three games last week.

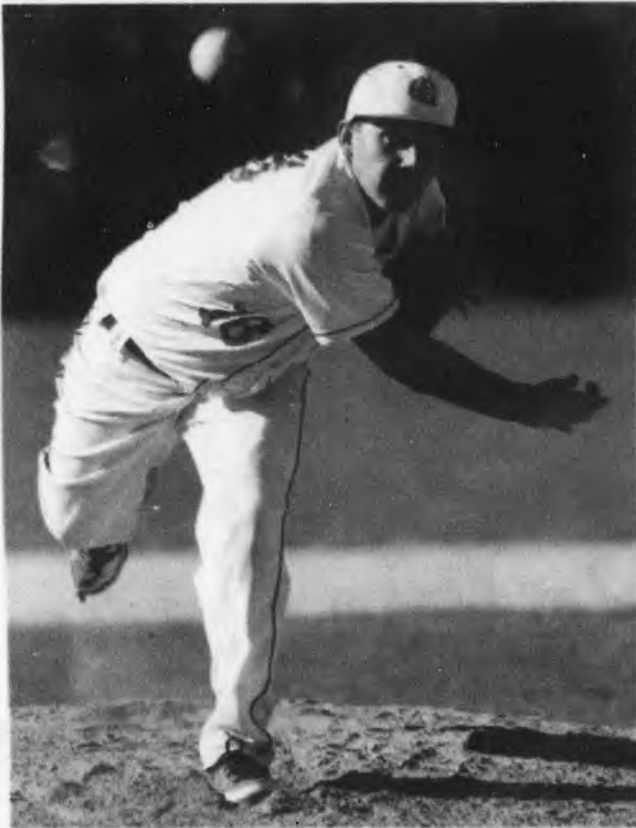

Munroe, Salvucci, and Heffernan all had sacrifice flies. There were no cheap shots here. All three were drilled deep into the outfield and Munroe's came within range of the distant fence in right center in the fifth.

"That ball was crushed. It was within 15 or 20 feet of the fence. Munroe hit a couple right on the nose and he hit the ball hard all week," said Bryan.

Beach's at-bat in the second set the tone for the game. Quincy went up 1-0 on a Heffernan SF and had runners on second and third with two out. Two-out hits that drive in runs win games. Beach worked the count to 3-2, took a fastball on the outside corner and hit it right where it was pitched into left field for a single, two runs and a 3-0 lead.

"Huge," said Bryan. "It's a mark of a good hitter, a clutch hitter to deliver in that situation. He went with the pitch and it got us going."

Salvucci and Quincy played excellent and, at times, acrobatic defense. Salvucci handled six chances es flawlessly, including the first four outs of the game. With two out in the second, he reached across his body and stabbed a hard liner off his shoetops which was ticketed for the left field line and certain extra bases.

"Again, we were looking for a clean start and Salvucci's defense helped give it to us," said Bryan.

Marsinelli gunned down a base stealer in the third. In the fifth, second baseman Mike Pugsley ranged far to his right behind the bag, skidded to the dirt and threw a strike to first for the out.

"That play by Pugsley was a major-league play," said Bryan.

Munroe made the play of the game in right in the third off Pembroke's Corey Brandon. Munroe was playing deep and a shade towards right center. He ranged far, chased down a shallow, looping flyball near the foul line and made a tumbling catch off the top the grass for the out.

"He had two other chances that he moved well to as well," said Bryan.

After Quincy's three-run second, Beach dropped down a perfect drag bunt after a hit batter and a Mike Haley single for a 4-0 lead in the third. Pembroke cut it to 4-2 in the fourth, but Quincy added insurance runs in the fifth on sacrifice flies by Munroe and Salvucci.

striking. Bryan started many of these players as freshmen and sophomores. There was one senior on the field against Pembroke. They are quickly gaining experience and confidence. In which areas have they improved? All of them.

"We started a lot of our sophomores as freshmen," said Bryan. "That means this is about their 30th varsity game. I think that's where you really start to see them get used to the varsity level and play well."

After beating Whitman-Hanson in extra innings last Monday, Quincy dropped an 8-7 heartbreaker to Scituate.

A Munroe home run gave the Presidents a late one-run lead, but the Sailors rallied for two in the seventh and won it on a bases-loaded squeeze bunt.

Marsinelli and Pugsley each had three hits against Scituate. Beach chipped in with a pair while Matt Davis had two doubles. Munroe had a single and a homer while Heffernan added a double. John Leveille pitched well in a losing cause.

Quincy is 4-7. The Presidents host Hingham Wednesday, May 8 and are also at home Friday, May 10 against Duxbury.

NQ Boys' Lacrosse Downs S.S. Vo-Tech, Bows To Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

The Patriot League features a powerful collection of lacrosse programs with athletes who have been playing 12 months a year since they were old enough to hop out of the cradle. There is nine-time state champion Duxbury and annual tournament contenders like Hingham and Scituate.

It is not an easy place to build a young program which is the challenge that faces North Quincy.

Tucker Ciessau, Trevor Ciessau, and John Mulchay each scored four goals to lead Scituate to a 14-2 Patriot League decision over the Red Raiders in a match played at Veterans Stadium last week.

"Scituate is an excellent, well-coached program," said North coach Michael Joyce. "I want our team to focus on the opportunity of playing the best. It is a challenge, but it will make us a better lacrosse program."

Earlier in the week, North won its first match of the year with a 13-10 victory over South Shore Voke behind six goals from sophomore Mike Finn. In other action, the Red Raiders fell to Hull, 19-4.

Finn scored both North goals against Scituate and had 11 goals in the three games last week. On his first score against the Sailors, he intercepted a clearing pass and rifled home a low drive. On the second, he moved across the field from left to right and drilled in a shot from 10 yards out. He clearly has a gift for scoring and Joyce sees great potential for his young attackman.

"The sky's the limit," said Joyce. "He has the intelligence and understanding of the game to break down a defense. He has good balance, excellent lateral quickness and strong hands which are the three things you look for in an offensive player."

Another bright spot has been the play of sophomore defenseman Cornelius Koch. He stood up to the relentless Scituate attack and denied several chances with firm checks and good clearing passes.

"He's the most improved player on the team, no doubt about it," said Joyce. "He's our best defenseman. You look for stick skills and intelligence from a defenseman, and he has both. He's excellent on ground balls."

Finn and sophomore Tim Glynn combined for a number of sharp passing plays which just missed resulting in goals. Sophomore Benson Chau played well in net. Nolan Greene and Rob Thompson-Hines showed well in midfield. There is improvement that is not yet reflected on the scoreboard because North is simply playing some of the best teams in the state.

"I do see improvement," said Joyce. "Our off-the-ball movement is better. Our overall athleticism has improved and our freshmen and sophomores are coming along. It takes time. It's a tough league."

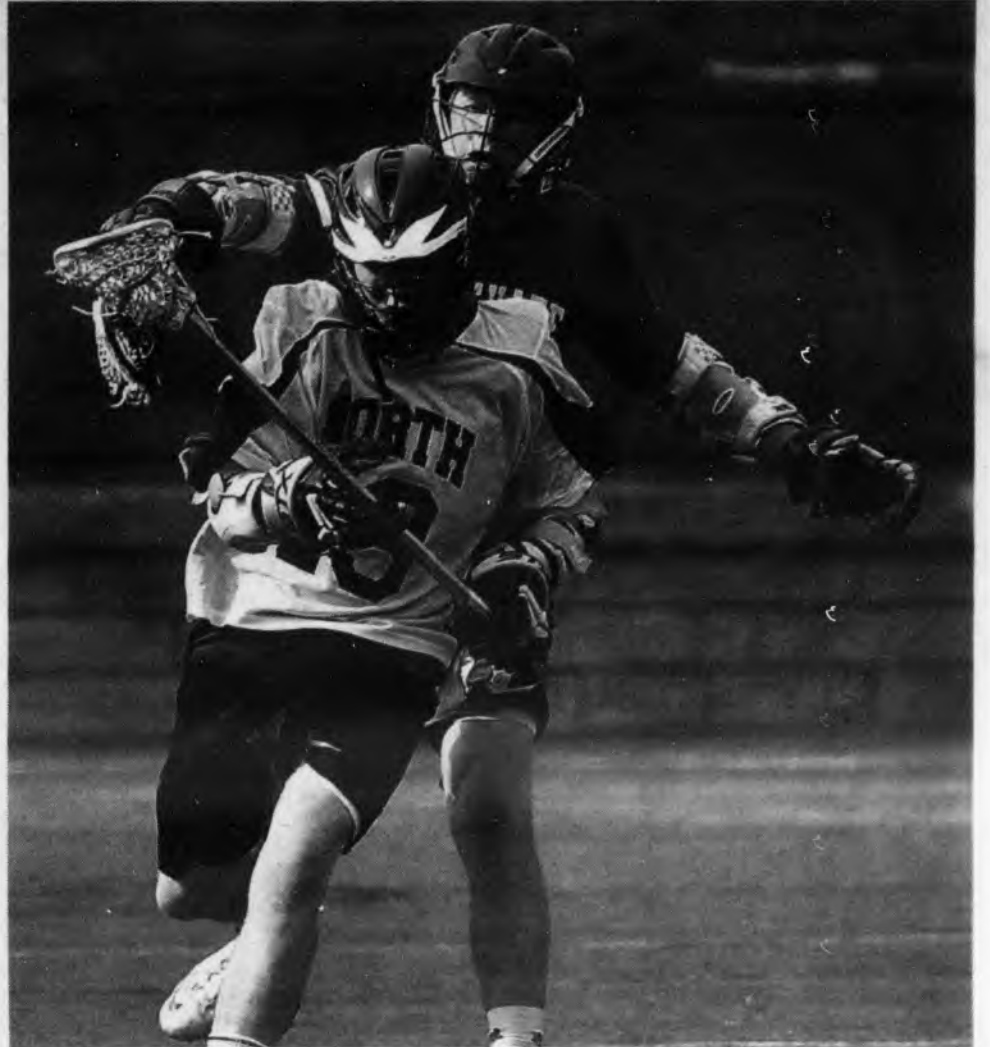

Glynn added four goals in the victory over South Shore. Hines scored the first goal of his varsity career. Freshman Corey Hernandez and Chris Gorman also scored in the Red Raiders' victory.

"It was a good feeling, it gave us a sense that we belonged on the winning side," said Joyce. "I felt good for the kids. It was good to see their enthusiasm."

The match was tied 8-8 at the half. It stayed tight through the third period until North was able to break down South Shore's defense. Glynn and Finn scored in a flurry of goals to open up a lead which North never surrendered. Greene was a big force in midfield for the entire game.

"We were able to get our transition game going and we scored a couple of quick goals to take the lead for good," said Joyce.

Chau backboned a strong defensive effort in the second half which yielded only two goals.

"We tightened up our defense in the second half and helped us take control of the match," said Joyce.

Finn had three goals and Gorman one in the loss to Hull.

"Gorman has developed into a solid, confident player for us," said Joyce.

North finished the week at 1-8 and hosts Hanover today (Thursday).

Quincy Boys' Lacrosse Edged By Sacred Heart

By JEFF OHLSON

Quincy High School boys' lacrosse fell to Sacred Heart Saturday, 8-7, after four quarters of back and forth action at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

For the Presidents, Steve Ross had three goals and Mitchell McGowan also chipped in with two of his own and one assist.

Head Coach Bob Foley said the Presidents got away from their strengths and struggled with consistency, two factors that ultimately were the difference in the game.

"They would have periods of time where they just got away from their strengths and I think that's when we suffer with our play the most - when we get away from what we do best," Foley said. "It was classic back and forth. We would play sloppy, Sacred Heart would score a few goals, we would come back strong and tie it up. You can only do that so many times before letting the other team get ahead really comes back to hurt you and at the end of the day we obviously just let them get a little too far ahead and couldn't overcome it before time ran out."

season record), it didn't start out well as they found themselves down 2-1 after the first quarter of play. But early in the second quarter, Quincy found some rhythm and scored two goals to go up 3-2 after only two minutes. Sacred Heart tied the game just before halftime on a rebound near the net.

"We are a young team, a team that consists mainly of sophomores. We are going to have inconsistencies and we are going to struggle with fundamentals at times, but hopefully that youth also brings with it some energy and some toughness," Foley said. "Is youth an excuse for poor play? Absolutely not, but it's just a part of it and hopefully moving forward we can get the experience we need and we can shed ourselves of the things that are holding us back right now."

Quincy would have a tough time in the third quarter as the Saints came out marching, scoring three goals unanswered. One of the goals came 13 seconds into the third while another came on a long pass from Sacred Heart's goalie to an attacker downfield that caught Quincy's defense on its heels. The Presidents would once again show their resiliency at the end of the third though as Quincy answered with two Steve Ross goals on drives up the middle to bring it to 6-5 in favor of Sacred Heart after three quarters.

To start the fourth, Quincy came out strong on defense, stifling the attack of the Saints. The Presidents also tied the game one minute into the final frame to make the score 6-6. However, towards the end of the fourth, Sacred Heart would pull away with two goals within a minute of each other, one of which came off a tipped Quincy inbounds pass, to bring the game in their control 8-6.

The Presidents rallied to score one more goal to bring it within one with four minutes left in the game and with eight seconds left that ultimately missed the net.

"We stuck with them out there but I don't think that's ever the goal. They are a talented team and we showed that we could have beaten them on a day where maybe we played a better game, a more consistent game. I think going forward we will see that too, more consistency. That's what we'll work on anyway," Foley said.

Quincy Youth Football, Cheer Sign-Ups May 19 At Pageant Field

Quincy Youth Football and Cheerleading will hold its Annual League-Wide Registration Event Sunday, May 19th from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Pageant Field Pavilion.

Representatives from all QYFL teams will be present at the Sign-up: North Quincy Apaches, Quincy Point Panthers, The Storm, West Quincy Elks, Houghs Neck Manets and Milton Mustangs.

The Quincy Youth Football League is one of the oldest youth football leagues in New England. In 2013, the League will kick off its 63rd consecutive season of operation.

The QYFL operates under a unique "Neighborhood Based Play" format, where the City of Quincy is divided into five neighborhood districts and children play with their friends for the local team in their area.

QYFL registration fees are among the lowest of all the youth sports programs in the city and each team provides all of the necessary equipment and uniforms. Fees are $125 for Tackle Football, $100 for Cheerleading and $75 for Flag Football.

This Season, the Tackle Football program will continue to operate under 3 Levels of Play:

- The Freshman Level for the Ages 8-10 in grades 3rd-5th.
- Junior Varsity for ages 11-12 in grades 6th & 7th.
- Varsity Level for 12-14 year olds in grade 7th & 8th.

This season, the QYFL will maintain the current weight restrictions for skill position players but, have voted to remove the upper weight limit restrictions and allow larger players to participate on the Offensive Line.

The Cheerleading program is now extended to 3 levels: The newly formed, Freshmen Level for children ages 6-9, Junior Varsity for ages 10-12 and Varsity for the 12-14 year olds.

After a successful inaugural season in 2012, the Flag Football Program has extended to include 4th Graders. Flag Football will now operate in 2 Divisions: a 1st and 2nd grade team and a 3rd & 4th grade team. Players entering 3rd and 4th grades will have the option of playing Tackle Football or Flag Football and are allowed to participate on both teams if they choose.

The QYFL will be distributing Flyers through the public schools over the next week. There will be a special show featuring the Quincy Youth Football League on QATV channel 8 on May 15-19. For more information on the League and its member teams, visit the QYFL on the web at www.QuincyYouthFootball.com.

Girls' Lacrosse

Presidents Down Red Raiders 13-4

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was one fine day for the Presidents.

All the pieces fit neatly together for Quincy's girls lacrosse team on just the right day. From attack to defense to goaltending, the Presidents showcased a complete set of skills against archrival North Quincy.

Sam McArdle, Gabby Zorkers, and Kerry Phelan each had a three goals and an assist, Eileen Skudris and Courtney Ryan backboned a sturdy match on defense and Maddy Kamb was steady and sure in goal as Quincy stopped North Quincy, 13-4 in a Patriot League contest at Veterans Stadium Monday.

"We played well. I'm happy with the improvement we've shown in our recent games," said Quincy coach Tim Lewis. "North played well, but with each match, I see more progress, more good things."

Lewis has reason to be pleased. His club finished an impressive week which included two wins (North and Abington), a thrilling, come-from-behind tie (Dedham) and a narrow loss to a strong team (Whitman-Hanson). Quincy went to 5-5-1 with the win and needs to win three of its last seven to make the tourney.

"I think the biggest area of improvement has been our defense. We've stepped it up," said Lewis. "We lost two one-goal games earlier this year to Brookline that I think we'd win now. Eileen, Courtney, Emily Hatfield, Olivia Wallace and Colleen Madden have all played well for us on defense."

Katie Burke, Leah Ryan, Kiera Clifford and Ciara Forde scored for the Red Raiders. Sophomore Marguerite Belcher played a remarkable game in goal for North, turning aside 16 shots, 10 in the first half. None of the saves were soft ones. All were blue-chip chances on free shots or point-blank drives from close range. She was quick with her stick and feet and poised in the face of a relentless attack.

"She was amazing," said North coach Megan Therrien. "She kept us going and kept us in the match. She was so good, we drew inspiration from her."

Quincy is fast and skilled on the front line, especially on wraparound moves from behind the net. Seven of the Presidents goals came on attacks which started behind the North net. Phelan scored all three of her goals from on quick, strong moves from behind the cage, including one early in the second half on which she moved out along the left wing, sped across the middle, kept possession and fired home a bullet for a pretty goal.

Zorkers, who is averaging three goals per game, worked the same area behind the net, set up her teammates and controlled the midfield with her rushes. McArdle transitioned the ball from defense to offense, and had two scoring rushes in the second half which covered more than half the field.

"We have good talent up front," said Lewis. "They are quick and they have the skill set to finish scoring plays."

Kamb and her defense were especially strong in the latter stages of the first half. Quincy jumped out to a 4-1 lead, but North, led by Burke, Clifford, Ryan and Forde took the play back and kept possession in the Quincy end. Kamb stopped three free shots and a golden chance at close range from Forde while Skudris was the anchor for the defense which gave up territory, but not many open scoring slots.

"Maddy has become a more dynamic goalie," said Quincy assistant coach Carolyn Hicks. "That's important. She's moving out, intercepting passes and playing with more confidence."

NORTH QUINCY'S KIERA CLIFFORD (#6) drives past Quincy's Jenny Scarnici to score one of four goals for the Red Raiders in Monday night's contest against QHS.

"Katie Burke rushed the ball very well and she was selfless looking for her teammates," said Therrien. "Forde created options for us and Leah Ryan energized us with her rushes. We had chances, but we want to get the ball to the right spots more often. Once we clean up our passing and catching fundamentals a little more, we'll be much better."

Emily Hatfield, Ryan, Noreen Plabutong and freshman Gabby Jerahian also scored for Quincy while Lindsey Nazzaro had an assist for the Presidents who field had a big game winning six ground balls.

Quincy played a good Whitman-Hanson team even until deep into the second half before losing 12-8. Kayla McArdle had three goals while Zorkers added a pair.

North dropped a pair of matches to Scituate and Dedham. Evelyn Scuzzarella and Kristin Abban played well against the Sailors. Molly Brown, Forde and Abban scored against Dedham.

Quincy hosts Hull Wednesday at 4 p.m. and travels to Duxbury Friday. North is at Hanover Thursday.

ARTHRITIS SUFFERERS' JOINT CONCERNS

Osteoarthritis, the most common form of arthritis, affects an estimated 20 million Americans. Known popularly as "wear and tear" arthritis, osteoarthritis is linked with cartilage degeneration that renders the joint painful and makes movement difficult. One of the enduring paradoxes surrounding this disease is that exercise, along with weight control and healthy eating habits, helps to reduce pain. How does an arthritis patient overcome the joint pain that prevents him or her from exercising enough to strengthen muscles and keep weight in check? For one, chiropractic treatment can help release joints that have become locked due to cartilage breakdown. As a result of regular chiropractic adjustments, patients may gain relief from irritated nerves and gain mobility.

Our goal is not merely to bring relief to your osteoarthritis pain, but to identify and correct the source of it as well. Call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We can provide you with a care program designed for your age, condition, and lifestyle. Find out how chiropractic care, combined with proper diet, exercise, and other aspects of good health and personal hygiene, can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy life to the fullest. We have the experience and expertise to give you the care you need. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! Healthy joints, no matter how old, do not become arthritic. Only unhealthy joints become arthritic!

P.S. The stronger the muscles surrounding an arthritic joint, the less stress the joint has to endure.

Red Raiders Bounce Back With Win Over Brockton

By JEFF OHLSON

North Quincy (12-1) boys' volleyball continued a successful season on Monday night as they defeated Brockton High in a sweep 3-0. The Raiders lost their first game of the season last Wednesday against Durfee in an away game.

Offensively Mike Tran lead the team again with 15 kills and defensively came away with 10 Digs. Felix Man was the emotional leader of them throughout, gathering the team together after every play and boosting moral on the court. Felix had 4 kills 10 digs and 2 blocks.

"Felix is a well-rounded player that can excel in any position on the team," said North Quincy coach Jason Cai. "He may not be the best player on the court but he has the most heart on the court with good communication on and off the court."

Sebastien François also had a good day with 10 kills and 4 blocks.

Coach Cai said he knows how important François can be.

"He is a big blocking presence for us when he is in the front row. He has been averaging five blocks a game," Cai said.

In Set 1, North Quincy started strong against what was a much bigger team. Felix Man had a good set with 2 kills and 5 digs and 2 blocks. Andrew Sok also played well, picking up 5 digs. Offensively for North, Sebastien François played great picking up 5 kills. The Raiders won the first set 25-

In the second game, the Red Raiders had a strong serving presence with 5 aces. Mike Tan and François both picked up 4 kills each and Vincent Tran was put in place of Matt MacPhail due to injury. Tran stepped up to the challenge passing well and adding 5 digs and 1 block as North won 25-14.

The third game was more intense as Brockton was finally shaking off what was a poor start and began playing as a team. There were five lead changes before North Quincy took control but neither team enjoyed more than a 3-point lead.

Andrew Sok lead the team with 7 points and Sebastien picked up 2 blocks as North Quincy won the set 25-22 and the series 3-0.

24-Hour Soccer Tournament Friday-Saturday To Benefit Color Cancer Awareness

By EMILY TAFT

On Friday soccer players will team up with Mass General and the New England Revolution to participate in "AliveAndKickn" to raise money and awareness for colon cancer and genetic cancer by playing 24 hours of soccer at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

After being diagnosed with colon cancer at the age of 29 and then again at 40, New Jersey native Dave Dubin decided he wanted to bring more awareness to colon cancer and soccer and came up with the idea of the AliveAndKickn event.

"I looked at the colon cancer world and realized there was barely any fundraising events or awareness about it," said Dubin. "I wanted to hold something different from what is normally done in the fundraising world, I wanted to reach an audience in a unique way so I came up with the idea of AliveAndKickn. The name came from the fact that I seem to not only be very good at surviving but I have played soccer since I was five and that's how we came up with the name, it's something very positive."

Colon cancer is the second leading cancer killer overall, and the number one cancer killer among non-smokers, and as many women die of colon cancer as men. People under the age of 50 getting colon cancer has risen four percent a year for decades.

"Almost as many women died from colon cancer as men, so I knew the event I wanted to hold had to reach a number of different audiences," said Dubin. "We wanted to reach different ethnicities as well because typically they don't get screened for the cancer, for a number of different reasons. The whole point is to bring awareness to colon cancer as well as soccer."

This is the second year the AliveAndKickathon has taken place, but the first year it has made its way to Quincy, which Dubin said was because Quincy has the potential to draw people from all locations.

"This is our second year doing this, first one was in New Jersey and we have covered a lot of ground very quickly since then," said Dubin. "We were looking for a location that would draw people in, not only because of the event but what they could do around the location while there."

The money raised from the event will not only go towards research for colon cancer but to Mass General Hospital as well. Dubin said that the hope is to partner with a local hospital wherever they take the event to, and to also partner with each professional soccer team. During the event at Pageant Field Dubin is expecting an appearance by the New England Revolution's mascot Slyde and the RevGirls, as well as the possibility of an appearance by a player from the team.

"The professional teams like it because it gets them awareness, my hope is to get every team on board and to partner with us," said Dubin. "The hospitals like partnering with us because it helps their programs."

Those looking to participate can register as individuals, a group, or a full team, and if registered early enough you can lock in the timeslot you want. Participants can play for two hours anytime from 6 p.m. May 10th to 6 p.m. May 11th. Throughout the 24-hours, food trucks are scheduled to stop by, booths will be set up and available with information on colon cancer, and a calendar (Colonder) with colon cancer survivors pictured will be available to purchase.

Participants will receive a ticket to the May 11th New England Revolution game against the New York Red Bulls, along with some AliveAndKickn gear including a soccer bag, bracelet and t-shirt.

"So far the response has been amazing. We have had many people tell us, 'this is different, this is something I would like to do,' and they are signing up or saying they will be there," said Dubin. "The people of Quincy have been overwhelmingly supportive. We want to make this a positive event that people will want to come back again to next year."

High School Scores & More

By BILL GRIFFIN

Senior catcher Pat Gould had four hits and scored two runs to help the North Quincy baseball team past Hanover, 11-10 in a Patriot League game last week. Josh Hayward also had four hits, scored two runs and added four RBI.

In other action, first-place Silver Lake topped the Red Raiders, 7-3.

North dropped a 7-2 decision to Middleboro who scored six in the first inning. Hayward drove in Pat Gould with one run and Mike Alibrandi singled to knock in Nick McGaughey with the second run for the Red Raiders.

Hayward, a senior righty, settled down after a tough first inning and used a good, live fastball to strike out three, give just two hits and no earned runs the rest of the way.

North ended the week at 6-7 (4-3 in the league) and needs to win four of its last seven to make the state tournament.

North is at Scituate Wednesday and at Pembroke Friday.

Mitchell McGowan scored four goals and Andy Johnson turned aside 13 shots to lift Quincy boys lacrosse team to its fourth victory of the year, 10-6 over Dedham. Quincy hosts Duxbury Friday.

Junior Natasha Sautter pitched an excellent game, but North Quincy's softball team dropped a tough 2-1 non-league decision to Archbishop Williams last week.

The Bishops pushed across the winning run in the seventh on a bases-loaded ground ball.

Sautter struck out five and walked just one.

"Natasha pitched a great game and we played well defensively," said coach Kerry Ginty.

Sophomore Courtney Campo had two hits while Kelly Thompson drove home North's run. The Red Raiders had a great chance early, but left the bases loaded in the first.

Lauren Magoon had a solid defensive game at third and junior Dana Grasselli came up from the JVs and played well at first.

In other action North fell to a powerful Silver Lake team. Liz Kelly hit a leadoff home run for the Red Raiders.

North finished the week at 3-5 and will host Pembroke Friday at 4:00.

Quincy's softball team posted three wins in four games last week.

Leann McColgan had a double and two RBI to lead Quincy's softball team to a 3-2 win over Whitman-Hanson in Patriot League action.

Junior Kelsey Tucker hurled a complete-game four-hitter to help the Presidents past Scituate, 11-4.

Devon Varmahmoodi belted a pair of home runs and Devon McMahon had three hits and an RBI to lead the Presidents past Pembroke, 16-9.

In other action, Middleboro erased an early 4-0 lead and dropped the Presidents, 8-4.

Quincy finished the week at 5-5 and travels to Hingham Wednesday, May 8 and to Duxbury Friday, May 10.

Quincy boys tennis team earned its third win of the season with a 3-2 decision over Whitman-Hanson. Guang Huang won 7-5, 7-5 at second singles. Alex Nguyen and Nam Thai earned a 7-5, 7-5 win in first doubles. Vincent Chen and Kevin Truong took a three-setter, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 for the Presidents.

The Quincy girls tennis team defeated Whitman-Hanson, 5-0.

Pembroke dropped Quincy, 4-1. The presidents Emily Sato won at first singles while Rachel Smith played well before losing a three-setter at No.2 singles.

The North Quincy girls tennis team defeated Hanover Monday.

Winning in singles was senior Tiffany Leung 6-0, 6-2. Senior Mallory Devoe 6-3, 6-3 and junior Sanjana Kadivel 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

With the win, the Red Raiders improved to 5-3 on the season.

Classic Homes Real Estate Announces Charity Project

Classic Homes Real Estate, 12 Beach St., Quincy is celebrating its 25th anniversary as a consumer brokerage provider on the South Shore.

As a part of the celebration, Classic Homes is launching a new project with a personal commitment to help cure the terribly debilitating and devastating disease known as Alzheimer's.

Classic Homes Real Estate President Barry Rabinovitz will donate $250 in the memory of his mother Sylvia Roffo, (who recently passed away due to complications from Alzheimer's disease) to the "Cure Alzheimer's Fund." Rabinovitz and his mother co-founded Classic Homes Real Estate on May 7, 1988.

"This cash donation will be made in the name of any person who makes a real estate referral which results in a successful sales closing for Classic Homes Real Estate," Rabinovitz said. "Once a year, a drawing will take place out of everyone who referred that successful closed business to the company and the winner will get roundtrip airline tickets for 2 and a week's lodging at a luxury waterfront timeshare resort in Aruba," he said.

Located in Wellesley Hills, The Cure Alzheimer's Fund is a non-profit public charity organization. Their mission is to "fund research with the highest probability of preventing, slowing or reversing Alzheimer's disease. To date, they've raised almost 32 million dollars for research into this devastating disease.

"Helping people with their real estate needs for 25 years has been extremely gratifying" Rabinovitz said. "My Mom loved people and I'd like to personally thank all those we've helped over the years with the largest investment of their lives.

"Our new Referral/Donor Program to help cure Alzheimer's is our way to thank our clients for their continued loyalty and support and to help people whose lives are forever impacted by this terrible disease."

Moving Scams Still A Problem For Many

May is National Moving Month, which kicks off the busiest time of year for Americans changing residences. It also means unlicensed movers and dishonest scammers are waiting to take advantage of unwary consumers. Better Business Bureau is again joining with the American Moving & Storage Association (AMSA) to provide important tips on how to avoid scams.

In 2012, BBB received over 1.4 million moving-related inquiries and more than 9,300 complaints against movers. Complaints included damaged or missing items, big price increases over originally-quoted estimates, late deliveries, and goods being "held hostage" for additional (disputed) payment.

"Finding a mover you can trust can be easy, if you take the time to do so," said Rodney Davis, senior vice president with the Council of Better Business Bureaus. "Check with BBB first before you find yourself paying thousands of extra dollars for damaged or lost items. BBB has more than 17,000 Business Reviews on companies that provide moving-related services."

"A con artist with just a truck and a website can claim to be a legitimate mover with unfortunate results for consumers who don't check out a company in advance," agreed AMSA President and CEO Linda Bauer Darr. "When it comes to such an important decision, you can save yourself a lot of problems by finding a mover who puts customer service and integrity first. For interstate moves, that means an AMSA-certified ProMover."

BBB and AMSA offer the following checklist for finding a trustworthy moving company:

- Research the company thoroughly. While state regulations vary, all interstate movers must, at minimum, be licensed by the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration. FMCSA assigns a unique motor carrier number that can be verified at protectyourmove.gov.

- Get at least three written in-home estimates. Not all price quotes online or over the phone are legitimate, and crooks are not likely to send an estimator to your home in advance. Also, remember that the lowest estimate can sometimes be an unrealistic, low-ball offer, which may cost you more in the end.

- Know your rights. Research your rights with either the FMCSA for interstate moves, or with the appropriate state agency for moves just within that state. Interstate movers must give you two booklets detailing your rights. Also, enlist the help of BBB or local law enforcement if the company threatens to hold your belongings hostage.

- Consider accepting full value protection. It may cost a few dollars more up front, but it can provide some peace of mind and eliminate headaches after your move. Purchasing full (replacement) value protection from your mover means any lost or damaged articles will be repaired or replaced, or a cash settlement will be made to repair the item or to replace it at its current market value, regardless of age. It's important to note, for example, that the required minimum coverage of 60 cents per pound would not cover the replacement cost of a flat panel TV if damaged in transit. The cost of full value protection must be included in the initial estimate you receive for an interstate move. FMCSA requires interstate movers to offer arbitration to help settle disputed claims.

On May 2nd, at approximately 11:55 a.m., Drug Unit Detectives were contacted by Lt. Shangold of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office regarding an address that he was just at in Quincy. Lieutenant Shangold said that he and Deputy Reynolds were at an address on Norfolk St. serving an administrative warrant.

Once inside, he opened the door that led to the cellar and immediately detected an overwhelming odor of raw marijuana in extreme heat. When he walked down the steps, he observed multiple potted plants (approximately 30 plants) that were green. Lieutenant Shangold and Deputy Reynolds immediately recognized the plants as marijuana through their training and experience. In addition, they observed heat lamps and multiple wires throughout the cellar that were hanging from the ceiling.

Lieutenant Shangold exited the cellar and contacted Quincy Police Detective Keenan. Moments later, Detective Keenan and Sergeant Tapper arrived on scene and met with Lt. Shangold and Deputy Reynolds. Detective Keenan responded to the station to write an application for a search warrant while Sergeant Tapper notified other members of the Drug Unit to respond to the address to secure the scene.

Deputy Reynolds said that he had a brief conversation with a male who was putting down mulch in the front yard. This male, later identified as the homeowner, drove off abruptly with the mulch in the back. Sergeant Tapper put out a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) for this vehicle. A search of the immediate area was conducted, but the vehicle was not located.

Detective Keenan was granted a search warrant at Quincy District Court. At 3 p.m., a protective sweep of the residence was conducted with the assistance of the DEA. Detectives located 63 marijuana plants in the basement, 18 baby plants of dried marijuana, a space heater, grow lamps, and other items indicative of sophisticated indoor marijuana grow operation.

While the search warrant was being executed, Officer Tom Ford located the suspect vehicle with the mulch parked on Adams St. Officer Ford queried the vehicle and learned that the vehicle was registered to a nearby address. Detective O'Brien arrived on scene and knocked on the Adams St. residence, where he was buzzed into the foyer. Two young boys ages 13 and 9 answered the door. Detective O'Brien asked if their father could come to the door. The boys told Detective O'Brien that they did not know where he went.

Both boys looked confused, as if they didn't know what to do. Detective O'Brien noticed that one of the boys kept looking towards the back door area and then saw an adult male peak his head around a door. Detective O'Brien yelled to the male to come to the door to talk but the male kept hiding, so the Detective asked the boys to encourage the male to talk with him. The boys identified the male as their father. After talking with their father, the boys started walking back towards Detective O'Brien. At this time, the father took off running out a back door. Detective O'Brien ran after the father/suspect and noted that this suspect had a similar appearance to the photo of a Massachusetts License found at the Norfolk St. residence.

Detective O'Brien ordered the suspect to stop but he continued to run away. The suspect ran down Alrick Rd., and then cut between apartment buildings located on Furnace Brook Pkwy. Detective O'Brien caught up to the suspect in the Walgreen's parking lot on Adams St., where he handcuffed him. A pat-frisk uncovered a single key, which would later be used to open the vehicle transporting the mulch. Officer Ford transported the suspect back to where Deputy Reynolds positively identified him as the person he observed at the Norfolk St. address earlier.

Detectives O'Brien and Keenan returned to the Adams St. apartment where the back door was still open. The Detectives knocked and announced "Quincy Police" but no one came to the door, even though they could hear young children talking. Knowing that two young boys had answered the door earlier, the Detectives entered the home to check on the welfare of the children. Detective O'Brien located an adult female and three children hiding in the bedroom (a fourth young child would be found hiding in the closet).

All were advised to come into the living room where Detective O'Brien had a conversation with the adult female. Detective Coen advised the female of her Miranda Rights but she indicated that she did not speak English. She stated that she lived there with a male. When asked what her husband's name was, she said she didn't know. When asked where he lives, again she said she didn't know. She stated she didn't know anything about a male being in the house earlier or why the Police were there.

She was asked to accompany the Police outside so she could identify the suspect who was sitting in the back of the Police cruiser. Detective Coen asked her if she recognized the person sitting in the back of the cruiser (her husband) and she stated, "I don't know." Detective Coen asked the suspect inside the cruiser if he recognized the female and he identified her as his wife. While Detectives Coen and O'Brien spoke with the couple, Detective Keenan contacted the Division of Children and Families about the children. In the best interest of the children, it was determined that they would be transported to the Quincy Medical Center for evaluation.

Officer Joe Paccioretti transported the father/suspect to the station where the 37-year-old Quincy resident was charged with, "Trafficking in Class D, Conspiracy, Child Endangerment, and Misleading a Police Investigation." Prior to clearing the home where the plants were, the Building Department arrived on scene and after an inspection, the house was declared inhabitable due to the unsafe wiring. National Grid was contacted to shut the electric power be cut to the house.

Jean G. Morrissey, 89

A funeral Mass for Jean G. Morrissey, 89, of Quincy was celebrated April 20 at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Ms. Morrissey died April 18.

A devout Catholic and lifetime member of St. John the Baptist parish in Quincy, she was a member of St. John's Sodality. She attended St. John's Parochial School, Quincy Junior High School and Quincy High School, graduating in 1942.

She began her working career with Bethlehem Steel at Quincy's legendary Fore River Shipyard, just in time for the shipbuilding boom of WWII, and continued to work there following the takeover by General Dynamics, retiring as chief telephone operator in 1989 after 47 years. She was a member of the former Fore River retirees "Old-Timers Club."

During her life, Ms. Morrissey found meaning in her faith, in her love of family, her family's pet dogs, as well as her two much-loved cats. In years past, she travelled on summer vacations with her parents, driving on a number of occasions to her mother's childhood home at Cardigan North on Prince Edward Island, Canada.

In 1953, Ms. Morrissey was the first person in her extended family to purchase a car — a brand new Chrysler. She loved to drive, and her quiet, meek personality often belied her driving prowess, confident and with nerves of steel. In the 1960s, as her nephews attained driving and dating age, it is safe to say that without use of her '63 Chevy Impala, they would have been dateless.

She was known by family, friends and neighbors to be generous, kind and loyal. It has been said by many that she never uttered a bad word about anyone. Her late sister once said of her honesty "Jean would rather starve to death before she would take a crumb of bread from anyone without asking." Her closest surviving family members, "Fran's kids," recount often how important she was to them growing up in difficult times, for her emotional support and strength, for outings to Nantasket beach, and for helping to provide Christmases and birthdays.

Ms. Morrissey was "Auntie" to 33 nieces and nephews spanning three generations, the latest arriving only a few weeks ago. Hairplace One Raises $2,130 For One Fund

By EMILY TAFT

Hairplace One at 85 Quincy Ave. in Quincy raised $2,130 during a three-hour haircut event Sunday to benefit the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings.

"We just wanted to do something good for the One Fund and for Boston," said Salon owner Ron Affsa. "I had a lot of family at the finish line during the marathon and a couple running in the race so we wanted to donate to the cause."

About 25 people arrived at the salon between 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Sunday. Customers paid full price for their haircuts but Affsa said that 100 percent of the proceeds went to the One Fund Boston. Affsa said that if the fund is still open next year he would consider holding another haircutting event.

The salon's staff donated their time during the three-hour fundraiser. Staff included: Laura Affsa, Sareva Sakulich, Amy Clifford, Caitlin Sarofeen, Sara Badzmierowski, Elaine Greenough, Jackie Shaughnessy, Jessica Kennedy, Loren McBride, Janet Kent, Sheryl Getchell, Lisa Alongi, Cheryl Affsa, and Christina Smith.

"I just want to thank my staff for donating their time for the event," said Affsa. "It was a great success."

School Budget Hearing June 5

By EMILY TAFT

On Wednesday, June 5th at 6 p.m. a public hearing will be held at City Hall regarding the Quincy Public School's FY2014 budget. Members of the School Committee along with Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro are preparing to put together a budget with a $3.6 million increase over the current budget.

DeCristofaro updated school committee members during the May 8th meeting on what they can expect for the budget next year.

"We have a $3.6 million increase in our budget this year, a no layoff budget, which is good news to us," said DeCristofaro. "Our budget will be one, certainly that builds, not as reducing, we'll be restoring, we'll be building and shifting. As always we'll work together by way of shared decision making."

The requested budget is a total of $91.15 million, which is up $3.6 million from last year's $87.55 million. DeCristofaro said that the increase would allow for the school system to provide items for the new common core along with fulfilling contract obligations.

"The $3.6 million increase allows our school system to fulfill all of our contractual obligations, as well as provides us to look at items we've talked about like the common core text, and library support staff," said DeCristofaro. "When you are building a budget you build in from students and then outside to academic expenses. When you have a budget that you need to reduce you start from the outside and go in, protect-

Bregoli: Upgrade Student-Athlete Grade Participation Policy

By EMILY TAFT

School Committee member Paul Bregoli is looking to raise the standards for the student athlete's grade policy from being able to fail two classes and still play a sport to only one failing grade.

"I think the policy we have in place right now sends the wrong message," said Bregoli. "We are still in the talking stages but everyone at the (policy) subcommittee meeting was in agreement that the standard we have is too low and needs to be upgraded to a minimum of one failed subject."

Bregoli added that hypothetically a student in high school can be failing two subjects and have four D's in the others and still be allowed to play a sport, which is the bare minimum requirement set by the MIAA.

"When I was out a couple years ago running for this seat people talked about raising the bar," said Bregoli. "This subject was something that I heard a lot from

Library Hours Expanded

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's Finance Committee approved a $300,000 increase in the Library Department's budget that keeps the main library open on Saturdays in the summer and will leave the three branch libraries open longer during the week.

Mayor Tom Koch's proposed budget for FY14, which starts July 1, gives the Library Department a total of $2.8 million, up from the $2.5 million in this year's budget. During the first budget hearing, held Monday night, new Library Director Megan Allen told the committee the mayor's proposed library budget would restore services, including Saturday summer hours, that had to be cut during the recession.

"It's basically funding that restores some of the services that we had to eliminate because of our budget cuts a couple years ago - that includes restoring our Saturday hours in the summer," Allen said.

"Saturday is our busiest day in terms of the number of items that are checked out per hour and many families can only use the library on the weekend. We're really thrilled to be open seven days a week, twelve months a year again."

The budget also includes money to add evening hours to the library's three branches, located on Sea Street in Adams Shore, Beale Street in Wollaston, and Hancock Street in North Quincy. In 2011 branch hours were cut drastically, and the branches have only been open from 1-5 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. Allen said the FY14 budget will enable the branches to stay open during some evening hours, which customers at those branches preferred over other options.

"We do have some survey data from a survey we conducted when we were going through our strategic planning process last year," Allen said. "We did

NQHS Students On Quiz Show Sunday

A team of students representing North Quincy High School will appear in the championship round of High School Quiz Show this Sunday.

Six students—seniors Tim Bill, Cynthia Nelson, Kasey Shen, and Nathan Donohue and juniors Yi Fung and Celeste Dang—were on the team from North Quincy. They began the competition in November, going up against students from 89 other schools from across the state.

The North Quincy team was one of 16 teams to advance to the tournament round, which taped in February. North Quincy opened the tournament by defeating Hopkinton, then bested Acton-Boxborough in the quarterfinals. In the semifinal matchup, which aired May 5, North Quincy knocked off Lincoln-Sudbury.

The championship game, against Lexington, airs this Sunday, May 19, at 6:30 p.m. on WGBH 2.

The winning team will receive a trophy for the school, plaques for each team member and coach, and an award of $250 for the school. The winner of the match also faces the winner New Hampshire public television's Granite State Challenge in the Bay State vs. Granite State Governor's Cup, which airs May 26.

Mystery Aircraft Puzzles Residents

Residents from around Quincy are puzzled over why a low-flying aircraft has been circling around the city for over a week.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said he's heard from more than a dozen residents, as recently as Monday night, who've either seen the plane itself or heard the low-humming noise associated with it. He's also heard reports of other residents noting the same thing over Wollaston. Residents, Palmucci said, are already on edge given the recent Boston Marathon bombing.

"Folks are already on edge," Palmucci said. "Seeing a small plane circling the neighborhood at all hours of the day raises some concerns."

Palmucci said he spoke to Quincy Police, who confirmed the plane wasn't one of theirs. He also contacted the FAA, and while they confirmed it was an authorized flight they wouldn't confirm or deny it was law enforcement related.

"People have supreme confidence in law enforcement. If it was confirmed as a law enforcement flight people would have some relief," Palmucci said.

Palmucci doubts that the flight is intended to be secretive, given that many people have been able to spot the plane from their front yards or have heard it flying. If the plane were trying to be covert, he explained, it would be flying much higher in the sky where it would go unnoticed.

"Whoever or whatever they are surveilling know it's up there," Palmucci. "If they wanted to be undetectable they'd fly at a higher altitude."

DPW Bike Safety Rodeo Saturday

The City of Quincy Department of Public Works will host its first Bicycle Safety Rodeo at the DPW on Saturday, May 18 from noon to 3 p.m.

The public is invited and hundreds are expected to attend the event in celebration of National Public Works Week that boasts free prizes and entertainment, including a bicycle skills and safety assessment designed by partners AAA and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation.

Geared for children in grades K through 9, participants in the safety and skills assessment are required to wear a helmet and submit their bike to a free safety check by Paul Anderson of Anderson Bicycle in Quincy.

Extra helmets will be on hand and a safety waiver is required to be eligible to win one of two brand new bicycles donated by Quincy State Representative Ron Mariano.

"With the summer fast upon us our objective is to encourage fun, safe bicycling in our city. So, along with the learning there will be lots of entertaining things to do and enjoy in the parking lot of 55 Sea Street," said DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi.

The event will feature songs and games by Quincy DJ Joe Fasci and skill demonstrations by The Boston Bike Guy and his group of BMX riders on ramps and slide bars. Quincycles will man a bike helmet decorating table and Sparkle the Clown is also expected to make an appearance.

The Quincy Citizens Police Academy Alumni Association is manning the grill with free hot dogs, chips, ice cream and drinks.

"We want to make bicycling fun for everyone and at the same time teach our children to ride smart and safely," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

Everyone is invited to attend this free event.

All the food and fun is sponsored Quincy Public Schools, District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, State Rep. Ron Mariano, Kiwanas Club of Quincy, the Department of Transportation and Safe Routes to Schools, AAA, Quincy Citizens Police Academy Alumni Association, Anderson Bicycle at 380 Washington St., the Boston Bike Guy at 1450 Washington St., Quincycles, and Walmart.

The Bike Safety and Rodeo is a component of National Public Works Week which the city is celebrating from May 18-24. Recently, the Traffic and Parking Department was added to the Department of Public Works.

National Public Works Week is a celebration of the men and women who provide and maintain the infrastructure and services collectively known as the DPW. It also calls attention to the importance of public works in community life.

The Week seeks to enhance the prestige of the often-unsung heroes of our society—the professionals who serve the public good every day with quiet dedication. The week is marked with resolutions and proclamations from the mayor, city councilors, and the DPW Commissioner as well as essay contests by the Quincy Public School's 4th graders, a banner contest for 5th graders and a beautification of public areas contests.

Archdiocese, City Discuss 'Best Use' For Site; 'Friends' Group Exploring Litigation

Star Of Sea Property May Be Put On Market

By SCOTT JACKSON
Star of the Sea Parish in Squantum could soon be sold after a top Vatican court rejected an appeal by a group of parishioners.

In 2004 the Archdiocese of Boston announced that the Bellevue Road church would be one of more than 50 parishes in Greater Boston to be closed. Subsequently in July 2011 the archdiocese relegated Star of the Sea to profane use, meaning that it was no longer considered a site for worship.

The Friends of Star of the Sea, a group of 150 parishioners that first formed to protest the closing, appealed the decision to relegate the church to profane use. That appeal was rejected by the Apostolic Signatura, the Vatican's highest court of appeals, allowing the archdiocese to sell the church if they chose.

Terrence Donilon, a spokesman for the archdiocese, said there is no timetable for when a potential sale would happen. At the moment, the archdiocese is in talks with the city to determine what the best use of the property would be.

"The property can now be marketed for potential sale. We have been in contact with the City of Quincy and have made no decisions regarding the future use of the church property," Donilon said. "The Archdiocese has also been in communication with representatives of the appeal."

The Friends of Star of the Sea plan to hold a meeting at 1 p.m. Sunday, May 19, at the First Church of Squantum to discuss their options going forward. Maureen Mazrimas, one of the leaders of the group, said litigation is an option that will be considered.

"We're definitely exploring litigation," Mazrimas said.

The Star of the Sea property includes two lots — one for the church itself and another for the rectory — with a total of 37,200 square feet of land and an assessed value of over $1.7 million, according to the city assessor's online database. It is in a Residential A zoning district, which limits by-right development to single-family homes with a minimum lot size of 7,650 square feet.

Those zoning restrictions mean that any developer wishing to build more than four single family units on the site would need to seek Zoning or Planning Board approval. Mazrimas said any project larger than the four single-family units would receive strong opposition from the neighborhood.

"Even members of the First Church have told us there would be significant community opposition to anything other than single-family residences," Mazrimas said.

Mazrimas, a realtor, believes the property wouldn't be as attractive to developers if all they could build were those four single-family units. One developer told her he would only pay the archdiocese $1 million for the entire property because of all the work needed before any units could be built — including razing the church and rectory and upgrading utilities.

"If the most you can get is single-family houses it's not as lucrative," Mazrimas said. "One developer told me he wouldn't be willing to pay more than $250,000 per lot."

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Walking Tour Saturday

Quincy City Historian Tom Galvin will lead a Historical Walking Tour of Mount Wollaston Cemetery Saturday, May 18 beginning at 1 p.m.

The tour will highlight Quincy's renowned granite industry. Participants will learn about Quincy granite, notable granite monuments and Quincy's granite industry leaders.

Also discussed during the tour are many of Quincy's leading citizens of the 19th and 20th centuries including the Adams and Quincy families; mayors, civic and business leaders and more.

Tour participants should meet at the Greenleaf Street gate on the Southern Artery.

THE LADIES OF the School Committee have joined the Quincy Chamber of Commerce's 2013 Health Workplace Challenge. They have formed a team and started their six week healthier lifestyle program by meeting with their coaches at Fitness Unlimited. The ladies (from left to right) are Anne Mahoney, Barbara Isola, Emily Lebo and Team Captain Kathy Hubley. Like all team members they will be keeping a log of their physical activity and dietary intake and will have weekly sessions to monitor their progress.

There's never been a better time to buy a first home

Three reasons why:

- 1) Rates are at all-time lows — a huge advantage for first-time homebuyers. Your money goes further. And you get to lock in historically-low monthly mortgage payments.
- 2) The eastern Massachusetts real estate market tends to be resilient. Prices here have stabilized... or are starting to move up. Waiting now could cost you later.
- 3) With Colonial Federal's First-Time Homebuyer Program, you get: > A reduced downpayment with no PMI required > A mortgage with a competitive rate > You work one-to-one with our responsive lenders, professionals who want to help you get into your first home > All from a local neighborhood bank specializing in helping people buy homes since 1889.

This is an outstanding opportunity — most likely once-in-a-lifetime — for first-time homebuyers. Is that you...or someone you know? Come see us. Or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

'Red, White And Blue' Day

We all know -- or should know -- that June 14 is Flag Day.

But in one corner of the city, the second Saturday in May is fast becoming "Red, White and Blue" day.

This past Saturday -- May 11 -- about 50 volunteers decorated Flags for Veterans Island in Fort Square with more than 150 American flags. What began with 10 American Flags just four years ago has blossomed into a beautiful and touching tribute to veterans who paid the ultimate sacrifice, have passed on after serving our nation or are protecting our freedom in the U.S. military today.

"There's nothing more beautiful than these flags," said Gold Star Mother Terry Davis, looking out at the sea of red, white and blue fluttering in a gentle breeze at the island located at School and Pleasant Streets.

Mrs. Davis, a former Quincy resident who now lives in Holbrook, is the mother of the late Richard S. Davis, Jr. Her son joined the Army and became a Green Beret after graduating from Quincy High School in 1966. He was killed in action in 1968 during the Vietnam War.

"He was a Green Beret in Special Operations and went out on a patrol and they were trying to rescue some other Green Berets when he was shot and killed," Mrs. Davis said just feet from an American Flag placed in memory of Richard Davis by fellow classmates of the QHS Class of 1966.

"I'm surprised the Class remembered him with a memorial flag because it's been a long time. He died in 1968. That's quite a while ago. It's a wonderful tribute to him and other veterans."

Mrs. Davis said her son Richard followed in the footsteps of her late husband, Richard Sr. He too served in the Army and passed away some time ago. Her husband and son are buried side-by-side in a cemetery in North Adams.

"Richard was a great kid and he did what he wanted to do -- serve his country," she said, clutching his memorial flag.

With the support and generosity of the QHS Class of 1966, the Sons of the American Legion Squadron 294, Ladies Auxiliary and Morrisette Legion Post and others, Flags for Veterans Island has become the city's newest landmark.

The number of flags on the island has nearly tripled since Veterans' Day 2012. Last November, 57 flags adorned the Island. Today, there are 157 flags with time and room to accommodate a few more before Memorial Day, said SAL Commander and Flag for Veterans Island Coordinator Paul Moody.

The island had a humble beginning with 10 flags in 2010. Moody says he's been overwhelmed by the popularity of the island and the support it has received from throughout the city.

"Hopefully we'll get a few more flags. We can accommodate a few more before Memorial Day," Moody says.

To have a flag raised in memory or in honor of veteran, contact Moody at 617-472-5952. The cost is a one-time donation of $30. Flags decorate the island before and after Memorial Day and Veterans' Day.

The Flags for Veterans Island is a patriotic setting for the Sons of the American, Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post Memorial Day Observance Sunday, May 26 at 1 p.m. Part of the ceremony includes a roll call of all the flags that have been donated in memory or in honor of service men and women.

Surveying the island on Saturday, Moody believes there's room for another 150 flags. Once the island is filled, the Memorial Day and Veterans' Day ceremonies held at the location could be moved to the street to accommodate guest speakers, color guards and spectators.

The Memorial Day observance will be extra special this year.

First, the SAL has placed a special American flag at the front of the island in memory of the victims of the Boston

Marathon bombing tragedy. Fastened to the flag at the top of its pole are blue and yellow ribbons in memory of the victims. The two yellow banners also are imprinted with the words "Boston Strong" and "Quincy Strong."

Second, a bench will be dedicated in honor of the Quincy High School Class of 1966 for their support of the Flags for Veterans Island initiative.

Third, a flag that was flown over the White House during the Reagan Administration will be raised at the main pole of the island during the ceremony.

Steve Hartford, a 1966 graduate of Quincy High School and a retired U.S. Air Force veteran, is loaning the ceremonial flag for the Memorial Day observance.

The five-foot by eight-foot American flag was raised at the White House on Aug. 31, 1987 in recognition of Hartford's 21 years of service in the Air Force. He retired on that day and Hartford said the flag has not been raised on a flagpole since.

Hartford, reached at his home in Caribou, ME, said he is loaning the flag to Paul Moody for the Quincy ceremony because he wants to be a part of honoring veterans, especially his high school classmates who were killed in action during the Vietnam War.

"I know Paul Moody has put an awful lot of time into this project and I'd like to be a part of it. I know some of the guys who didn't come back. I like knowing they are being remembered."

After graduating from Quincy High, Hartford worked at the Fore River Shipyard for a few months before enlisting in the U.S. Air Force. During the Vietnam War, he was stationed at an APO (Air Post Office) in Nah Trang, Vietnam. He met his wife while he was serving in Vietnam and retired in 1987 with the rank of Technical Sergeant (E-6).

Hartford, who has not visited Quincy for some time, says he is looking forward to attending the Memorial Day observance. He'll be making the more than 400-mile drive from Caribou to Quincy in his 1958 copper and white Edsel.

The flag he received upon his retirement from the Air Force was arranged through the office of former Maine Sen. Olympia Snowe.

His son has brought the flag to a show-and-tell in school but it has not flown on a pole since that August day in our nation's capital nearly 26 years ago.

That will change in less than two weeks in Quincy at the Sons of the American Legion Memorial Day Observance Sunday, May 27 at 1 p.m.

"This is my way of contributing to a great cause," Hartford adds.

QUINCY -- CITY OF AMERICAN FLAGS?

A Quincy Sun reader recently wrote to us about the number of American flags he sees -- or doesn't see -- in Quincy. He'd like to see more homes and businesses show their patriotism by flying the American flag.

"Quincy should have an American flag campaign to get as many businesses and homes to put up the flag of this great country. Some people were born here, some chose to come here from all over the world, so wave the Star Spangled Banner to show our love and support for the USA.

"It also shows support for our troops. We have a lot of tourists who come to Quincy because of its great part in American history and if all of Quincy had flags flying it would show we are proud of our history and country.

"Maybe we can also be known as the city of American Flags. It would look beautiful," the writer, who wished to remain anonymous, added.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1950's advertising postcard published by the L. Grossman Company when their main office and yard was at 130 Granite St. in Quincy Center. This 3-bedroom "Troy" ranch home was advertised on the back of the card as New England's biggest home value. A complete package of quality materials necessary to build the Troy was offered for $35.96 per month with no money down. The home included many of the most wanted features asked for by thousands of New Englanders in a seven-month survey conducted by the company. Of course, you had to buy your house lot and either build the house yourself or get someone to build it for you. The Troy was just one of 48 different "Dream" home models available from the company. Pike's Peak New Refuse Site

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor James R. McIntyre was set to recommend moving Quincy's rubbish disposal to the non-residential, multi-acre Pike's Peak area in West Quincy, sources told The Sun.

The mayor, according to those sources, was planning to use the area for one of three disposal methods - incineration, sanitary landfill, or compaction. McIntyre was expected to outline his new plan to the City Council at a future meeting. He had announced earlier in the week that he had made up his mind, but declined to reveal anything specific.

The sources believe McIntyre would recommend either a sanitary landfill or compaction, with an incinerator erected there eventually.

The several-hundred acre area - a sprawling ravine - is located off Willard Street near the Blue Hills Reservation and the Milton line. A partial access road was already there, but would need to be extended if the site were used for refuse.

Earlier in the week, McIntyre said the disposal site at Cashman's Quarry would be filled much sooner than the spring of 1971 as originally estimated because of both considerable demolition work in Quincy and a statewide ban on residential rubbish set to go into place during the summer.

Public Works Commissioner John M. Browne said the city averaged $500 a day in dumping fees at Cashman's Quarry. Fees were expected to be continued at the Pike's Peak area.

RESIDENT 'MOTHER OF THE YEAR'

Milton Cong. James A. Burke proclaimed Marjorie Vient, a Willard Street resident, "mother of the year" during her trip to Washington.

Vient raised 13 children - 11 girls and two boys - who all attended Gridley Bryant, Central Junior, and Quincy High Schools. In addition to her 13 children, Vient had 34 grandchildren.

"They are all fine children and we are proud of them," Vient said.

Vient traveled to Washington with her friend Catherine Mooney, a mother of five. Burke treated them to dinner, introduced them to House Speaker John McCormack and other members of Congress, and arranged a tour of the White House and other sightseeing trips.

"We were given the red carpet treatment by Congressman Burke," Vient said.

Vient and her husband Noel, the owner of Quincy Rubber Stamp Co., had lived in West Quincy for 37 years.

An Open Letter To Quincy Asian Residents

Open letter to Quincy Asian residents:

A good friend of ours was at the recent important meeting regarding Wollaston's future, and he observed that there were very few or no Asians there.

Why? Why weren't you there, the many Asians living in Wollaston? It's your home. Don't you care what's going to happen in Wollaston? Wollaston is a great place to live, eat, socialize, attend church. Don't you want that to continue?

Then get involved. Participate. You don't have to be reminded to do this. Many of you were educated here in the United States and Quincy, and work here. You know how important it is to decide what's best for your area and neighborhood.

If you're relying on "others" to decide for you, so be it. But don't come complaining when something or some things don't go your way. Just blame the person you see in the mirror. Yep, YOU.

It gets frustrating to hear and read stuff that "Our English is not good enough"; "We work at night, so we can't be here"; "Ah, what's the use"; "I'm too old. Let the young people do it". Up to a point, that's true. But somewhere the line must be drawn.

Make time to take ESL classes.

Make time to attend meetings.

Make time to vote.

Make time to go to parents / teachers meetings.

Make time. Never too old to care.

I hope the young Asian people coming out of high schools, colleges, technical schools, wherever else will continue to lead the way by example, and serve their respective communities. Because, so far, the present, older Asian generations are way short of expectations.

Childhood Obesity: A Dangerous Epidemic

By NINA TUCKER

As most of us know, obesity is becoming more and more apparent in our country as time goes by. But what some people are not aware of is that one third of children and adolescents in the United States are considered overweight or obese, a number that had nearly tripled since 1980. This can be attributed to poor nutrition, busy kids eating more fast food, lack of physical activity and an increase of the amount of sugary, high-calorie drinks being consumed by children. Childhealthdata.org suggests that only one in three kids exercises daily. This is mainly because of schools cutting down on gym classes and recess time as well as the overwhelming popularity of video games and other sedentary activities.

Childhood obesity is an extremely dangerous epidemic. Not only do overweight children tend to grow into overweight and obese adults, but this is putting our nation's children at risk for heart disease, diabetes, high cholesterol and high blood pressure. The CDC has stated that 70% of obese children have at least one risk factor associated with heart disease. Children and adolescents should not be dealing with medical issues like this on top of all the other stressors they face growing up. Overweight children also tend to be picked on more, leading to even more problems such as anxiety, depression and sometimes even suicide.

Michelle Obama's campaign to promote exercise and nutritional awareness in schools has undoubtedly had an impact on the youths she has been able to reach. This summer will be her second annual "state dinner," where she asks children ages 8-12 to submit nutritious lunch recipes. Winners will get to sample all the winning meals with her in Washington. This is obviously a great incentive but it is a shame that there is not more of this going on. If elementary and middle schools had contests like this, say where the winning recipe was featured in the cafeteria for a week, we would not only raise awareness but possibly influence the way children look at food.

Putting overweight kids on diets and forcing them to exercise is not the solution to the childhood obesity epidemic. This will only make them feel more stigmatized and lead to rebellion or more depression and anxiety. Prevention of obesity is much easier than treating it. Fun programs like the recipe contest and incorporating lessons about making healthy choices into classrooms are a much better approach. Also, physical activity should be encouraged as sedentary children usually turn into sedentary, obese adults. Recess and gym class are not only great ways to exercise, but they also provide a nice break for students so that they can return to their studies feeling clear and refreshed.

The fight against childhood obesity is not one that will be done overnight. It is an uphill battle that is going to take time as well as advocacy from a lot of people; policymakers, school administrators and parents at least. But this fight is one that needs to be fought. These statistics are astounding, and the health of our nation will continue to decline if something is not done to change it.

If the fashion runways are any indication, vintage jewelry (particularly Victorian - era style) is making a big splash. For those fortunate enough to already have antique pieces in their collections, this is very good news. They can choose to either wear their old jewelry as is or have it refurbished. This is a particularly good option for those with sapphires, rubies, emeralds, and other colored gemstones who want a quality antique setting befitting the value of their fine gemstones.

Art Deco, one of the most popular and enduring of jewelry styles, has given birth to flamboyant and playful motifs that are truly worth exploring.

Friends Of Blue Hills 'Green Up Day' June 2

The public is invited to join the Friends of the Blue Hills for a spring festival of stewardship and fun called "Green Up Day" Sunday, June 2 from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the Ponkapoag AMC Cabins.

Volunteers will enjoy music, face painting, crafts and a scavenger hunt while helping with an essential task: pulling up invasive weeds that threaten the Blue Hills.

Many plants look alike for most of the visitors to the 7,000 acre Blue Hills reservation, yet many of the plants that have expanded in recent years are not native to the park and threaten to crowd out naturally occurring species. Vigorous weeding during the warmer months helps maintain a healthy balance in the forest.

Friends of the Blue Hills Executive Director Judy Jacobs said Green Up Day is a chance to have a positive environmental impact right here in our backyard while also having some fun. "This is important work and needs to be done," she noted, "but we are going to have a good time doing it."

Volunteers should park at Temple Beth David, 1060 Randolph St. in Canton, and walk the 1/2 mile to the cabins. The event is rain or shine, and while some gloves will be available for weeding, volunteers are encouraged to bring their own gardening gloves if they have them.

RSVP to Greenup@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org or 617-696-8248.

Bonsai Design Topic Today Wollaston Garden Club

The Wollaston Garden Club will host its final program of the season today (Thursday) at 12:30 p.m. at Wollaston Congregational Church Social Hall, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

The program topic is "Introduction To Bonsai Design." The public is welcome to attend.

This program will be conducted by members of New England Bonsai who will demonstrate and illustrate the basics of bonsai care, design and technique. The first part of the program will be a brief discussion about care, history, and basic techniques; followed by a hands-on demonstration where nursery stock is transformed into bonsai.

Questions and audience participation are encouraged. Over the past year, some WGC members have been participating in a series of Bosai-making workshops sponsored by the club's horticulture committee.

During the summer months, garden club programs involve formal and informal visits to each others' gardens. Educational programs resume in September for the 2013-2014 garden club season and are held either during the day or evening on a rotating basis on the third Thursday of the month.

Three-Wheeled Pasta Salad

With the summer months just ahead, here is a great pasta salad that my daughter Ann Marie brought to a dinner group we had recently.

Pasta salad can be made with just about any small sized pasta, but today's recipe is made with pasta wheels. Not only are they delicious, but they come in different colors as does the vegetables.

Three Wheeled Pasta Salad With Tuna
 ½ pound orange wheels (made with carrots)
 ½ pound green wheels (made with spinach)

½ pound regular wheels
 1-10 ounce package of frozen broccoli florets (cooked) or fresh
 1 jar of red pimento peppers or 1 small red pepper (cut in small pieces)
 1 small can black olives (sliced)
 2 large cans white meat tuna
 1 bottle Italian salad dressing (or a favorite)

Boil all of the wheels together al dente. Drain and cool for 10 minutes. Add the other ingredients slowly so that the pasta doesn't break. Refrigerate, and just before serving add the dressing.

Nancy's Arancini (Rice Balls)

On Easter Sunday, we all brought something for the great buffet held at my daughter Nancy and Jed's house.

In addition to the delicious baked ham she cooked, Nancy made her famous rice balls (Arancini). She made them the day before and just heated them in a warm oven, and served them with a marinara tomato sauce.

ARANCINI

2 cups cooked rice (white or brown)
 2 eggs
 ¼ cup frozen peas
 ½ cup sautéed mushrooms
 1 ½ cups seasoned breadcrumbs
 ½ cup Parmesan grated cheese
 Mozzarella cheese for filling
 Salt and pepper to taste
 3 tablespoons vegetable oil for sautéing the mushrooms, plus more for the rice balls

Sauté the mushrooms and peas and set aside. In a bowl, stir the eggs, rice Parmesan cheese and ½ cup of the breadcrumbs. Mix them well. Place the remaining bread crumbs in a bowl.

Form the rice balls with 2 tablespoons of the rice mixture. In the center of each one, slide a piece of the mozzarella cheese. Roll each rice ball in the remaining bread crumbs. In the hot oil, cook the rice balls until brown and heated through turning them as necessary.

Transfer to paper towel to drain. Serve hot. If made the day before, heat oven to 200-250 until they are done to your liking.

QUICK SAUCE

2 cloves garlic (chopped)
 1 can crushed tomatoes
 Parsley and basil
 Salt and pepper to taste
 3 tablespoons olive oil

In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and add the tomatoes, herbs and salt and pepper. Cook for 20 minutes, and serve with the arancini.

STUDENTS OF ART teacher Mike Hanson at North Quincy High School recently had some of their art and photography work displayed in the halls, waiting rooms and treatment rooms at Commonwealth Hematology in Quincy. "I think it's a great opportunity for the kids to see that their photography and art work has a direct, positive effect on people," Hanson said. The art work was displayed for two weeks. A receptionist suggested the art be displayed in the hopes of providing a pleasant distraction for patients who sometimes spend four or five hours in the treatment room receiving chemotherapy. It turned out to be a popular idea, sparking much conversation and appreciation among patients, nurses and staff.

Library Hours Expanded; $150K More For Planning Dept.

ask people who used these specific branches what their priorities would be in terms of additional hours and evening hours were definitely the first choice above morning hours or Friday hours. We're likely to add evening hours at each branch that will allow people who work during the day to get to their neighborhood library at least one evening a week."

Allen added that the extended branch hours would likely start after Labor Day this year because new personnel need to be brought in.

The FY14 budget also gives the library extra money to purchase materials, including books, DVDs, periodicals, and e-books. That money was increased by $17,000 to $321,000, bringing the library closer to the state standard for how much of a library's budget should go towards purchasing materials. Allen said the standard for libraries in a city the size of Quincy is 12 percent of the library's budget towards new materials; 10.8 percent of the Crane Library's budget is for books and the other new items.

"We're about $17,595 short of full compliance but we will be at mid-level compliance for next year," Allen said. "My goal for the year after will be to get us up to that full compliance level. In a city this size it's important to be able to provide enough of a collection."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci suggested that the library and city consider putting the $70,000 in late fees the library collects annually into a revolving fund for library use. That would allow the materials budget to come into full compliance with the state standard and would bring that line item within $13,000 of its FY09 level, before budget cuts started.

"For this particular fiscal year, 2014, if you had had that $70,000 that would put you towards the full compliance and additionally it would restore back to your pre-drastic cut days - it would be about $13,000 off from where you were," Palmucci said. "I think it's certainly something to consider."

The Finance Committee approved the library's FY14 budget by voice vote. Councillors said the new library budget, including the added branch hours, were something the community as a whole would endorse.

"I love the branches. I think people in the City of Quincy still love and value the branches. I think the extension of hours is going to be something that people covet," Councillor Doug Gutro said. "You faced several tough years and hopefully you're coming back where we can put you in a place that all Quincy residents can have access to the library at all the hours they want to have access to the library."

"I was going to get coffee this morning," Council President Michael McFarland added. "There were three gentlemen sitting there having their coffee and one of the gentlemen is a retired librarian from Massasoit Community College who I have known for 50 years. He knew, because he reads the paper and listens to what's going on, that tonight we were voting on the library budget. And he said 'don't cut the budget for the library.'"

The committee also approved a $150,000 increase in the Planning Department's budget. The lion's share of that, more than $118,000 goes towards paying the salaries of two positions - economic development planner and a research assistant - previously funded by outside sources. Also included is added money for a contractual line and for in state travel expenses. Planning Director Dennis Harrington said the department's total budget of $453,000 brings it back in line with the FY10 budget, before budget cuts took effect.

"I think that we've turned it around - the city has turned itself around economically," Harrington said. "This budget represents funding that is adequate for me to continue to run an award-winning department."

The Finance Committee approved the department's budget by voice vote. Committee Chairman Joe Finn and Vice Chairman Brian McNamee both praised the department for the work it's done in recent years.

"Given the amount of expenditures in the past and what you've actually produced in terms of resources for the City of Quincy it's probably the best deal of anything we have in this budget," Finn said.

"Excellence has been the hallmark of your department and you should take a great deal of credit for it," McNamee added.

In addition to the Library and Planning Departments, the finance committee approved the budgets of the Law, Recreation, IT, Health, and Human Resources Departments; and the Assessor's and Treasurer/Collector's Offices. Those departments received smaller increases, which mainly go towards contractual and other raises. Some also received extra money for supplies and contractual lines.

The committee also approved the tax title, judgments, and worker's compensation accounts - all were level funded. Also approved was a $1.5 million increase for health and other insurance costs, which will total $42.9 million in FY14. The Furnace Brook Golf Course line, increased from $122,000 to $131,000 in FY14, was passed as well. Under a 50-year agreement reached in 1971, the city pays property taxes for the course. At the end of the agreement, Quincy will own the land.

In addition, Quincy's debt service line items were all approved. The budget allocates $9.5 million for long-term debt payments, down from $10.1 million in FY13. In FY15 and 16, however, those payments are projected to increase as the city starts paying more bonds like those used to build the new Central Middle School. The same projections have the long-term debt payments decreasing again starting in FY17, but that doesn't account for proposed projects, including a new Sterling Middle School, or any borrowing for the new downtown.

Short-term debt payments will also decrease in FY13 to $1.2 million, down from $1.68 million. Lease payments for Honeywell equipment will total $2.4 million in FY14, the same as FY13.

The Council on Aging's budget was scheduled for review Monday night, but that will now occur at a later meeting.

Budget Hearing May 28

Residents will have a chance to comment on the proposed FY14 budget during a public hearing later this month.

The City Council will hold that public hearing on the budget Tuesday, May 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the temporary Council Chambers in the glass City Hall annex.

The council's Finance Committee will begin its second night of budget hearings immediately following the public comments. Fifteen departmental budgets will be reviewed at that meeting, including the Fire Department. Under the proposed budget the Fire Department would receive $1.7 million more than it did in FY13, allowing the city to absorb nine firefighters currently being paid by a federal grant set to expire in September. The Fire Department's budget also includes an extra $200,000 for overtime expenses, allowing more stations to stay open, and extra money for equipment.

The Public Buildings Department's budget is also up for review at that meeting. Koch's proposed budget would give that department an extra $700,000, raising its total budget to $4.9 million. That includes money for a hiring a new energy manager and energy technician - each a $91,000-a-year position - as well as other maintenance workers.

Also scheduled for that second meeting are the nine departments under the leadership of Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymond. Under Koch's budget plan, those departments would receive added money for tide gate repair, catch basin cleaning, and painting city streets. The council will also review the Water and Sewer Enterprise account budgets, which are separate from the city's general fund budget.

The other departments scheduled to appear at the May 28 meeting are Purchasing, Inspectional Services, Veterans' Services, and Emergency Management.

The final budget hearing is scheduled for Tuesday June 11 at 6:30 p.m. The budgets for the Police and School Departments will be among those reviewed during the meeting. Koch's budget gives the Police Department $24.4 million, up from $22.5 million in FY13. The extra money would go towards hiring six new patrol officers and one new sergeant.

The School Department's proposed budget is $91.1 million, an increase of $87.5 million. The School Committee decides how to allocate that money; the City Council sets the bottom line. Koch said the schools would use the extra money to hire new teachers to offset growing enrollment, and to comply with new state mandates.

Also scheduled for that final meeting are the Cemetery Department, Parks Department, Animal Control, Mayor's office, Celebrations, City Clerk's office, Elections Department, Licensing Department, Census Department, Municipal Finance Department, and other items that Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh will present, including Medicare, pensions, and unemployment.

History Of Lyons Turning Mill Quincy Historical Society Program

Al Bina and Tom Bonomi of the Quincy Granite and Quarry Workers Museum will present the story of the Lyons Turning Mill at a Quincy Historical Society program, Tuesday, May 21, at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Built in 1893 by James Lyons, the mill—as its name suggests—used giant lathes to turn granite and other kinds of stone into columns, spheres, and various works of art. One of the largest facilities of its kind, the building was 200 feet long and 90 feet wide.

A railroad track ran through the building and a 20-ton overhead crane moved both raw stone and finished product. The stone fashioned there appeared in buildings throughout the country, including in the original Penn Station in New York City. Today, the ruins of the mill's stone walls are among the last and most visible remains of a high point in Quincy's granite history.

Bina and Bonomi will offer an illustrated history of the mill and also detail their current efforts to preserve the Lyons Turning Mill remains. They'll also give an overview of the Granite and Quarry Workers Museum.

Everyone is welcome. There is no charge for admission.

'Critical To Our Economic Future'

Keenan: Repair, Upgrade MA Transportation System

By SEN. JOHN KEENAN

Recently the Senate passed a comprehensive plan that allocates over $800-million to a transportation system long overdue for repair and investment.

There is no question in my mind that our transportation system is critical to our economic future, and that we can no longer afford to ignore the repairs and upgrades necessary to ensure the system runs effectively. The area I represent enjoys the benefits of 5 Red Line stations, Commuter Rail stations, numerous bus lines, the Ride, and MBTA ferry services. The plan I supported goes a long way towards ensuring that those services remain safe, reliable and equipped to meet the demands of our broad economy.

In assessing the transportation plan presented to the Senate, I wanted to ensure that any funding for the plan was targeted and consistent with the concept of getting our current system right before expanding. In this regard, I was pleased that the Senate adopted two amendments I proposed to help ensure the funds we are committing to transportation are well-managed and well-spent. The first, in conjunction with Senator Ken Donnelly, was an amendment focused on a "state of good repair" for the MBTA's existing infrastructure, to make sure that we fix the system we have today before putting money towards new projects. Another amendment requires annual apportionment of "right of way" payments received by MassDOT, so that new funds are not spent in a rushed, 'lump sum' fashion up front thereby creating new deficits in later years.

My other goal relative to the plan was to ensure its funding does not unnecessarily burden any one particular group. In this context, it is important to note what the plan does not do. It does not raise the income tax, a measure that received widespread opposition. It does not rely solely on taxing the citizens of Massachusetts. It does not eliminate any of the tax exemptions that are critical to so many seniors and working class families. Instead the plan raises new revenues in a balanced and targeted way, and creates opportunities for new sources of funding, while also demanding improvements to today's MassDOT and MBTA systems.

The plan demands efficiency from our system, establishing clear performance targets for MassDOT and the MBTA over the next decade. It directs our transportation agencies to expand efforts to secure advertising revenue, authorizing financial sponsorship of MBTA stations, and new advertising contracts along our interstates. It also allows, but does not require, MassDOT to consider border tolling options, so that motorists from other states who enter the Commonwealth and benefit from our roadways can also help finance the maintenance of those roadways. The plan requires that revenues raised through the motor vehicles sales tax, a tax which already exists and has not been increased, be directed towards transportation funding. It provides that part of the existing gas tax, now used to support the general state budget, be appropriately designated for transportation. The plan calls for a 3 cent increase in our gas tax, which will add no more than $15 to $20 annually for the average driver and which keeps our gas tax below those of neighboring states. The indexing of that tax will serve to ensure that it is sufficient to meet future increases in transportation maintenance costs. The plan also asks utility companies to pay the same fees that all other private companies currently pay for the use of state property, especially for rights of way and easements on our state roads.

As transportation revenues are shifted from the general budget and targeted to transportation needs, those general budget revenues will be replaced, and in fact supplemented, through reasonable measures. The increased tobacco tax has seen widespread support as a public health victory that may discourage unhealthy behaviors and lead to savings in health care costs for everyone in Massachusetts. Changes in how business computer services and utility sales services are taxed will provide additional revenue to ensure that there is adequate funding for local aid to cities and towns, for education and for basic human services.

As the transportation finance plan proceeds through the conference process and to the Governor's desk, I am hopeful that the state will continue to take a balanced approach to this issue. Continuing to allow our transportation system to degrade and take on debt is not an option, but we must find a way to pay for this system without financially overburdening any one group or region. I believe we now have the major details of that plan, and look forward to the next steps towards seeing the plan finalized, passed and then signed by the Governor.

Bellotti, Koch To Introduce Yellow Dot Safety Program

To Help Seniors Involved In Motor Vehicle Accidents

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti and Mayor Thomas Koch will join forces on Tuesday, May 21, at City Hall to introduce the Yellow Dot safety program. The program is designed to help senior citizens if they are involved in a motor vehicle accident or a have medical emergency while driving.

"This program is completely free-of-charge to the public," Sheriff Bellotti said. "Program participants receive a Yellow Dot decal and place it on the rear window of their vehicle to alert emergency first responders to a medical information packet enclosed in the glove compartment."

First responders say the Yellow Dot information packet helps them provide the best possible emergency care because they know the injured person's medical background.

Among those who have been invited to attend the 9:30 a.m. program kickoff are Fire Chief Joseph Barron, Police Chief Paul Keenan, Director of Elder Affairs Tom Clasby, members of the Quincy delegation to the Massachusetts Legislature and an official from Fallon Ambulance Service.

The public is invited to sign up for the Yellow Dot program beginning on June 7 during a Council on Aging meeting at the Kennedy Center at 440 East Squantum Street between 10 a.m. and noon.

Contact Joseph Canavan, Triad Director at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at (781)751-3516 if you have any questions concerning the Yellow Dot Program.

Fundraiser Sunday To Help Rebuild School In Haiti

A fundraiser to help rebuild the St. Yves School in Haiti will be held Sunday, May 19th from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus at 5 Hollis Ave. in Quincy.

When a massive earthquake hit Port-au-Prince, Haiti in January of 2010, St. Yves School was destroyed leaving hundreds of young students without a place to learn.

Founded by Joseph Fabien and Osias Semovil 52 years ago, the school has served over 350 students from grades K-12. Fabien's daughter Marie-Denise Fabien of Quincy, has organized fundraisers here for the past two years in hopes to rebuild the school.

"My father loved education, he cherished it," said Fabien. "I could not be in Massachusetts having fun and not help rebuild that school knowing he loved it so much."

Since the earthquake Fabien has raised $15,000 to help rebuild the school, which in total will cost nearly $100,000. The hope is to get the building up to code with the Department of Education by adding a number of benches for the children to be able to sit, among other requirements, so at least 90 students will be able to attend the school for free.

Fabien said her hope is to raise around $6,000 during the fundraiser, which offers a number of raffle prizes, a silent auction, and souvenir paintings from Haiti for sale, along with music entertainment by Julia Berberan on guitar and the Atlantic Music Orchestra.

Although she says it will take around four years to raise the money and have the school the way she wants it she is confident it can be done because of the generosity of the businesses and residents of Quincy.

"Everyone has been very supportive in giving to such a great cause," said Fabien. "This is very much a Quincy project, and it has just been booming since we started asking for donations almost two years ago."

Tickets for the event are $20 each or $40 per family. A Haitian/American dinner will be served for a $3 suggested donation.

All proceeds will benefit the St. Yves School Foundation, a 501(c)3 non-profit organization. Donations are tax deductible and can be made to the St. Yves School Foundation account at Citizens Bank.

For tickets to the fundraiser contact Marie Denise Fabien (617) 842-2808 or Gail McDonald (617) 599-4119.

John S. Kelly, Jr. Waiting Area Dedicated At Quincy Medical Center

Dozens of hospital staff, family members and friends gathered together to dedicate the recently renovated waiting area in the Radiology Department at Quincy Medical Center in memory of John S. Kelly, Jr. Kelly, who passed away in October of 2012 after a long illness.

Mr. Kelly spent his entire 43-year career as a Radiology Technician at Quincy Medical Center.

"John was appreciated by staff and patients alike for his dedication, empathy and caring approach," said Daniel Knell, QMC President. "He always had a smile and a kind word, which put nervous patients at ease and made Quincy Medical Center a nicer place to work. I know that he is truly missed by all of us here, and we are happy to acknowledge his service in a lasting way."

Mayor Thomas Koch and Dr. Jose Varghese, Chief of Radiology, also spoke about Kelly's deep ties to his family, colleagues, community and the patients he served.

Following a touching blessing by Rev. Esther Bowen, Kelly's father, Jack, brothers Brian and Ken, and sister, Maureen Shepherd, unveiled the plaque bearing his likeness.

Volunteer Fran Langille Honored By Interfaith Social Services

Fran Langille of Quincy, a Thrift Shop volunteer at Interfaith Social Services in Quincy, was recently recognized as the organization's volunteer of the week for her dedicated service.

Langille has been volunteering at Interfaith for five years and found out about the opportunity through her husband, who volunteered at the organization as well.

"I love working in the Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop. I enjoy seeing the repeat customers and working with people from different backgrounds," she said.

Langille was a nurse at Carney Hospital for 50 years before she began volunteering at Interfaith. In her spare time she enjoys traveling, gardening, reading, and is a member of the Sacred Heart Woman's Catholic Club.

Langille said she is very proud of the fact that all of the money raised by the Thrift Shop goes directly to Interfaith's programs for families in need. She enjoys spending time with her co-workers at the various social events for volunteers; and she always looks forward to the Christmas get together.

With hundreds of individuals volunteering alongside numerous civic, religious and corporate groups Interfaith Social Services has become one of the South Shore's most popular centers for volunteerism and community engagement.

"We often describe our volunteers as the heart and soul of the organization," said Interfaith's volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels. "Without their assistance our programs wouldn't be able to serve over 25,000 local residents every year."

is one of Greater Boston's largest food pantries. Last year, volunteers distributed over 500,000 lbs. of food to hungry families.

Interfaith's volunteers come in for at least one three-hour shift each week, and some fulfill multiple shifts. Shifts are available between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Volunteers work in the food pantry, thrift shop, front desk, or Career Closet.

Serving in the food pantry includes assembling grocery orders for clients, restocking shelves and sorting food donations. Volunteering at the thrift shop is similar to working in a retail store. Volunteers sort through donations of clothing and household goods. They assist customers, hang and fold clothes and organize merchandise for sale. The thrift shop receives over two-hundred bags of donations a week.

Interfaith's front desk is staffed entirely by volunteers who answer phone calls, greet visitors and assist with various office projects. The Career Closet is by appointment only, so this program's volunteers are 'on call.' Clients come in at a scheduled time and the volunteers help them choose professional outfits for job interviews.

HYPER Robotics Tournament Saturday

The Quincy Public Schools HYPER Robotics will host "The Presidents Cup" Lego Robotics Tournament Saturday, May 18 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Quincy High School gymnasium.

The event, sponsored by Bluefin Robotics of Quincy, is free and open to the public.

This year's game, "Diabolical Data Dash," was created specifically for middle school competition by a game design committee of high school students and volunteers from the HYPER Alumni Association. This year's competition features seven team entries from the five Quincy middle schools.

Diabolical Data Dash will be played on a four foot by eight foot playing field where teams are challenged to design and build robots to complete tasks such as "retrieve random ram" and place "terabytes on a tower." In addition to robot performance, teams will present research projects on innovative data storage and will be awarded for programming, teamwork, and academic research.

DENTISTRY

for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

AMONG THE MISSING

Genetics often play a role when patients have teeth that are missing because they failed to develop. This is particularly likely to happen with teeth such as the lateral incisors, second premolars (bicusps), and third molars ("wisdom teeth.") Permanent teeth may also be lost through decay or injury. Regardless of whether a tooth is lost or missing, its absence can lead to tipping or drifting of the adjacent teeth into the resulting empty space. In addition, opposing teeth in the other jaw are likely to overerupt, or the loss of several side teeth may lead to a collapsed bite. Whatever the causes of missing teeth, they should be replaced as soon as possible to restore biting function and avoid complications.

Are some of your teeth missing? For quality dental care for the entire family, look no further. We are highly experienced, friendly, and honored by the opportunity to serve you. We offer a comfortable, informal, and relaxed atmosphere throughout our dental office. Our goal is to reduce traditional dental anxieties. To do that, we stress an attitude of prevention, rather than repair-and-wait. Along with bringing intensive training to our practice, we keep up to date on the newest techniques and technologies. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a full trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincy-dentist.com.

P.S. Primary teeth that are lost too late can cause as many problems as teeth that are lost prematurely.

School Budget Public Hearing June 5

ing the academic classroom teachers, the programs, and of course our students."

DeCristofaro said during a phone interview with The Sun that they are working on putting together the budget now. With whatever funding is left DeCristofaro said the budget committee, which includes members of the school committee, will look at options for that money in areas such as adding teachers that may be needed, middle school library staffing, and supplies they will need for the new common core curriculum.

"With what funding is left we will then talk and look at how many teachers may need to be hired, along with other items of importance," said DeCristofaro. "We need to make sure the committee is comfortable with the classroom sizes and if that needs to be looked at before moving forward with other programs or additions."

One item DeCristofaro said the committee would most likely look at is the addition of middle school library staff. During open forum at multiple school committee meeting parents voiced their concern about the lack of staffing in that area.

"We have a good plan in place for the elementary school libraries. All 11 of them will be open, Monday Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, which will allow us to provide improved service for every neighborhood elementary school. It will be a significant difference from what they have now," said DeCristofaro. "The school committee has discussed the middle school libraries and they have all spoke about a need for assistance at that level since helping the elementary schools."

After looking at those programs the committee's next priority will be academic support and looking at the need for student support staff. The last items they will look at, if funding is still available, are transportation, food services, and athletics.

"This process is really how we prioritize in the school system, with the students the most important element, certainly, in our budget, as we work on our budget," said DeCristofaro. "The academic classroom teachers are incredibly important, the class size that you've (the school committee members) made a priority for so many years is also certainly a consideration."

DeCristofaro said that when planning for the budget they work with the Quincy Public School leadership team and principals on areas they believe need funding.

"We've worked this process before whether we were reducing or building. We've talked to the leadership team members, we've talked to all the principals about what are areas of consideration do they have, to make sure we get an internal compass as to where we are and as to where we need to go," said DeCristofaro.

"We are going to present options to you (the school committee), and then what you do historically is say let's go back and take a look at this area, and that area. We will work with Mr. (Jim) Mullaney (Director of Business Affairs) to see what we can come up with to really meet the needs of so many of our competing interests that we have within the school system. We have started our work. There is a lot of discussion internally on this and as always, I know we will move ahead together."

Bregoli: Upgrade Student-Athlete Policy

people and it is something I feel strongly about. It isn't to be a disciplinary thing but a helpful thing. We've got to communicate to avoid a situation where a kid gets his or her report card and finds out they are failing, it's not a good situation for anyone."

The idea, which would require coaches to be responsible for checking their athletes grades during progress reports, is something Bregoli says will have to be talked about more in the Policy Subcommittee but he hopes and thinks things will change.

The hope is to have the athlete's coach check the students progress report and if they are failing they would be put on probation from the sport, no practicing, no games, until their teacher informs the coach that they are no longer in danger of failing or failing.

"I think it's going to happen. I think it is overdue (to change)," said Bregoli. "A lot of coaches already do it informally, they already check grades. We just want to make it a requirement. When the progress reports are handed out that is when it is time for someone to step in and say it's time to get some extra help. It would be no extra work on the Deans or Guidance councilors, we would have the coaches responsible for it."

Bregoli said they have looked at surrounding communities and found that they have similar policies in place for their athletes, and that they will continue to discuss it at future policy subcommittee meetings before bringing it before the school committee for a vote sometime next year.

Registration Underway For Summer Recreation Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department announces registration is ongoing for Summer Sports and More Instructional Workshops scheduled for children during summer school vacation.

"By taking advantage of the city's outstanding municipal facilities and the great wealth of local leadership, we are able to produce low cost programs of great value and benefit to the children of Quincy," said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The popular programs are conducted in weeklong intervals and have three methods of registration.

Program descriptions and registration forms, are available at quincyrec.com. Payment can also be completed at this site. Walk in registration can be done at One Merrymount Parkway, the main office of the recreation department, or persons can request a brochure with registration form by calling 617-376-1394 and complete the process by mail.

"We are fortunate this year to have three of our 29 offerings sponsored by the Janet Burke Mann Foundation for the Arts," Welch noted. "For the second year their generous donation has enabled us to lower the fee for all children in the dance, arts and crafts and music theater and drama programs. Also newly added this year is Football Skills which will be a non-contact program of fundamental drills and games of flag football."

The all inclusive registration fee covers the facilities, instruction, equipment and each participant receives a program t-shirt. All activities are conducted by enthusiastic leadership with a low student-to-instructor ratio and an emphasis on fun. Registration is limited.

The programs, schedules and age requirements are posted on The Quincy Sun website (thequincysun.com) under "sports" and also the Quincy Recreation Department: quincyrec.com.

For more information, call 617-376-1394.

'RaisingMyKid.Mom' Topic June 15 At Wollaston Child Care Center

Wollaston Child Care Center, 47 Weston Ave., Quincy, is offering a workshop, "RaisingMyKid.Mom," on Saturday, June 15th, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Raising children in the digital age presents new and complex challenges to parents. Learning how to develop good interpersonal relationships is an important key to children's future success and happiness.

As children are presented with more and more opportunities to block out the world and others around them, how can parents make sure that they get the life skills they'll need to thrive?

The public is welcome to join the discussion on this topic that will include interactive presentations and activities that will help parents to promote the healthy socialization of their children from early on in their development.

The guest speaker will be Carol Darcy. Darcy received an Ed.D in Education Leadership and Curriculum Theory from Boston University, a M.S. in Early Childhood Education from Wheelock College. She is a consultant to public and private schools (Pre-K through Middle School). Summer Energy Savings

By SAMANTHA MAZZOTTA

Q: Can CFL light bulbs really save money? I'm not convinced. But my electric bill is high enough that I need all the help I can get.

A: Depending on the wattage they offset (of old-fashioned light bulbs), compact fluorescent light bulbs can save you some money. Of course, that savings builds up over time -- months and years. They're best used as part of an overall energy savings plan for your home.

You don't have to outfit your house with a complete solar panel array, wind turbines or other top-line (and top-dollar) gadgets to start cutting your energy bills. Savings can start as easily as turning off unnecessary lights and unplugging electrical or electronic items that don't see much use: for example, a clock radio in the guest room.

Set your summertime thermostat no lower than 68 degrees F. If you have a programmable thermostat, have it shift to a slightly higher temperature, say, 74 F, when no one is at home. And here's a thermostat fact that not everyone knows: It's better to simply set the temperature higher, rather than turn off the air conditioner, during the hottest months. When you get home and want to lower the temperature to a more comfortable level, the air conditioner has much less work to do and will cool the house much more quickly.

Another enemy of energy efficiency is dust. Keep the air-conditioning vent covers free of dust, and vacuum the registers monthly. Likewise, change the air conditioner's filter screen once a month during the cooling season.

And, because dust can gunk up a refrigerator's cooling coils and reduce its efficiency -- as well as its lifespan -- clean the coils and vacuum under and behind the fridge every couple of months throughout the year.

Weatherstripping around window and door frames, usually a fall-season chore, can reduce the amount of cool air escaping the house. If you really want to tackle the problem, get a home-energy audit -- offered at low or no cost by many utilities -- to locate the areas of greatest air-leakage.

HOME TIP: My husband likes to watch TV until he falls asleep, but then the TV is on all night, running up the electric bill. I solved the problem by programming the television to turn off at a scheduled time -- a feature found on the menu screen.

Maher Family Cleans Rock Island Cove Salt Marsh

Residents from across the city helped cleanup parks and beaches May 4 as part of Cleaner, Greener Quincy, but one family of four decided to get a head start.

The Maher Family — Frank and Nicole and their children Cullen and Marissa, ages 11 and 8, respectively — live in Germantown. The family's backyard abuts the Rock Island Cove salt marsh family has lobbied for the last couple of years to have the marsh included in the Cleaner, Greener program, Nicole Maher said. The family noticed a higher than normal amount of debris strewn about the marsh this spring, so she said they decided to take matters into their own hands.

"We look at it all the time. It always accumulates stuff but after this winter year there was a lot more," Maher said. "Each year we've talked about making it a Cleaner, Greener spot, but this year we just did it."

The family's cleanup of the marsh started in mid-April. Since then they've worked for about an hour each day, filling up an 18-foot skiff with trash from the marsh. Frank then wades through thigh-high water to the other side of the marsh with the boat, where he meets up with Parks Department employees who haul the refuse away.

Since starting on the marsh cleanup, they've filled the boat with debris seven times. Nicole said most of what they've hauled away is yard waste, like leaves, twigs, and small branches that she believes people let fall into the marsh instead of taking care of them properly.

"A lot of it is yard waste that could be disposed of," she said. "A lot of people think it goes away, but it doesn't."

The Mahers have enjoyed cleaning up the marsh in their backyard. And Nicole said her children have learned an important lesson about having pride in their neighborhood and keeping the environment clean.

Because the water needs to be deep enough to carry the boat through the marsh, the family waits until high tide to clean up and won't be able to clean for about a month as the tides cycle. But the family plans to restart the cleanup efforts as soon as they can.

The serve in volleyball is much like the serve in tennis.

Its stated purpose is to start, not finish the point.

However, if the serve is struck hard enough with difficult spin and pinpoint accuracy, it influences the course of a point and frequently can end it.

Felix Man and Andrew Sok served well for North Quincy and led a strong finish which lifted the Red Raiders to a 3-0 decision over archrival Quincy last Friday.

The win boosted North to 14-1 on the season and kept the Red Raiders in first place in the Southern Alliance. If North wins two of its last three league matches, it clinches the regular-season title.

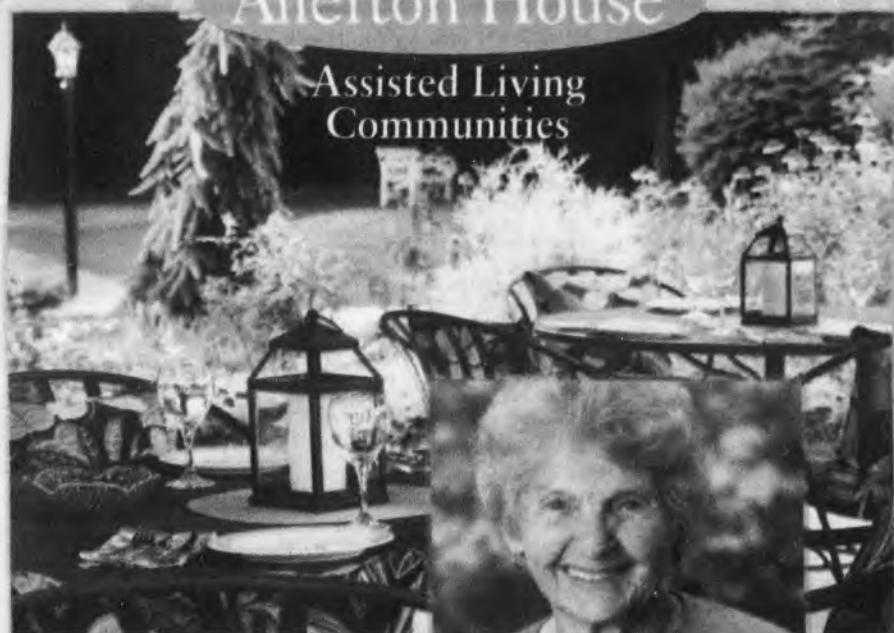

The Red Raiders won by margins of 25-12, 25-19 and 25-14. Coach Jason Cai was far more impressed by the serving and overall play of his team in the impressive third game than he was in the first two.

"I was disappointed in the way we played in the first two sets. I did not like our effort," he said. "We

CONSUMER BACKING

When a well-known consumer magazine recently surveyed more than 45,000 of its subscribers about their health treatment practices, three out of four reported utilizing some form of alternative therapy. When it came to back pain treatments, chiropractic outperformed all other types. While 65% of those receiving chiropractic treatment claimed that it "helped a lot" to reduce back pain, only 53% of those taking prescription medication and 51% of those receiving deep-tissue massage made the same claim. Forty-nine percent of those who performed yoga or pilates reported that these disciplines helped a lot; 41% of devotees of Swedish massage and acupuncture said the same. This comparison of consumer satisfaction with alternative back pain treatments provides testimony to chiropractic's benefits.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have broad diagnostic skills and are trained played sloppy. I talked to them between the second and third games, and I think I lit a fire. We talked to each other and played harder. We played much sharper volleyball in the third game."

It started with the serve. When Sok (one kill, five aces, 10 digs) and Man (five kills, three aces, six digs) were not firing aces, they were putting the Presidents in difficult position where their only hope was to get the ball back over the net. When it came over softly, North passed and it around and set it up for the smash at net.

"The best thing you can get is an ace," said Cai. "However, even if you don't get an ace you get a free ball. Then you can run a play."

North went on runs of 12-1 and 18-2 in the third. The serve, mainly of Sok, Man, and Jackie Chen, led directly to 13 of North's 25 points in the game.

"When we can run a play right off our serve, we can get the ball to our hitters quickly," said Cai.

North has great talent up front in Mike Tran (12 kills), Sebastien Francois (five kills, two blocks), Matthew MacPhail (five kills) and Eftim Butka (four kills in one game). MacPhail was a force in the first set with smashes and well-placed finishing shots. Francois blocked and altered shots at the net. Butka put away the match with two crushing slams at the net.

Tran is the most fun to watch because of his versatility. He passes superbly, he digs, he keeps plays alive.

When the situation at net calls for a slam, he drills it. When it calls for a touch shot, he taps it to the open space.

"When he came as a sophomore, he could pass," said Cai. "We taught him to be a hitter and then to be a smart hitter. I don't want just hitters, I want smart hitters."

It all begins with the pass as Oresti Bega proved for North with 29 assists against Quincy.

"It's the most important skill to start with," said Cai. "Everything starts with the pass. You want to go pass-set-hit."

For Quincy (2-12), Jackson Le served well especially in the final set. Christian Fuller had an effective match at the net and junior Phu Tang was the Presidents' best all-around player with finishes, leaping ability and hustle.

"Jackson had some nice serves and Christian has had a decent season at the net," said Quincy coach Lok-Tin Yao. "Tang is a good hitter, he jumps well and he's tough to match up against."

Fuller and Tang worked hard keeping balls alive and making kills at the net to keep Quincy within range at 17-11 in the first game. Jia-Chen Zhou had a nice touch shot for a Quincy winner. However, North went on an 8-1 run to finish the game behind Sok's serving, Bega's passing and solid play from Emmitt Harrow at the net.

Tang was a power with blocks and smashes in the second game and Quincy was within 15-12 before North went on a closing 10-7 run to clinch the game. The final point of the game came on a perfect passing play from Man to Bega to MacPhail who finished it with a hard smash.

North hosts Taunton Thursday, May 16 at 5:30. Quincy hosts New Bedford Wednesday, May 15 at 5:30.

In other action last week North dropped Brockton, 3-0 with a 25-18, 25-14, 25-22 victory.

Tran had 15 kills and 10 digs.

Francois added 10 kills and four blocks while Sok had a fine match with 15 digs. Butka, Man and Vinny Tran all played well for the Red Raiders.

North Quincy Girls' Tennis Competes For Every Point

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a team of battlers, a team which fights for every point and every shot. It is a team which makes coaching an enjoyable experience.

"I love the enthusiasm," said first-year coach Francesca DiBona of her North Quincy girls tennis team. "They are a team of scrapers. They compete hard for every point and every match. We have very talented players in our league (Patriot), but our players are not intimidated at all. They've played the top players tough."

For the past few years, the Red Raiders have thrived thanks to the efforts of the twin Sullivan sisters (Elizabeth and Sara), and this year North needed fresh faces to meet the challenge of teams like Scituate, Hingham, and Duxbury for whom tennis is a 12-month way of life.

"I've been very happy because we've had players who were stand-ins as JV's last year step up and do a good job," said DiBona. "I've seen consistent improvement in all the players which is the most important thing to me."

At the end of last week, North stood at 6-3 and needed to win just one more match to make the tourney. North survived the most difficult part of its schedule early in the season and had won four straight at the end of last week.

"Our singles have been strong and our doubles have improved," said DiBona.

Senior Tiffany Leung is a strong all-around player at first singles. She has excellent groundstrokes and likes to come to net behind her big forehand. She has played lights-out over the past two weeks and was 7-2 on the season at the end of last week.

"She's has a disciplined game and she loves to compete," said DiBona. "She's a solid player. There aren't many weaknesses in her game. She likes her forehand, but her backhand is strong from the baseline as well."

At second singles, senior Mallory Devoe is a smart player, a ferocious competitor who serves as a good symbol for her team. She never quits on a point and will sell out all her energy to get the ball back one more time. Devoe was 7-1 on the season at the end of last week.

"A human backboard," smiled DiBona. "She's very steady and she frustrates her opponents because she will always work to return the ball no matter where she is on the court."

third singles. She is solid from the baseline and usually follows a strong forehand to net. She is another persistent competitor who works to get every point back.

"She's kind of a mix of Tiffany and Natalie," said DiBona. "She can work the baseline, but she also has the ability to be aggressive with her forehand for winners."

Senior Kayla Sugrue, senior Borianna Tczetkova, and Cynthia Vu have all worked at first singles. Sugrue is quick and sure at the net and Tczetkova has powerful groundstrokes from either side. Vu is a patient, smart player who also performs well at the net.

"Borianna has had an ankle injury, so we've worked with three players," said DiBona. "They all work together well. Their individual skills mesh well as doubles' partners."

Senior Kasey Shen and junior Michelle Zang are the second doubles pairing. Vu has also worked at second doubles. The combination offers a fistful of energy.

"They have a lot of high-fives," smiled DiBona. "They have mental toughness and they always stay positive about their match."

In recent action, excellence at singles led the way to a two-match sweep last week against Silver Lake and Middleboro. Leung, Devoe and Kadivel each swept to a pair of straight-set wins. North defeated Middleboro, 3-2 with Leung leading the way with an overpowering, 6-0, 6-1 win.

Devoe rolled, 6-2, 6-1 and Kadivel earned a 6-0, 6-4 decision.

Sugrue and Vu played well in 6-4, 6-2 defeat.

Leung, who lost only one game in the two matches, once against was strong with a 6-0, 6-0 romp in a 4-1 win over Silver Lake. Devoe won 6-1, 6-3 and Kadivel posted a 6-2, 6-2 victory.

Sugrue and Vu played strong tennis in a 6-2, 6-2 victory. Shen and Zang had an excellent match before falling 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

In action last week, North defeated Hanover, 4-1. Leung earned a win at first singles while Devoe won at second singles. Kadivel won a close three-set match at third singles.

The Red Raiders stopped Pembroke, 4-1. Leung posted a 6-2, 6-0 win in first singles. Kadivel rolled 6-0, 6-2 in second singles and Tczetkova took her match at third singles, 6-3, 6-4.

Sugrue and Vu won at first doubles.

Presidents Baseball Routs Randolph, 17-3

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was an easy day of baseball.

Quincy rapped out 13 hits, played solid defense and four pitchers combined on a quality effort to lift the Presidents to a 17-3 non-league win over Randolph at Adams Field Monday.

"We played a solid all-around game," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan after his club went to 6-10 on the season.

Quincy played four games last week. The Presidents stunned first-place Silver Lake, 2-0 in a Patriot League match. They played two strong opponents (Hingham and Duxbury) tough before losing narrow decisions and dropped a non-leaguer to Archbishop Williams.

Junior second baseman Mike Pugsley had three hits, three runs scored and drove in two runs to lead the offense against Randolph. Robbie Munroe, who has been drilling the ball over the past two weeks, had three hits and two RBI. Sophomore shortstop Tyler Beach had a pair of hits and drove in three runs.

Mike Haley had a hit, two walks, and scored four runs. Mike Carnavale and Seamus Hill each had a hit and scored twice. Mike Gendreau and Jon Leveille chipped in with a hit and a run scored. Sophomore Cody Desmond had two RBI and two runs scored.

Eight players hit safely and nine scored in the well-balanced attack.

"We had good offense throughout the lineup," said Bryan.

Junior Nolan Flynn, Liam Fitzmaurice, Desmond and Padraig Geaney combined for the win on the mound. Flynn went the first four, giving five hits, three runs and striking out four to earn the win. Fitzmaurice, Desmond, and Geaney each worked an inning of hitless, shutout relief. Desmond and Geaney each fanned a pair in their inning of work. Desmond, in particular, threw the ball hard.

"The pitching was good," said Bryan. "Desmond is only a sophomore and he has a chance to be a good pitcher."

The defense was strong. In the first, Haley ranged to the foul line in left and made an across-the-body grab of a hard liner by Brandon White. Carnavale, Pugsley and Hill turned a pair of sharp 5-4-3 double plays in support of the pitching.

"Our defense was solid. We did a good job on the double plays," said Bryan.

Pugsley and Munroe had hits as Quincy pushed across four in the first for a 4-0 lead which was never threatened. After Randolph scored in the top of the second, Quincy answered with two in the bottom of the inning for a 6-1 edge. Pugsley and Munroe were in the middle of the rally again with hits.

The Blue Devils scored two in the top of the third before Quincy put it away with five in the bottom of the inning for an 11-3 edge. Carnavale, Beach, Pugsley, and Munroe all had hits while Hill, Fitzmaurice and Bobby Salvucci drew walks in the rally.

The Presidents added two more in the fourth and four in the fifth to close out the scoring.

In action last week, Dillon Darcy and Ken Sorenson combined for a shutout pitching performance to lead Quincy to an impressive 2-0 upset over powerful Silver Lake. Darcy threw the first 5 2/3 and Sorenson finished up for the win.

The Lakers, who are in first place in the Patriot League, have lost just two games on the season.

Beach drove in both runs for the Presidents. He had a two-out RBI single and squeezed home another run.

Matt Davis and Munroe and each had a pair of hits for the winners.

Archbishop Williams stopped Quincy, 10-2 in a non-league game. Johnny Marsinelli scored both runs for Quincy.

Munroe had two hits and two RBI as Quincy built a 4-2 lead in the fourth against Hingham, but the Harbor-men rallied for a 6-4 win. Gendreau pitched two innings of scoreless relief for Quincy.

The Duxbury loss was a heartbreaker. The Dragons scored the tying run with a two-out double in the bottom of the seventh and edged the Presidents, 4-2 in nine innings.

Sophomore Greg Paulo pitched a terrific game, giving one run, three hits and fanning six in six innings of work. He left with a 2-1 lead. Munroe, once again, paced the offense with a pair of hits and an RBI.

The Duxbury game was the latest in a series of close games which have barely eluded the young Presidents. Scituate also edged Quincy in the final inning. The Presidents have been right there with the best of the Patriot League.

"Most of this team played last year when we only won four games," said Bryan. "We learned from it. We've gained experience and played better baseball this year. It's a matter of putting everything together and learning how to win the close games."

Quincy faces North Quincy at Adams Field at 7:00 Thursday night.

Olivia Norton with Quincy's run in the game.

Bresnahan gave just three hits and fanned six against Duxbury. Quincy's outfield, led by Devon Varmahmoodi and Ashley Faiella, played excellent defense.

"Our whole defense was strong against Duxbury," said Sommers.

Avitable had an RBI and scored a run against Hingham. Bresnahan also scored a run. On the mound, Bresnahan struck out five and allowed six hits.

Quincy finished the week at 5-8 and needed to win five of its last seven games to make the tourney. Quincy meets North Quincy at Mitchell McCoy Field Thursday at 6 p.m.

Disappointing Week For Red Raider Baseball

By BILL GRIFFIN

One swing of the bat.

North Quincy had battled back from a two-run hole and an injury to its starting pitcher. The Red Raiders used their quickness and daring to tie the score and seemed on the threshold of what would have been a huge win.

One swing of the bat.

Scituate's Connor Gibbons belted a three-run home run in the bottom of the sixth to end any hopes of a comeback victory and hand North a damaging 5-2 Patriot League loss at Scituate High last week.

"It came down to that one big hit," said North coach Dan McHugh. "We had done a good job of scrapping back into the game, but the home run changed it."

It was a disappointing week for the Red Raiders. They also dropped decisions to Hanover, Norwell, and Brockton and fell out of contention for a tournament berth.

Against Scituate, the Red Raiders were down 2-0 entering the bottom of the fourth. Andrew Don drilled a line drive back to the mound which struck North pitcher Andrew Currie on the side of the leg. It was one of those scary shots to the body that was heard as well as seen. Currie lay on the field for several moments before being taken off the field on a cart.

"It caught him flush on the side of the ankle. He had quite a bruise," said McHugh.

Currie was out. North was down 2-0. Scituate had runners on first and third with none out. It was not a good place to be, but North came back. Shawn Grady worked out of the jam with a strikeout on an excellent curve and a double play.

"Shawn stepped up and did a good job for us. It's not easy coming into a game cold off the bench like that," said McHugh.

North tied it in the fifth with speed and aggressiveness that forced mistakes. Danny Gould beat out an infield hit and took second on a throwing error. Scott Higgins followed with another tapper for a hit, and North worked the first-and-third steal. Higgins swiped second, and when the throw squirted loose, Gould scored.

"We needed a spark and we made things happen by being aggressive. We didn't quit and we got back into the game," said McHugh. "Turner has had a good season for us. It was good to see him stick in a clutch hit."

One swing of the bat.

After a walk and a single, Gibbons launched a flyball which caught the strong wind blowing out and landed over the fence in left for a three-run homer and a 5-2 lead which held up until the end.

"Grady pitched great. One ball up and that was the only mistake he made," said McHugh.

North played good defense. Shortstop Pat Verhault (double and a single) made a fine play to his left in the first and Danny Gould ran down two shots in center. Pat Gould earned the first star of the game behind the plate. He gunned down a base-stealer in the third, but the best play of the day came in the fourth after Currie was hurt.

Scituate had runners at first and third with one out. A suicide squeeze try missed. Instead of holding the ball and waiting for a collision at the plate, Gould ran out to meet the runner coming from third, tagged him out easily and then fired a knee-high strike to second for the final out of the inning. Remember this the next time a big-league catcher stands and waits for a train wreck at home plate. Remember that a high-school senior had the baseball IQ to make the play the way it should be made. Instead of two bodies on the ground at home, North got two outs.

"Pat has been very solid all year," said McHugh. "That play takes intelligence and athleticism. He kept the play in front of him and then had the arm to make the throw to second."

In a week when the Red Raiders desperately needed to win games, they caught two hot pitchers. Hanover's Ryan Kelleher fired a two-hitter in a 10-1 decision over North and Scituate rode a complete game six-hitter from lefty Chris Smith. Smith had a good fastball, changed speeds and used a tough curveball for his out pitch.

"He had us off balance," said McHugh.

Grady had a single and Verhault had a base hit and an RBI in the loss to Hanover.

Pembroke downed North, 4-2 behind a seven-hitter from pitcher Alex Frizzell and two hits from Bobby McElligot.

A late North rally against Brockton fell short and the Boxers defeated the Red Raiders, 8-5.

North is 6-11 and travels to Marshfield Wednesday, May 15. North faces Quincy Thursday, May 16.

Quincy Softball Drops 3 Close Games

By BILL GRIFFIN

The pitching and defense are just fine. When the offense starts to click, the wins will come in bunches for Quincy's softball team.

The Presidents dropped three tight, well-played Patriot League games to Silver Lake (4-1), Duxbury (3-1) and Hingham (4-2) last week.

In all three games, sophomore pitcher Saxon Bresnahan was good and, at times, dominating. The defense backed her up. The offense had its chances, but couldn't deliver the key hit.

"I knew our defense would be good, but Saxon has been better than I ever thought," said coach Greg Sommers. "We just need to score some runs. We're improving our contact, but we've hit some balls right at people."

Bresnahan has been outstanding. She gave four runs in three games last week. Her fastball, especially her low fastball, is overpowering and she changes speeds just often enough. Her control has improved, and she has gained valuable varsity seasoning on the mound.

"Her control both of her pitches and of situations on the mound has improved," said Sommers.

She was at her best against a big-hitting, first-place Silver Lake squad. She struck out 13 and gave five hits. Sophomore catcher Angelina Avitable drove in Olivia Norton with Quincy's run in the game.

Bresnahan gave just three hits and fanned six against Duxbury. Quincy's outfield, led by Devon Varmahmoodi and Ashley Faiella, played excellent defense.

"Our whole defense was strong against Duxbury," said Sommers.

Avitable had an RBI and scored a run against Hingham. Bresnahan also scored a run. On the mound, Bresnahan struck out five and allowed six hits.

Quincy finished the week at 5-8 and needed to win five of its last seven games to make the tourney. Quincy meets North Quincy at Mitchell McCoy Field Thursday at 6 p.m.

Mike Finn, who scored 12 goals in two matches last week, poured in seven goals, but Whitman-Hanson hung on to defeat North Quincy's boys lacrosse team, 13-12. Freshman Timmy Glynn chipped in with three goals for the Red Raiders.

Earlier last week, Finn had five goals and sophomore goalie Benson Chau turned aside 18 shots as the Red Raiders earned their second win of the season with an 8-6 decision over Dedham.

Mitchell McGowan had six goals and an assist to lift the Quincy's boys lacrosse team to a 15-4 romp over South Shore Voke.

Pat Dowling had four goals and two assists. Andy Johnson turned aside 16 saves in goal as Quincy earned its fifth win of the season.

Later in the week, Hull defeated Quincy, 18-5.

Quincy's girls lacrosse team earned a 6-6 tie with Hull.

In tennis action, Quincy's girls team won its seventh match of the season by sweeping past past Silver Lake, 5-0. Rachel Smith had an impressive 6-0, 6-0 win in second singles while Rayna Tonnu and Samantha Pham took a 6-1, 6-2 at second doubles.

Duxbury stopped Quincy, 3-2 in more action last week. Emily Smith took a 6-3, 6-1 win at first singles for the Presidents. Rachel Smith won, 6-0, 6-2 for Quincy who finished the week at 7-5.

Sautter's 4-Hitter Leads North Quincy Past Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was small and there was big.

North Quincy played smallball with precise bunts and smart, daring base running. The Red Raiders ran, stole, took the extra base, and forced mistakes in a five-run, third-inning rally which played out with North hitting exactly one ball out of the infield.

And there was something big. Junior lefty Natasha Sautter delivered a big pitching effort, scattering four hits and striking out 10 to lead the Red Raiders to a 7-3 win over Scituate in a Patriot League game played at Mitchell-McCoy Field last week.

"We made things happen with our aggressiveness and Natasha was very strong for the whole game," said coach Kerry Ginty.

How well did North play smallball? They dropped down three beautiful bunts in one inning which led directly to three runs. Their seven runs came on: a bunt single, a groundball out, a squeeze, two wild pitches and two errors. The opportunities came because North had the speed and the softball IQ to create them.

"We did the little things right," said Ginty. "We were heads-up on the bases and once we got the bunts down, we looked for every chance to run."

The production came from the top five in the order, and there was nothing small about the leadoff effort of senior shortstop Liz Kelly. Kelly socked two triples far beyond the Scituate outfield. She was on base three times and scored three runs. On both triples, she worked a deep count and got the pitch she wanted.

"She's such a smart hitter. She knows just what she can do with certain pitches," said Ginty.

Kelly Thompson had two hits, a walk, drove in a run and scored one from the number two spot. Caitlin Bulger had a single, walk and a run scored, and Sarah Franklin added a single and an RBI. Sophomore Courtney Campo was on base three times, stole four bases and scored a run. Batters 1-5 in the order had five hits, drew five walks, scored seven runs and had two RBI. Not bad at all.

"We have had good production from the top of the order all year and we're seeing more of it lately," said Ginty. "It gives us more chances and lets us be super-aggressive on the bases. Campo is so fast that she is made for this kind of softball."

Sautter, who pitched a no-hitter against Scituate earlier this season, had excellent control. She gave just one earned run and didn't walk a batter until there were two out in the seventh. She mixed in a nice changeup with a fast ball and earned a called third strike on an off-speed floater which drifted into the strike zone.

"Her control was very good. It usually is," said Ginty. "It's not just throwing strikes. She's in control of the situation, and we take confidence from that."

Sautter also fielded her position. She charged, threw accurately and turned two bunts into outs. She also handled a hard smash back to the mound from Katie Albanese in the sixth and threw to first for the out.

"Her fielding is something she's worked on. It's improved a lot," said Ginty.

Scituate carried a 1-0 lead into the bottom of the fifth and then came North Quincy and smallball. Pay attention. Kelly tripled to left and scored on a bunt single by Thompson. Bulger singled and took second on the throw to third trying to get Thompson. Franklin bunted home Thompson and after Campo walked, Bulger scored on a wild pitch for a 3-1 lead.

Franklin scored on an error and Madison Hally bunted home Campo. Five runs, three bunts, one ball hit out of the infield. Smallball.

"We haven't been able to play as much smallball as I would like," said Ginty. "We've been working and working on it, and it was good to see it come out in a game."

JUNIOR LEFTY Natasha Sautter scattered four hits and struck out 10 to lead the North Quincy Red Raiders to a 7-3 win over Scituate last week.

In the fourth, Kelly walked, stole second and scored on an error. In the sixth, Kelly drilled her second triple and raced home on a wild pitch.

In other action last week, freshman Nicole DeGrenier drilled a two-run double to lift the Red Raiders to a 14-10 decision over Pembroke.

Dana Grasselli was 3-4 with a pair of RBI for North while Natasha Sautter had a double and a single. Sautter also fanned four in earning the victory on the mound.

Hanover dropped North, 7-2. Franklin went 2-3 with two RBI while Hally chipped in with a pair of hits.

North finished the week at 5-7 and faces Quincy Thursday.

Best Mile Times For Quincy Men, Women Established

Senior Olympics At Faxon Field Track

This year's Quincy Senior Olympic Games will be the first at Faxon Field Track, the city's new state of the art quarter-mile track and field facility at 102 Codrington St.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said organizers plan to take the unique opportunity presented by the new track to find among Quincy residents the best mile runners and establish the best mile times for both men and women in our various age groups.

"The times will be documented and kept by the Department and we will use the annual games as the venue to establish any future mile Champions," Welch said.

"The Quincy Recreation Department has for years conducted our annual tennis championship for Quincy residents and participants have for generations been crowned city champion. We would like to establish the same tradition with the mile run each May as part of the senior games activities.

"We know that there are countless Quincy residents runners over 55 who run this distance as part of road races and would like to encourage them to take part in our games," Welch said.

The mile - like the rest of the games - will have the runners compete in 5 year increments starting at age 55, so there will be multiple bench marks set by both men and women. Each winner will receive a citation noting their achievement at the games annual awards ceremony.

While non residents compete in the games and will also take part in the mile only Quincy residents will eligible for the distinction of establishing the resident mile standard.

"The mile is a very special and premiere event at many track meets, and has a great attraction to participants and spectators alike," Welch said. "We think this will add a special feeling to our games and should be a lot of fun," he added.

The Mile run will be conducted on Saturday, May 18th at 9 a.m. Applications for the games are available at the Quincy Recreation Department, The Kennedy Senior Center, and the Mayor's office.

For a complete listing of the 10 days of games activities visit quincyrec.com.

hood Based Play" format, where the City of Quincy is divided into five neighborhood districts and children play with their friends for the local team in their area.

QYFL registration fees are among the lowest of all the youth sports programs in the city and each team provides all of the necessary equipment and uniforms. Fees are $125 for Tackle Football, $100 for Cheerleading and $75 for Flag Football.

This Season, the Tackle Football program will continue to operate under 3 Levels of Play:

- The Freshman Level for the Ages 8-10 in grades 3rd-5th.

- Junior Varsity for ages

11-12 in grades 6th & 7th.

- Varsity Level for 12-14 year olds in grade 7th & 8th.

This season, the QYFL will maintain the current weight restrictions for skill position players but, have voted to remove the upper weight limit restrictions and allow larger players to participate on the Offensive Line.

The Cheerleading program is now extended to 3 levels: The newly formed, Freshmen Level for children ages 6-9, Junior Varsity for ages 10-12 and Varsity for the 12-14 year olds.

After a successful inaugural season in 2012, the Flag Football Program has extended to include 4th Graders. Flag Football will now operate in 2 Divisions: a 1st and 2nd grade team and a 3rd & 4th grade team. Players entering 3rd and 4th grades will have the option of playing Tackle Football or Flag Football and are allowed to participate on both teams if they choose.

The QYFL will be distributing Flyers through the public schools over the next week. There will be a special show featuring the Quincy Youth Football League on QATV channel 8 on May 15-19. On Monday, May 6 at approximately 7:15 p.m., Officers Dan Parisi and William Lanergan were dispatched to West Quincy to investigate a "911 hang up" call.

This occurs when Police Dispatchers pick up the 911 call and someone on the other end hangs up immediately. A similar type call is when a 911 call is received and no one talks on the other end of the phone.

In these types of calls, two Officers are dispatched because there are unknown circumstances. Often times, the Officers will arrive on scene to find that a child called 911 or someone called the number by accident.

In this case, the Dispatcher who picked up the 911 call could hear yelling on the other end of the line before it went dead. When the Quincy Police Dispatcher called the number back, there was no answer.

Upon arrival at the address, the Officers could hear loud yelling and a scuffle coming from the apartment. Then, someone inside the apartment screamed out a garbled sentence, but the Officers clearly heard the word, "Knife."

The door to the apartment was ajar so the Officers peered in to see two males in fighting stances, covered with blood. One male was pointing to his brother and yelling something about a knife. The Officers were able to have the older of the brother's step out of the residence and into the hallway. The younger brother was completely out of control, screaming and threatening at his brother.

Due to the cramped quarters of the apartment, erratic behavior and the possibility of a knife involved, the younger brother was handcuffed and moved away from his brother. Upon the arrival of additional units, the scene was secured and it was discovered that the following events had taken place.

The brothers, ages 18 and 22, both reside in the house. On this night, the younger brother ate food that was set aside for his older brother, which caused a brief argument. Several minutes after the argument was over, the younger brother entered a bedroom where the older brother was watching a movie and demanded that his headphones be returned to him. The older brother replied that he would return the headphones when he was done with them and upon hearing this; the younger brother knocked his brother's computer monitor to the floor. This began a physical altercation between the brothers that ended up in the kitchen.

Once in the kitchen, the younger brother grabbed a metal dish drying rack and "I hit him 8 or 10 times in the head with it." Located inside this drying rack was a serrated butter knife that the older brother said the younger brother held in one hand threatening to stab him with while he continued to smash the drying rack over his brother's head.

The older brother was able to wrestle the drying rack away from his brother and then attempted to defend himself by punching his younger brother in the face several times and placing him in a head lock. When the younger brother calmed down, the older brother let him go. The younger brother immediately charged his brother again. The parent then used the house phone to call the Police.

Both brothers sustained injuries to the head and facial areas that resulted in significant bleeding. Fallon Ambulance arrived on scene but the brothers refused medical treatment.

The older brother, the victim, was informed of his Domestic Violence rights and offered a restraining order to which he refused. The younger brother was placed under arrest and charged with, "Domestic Assault and Battery, Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, (dish rack) and Assault by means to wit a knife.

Nice Work!

BANK OF AMERICA: leaflets are being dropped on resident's doorsteps, urging readers to call the bank immediately. According to residents who contacted me, the implied message is that something is wrong. There is no obligation to respond to this flyer and if you are a customer and there is a problem, you would be contacted by mail, not a flyer drop.

TELEPHONE SCAM: a resident called to report that she received a telephone call from a male with a "foreigner sounding voice" stating that all Americans would be receiving new social security numbers and cards. He went on to say that he needed bank account numbers where the resident deposits her social security check. This sounds like an obvious scam to most, but these scammers continue to use this ruse because there are enough victims out there to make a profit off of. A Google check of the telephone number the caller used, (409-574-1214) showed further complaints. One person wrote that the foreign voiced caller asked if he was a senior citizen, then said that new Medicare cards were being issued and the caller needed the name of the bank where the check was sent.

A SCAM?

Many student athletes across the country are receiving letters from "Down Under Sports" or "International Sports Specialists, Inc." inviting them to go to Australia in the summer of 2013 to participate in the sport of their specialty. These letters are going out to students in a wide range of sports, along with a "Certificate of Recognition for state selection." The certificate continues, "We are pleased to announce that (the name of athlete) has been awarded Impact Player selection to the 2013 Massachusetts State (boy or girl's sport) team."

Many of the students are just average athletes and it is unknown where this company is getting their information, but it appears that they have rosters of teams and send out these offers to as many student athletes as possible. In the letter, there is mention of fundraising to pay for the trip.

Be wary of this offer!

DEFINITELY A SCAM:

Businesses are receiving calls through the Greater Boston area from people claiming to be representatives from National Grid, claiming that they will shut the electricity off if the bill payments are not made immediately. The instructions are to wire the money to an address, which clearly is not associated with National Grid.

These scammers go so low as to say that payment was not received because of the bombing in Boston!

Good Health Store Moves To New Hancock Street Location

By SCOTT JACKSON

After 35 years on Hancock Street the Good Health store has moved into a new location — right across the street.

Husband and wife owners Ralph Sr. and Diane Maturo moved their store, which specializes in selling natural foods, from its old location at 1627 Hancock St. to the new location at 1630 Hancock St. They decided to move to the new shop, formerly a Blockbuster Video store, because it came with a parking lot that the store's customers could use.

"We have customers with grocery carts full. You have to have a convenient place — we would wheel them down the sidewalk but you really have to have a convenient place for them to park," Diane said.

Ralph said it took 11 months of work by himself and two employees — Shawn Wilson and Steve Harvey — to convert the old video store into a 10,000 square foot grocery store. The move to the new store wasn't cheap either — the Maturos emptied out their saving and retirement accounts to pay for it.

"It was quite expensive for us because we put all brand new equipment in. We don't have 401(k)s anymore, I can tell you that," Ralph said. "We put everything we had into this new location."

"Everything is expensive today and if you do something right it is going to cost money," Diane added.

The new store opened on March 8. The store's owners say their customers are very happy about the new location.

"Our customers are thrilled. I think they are as excited as we are because every time someone comes in here that hasn't been here yet, it's all sorts of 'congratulations, the place is beautiful. Throughout the whole time we were working they kept saying 'when are you going to open?'" Diane said. "Quincy has always been very supportive to us...we've had a loyal following throughout the years and now we see all sorts of new faces."

Open for a total of 36 years, Good Health is one of the oldest existing businesses in Quincy Square. They chose to start their business in the downtown because Diane remembered coming to Quincy to shop while she was growing up in Milton. The Maturos have witnessed dramatic changes take place Quincy over the 36 years they've owned their business, and are excited about the prospect of a new Quincy Center.

"We don't want to be negative, but we lived through the whole thing of one store after another leaving," Diane said. "We're excited that Quincy is now looking to develop in a different way, to renovate the city. We certainly wanted to stay here and be part of it."

"I think the planning that they have for the new Quincy is going to be really exciting for Quincy. It's what Quincy needs because there was a time that we were the only store that was open seven days a week until 9 o'clock at night — there was no one else," Ralph said.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN on his Birthday

May 5, 1928 - October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ar dheis De go raibh a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Lovingly remembered and Sadly Missed by: Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan, Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his 17 grandchildren and many friends.

*A Special

The Quincy Sun

*Thursday,

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

There are few places in America as rich in history as Greater Boston, and we are tremendously proud that much of that history resides right here in beautiful Quincy. With that thought in mind, it is my distinct pleasure to introduce The Quincy Sun's special "Historic Quincy" supplement celebrating the great heritage and proud history of our City of Presidents.

Inside the pages of "Historic Quincy," you will find a helpful guide to Quincy's rich past – The Adams National Historic Park and presidential homestead; the First Parish Church, home to the burial crypt of U.S. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; the Hancock Cemetery; the Adams Academy and the Quincy Historical Society; our granite and shipbuilding history and so much more.

The pride we share in our unmatched history is proven regularly by the investments this community makes to preserve and enhance that heritage. This year, we will be conducting a major restoration of our old City Hall, which is among the oldest functioning local government buildings in the entire country.

It is our goal to restore the building to its original 1844 design and stature and allow for more public access to one of our true historic jewels. At the same time, the City will be restoring the former Coddington School, another architectural masterpiece and historic building, to create new City and School Department office space.

I hope you will take the time to check in on the progress of both projects this summer, and I encourage you to discover all that Quincy has to offer, from our 27 miles of coastline to our award-winning restaurants and of course, to our history.

Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

First Father And Son Presidents

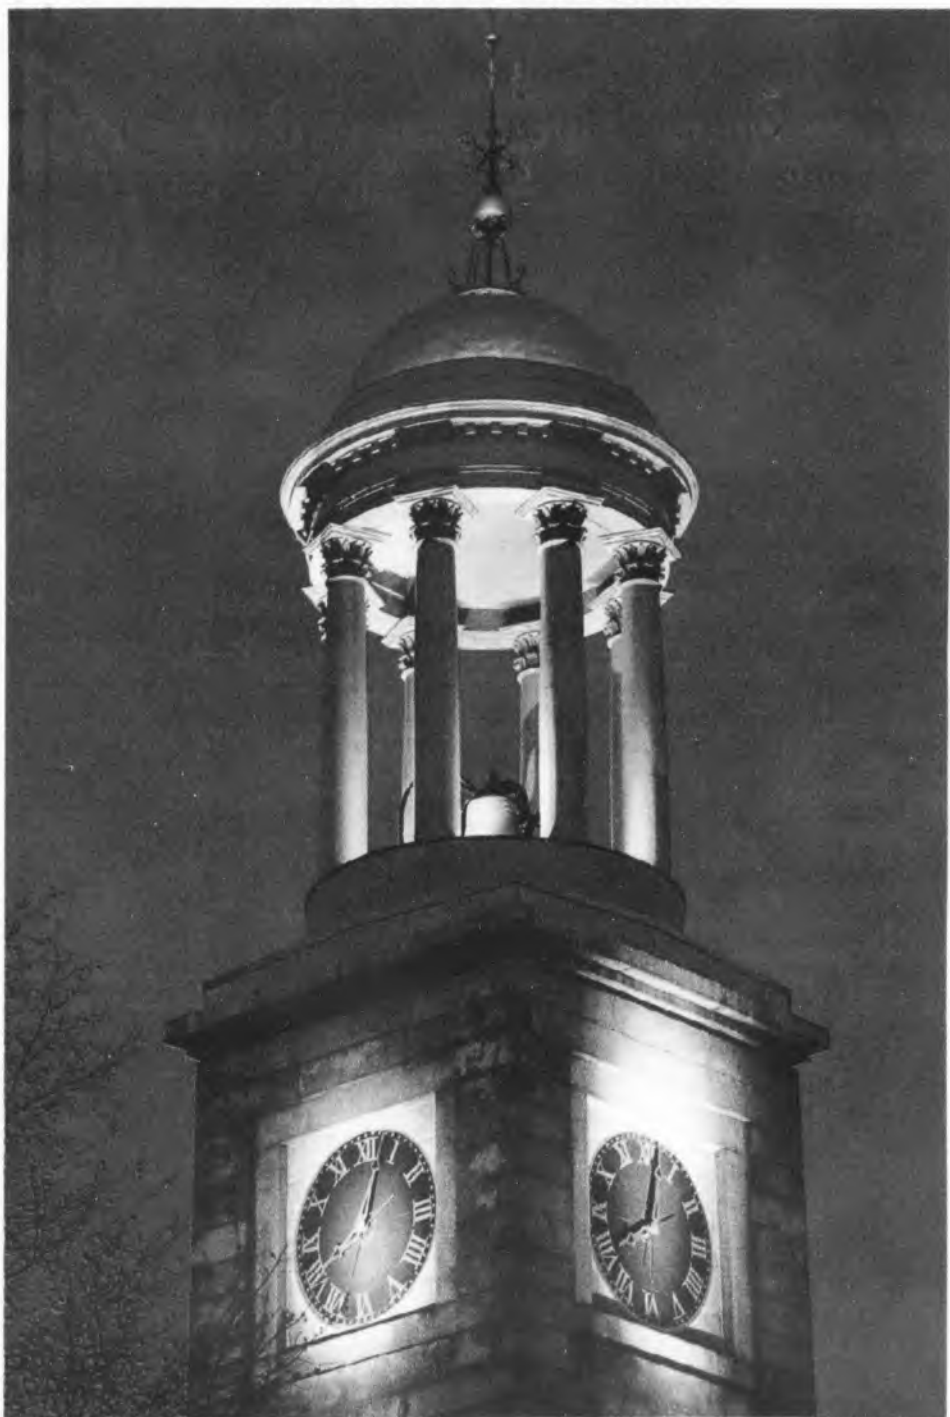

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St.

was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St.

as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six year $175,000 reconstruction project, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in the them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over. Also included is admission to the Old House at Peace field within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour leaves the Visitors Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peace field," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there.

So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, one of the most intriguing is marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock Street in Quincy Square, next to City Hall (1305 Hancock St.), is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

John And Abigail: A Unique Historic Team

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors."

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.

JOHN ADAMS

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

ABIGAIL ADAMS

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

Both John and Thomas Jefferson, his fellow Founding Father and rival, died on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail, along with their son, John Quincy, and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail at about the age of 32 and John Quincy at 10 stand beside the church, looking at the statue of John Adams across Hancock Street in front of City Hall.

The story of Abigail and John was recounted by HBO television in a seven-part mini-series in the spring of 2008. The mini-series, based on the book John Adams by David McCullough, starred Paul Giamatti (John Adams) and Laura Linney (Abigail). It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

Richest Man In The Colony

At the start of the Revolution, Quincy-born John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson

Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses a periodical reading room and two quiet study rooms, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001. The project was funded by the City of Quincy, with grants from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Massachusetts Historical Commission and nearly $1 million in private donations.

The new wing was dedicated in 2005 as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 1 to 5 p.m. For information, call 617-376-1301.

FLAGS AND WREATHS adorn the last resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, in the crypt of United First Parish Church. It's the only church in the United States where two presidents are buried side by side with their wives.

United First Parish Only Church Where 2 Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in UNITED FIRST PARISH CHURCH, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was built of granite donated by John Adams. It was designed by Alexander Parrish and completed in 1828.

The church is open to the public from April 19 to Nov. 11 daily. Tours begin on the hour from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday through Friday and noon to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate—and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Adams Academy Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

Now Home To The Quincy Historical Society

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was overshadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The Wife Of John Quincy Adams Only First Lady Born On Foreign Soil

Louisa Catherine Adams' Adventures As 'A Nobody'

When she was 65 years old and a member of the famous and not always sensitive Adams family for 43 years, Louisa Catherine Adams penned a brief, unpublished memoir.

She called it "Adventures of a Nobody."

Louisa Catherine, the wife of John Quincy Adams and the only first lady born outside what became the United States, never quite fit in with her in-laws until late in life when Abigail finally acknowledged she was worthy to be an Adams wife and John grew to enjoy her letters and his conversations with her.

She was born Louisa Catherine Johnson on Feb. 12, 1775 in London to Joshua Johnson, an American merchant from Maryland, and his wife, Catherine, an Englishwoman. The family fled to Nantes, France, when the American Revolution made life untenable for Johnson in England.

In Nantes, Louisa attended a convent school run by nuns and thought of herself as Catholic and French in culture. She spoke French fluently and had to learn English all over when the family returned to London after the war in the colonies ended. Becoming an Anglican confused her so much that she fainted in her first visit to the altar.

Louisa first met her future husband in Nantes when she was 4 and he was 12. They met again at a party in the Johnson home in London and this time John Quincy was old enough to take notice of her literary, musical and conversational skills. They became engaged, much to the consternation of John Quincy's folks back home.

John the elder, now the president, was concerned that his son was about to marry "a foreigner," and Abigail felt called in to remind her son that the choices he made now might interfere with his political future. She even sent letters to Louisa pointing out the importance of economy and lack of frivolity required of an Adams wife.

Nevertheless, John Quincy and his Louisa were married July 26, 1797, in London. The ceremony called for little more than a paragraph in John Quincy's voluminous diary.

"At nine this morning, I went, accompanied by my brother, to Mr. Johnson's, and thence to the church of the parish of All Hallows Barking where I was married to Louisa Catherine Johnson, second daughter of Joshua Johnson and Catherine Johnson, by Mr. Hewlett.

"We were married before eleven in the morning."

They barely had time to set up housekeeping in London before John Quincy was off to the continent as minister to Prussia. Louisa was in her element in Europe. She made friends with the Prussian royal family. But she miscarried their first child and was subject to fainting spells and fevers. Her husband, engrossed in diplomacy, ignored her needs.

She came to the United States for the first time in 1801, landing in Quincy, the very heart of Adams country. John, now an ex-president, found that he rather liked her but Abigail still doubted her qualifications to be an Adams wife.

"To a woman like Mrs. Adams, equal to every occasion in life, I appeared like a maudlin, hysterical fine lady," wrote Louisa.

A year later, John Quincy was elected to the U.S. Senate as a Federalist and the family was on the move again, this time to Washington. Out from under Abigail's thumb, Louisa blossomed, turning her home into a social salon for politicians and diplomats. But all that ended when her husband broke with the Federalist party and resigned his Senate seat.

John Quincy was immediately offered the post of minister to Russia by President James Madison and, without consulting his wife, he accepted. The family included three children by now and it was decided by John Quincy and Abigail that the oldest, George and John II, would remain in the States for their education while the youngest, year-old Charles Francis, would go to St. Petersburg with his mother.

She found the winters in the Russian royal capital cold and dark but there was social life and she became a favorite dance partner of Tsar Alexander I.

A daughter was born in St. Petersburg but died before her first birthday. In all, Louisa was pregnant 14 times with nine miscarriages and one still born. Her oldest, George, drowned at 28 when he fell or jumped from a boat in New York Harbor; John II died of alcoholism at 31; only Charles Francis survived to become a diplomat and author.

For once, John Quincy heeded his wife and asked to come home. Instead, President Madison assigned him to Ghent, Belgium, to help negotiate the treaty ending the War of 1812. When his duty to his country was concluded, he sent for Louisa to join him in Paris, touching off one of the great adventures of her life, even impressing her mother-in-law, Abigail.

For 40 days and nights in the dead of the fierce Russian winter she and Charles Francis, age 7, accompanied by a small escort, were driven by a carriage on a sled, thawing their frozen food over candles, crossing frozen rivers on quaking ice, hurrying past old battle fields still littered with dead soldiers. It was in relief that they arrived in friendly Berlin. But there were still perils ahead.

Napoleon had escaped from exile on the isle of Elba and was in Paris collecting his Grande Armee to confront the Duke of Wellington and the Prussian General von Blucher at Waterloo. There were French troops everywhere. A group of them spotted Louisa's obviously Russian carriage and surrounded her, shouting: "Kill her! Kill her!"

Louisa's escort convinced them she was Napoleon's sister. She addressed them in fluent French and they allowed her to proceed, cheering her as she went.

John Quincy was next assigned as minister to London and Louisa spent two happy years in her old hometown. Better yet, her oldest boys, George and John II, were permitted to join her. She hadn't seen them in more than six years. Neither parent recognized their sons, now 14 and 12 respectively.

The peripatetic Adams clan was on the move again when President James Monroe named John Quincy his secretary of state. Back in the states, Abigail greeted her daughter-in-law with new respect. Louisa enjoyed life in Washington, too, turning her home into a social center for diplomats and others with an open house every Tuesday night.

When it was apparent that her husband would be a candidate for the presidency in 1824, Louisa threw a ball honoring Andrew Jackson on the 10th anniversary of his victory over the British at New Orleans. She tried and failed to get the popular Jackson to support John Quincy. Instead, the war hero ran against him.

Jackson actually won the election with 99 electoral votes to 84 for Adams, 41 for William Crawford of Georgia and 37 for Henry Clay of Kentucky. But he failed to get a majority, throwing the election into the House of Representatives. After some wheeling and dealing, Clay threw his support to Adams and John Quincy became president. Clay became his secretary of state.

Louisa was depressed by the bitterness of the election and disappointed in her husband's backroom maneuvers to win election. Son George fathered an illegitimate child by a chambermaid. Son John II was thrown out of Harvard. Son Charles became "addicted to depraved habits." She spent much of her White House years in seclusion, eating chocolates and writing poetry.

But when John Quincy asked Congress to appropriate funds for a billiard table in the White House and pro-Jackson newspapers suggested it was for Louisa because "gambling furniture is common in the castles of the European rich and great," it was Louisa herself who answered back in the pro-Adams press.

She was relieved when John Quincy's single term ended in defeat by his old nemesis Jackson and they could retire to a quiet life in Quincy. But it was not to be. It took a year for her husband to catch his breath, then once again duty called and he ran and was elected to the House of Representatives, first as a candidate of the National Republican Party and then as a Whig.

John Quincy's great cause was anti-slavery and Louisa worked closely with her husband for the cause, even branching out to women's rights, equating the status of American women with that of American slaves and keeping up a lively correspondence with advocates of women's rights.

John Quincy served in the House for 17 years before he was stricken on the floor of Congress and died Feb. 23, 1848. Louisa remained in Washington, suffering a stroke a year later. She died May 15, 1852 at the age of 77 and was buried along side of John Quincy, John and Abigail in the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

Congress adjourned in mourning, a first time tribute for the First Lady who thought of herself as a nobody.

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775. General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquilla" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of the Society for the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open to the public Saturday, June 1, July 6, Aug. 8, Sept. 7, and Oct. 5 from 1 to 4 p.m. The House will also be open during Discover Quincy Days. $118,000 Restoration Project UnderwayThe 1880s Look At Josiah Quincy House*By SCOTT JACKSON

The Josiah Quincy House is in the midst of a multiyear restoration project that will leave the historic home looking like it did in the 1880s.

The house, a National Historic Landmark located on Muirhead Street in Wollaston, was built in 1770 by Revolutionary War Colonel Josiah Quincy – the first in a long line of Josiah Quincys that includes Josiah Quincy II, who along with John Adams represented British soldiers on trial after the Boston Massacre; Josiah III, a congressman, mayor of Boston, and president of Harvard; and two other Boston mayors.

The house remained in the Quincy family for generations and is now owned by non-profit Historic New England. The organization is overseeing the preservation efforts at the house, combing through documents and photographs taken by Eliza Susan Quincy to see what the house looked like more than 130-years ago.

"The documents we are using to base our interpretation include an 1879 list of furnishings that were in the house as well as photography that was done in the house," Historic New England museum operations manager Melinda Huff said. "We have this wonderful document that includes all the furnishings, where they were, what the wallpaper looked like, what the floor covering looked like, and for historians it's really exciting because a lot of times things are a curator's best guess. But we have the real thing – we're able to reinstall the house as it looked in 1880."

Historic New England's efforts began last year. The first step was repainting the house's interior based on a paint analysis. A bombe chest was also added to the collection of Quincy family furniture on the second floor, which includes a Boston high chest older than the house itself. That chest had been in Josiah Quincy's first two houses, each of those burned down but the chest survived.

The first floor's lower stair hall also has a new look. The furniture was rearranged to match the layout found in the photographs and other documents. In addition "made to import" early 19th century Chinese bamboo and rattan furniture, a settee and a chair set, was installed. Historic New England's conservation lab restored those pieces before bringing them to the Quincy House.

Huff said the next step is adding new wallpaper, flooring, and window treatments to the stair hall. The wallpaper and linoleum can be seen in an 1880 photograph of the house, and would be made-to-order for the museum. Historic New England is requesting money from the city's Community Preservation Act funds to help pay for that part of the work.

"The whole project is about $118,000. We are requesting $44,000 from the CPA funds. The balance would be on our end, we match and in fact far exceed that amount," Huff said. "We have an anonymous donor who is really interested in making sure the Quincy House gets its due."

Historic New England did receive CPA funds, which went towards a lighting protection system and electric upgrades, last year. Huff hopes to have the stair hall work completed by the start of next year's visiting season on June 1, 2014 if they receive CPA funds again. The house will have a whole new look to it if the project is completed, but the emphasis on telling the story of the Quincy family will be the same.

"It will look remarkably different," Huff said. "You'll still hear the story of the multiple generations of Quincy family members who lived there. It wasn't only the colonel, the Revolutionary War hero, it was his son [Josiah II] who was a pretty important attorney and patriot. Josiah Quincy III was a president of Harvard – not too shabby of a legacy this family had. You'll hear the story but the house in appearance will be much different."

Part of the reason for the work is to increase visitation to the site. The Quincy House is open to the public the first Saturday of each month from June to October and private group tours can be arranged. The museum is free to Quincy residents. Last year, 1,000 people visited the site, and Huff wants more people to visit in the future.

"It's a real jewel in our collection that has not had as much visitation as we'd like, especially from members of the Quincy community," Huff said.

Historic New England has also partnered with the Quincy Chamber and other historic sites in the city to open the Quincy House as part of Discover Quincy days. Huff credited Discover Quincy days for helping draw more people to the house.

"We love the idea of partnering with the historic sites – not only the Adams sites but all of the historic sites that Quincy has. It's really amazing," Huff said.

The Josiah Quincy House was a site for this year's Cleaner, Greener Quincy day on May 4. Volunteers helped prepare the lawn for this summer's visiting season. Huff gave participants in Cleaner, Greener a special tour of the house's interior during the final hour of the cleanup.

Whaling In Quincy

Although it never attained the status of New Bedford or Nantucket, the town of Quincy played a role in the whaling industry in the early and middle 19th century.

It is recorded that the top-sail schooner Cambria sailed from Quincy on an 18-month whaling voyage in 1839 and returned with 420 barrels of sperm oil.

However, reports for 1845 show that only one Quincy vessel was engaged in whaling and by 1855 the industry was viewed as so insignificant that it was not recorded.

City Hall: Seat Of Government For 169 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 169 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree;

CITY HALL - dedicated as the James R. McIntyre Government Center in memory of the city's former mayor and state senator in 1984 - has served as the center of Quincy government since 1844. At right are flowering Okame Cherry Trees that bloom in early spring.

Quincy Capital Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family, for whom the city is named, came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

First Significant Restoration Of 169-Year-Old Quincy Granite Landmark In 100 Years

Monumental Makeover For Quincy City Hall

By JIM EDWARDS
Quincy Historical Society

Quincy City Hall was built in 1844 and constructed of Quincy granite. The architect for the project was Solomon Willard (1783-1861) who is considered one of the fathers of the Quincy granite industry. Mr. Willard was also the architect for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown. Old City Hall is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is at the heart of the historic district. Mr. Willard is buried in Hall Place Cemetery in Quincy.

Old City Hall was erected at the time as a Town Hall and is described by scholars as being an excellent example of academic Greek Revival architecture. One of the more distinguished architects of the early 20th century, Ralph Adams Cram, described Old City Hall as "one of the outstanding specimens of mid-century classical American design in the country." As far as current records are able to corroborate, this building is the oldest functioning City Hall in the United States.

Despite its stature, Old City Hall has come onto hard times in terms of its physical condition. With the exception of the restoration work performed in the City Council Chamber in the mid 1990's, relatively few improvements have been made to the building in approximately 100 years. The slate roof leaks badly and must be replaced. The granite blocks comprising the exterior walls are in reasonably good condition; however the mortar joints in these walls are either in poor condition or missing entirely. New mortar must be installed in all stone joints. The wood windows and trim are also in poor condition and require replacement. Further, the unattractive and not original to the building, stucco-clad addition at the rear of Old City Hall is in extremely poor condition. It is also of inadequate size and should be replaced with a more appropriate building addition.

The interior of Old City Hall is in a decidedly decrepit condition. Many issues require attention. It should also be noted here that because of the building's significant historic status, all restoration work will have to be accomplished in concert with the requirements of the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

All egress stairways within the building are of an older vintage and not enclosed in a manner that would prevent smoke or a fire from moving to the various floor levels of the building.

Electrical wiring within the building is old with much of it in poor condition and of a potential hazard.

The fire alarm system is old and undependable and therefore presents a potential danger to workers or others visiting the building.

The steam heating system is in terrible condition and delivers uneven and inadequate heat to the various rooms in the building. There is also no ventilation of spaces, as required by law.

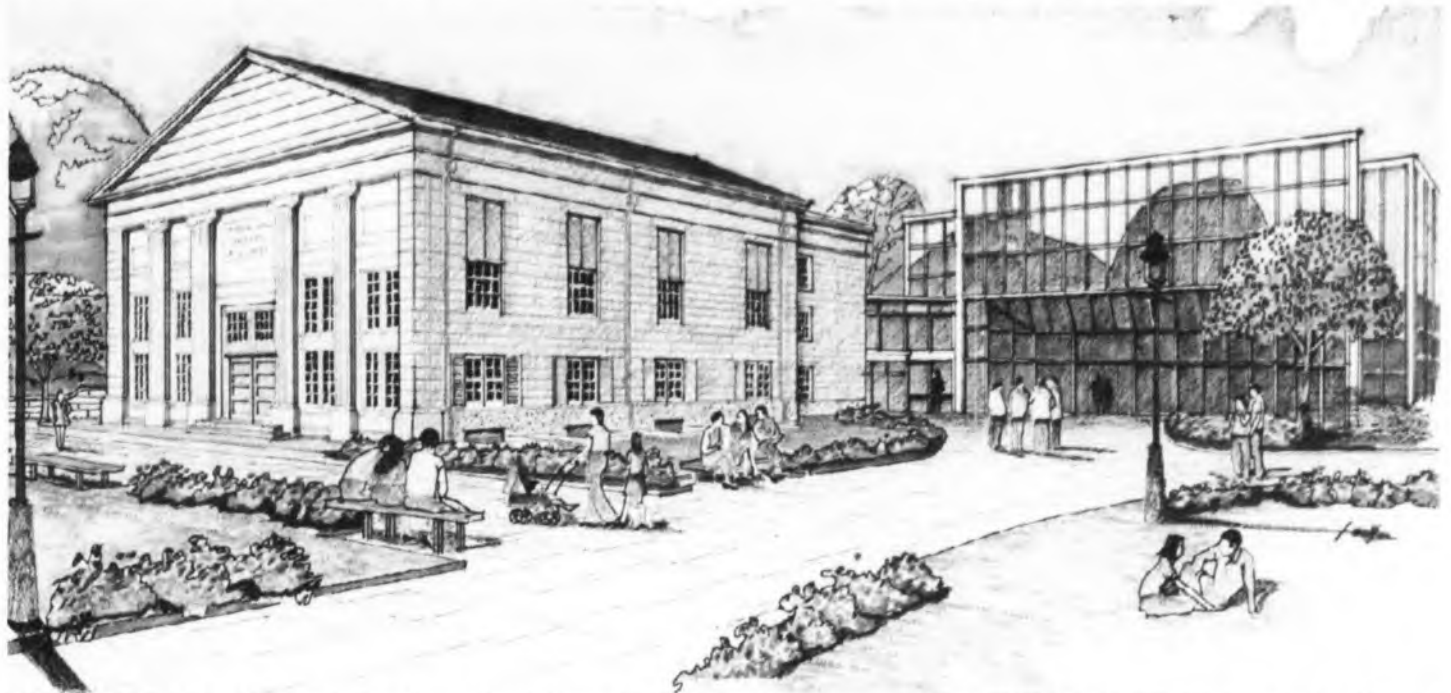

There is no fire protection system (automatic sprinklers) within either Old City Hall or City Hall Annex.

Plumbing systems are of ancient vintage, are inadequate in number and provide no toilet facilities for the public.

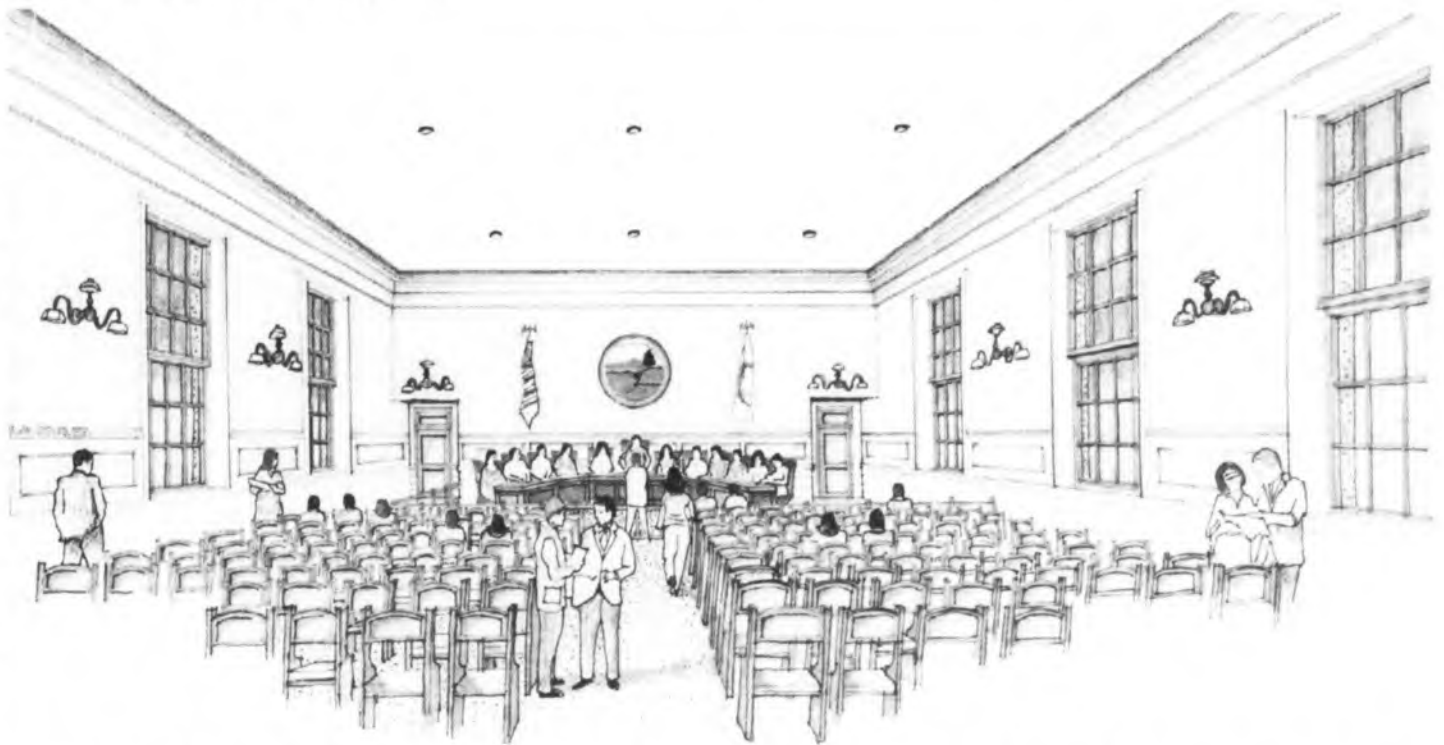

Hazardous materials exist within the building.

There is little legal handicapped access to or within Old City Hall and there are no handicapped accessible toilets located in the building.

Insect infestation is also a problem.

Powder post beetles and termites are damaging the building's roof and floor framing structural systems.

With the exception of the Council Chamber, the finishes in all rooms in Old City Hall are worn, unsightly and unfitting for a municipal building representing the seat of Quincy City government.

Remedial efforts will be significant and careful consideration of building code issues critical. All egress within Old City Hall must be made safe. New electrical and state of the art fire alarm systems will be installed. A new fire protection system for Old City Hall and City Hall Annex will be a very important part of the upgrades. A revised structural system must take seismic design into account. Updated energy efficient heating, ventilation and air-conditioning systems will be installed to provide comfortable and healthy conditions for workers and visitors alike. All mandates of the State's Architectural Access Board will render the building user-friendly to all handicapped individuals.

One of the primary objectives of the restoration effort is to restore the City Council Chamber to its original "Great Hall" configuration which before the 1920's ran the length and breadth of the building. Included in that work will be the recapturing of the Great Hall balcony, parts of which remain entombed in other walls, ceilings and finishes. The prospect of returning the Great Hall to its original, majestic proportions, with heroically proportioned windows to allow light to enter the space on two sides as originally designed is exciting to consider. And with historically appropriate interior finish upgrades, the entire 1844 structure will be transformed into a first class City facility, one which echoes its exceptional past history within a more modern framework.

Old City Hall is a wonderfully prominent building for the City of Quincy and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It is directly across the street from another historically significant treasure, the United First Parish Church, also constructed of Quincy granite. This architectural masterpiece also designed in the Greek Revival style was constructed in 1828 mainly from funds donated by John Adams, second President of the United States. Within the Church is the crypt where President Adams, President John Quincy Adams and their wives Abigail and Louisa Catherine are entombed.

Old City Hall, constructed when Quincy was still a "Town", is an extremely important building to the City, in its function as a continuous seat of government for almost 170 years, and for the citizens of Quincy who recognize this architectural icon as a symbol of "their" City. For many in the City, the presence of historical buildings in the downtown is one of the reasons Quincy is such an interesting and inviting place to live and work.

It is past time to begin work to revitalize the great Quincy treasure that is Old City Hall. Mayor Koch and the City Council deserve credit for addressing this important restoration project at this time.

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams Cairn

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy.

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Located next to John Adams birthplace, you'll find another famous Quincy landmark.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock.

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle,

Hancock's Father A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington Green and Concord Bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president. According to popular legend, Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that

King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

But historians believe Hancock actually signed an engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence. There was no ceremonial signing of the Declaration on July 4, 1776 so after Congress approved the wording of the text on July 4, a copy was sent to be printed. As the president of the second Continental Congress, Hancock could have signed the document that was sent to the printer. However, no one seems to know for sure since that document was lost. Some think the document was ruined in the printing process.

According to historians, the printer produced the first published version of the Declaration in the familiar broadsheet size. Hancock's name is the only delegate to appear on this document. A second broadsheet was issued six months later with all the signers listed.

Hancock's iconic signature does appear on a different document: a sheet of parchment that was carefully handwritten sometime after July 19 and signed on Aug. 2 by Hancock and those delegates present. This document - known as the engrossed copy - is displayed at the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration was adopted and signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered a humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 56, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 8.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Welcome To Quincy: 'The City Of Presidents'

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite and the centerpiece of Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007. Adjacent to the Gazing Ball is a bronze statue (right) of John Adams. The statue was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and is the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. Located across the street from the Adams Statue is another bronze statue of Adams' wife, Abigail and their son, John Quincy (depicted as a 10-year-old boy) - a photo of that statue appears on Page 45.

UNITED FIRST PARISH Church is also known as "The Church of the Presidents" because two American Presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, attended the church along with their wives, Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams. Above is the pew which they sat marked with a plaque and ribbon on the side. All four are entombed beneath the church in a family crypt.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great grandfather.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS life-size marble bust created by famed sculptor Hiram Powers in 1841. The sculpture is located inside United First Parish Church, Quincy Center.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the US Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace Field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

ROCKING CHAIR used by President John Quincy Adams inside the second-floor study at the Old House at Peace field.

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onís Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secretary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83.

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams, like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

Hancock's Other Declaration: 'I Love You And You Alone'

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy Homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

The Homestead is a National Historic Landmark.

The room is one of the seven rooms of the Vassall-Borland period original home dating back to 1731 when it was built as a summer residence by Leonard Vassall. The name of the room is derived from the floor-to-ceiling Sam Domingo mahogany wood paneling. One of two rooms on the first floor, the paneled room served as a keeping parlor and dining room.

They were commissioned by Vice President John Adams. The price tag on the back of the paintings indicate John Adams paid 46 2/3 dollars for these paintings. The placement of these portraits at opposite ends of the room facing each other symbolizes the historic moment in history when the United States witnessed the first peaceful transfer of power between one executive and another with the inauguration of Adams as the second U.S. president in 1797. The oil painting is a copy of an original painted by Gilbert Stuart at the request of John Quincy Adams; Stuart's daughter Jane created the copy.

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

John Adams 'Father'

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war. Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer,"

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a Quincy company of 300 men put out in whale-boats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whale-boats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

When Amelia Earhart, once the part owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on the around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three-week search for her.

She has never been found.

City Named For Him But:

Col. John Quincy Something Of A Mystery Man

Few men have served the public good longer or as well as Col. John Quincy.

He was Speaker of the Massachusetts House, a governor's councilor, a selectman and perennial moderator of the town meeting in Old Braintree, commander of the local militia regiment and guardian of the rights of the few Ponkapoag Indians who survived the plague.

And through his granddaughter, Abigail Adams, nee Smith, he was the grandfather-in-law of the second president of the United States and the great grandfather of the sixth.

Small wonder then, that when the North Precinct broke away from Old Braintree in 1792 they named the new town "Quincy."

Col. John Quincy is something of a mystery man, even in the city that bears his name. It is not known for sure when he came to Old Braintree. Nor is there a picture of him extant or even a physical description of him in the words that have been left to us by his contemporaries.

During celebration in Quincy in 1908, the main speaker, the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, noted that "in his day, he was one of the most trusted and influential public characters of the province; but for a hundred years or more, he has now been buried in oblivion."

"For example, I once mentioned John Quincy to a lifelong resident, a man of affairs and influence in the town. The response was: 'John Quincy? John Quincy? I never heard of him before!' Another in the group then exclaimed 'You mean John Quincy Adams, don't you?'"

John Quincy was born in Boston. His father, Daniel, died when he was a year old and his widowed mother, Anna, married the Rev. Moses Fiske, minister of the First Parish Church in Braintree.

He graduated from Harvard in 1708, obtained a master's degree in 1711 and inherited, through his mother, a good-sized farm in Mount Wollaston and lived there for the rest of his life.

John Quincy's rise in public life was meteoric.

He married Elizabeth Norton, the daughter of a Hingham minister, in 1715 and was named justice of the peace the same year, moderator of the town meeting a year later and began 22 years of service in the House a year after. He was Speaker of the House for 12 years, starting in 1729.

In 1741, he was manipulated out of his posts as commander of the Suffolk militia regiment by a wealthy Boston lawyer named Joseph Gooch, who is described by some as an "opportunist," and by others as an "unsavory demagogue."

Gooch arrived in Old Braintree determined to launch a political career. Beer and cider, supplied by Gooch, flowed freely in the taverns. The strategy prevailed and Quincy was dismissed as militia commander.

But his banishment was short-lived. Captains and lieutenants refused to serve under Gooch. They would serve only under Quincy. Demoralized, the people of Braintree turned Gooch out and returned command of their militia to Quincy.

Quincy's reputation was such that he was named by the legislature to be trustee of the funds of the Ponkapoag Indians, survivors of a devastating plague. He held the post for 20 years at the insistence of the Indians themselves.

Whenever there was a civic job to be done, it was the practice of the people of

MONUMENT was placed on Col. John Quincy's grave in the Hancock Cemetery by the Quincy Historical Society in 1904. Plaque reads: "Here was buried Col. John Quincy of Mount Wollaston 1689-1767 from whom Quincy was named." His gravestone is at the lower right. (Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth)

JOHN QUINCY TANKARD is on display in the foyer of Quincy City Hall glass annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Colonel John Quincy, for whom the City of Quincy was named, was the grandfather of Abigail Adams and the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams. Quincy attorney and former City Council President George Burke paid $200,000 for the tankard at auction in 2001. It was the only piece in a collection of colonial silver put up for auction by United First Parish Church to remain in Quincy. Burke has provided in his will to gift the tankard to the city.

Old Braintree to appoint Col. John Quincy to do it. Thus it was that he was called on to chair the committee that first recommended the North Precinct become a separate town. That was in 1728.

It took 64 years but finally it was done, and when it was, they named it for John Quincy.

Civil War Artifact On Display At Quincy Historical Society

CIVIL WAR ARTIFACT - The Van Lew American Flag, kept secretly in Richmond, Virginia throughout the Civil War by Elizabeth Van Lew, is among the featured artifacts at a new exhibit on the Civil War at the Quincy Historical Society. The exhibit prominently features artifacts and images originally collected by Civil War veterans of Quincy's Grand Army of the Republic post and a number of original documents. Van Lew was a Richmond society matron and spy for the Union. The 16-foot by 8-foot 34-star flag was unfurled when federal troops entered the city of Richmond in April of 1865. Richmond served as the capital of the Confederate States during most of the Civil War. The exhibit is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. from May through September at the Quincy Historical Society located at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144. The exhibit is closed Friday, July 4th in observance of Independence Day. See related story on Page 34.

Final Resting Place Of City's Earliest Settlers, Generations Of Adams And Quincy Families

History And More At Hancock Cemetery

It may not share the same well-profiled status of some of the city's renowned historical sites like the Old House, Adams Birthplaces and United First Parish Church.

But Quincy's historic Hancock Cemetery should be a must stop on any visitor's list to the "City of Presidents."

In fact, you might even say the Cemetery located on Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall is a blueprint to many of the city's historical figures. There's a story of the living associated with every grave marker that provide a perspective of not only local history but our nation's history, too.

The cemetery is the final resting area for some of the city's earliest settlers as well as generations of the Adams and Quincy families, including Rev. John Hancock, the father of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

There are also lessons to be learned from some of the monuments themselves. The artwork on the markers are examples of colonial winged skulls and cherubim, to Federalist classical motifs and representatives of Quincy's 19th century role as the national center of granite quarrying and carving, says Edward Fitzgerald, a leading authority on the Hancock Cemetery and executive director of the Quincy Historical Society.

There are many notable graves but there's one that may leave some visitors a bit perplexed.

That would be the tomb marked "J.Q. Adams" located to the left of the front gate. And there's an interesting story behind this tomb.

The tomb is the Adams family vault, the original resting place of John and Abigail Adams and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams, who are all now entombed in the Presidential crypt in United First Parish Church – located just across the street from the cemetery.

The vault remains the grave of numerous family members including John and Abigail's daughter, Nabby, and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine's sons, George and John.

According to Fitzgerald's research, when Nabby died in 1813, she was evidently buried in the family tomb in Hancock Cemetery. Her mother Abigail was buried there in 1818 and then John Adams was buried there after he died on July 4, 1826.

"In the ensuing weeks, John Quincy Adams came up with the idea of the crypt beneath the planned new church building," Fitzgerald says. "The new church opened in 1828 and John and Abigail's remains are moved" (to the crypt.)

By 1834 – over the next five years – three more Adams are buried in the family tomb: John Quincy Adams's brother Thomas and his sons George and John.

In 1848, after JQA died in Washington, he was returned to Quincy and buried in the family tomb.

It is JQA's son, Charles Francis, who gets the idea to expand the crypt so that his father can be buried next to his father and mother. But JQA is not moved right away, Fitzgerald points out.

"His widow, Louisa Catherine, died in 1852 in Washington. Over the next few months, Charles Francis arranged preparation of the crypt. Louisa's body remained in Washington. On Dec. 15, 1852, the bodies of the Sixth President and First Lady Louisa Catherine are moved to the crypt in a coordinated ceremony."

After Louisa's body arrives by train, she is moved directly from the train station to the church.

A few other facts about the Adams family vault:

In Paul Nagel's book, Descent from Glory, Four Generations of the John Adams Family and John Quincy Ad- ams, he describes the sequence for JQA's and Louisa Catherine's burials:

- JQA dies on Feb. 23, 1848. His body is brought back for burial and is in Quincy on March 11, 1848. A funeral service takes place in First Parish Church. "At 5 p.m. the coffin was taken across the road and placed in the crowded family vault. . . For four years John Quincy rested in the old burying ground with many relatives, his brother Thomas, his sister Nabby, his two sons, and others nearly so dear."

- Louisa Catherine Adams dies May 15, 1852 in Washington. Her son Charles Francis Adams "hastened back to Quincy, leaving his mother's coffin behind until he could arrange for his parents to be placed next to his grandparents."

- John Quincy Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams are placed in the crypt, Dec. 15, 1852. "JQA's casket, draped with velvet, was brought to the church as Louisa's was delivered from the railway depot, where it had arrived from Washington. The interment may not have been completed until the 16th, because JQA's granite tomb was not big enough for his coffin and had to be enlarged."

There are many other notable graves in Hancock Cemetery. Among them:

Henry Adams (1646) – the great-great-grandfather of John Adams – who emigrated from England in the first years of the Massachusetts colony. How different local and the nation's history may have been had Henry not "emigrated for reasons of conscience."

Rev. John Hancock (1744) – father of the future Patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Rev. Hancock served as minister of United First Parish Church from 1726 until his death in 1744. It is widely assumed that the cemetery came to be named for Rev. Hancock but some local historians believe the cemetery took its name from its location on Hancock Street.

Col. John Quincy (1767) – served more than 30 years in the colonial legislature, including 12 as speaker. The grandfather of Abigail Adams, the town of Quincy was named in his honor in 1792.

Abner Packard (1902) – commander of the town militia unit that responded to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers in the Civil War in April, 1861.

On any given afternoon, you'll find cemetery visitors meandering throughout the cemetery, reading markers and pausing in silence. Some graves are decorated with American flags, identifying the deceased as veterans of the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil War.

Hancock Cemetery is a must-stop along the city's historic trail. Visitors will learn more about Quincy and its early history.

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the United States, where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate an act of Congress.

A Mini-Tour Of Quincy's Historic Hancock Cemetery

Quincy's Historic Hancock Cemetery has a fascinating history and visitors can learn more about the cemetery by reading an introduction and guide published by the Quincy Historical Society.

The guide notes that the cemetery dates from the earliest years of European settlement (1630s) and was the community's main burial ground until 1854. One noteworthy fact: Early Puritans took a pragmatic attitude toward death and burial: grave markers were often permanent or non-existent and cattle roamed freely here.

There are an estimated 700 stones and 2,000 interments in the cemetery.

The cemetery is located on Hancock Street adjacent to City Hall and across the street from United First Parish Church.

The iron fencing that adorns the entrance dates back to 1844.

AMONG THE MANY interesting grave sites at Quincy's Historic Hancock Cemetery in Quincy Center is this one for Colonel John Quincy, who died in 1767. The original marker is located at the right of larger monument. Col. Quincy was the grandfather of Abigail Adams and served more than 30 years in the colonial legislature. In 1792, the town of Quincy was named in his honor.

MINISTERS' TOMB became a collective tomb for First Church's ministers, from Moses Fiske (1708) through Peter Whitney (1843). Also buried here is Rev. John Hancock (1744) who served as church minister from 1726 to his death in 1744. He was the father of the great Patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence, John Hancock.

MARBLE MONUMENT for Josiah Quincy, Jr. (1775) and Abigail Phillips Quincy (1798). Josiah Quincy was a colleague of John Adams in the early patriot causes and his co-counsel at the Boston Massacre trial. He died at age 30 while returning from pleasing the American cause in England. The monument to him and his wife was erected and composed by their son, the third Josiah, who served as mayor of Boston and president of Harvard College.

GRAVE SITE OF Henry Adams (1646) is the cemetery's earliest identified grave. Henry Adams was the great-great-grandfather of Second President John Adams. Henry Adams emigrated from England in the first years of the Massachusetts colony.

INTERESTING DESIGNS on some gravestones includes this one for John Cleverly (1703). The gravestone was carved by John Noyes of Boston. This headstone is considered the earliest in New England to feature birds which represent phoenixes (immortality) and peacocks (incorruptibility.)

THIS INTERESTING GRAVESTONE is for Edmund Quincy (1698) who built the original portion of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead located at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road. Note the headstone's hallowed space. Tradition has it the space housed a lead engraving of the family seal but it was removed during the American Revolution and made into bullets.

TOMB OF John Briesler who died in 1836. A veteran of the Revolutionary War, he later served on the household staff of John and Abigail Adams for nearly 20 years, including the Adams' time in the White House.

Quincy Stories, Images From The Civil War

By ED FITZGERALD
Quincy Historical Society

When we think of Quincy and the Revolutionary War, names and images immediately come to mind: John and Abigail Adams, John Hancock, Josiah Quincy, Jr., the Siege of Boston, and Abigail and the young John Quincy Adams viewing the smoke and fire of Bunker Hill from atop Penn's Hill.

When we think of Quincy and World War II, we again have an immediate cluster of images and ideas: Blue Star flags in every window, Fore River building great war ships at a prodigious rate, Winnie the Welders, and everyone pulling together to win the war.

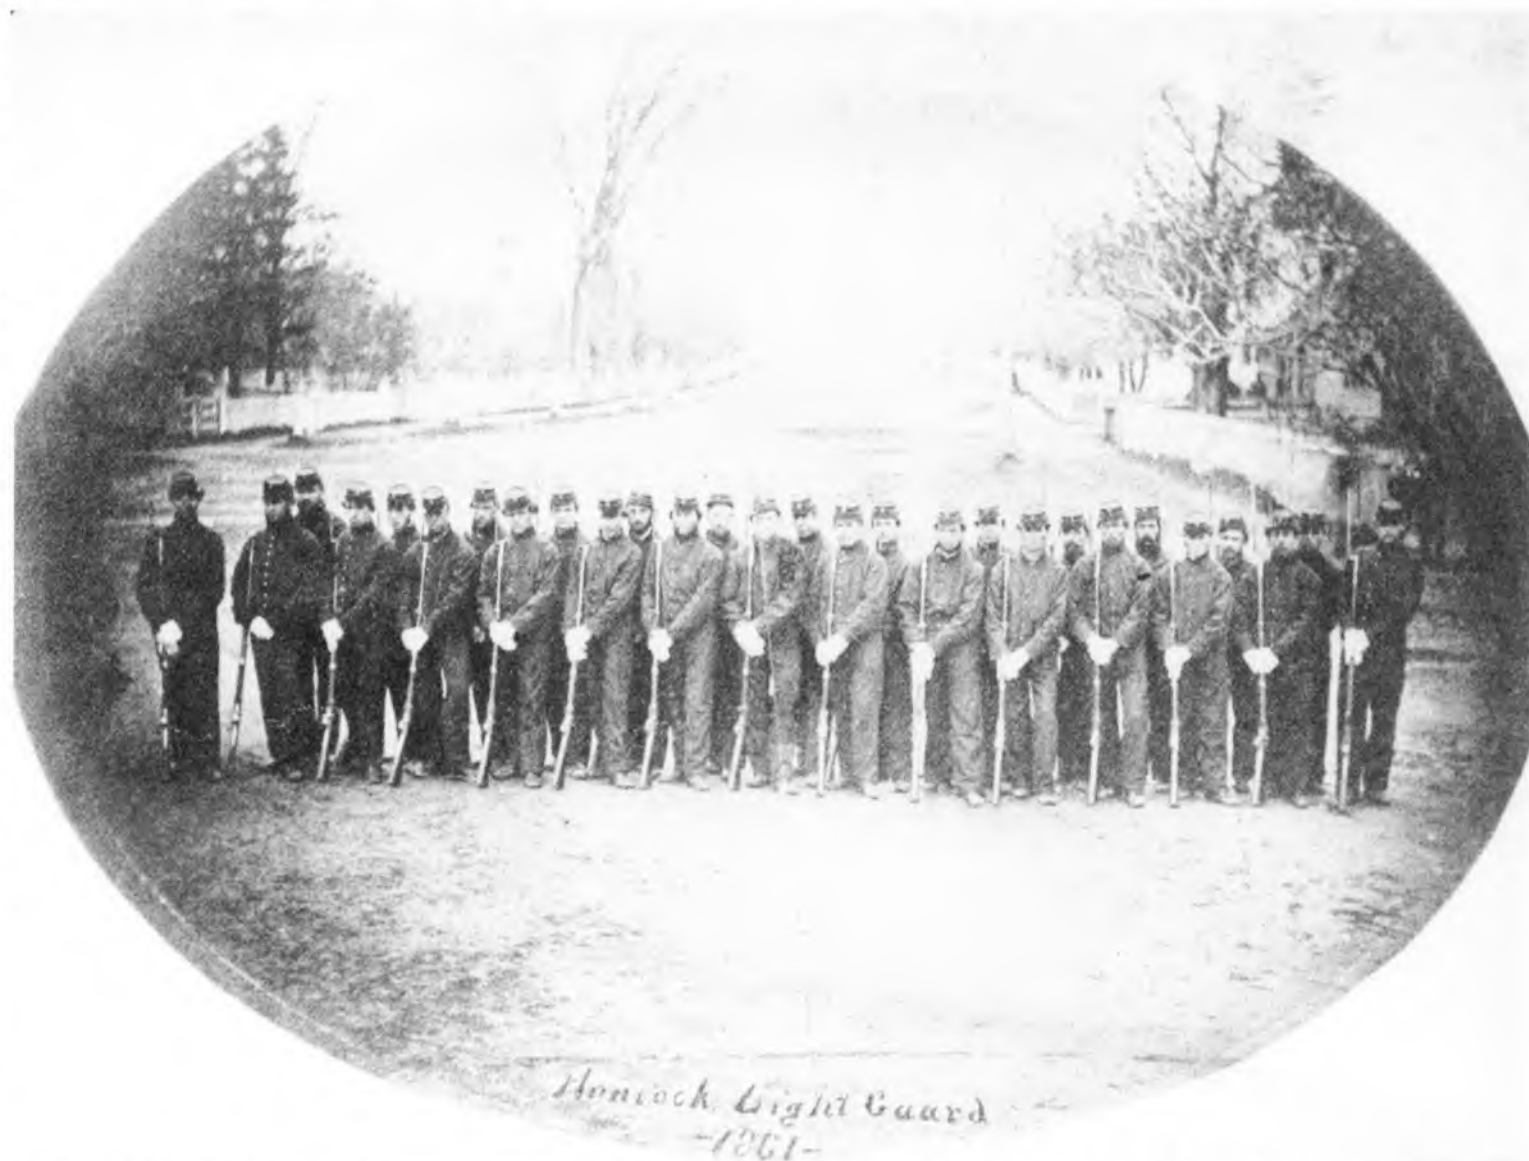

When we think of Quincy and the Civil War, the images are less vivid, more fragmentary and the story, less clear. The 152nd anniversary of the Civil War provides a once-in-a-generation opportunity to sharpen those images, amplify the story, and deepen our understanding.

Four individuals have received most attention in accounts of Quincy and the Civil War.

Charles Francis Adams, like his father and grandfather before him, served as United States Ambassador to Great Britain. In that position he had to counteract significant and powerful voices in England who wanted their country to recognize the Confederacy. He did this largely through patient, calm diplomacy. He was particularly good at calming British outrage at perceived insults by the United States, when Secretary of State Seward sent an intemperate message early in the war and when an American Navy ship seized two Confederate agents from on board a British mail steamer. In a more active vein, Adams repeatedly urged the British government to prevent the delivery of the Laird Rams, two powerful warships being built for the Confederacy, under false identity, in Liverpool. The British appeared reluctant to intervene and Adams' language turned uncharacteristically sharp. But he succeeded: on September 5, 1863 the government refused permission for the ships to sail.

Adams' son, Charles Francis, Jr., served in the Union Army, entering as a Lieutenant in December, 1861. The younger Adams always insisted that he did nothing notable during the war. However, he was present at the Battles of Antietam and Gettysburg. And in the last year of the war, he commanded the 5th Massachusetts Cavalry, a regiment of African-American soldiers. The 5th Massachusetts was the first Union regiment to enter Richmond on April 3, 1865.

Francis Souther is the best known of Quincy's ordinary soldiers in the war. Souther was a member of the Hancock Light Guard, Quincy's militia. In the first days of the war, members of the Light Guard and numerous other Quincy men responded to President Lincoln's call for 90-day volunteers to put down the insurrection.

The members of the Light Guard became part of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment, which was sent to join other Union troops at Fort Monroe on the Virginia coast. On June 10, the Union troops made an ill-conceived advance on Confederate forces at nearby Big Bethel and were badly beaten. The Union lost 76 men killed or wounded. Souther was shot in the chest and died that night. He was the first Quincy man to die in the war and the first Massachusetts soldier in the war to die from wounds in battle.

Paul Joseph Revere, the grandson of the Revolutionary hero, was an adopted son of Quincy. Revere married Lucretia Lunt, daughter of Rev. William Parson Lunt, minister of Quincy's First Parish Church. An officer in the 20th Massachusetts Regiment, Revere was taken prisoner at the Battle of Ball's Bluff in October, 1861 and was sent to Libby Prison in Richmond. There he received assistance from Elizabeth Van Lew, a member of Richmond society who was a spy for the Union. Eventually exchanged, Revere returned to service. He was wounded at the Battle of Antietam and was fatally wounded at Gettysburg. After his death, his widow and children made their home in Quincy. The Quincy post of the Grand Army of the Republic—the Union veterans organization—was named in his honor.

There are, however, other stories to be told. These include the collective story of the town itself. Even if we accept the highest count of 954 Quincy men having served in the Civil War, the total of deaths of Quincy men from all causes of 105 is a much higher percentage of fatalities than in any other conflict. Quincy's total population was no more than 7,000. It was still a town where the patrician Charles Francis Adams, Jr. knew Francis Souther. How must the townspeople have felt when news came from the second Battle of Bull Run that, for the first time in the war, there were significant Quincy casualties?

Quincy men died or were wounded in the terrible major battles of Grant's advance towards Richmond: the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Petersburg. But they also suffered in less well-remembered battles such as the Confederate counterattack on Galveston, Texas on New Year's, 1863. Throughout the war, numerous Quincy men returned to duty when they did not have to, suffered multiple wounds, reenlisted where there terms were up, and performed deeds of heroism.

Also important are the stories of the homefront and of the perceptions and the activities of Quincy's women in support of the war. There is also the tantalizing story of how, years after the war, the Revere family befriended the former Union spy

Elizabeth Van Lew and how an American flag that Van Lew had kept all through the war wound up in Quincy.

At Quincy Historical Society we continue working to learn and to tell as much as we can about Quincy in the Civil War. We have the good fortune to be the conservers of the rich collection of artifacts gathered by the Quincy G.A.R. veterans themselves. We seek to tell both the familiar and unfamiliar stories through a variety of means: through a major exhibit currently on display at the Historical Society's home, the Adams Academy; through programs; and through electronic and digital media. However, there is much more to be learned, and the subject of Quincy and the Civil War leads in many directions. This is an unfolding process. We hope not only for people's interest, but for their participation.

We invite everyone to contribute any knowledge, information, or insight he or she may have to an ongoing conversation.

Thomas Morton's Merry Time At Merrymount

It was a strange tableau that took place that May day in 1627 on the hill overlooking Boston Bay in a land where the righteous Pilgrims ruled.

There were the English adventurers (don't ever call them colonists) from across the sea, and the local Indians, or what was left of them after a visit from the plague, curious to witness this strange white man's way.

Together they stripped an 80-foot pine tree of its bark, hauled it to the top of the hill, attached a rack of buckhorn to its peak and raised it on the hill called Ma-re Mount (hill by the sea) or more commonly Merrymount.

Then they broke out the beer and cider and, Englishman and Indian together, they danced around their Maypole in a hedonistic ritual that was guaranteed to leave the Pilgrims, 40 miles away in Plymouth, aghast.

"Drinke and be merry, merry, merry boyes," wrote their leader.

"Let all your delight be in hymen's joyes...uncover thy head, and fear no harme, for here's good liquor to keep it warm."

"Lasses in beaver coats come away. Ye shall be welcome to us night and day."

The leader was Morton of Merrymount, a man whose name, rightly or wrongly, has lived on in infamy.

Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn Gent., as he signed himself, first arrived in the area that became known as Old Braintree and later Quincy in 1622 as secretary to Andrew Weston, founder of the Wessagusset colony in nearby Weymouth.

The Wessagusset colony did not survive but Morton, a lawyer and sportsman as well as a merryman, could not forget the clear streams that teemed with fish and the forests that abounded with game in the new land.

He was back again in 1625 as a minor partner in a trading venture led by a Captain Wollaston, a man so obscure that his first name has been lost in nearly 400 years of history, although modern research by historian Hobart Holly has indicated it was probably Richard.

Captain Wollaston was so disappointed by the lack of business opportunity in New England that he packed up his partners and most of their indentured servants and left for greener fields in Virginia, leaving Lieutenant Fitcher in charge.

Morton stayed behind, too, and it wasn't long before Fitcher was ousted and Morton, who was described by the Pilgrim's Governor William Bradford as a man with "more craft than honesty," became The Man, and immediately proclaimed himself "Lord of Misrule."

In the words of Governor Bradford, he maintained "a school of atheism," his people spent their time "quaffing and drinking - in great excess" and they were "inviting Indian women for their consorts, dancing and frisking together - and worse practices."

And, worst of all, Morton and his men were trading guns and rum to the Indians in exchange for pelts and were training said Indians in the use of firearms so they could hunt for more pelts, a move that frightened the wits out of the Pilgrims.

Could it be that, far from the "Lord of Misrule" as he claimed, Morton was just a sharp businessman, the Sam Walton of his day, who cut into Plymouth's profits by treating the Indians more or less like equals and joining in their fun and games. Either way, it was plain that Morton had to go.

Thus it was that in the spring of 1628, Captain Myles Standish - an angry little man of unimposing stature whom Morton derided as "Captain Shrimpe" - and an army of eight men were dispatched to Merrymount to solve the problem once and for all. It turned out to be an easy task.

Morton knew they were coming and prepared to resist. But the night-long preparations soon turned into a party and when Standish and his soldiers arrived at dawn, the defenders of Merrymount were too drunk to resist and sur-charge.

Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all male company led by a Captain Wollaston, who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

But after exhaustive research some years ago by Hobart Holly, the city's late historian, he concluded that Capt. Wollaston's first name was probably Richard - but, still, nobody knows for sure.

rendered without firing a shot.

That was the Pilgrims' version. In his memoirs, Morton insisted he was ready to fight but his men turned out to be a cowardly lot and he had to give up the struggle in order to avoid bloodshed and was beaten up for his pains by the victorious Pilgrim army of eight.

Whatever, Morton was arrested and taken to Plymouth where Standish wanted him hanged. But gentler heads prevailed and he was put aboard a ship for England, an action that so enraged the captain that he had to be restrained.

Back in London, Morton was charged with disturbing the safety of the Plymouth colony but the charges were dropped when he presented himself to the Crown as a good Anglican who was persecuted by those dissenters from Plymouth.

The trading post at Merrymount was allowed to remain but, in 1629, a sterner opponent arrived on the scene in John Endicott and the Puritans, who established the Massachusetts Bay Colony in Boston, a scant 10 miles from the hill beside the bay.

Endicott ordered Morton's Maypole cut down, which it was, and the name of his trading post changed from Merrymount to Mount Dagon after the Biblical sea god of the Philistines, which it wasn't.

Morton's brief episode of saturnalia is recalled today in a section of Quincy and a park called Merrymount.

Nation's First Commercial Railroad Was Here

The Granite Railway

It was the darnedest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the South-east Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public until dusk year round. There is no admission charge.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

There was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the old Quincy granite quarries – many of them filled today – swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy “just grewed.”

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as “the Stone Age” of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names “Quincy Light,” “Quincy Dark,” and “Quincy Extra Dark.”

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the “Stone Age” of American architecture.

SOLOMON WILLARD GRAVE SITE (right) is located in Hall Place Cemetery, off Crescent Street in West Quincy. The monument made from Quincy granite reads: “A public spirited and patriotic citizen, an accomplished architect whose memory will always be associated with the monument on Bunker Hill.” Willard designed the Bunker Hill Monument in 1825, and construction began in 1827. Willard discovered satisfactory granite quarries for the stone in Quincy, and the granite for the monument came from there. Willard revolutionized the techniques to cut and handle the slabs of stone in what became known as the Bunker Hill Quarry, which evolved into a major industry for the town. Willard also the architect for Quincy's “Town Hall” which today is the Mayor James R. McIntyre Government Center.

QUARRY – For over 100 years, beginning early in the 19th century, Quincy's leading industry was centered on its vast deposits of very unique and high-grade granite. The granite was prized for use in building and large structures and later for monuments. Over 50 quarries were opened – this one provided granite for the Bunker Hill Monument.

Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

Quincy Quarry And Granite Workers Museum

For years it has been talked about having a museum to preserve the rich granite history of Quincy and the surrounding towns, which also had quarry operations. There have been several attempts, but all have faded in the past. There was a glimmer of hope to establish a museum when the capping operation of Quincy's land fill and the construction of Granite Links Golf Course moved forward. A portion of the tipping fees for allowing Mass Highway to bring in fill from the Big Dig Tunnel Project was to be set aside to construct a museum. Unfortunately these funds evaporated into the construction of Ricciuti Drive and the golf course project.

In 2009, the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum was formed and incorporated in Massachusetts and received its 501c(3) designation from the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit organization and has received all the state required certificates for a non-profit. What started as a small group of Quincy residents has grown to a membership of over one hundred seventy five all dedicated to saving the history of the granite industry. Membership ranges from Maine to Florida and west to Ohio, with most having a connection through generations of family members who had some part in the granite industry.

The Museum has received many family artifacts connected to the granite industry including tools, equipment, photos, drawings, maps, books, granite salesman samples, and extensive written information and family photos of individuals who worked in the industry.

At the turn of the century a large portion of the inhabitants of Quincy worked in the granite industry or worked supporting the industry in transportation, in tool making and in the manufacturing of machinery for the industry. The granite industry played a large role in the growth of Quincy bringing many ethnic groups to the city. The first group of immigrants who worked in the granite industry were the Irish followed by the Finnish and Swedish and then the Scottish and finally the Italians. The ethnic history, cultures and customs that were brought to Quincy will be an important part of the Museum.

Many descendants of these granite workers have donated family photos related to the granite industry. These photos are not found in any collection of historical photos of Quincy. Two examples are shown here. The first is an original

The goal of the Museum is to construct a 3,200 square foot museum adjacent to the historic Lyons Turning Mill on Quarry Hill Drive, West Quincy. The mill site was chosen because of its historical building remains and also the site has one of the few remaining quarries that has not been filled in.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Participants may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park, Josiah Quincy House, Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Quincy Historical Society, and United First Parish Church.

"Many visitors to Quincy are familiar with the Adams story and the National Historical Park tour of the birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field," said Donna Mavromates, Vice President and Director of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber. "Fewer are familiar with the 'Quincy' story, one of Massachusetts' leading families, and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and Josiah Quincy House.

"We wanted to bring that inclusive experience to all visitors and residents alike and make it easy and affordable for them to enjoy more of Quincy's rich history this summer."

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Aviation Pioneers

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 20,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum

Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the

Newlyweds Pass Up Quincy

Dennison Airport had a plane ready to take Charles Lindbergh and his bride, Ann Morrow, to Maine on their honeymoon in 1929.

But the newlyweds' 35-foot-yacht Mouette docked in Provincetown instead of Quincy and they flew to Maine from a Cape Cod airport.

AMELIA EARHART

field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a

HARRIET QUIMBY

Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

The national ensign was hauled down for the last time on the morning of Dec. 23, 1953, and the training of Weekend Warriors moved to the South Weymouth Naval Air Facility, home base of anti-submarine blimp patrols since 1942.

Reserve Capt. Harry Sartoris, the last commander of the NAS Squantum, flew the last plane out of the old base and landed the first plane at the new NAS South Weymouth, where he was to become the first commander.

The NAS South Weymouth was an operational U.S. Navy airfield for 55 years. It closed in 1997.

THE HARVARD AERONAUTICAL Society's 1910 aeromeet in Squantum attracted more than 20,000 visitors to Quincy, including President William Howard Taft (bottom photo, right). The 500-acre airfield later became Dennison Airport and then part of the Squantum Naval Air Station. Today, the site is home to The Moorings at Squantum Gardens and the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging.)

First Iron Works

America's Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony (Did someone cry "Nepotism?"), went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworkers in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a 1,000 pounds in capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of who ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America.

Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the ironworkers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest industrial magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy Iron proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England; cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Remains of the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace are located at 61 Crescent St., West Quincy. The site is open free to the public.

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a

HARRIET QUIMBY

Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

The national ensign was hauled down for the last time on the morning of Dec. 23, 1953, and the training of Weekend Warriors moved to the South Weymouth Naval Air Facility, home base of anti-submarine blimp patrols since 1942.

Reserve Capt. Harry Sartoris, the last commander of the NAS Squantum, flew the last plane out of the old base and landed the first plane at the new NAS South Weymouth, where he was to become the first commander.

The NAS South Weymouth was an operational U.S. Navy airfield for 55 years. It closed in 1997.

Newlyweds Pass Up Quincy

Dennison Airport had a plane ready to take Charles Lindbergh and his bride, Ann Morrow, to Maine on their honeymoon in 1929.

But the newlyweds' 35-foot-yacht Mouette docked in Provincetown instead of Quincy and they flew to Maine from a Cape Cod airport.

MARKER COMMEMORATES the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace as the first commercial blast iron furnace in the United States. The remains of the blast furnace - located near Hall Cemetery at 61 Crescent Street in West Quincy - has been designated an Historical Landmark by the American Society for Metals and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The blast furnace produced iron from bog ore dug from the bottom of brooks and swamps. Photo below shows the historic site from Crescent Street.

First Iron Works

America's Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony (Did someone cry "Nepotism?"), went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworkers in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a 1,000 pounds in capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of who ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America.

Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the ironworkers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest industrial magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy Iron proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England: cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Remains of the John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace are located at 61 Crescent St., West Quincy. The site is open free to the public.

BETHLEHEM'S FIRST GREAT vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946.

BETWEEN PEARL HARBOR and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), Quincy's Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena" (above) were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944).

Quincy Shipyard: Watson's Other Invention

7-Masted Schooner To Nuclear And Super Ships

It began with a 50-horsepower marine engine painstakingly constructed by the new firm of F.O. Wellington & Co. for a small passenger steamer out of Damariscotta, Maine, in the early 1880s.

In the 1970s, the yard produced 939-foot super tankers built by General Dynamics Quincy Division for Burmah Tankers Ltd of England, capable of transporting 125,000 cubic meters of liquefied natural gas across the Atlantic Ocean. In the intervening 90-odd years, more than 1,000 ships, including one of the mightiest battlewagons of them all, USS Massachusetts, were built at what was known locally as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy, with its more than 27 miles of waterfront and deepwater channels, had been in the forefront of American shipbuilding since 1696 when the ketch "Unity" was built at Ship Cove, the site of the present shipyard.

The 116-foot "Massachusetts," in its time the largest merchant vessel built in North America, was launched for the China trade in 1789 at the shipyard of Daniel Briggs in Philip's Head at Germantown.

Unfortunately, she started a life as a jinx ship when a soothsayer, Moll Pitcher of Lynn, forecast that the ship and all her crew would be lost. It took three tries to fill her complement for her maiden voyage.

Massachusetts reached Canton without mishap, Moll Pitcher notwithstanding, and was sold for $65,000 to the Danish East India Co.

Deacon George Thomas turned out 32 clipper ships over 23 years from this shipyard at Quincy Point, the last of them the graceful 2,200-ton "Red Cloud," launched in 1877 when Thomas was 82 years old.

It was in the early 1880's that Thomas A. Watson, relaxing from his labors with Alexander Graham Bell on the telephone, began making marine engines in a little machine shop on the Fore River in Braintree in partnership with Frank O. Wellington.

It was struggling along as the Fore River Engine Co. until the USS Maine blew up in Havana Harbor and the Spanish-American War of 1898 placed a premium on naval vessels.

Fore River Engine Co. landed contracts to build the torpedo boat destroyers "Lawrence" and "MacDonough" and, late in 1899, the 3,100 ton cruiser "Des Moines."

In order to launch "Des Moines," the Fore River Engine Co. moved two miles north on the river to Quincy Neck where the stream was wider and deeper. That's where the shipyard remained until it closed in 1986.

It became the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. in 1901, the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. in 1904, and a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co. in 1913.

Bethlehem's first great vessel was the battleship "Nevada," launched in 1914, which survived badly damaged both the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946. She had to be sunk by naval gunfire.

At the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. during World War I, the Yard and its affiliate, the Victory Plant in Squantum, turned out more destroyers than all the other shipyards in the country combined.

But it was in World War II that the Fore River Shipyard won its international spurs.

On a visit to Quincy in the summer of 1941 as war clouds gathered on the Atlantic and Pacific horizons, Admiral Ernest J. King exhorted workers at the Yard: "You build 'em and we'll fight 'em!"

And build 'em they did!

Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day (Aug. 14, 1945), the Fore River Shipyard launched 92 ships. Three of them, including the light cruiser "Pasadena," were delivered in one day (June 8, 1944). HMS Reynolds was built in a record 24 1/2 days.

At its peak of wartime employment on Jan. 15, 1943, the

THE 35,000-TON battleship Massachusetts was launched Sept. 23, 1941 - a full 15 months ahead of schedule. The Quincy-built battleship sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

shipyard employed 32,000 men in Quincy and its auxiliary yard in Hingham. The U.S. Navy gave it five consecutive "E" (for excellence) awards.

Among the ships launched at Fore River:

The battleship Massachusetts, 35,000 tons, launched Sept. 23, 1941, a full 15 months ahead of schedule; sank the French giant Jean Bart at Casablanca in her first action; logged 225,000 wartime miles and 35 engagements without losing a man.

The aircraft carriers Lexington II, Wasp II, built in 20 months from keel to launch; Bunker Hill, John Hancock, built and delivered in a record 14 1/2 months; and Philippine Sea, which went to Antarctica with Admiral Richard E. Byrd in 1947.

The cruiser Quincy II launched June 26, 1943, which supported the invasions of Normandy on D-Day, 1944, and southern France, and transported President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the summit conference at Yalta in 1945.

The Yard also claimed to have originated that most mysterious of World War II graffiti, "Kilroy was here!"

Seems there was a checker named Jim Kilroy, whose job it was to go around and count the number of holes filled by each riveter, who was paid by piece work. Each rivet Kilroy counted was checked off so that it would not be counted twice.

Some wily riveters discovered that if they erased Kilroy's check mark, the counter on the next shift would credit them again. So, instead of a mere check, he would scrawl on the ship "Kilroy was here!"

The Yard was turning out ships so fast that there was no time to paint over the words and Kilroy's name began popping up in the most unlikely places all over the world, to the delight of soldiers and sailors everywhere.

After the war, the Fore River Shipyard turned out an amazingly diverse number of ships.

There were the twin passenger and cargo vessels, Constitution and Independence, for American Export Lines; the nuclear subs Sunfish and Whale; the Apollo tracking ships Vanguard, Redstone, and Mercury.

There was the world's first nuclear-powered surface vessel, the Long Beach; and the 108,500 ton super tanker, SS Manhattan, the largest merchant ship built in the United States, capable of carrying 38 million gallons of oil at 18 knots.

The Shipyard was purchased by General Dynamics in 1964 and, after a brief slump in the shipbuilding market, began a comeback with the recent launching of the first LNGs designed to transport liquefied natural gas from Algeria to the States.

General Dynamics ceased shipbuilding operations in the mid-1980s and closed the yard in 1986. Today, several non-shipbuilding businesses operate at the location which is still referred to as the Fore River Shipyard.

Quincy Ships Played A Major Role In WWII

USS Quincy Took FDR, Churchill To Yalta

The President and the Prime Minister met on the ship's deck and went on from there to the conference that would decide the future of a world at war.

The President was Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister was Winston Churchill and the ship was the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Quincy, the second of that name to perform heroically in World War II.

The first time was 68 years ago – Feb. 2, 1945 – and the place was the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, where the President met the Prime Minister and together they flew on to the Yalta Conference in the Russian Crimea.

After that brief respite for diplomacy at Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II 68 years ago.

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, with great fanfare, was one of scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, which employed 32,000 men and women in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak Jan. 15, 1943.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935, was on peacetime convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 to shell Japanese installations on the Solomon Island of Guadalcanal and offer protection to the Marines who landed there in the first American offensive of World War II in August.

She was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy force and sunk after taking many direct hits in what became known as the Battle of Savo Island.

The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're going down between them – give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles up river in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone: "Watson, come here; I want you."

The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U.S. Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and tow more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll, and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

An adjunct facility called the Victory Plant had to be built to handle the U.S. Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 and a half days from keel-laying to delivery.

A Naval officer named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the yard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl – Catherine Vance Freeman – daughter of a former city councillor.

When, shortly after Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated him on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue, once again to roll up its collective sleeves and get busy. Starting on Dec. 7, 1941,

THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landship ships tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 and a half days.

It was in a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set the world records by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 and a half working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mammie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the mighty Vichy-French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she could be turned over to the Germans.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and the assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the U.S. Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "The Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional Navy contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship – the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan – launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful supertanker, which was later converted into the world's largest ice-breaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circled the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge, in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts undertaken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a landmark at the yard but was dismantled in 2008.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-year-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

USS SALEM - the 716-foot heavy cruiser berthed at the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy.

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the former Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. The Museum is currently open Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Reservations may be made for all other days to accommodate Group Tours, Birthday Parties, or special functions. Groups of ten or more are asked to call and schedule so that we may best serve your group. Both self-guided and guided tours are available. (Guided tours subject to tour guide availability.) Admission is $8 for adults, $6 senior citizens, and children ages 4 - 12 years. Children 3 and under are free. (Note: Unfortunately the USS Salem is not currently handicap accessible). WWII Famed Figure

'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 68 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

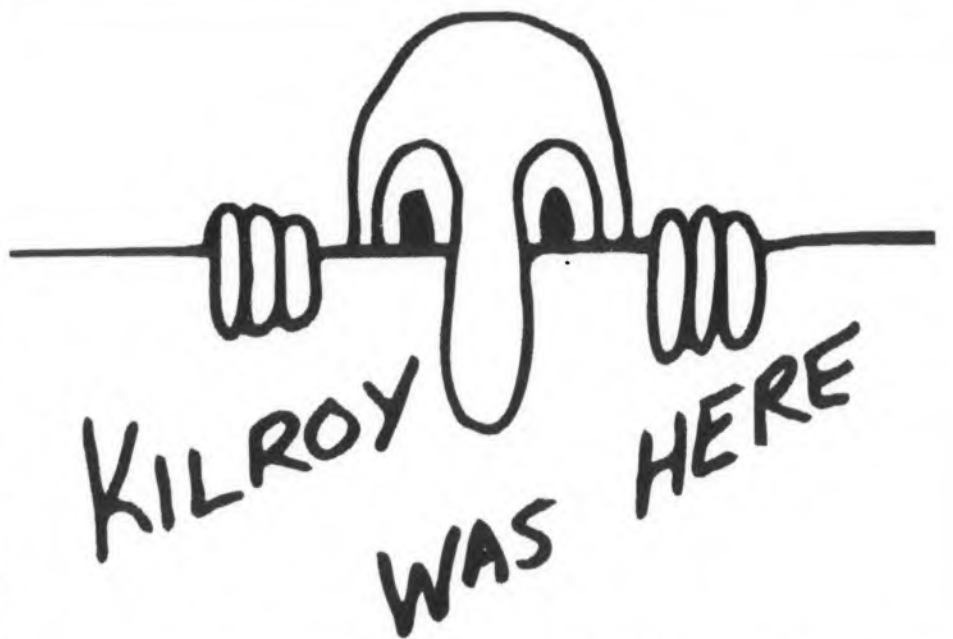

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was war-time and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

Some believe Kilroy never got the credit that he deserved.

Frank and Kathy Hogan of Quincy have just the solution to honor the famous shipyard checker.

The Hogans have been working tirelessly over the past eight years for the expression to get its just due on a stamp.

"Let's hope it's soon because there aren't that many (World War II) veterans left," said Frank. "It's not Army. It's not Navy. It was shared by every person, every branch, in the military.

"All the Allies shared in it. It's an icon now. It's amazing; it ties soldiers from World War II together, from the lowest grunt to a four star general. It ties them from the bottom to the top. This is for the veterans. In the war it broke down every barrier.

"Why shouldn't Kilroy have a stamp?"

Kilroy will receive some recognition - and prominence - in Quincy Center. One of the first buildings of the city's $1.6 billion downtown redevelopment - a new 15-story mixed-use building featuring retail space and residential units near 1400 Hancock St. - will be named The Kilroy.

Moswetuset Hummock: 'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

It was only a tiny spot of land no bigger than a football field on the Quincy shore but it gave its name to the state of Massachusetts.

As the historian Daniel Neal recalled it in his History of New England, published a hundred years after the Pilgrims landed in 1721...

"The Sachem or Sagamore who governed the Indians in this part of the country when the English first came hither, had his seat on a small hill, or hummock, containing perhaps an acre and a half, about two leagues to the southward of Boston, which hill or hummock lies in the shape of an Indians' arrow-head, which arrow-heads are called in their language Mos, or Mons, with the O nasal, and hill in their language is Wetuset; hence, this great Sachem's seat was called Moswetuset, which signifies a hill in the shape of an arrow-head, and his subjects, the Moswetuset Indians, from whence with small variation of the word, the Province received the name Massachusetts."

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickataubut, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, once a great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague. In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickataubut fled his home on a hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Pilgrims from Plymouth that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum) whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The land included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

The Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long before King Edward VIII gave up the British throne "for the woman I love."

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia maintained a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as a school to train young aviators to fly the new-fangled airplanes.

Assigned as head of the school was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a twice-divorced woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The match touched off a crisis in English royalty. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937.

While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

$600,000 Restoration Project Also Restored Bell Tower, Gilded Dome, Weather Vane United First Parish Church Bell Tolls Again

UNITED FIRST CHURCH Bell Tower $600,000 restoration project was completed in 2012. The project included new mahogany columns, restored capital columns, and a fresh coat of gold leafing gilded to the copper cupola and weather vane of the historic church. A refurbished bronze bell – owned by the City of Quincy – was also placed in the bell tower. The bronze bell that was installed in the church in 1859 was replaced because of an 18-inch crack. The 3,000-pound replacement bell was cast in 1856 for a church in Chicago. It is from the same famous foundry – Henry N. Hooper of Boston – that cast the original bell in the church. Hooper was an apprentice of Revolutionary War hero and famed American silversmith Paul Revere.

BEFORE A REFURBISHED bronze bell was positioned into the bell tower of United First Parish Church, workers removed the cracked 3,012-pound bronze bell on a cold December day in 2011. Rigging the bell so that it can be lifted by a crane are foreman Ed Crook (left) and rigger Ed Thorp of the Shaughnessy and Ahern crane and construction company based in South Boston.

THE QUOTE ON the refurbished bronze bell is from the Rev. John Hancock, former pastor of United First Parish Church and the father of American Patriot John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The quote reads: "Above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. This is the bond of union, the cement of societies."

One Notable Church Visitor

UNITED FIRST PARISH Church has attracted visitors from all the world, including historical figures. On July 25, 1951, General Douglas MacArthur visited the church and placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. With him are Mrs. MacArthur, Mayor Thomas Burgin and City Historian William Edwards. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine."

Well-Known Businesses Began Here, Too Quincy's Celebrity Claims Are Famous

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose Jimenez.'

Dick Dale was born in Boston but spent much of his youth in Quincy. When he was in the 11th grade, he and his family moved to Orange, CA where he learned how to surf and play guitar.

Dale also learned to play of instruments, including drums, the trumpet, ukulele. But it's the guitar that brought Dale stardom.

Today, Dale — born Richard Anthony Monsour — is also known as The King of the Surf Guitar. He's considered the brainchild of the surf music guitar genre. He has also been a strong influence on musicians including Jimi Hendrix and Eddie Van Halen.

His music has been popular on the big screen and professional sports teams, too. Dale's song "Scalped" is the theme song for the NHL's Colorado Avalanche. And his "Misirlou" was featured in the 1994 film "Pulp Fiction."

In 2011, Dale was inducted into the Surfing Walk of Fame in Huntington, Beach, CA.

$2.5M Request To Demolish Old QHS

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that the final phase of demolition of the old Quincy High School and the creation of new green space will complete the campus for the state-of-the-art new school building, which he called "the heart of a completely renewed Coddington Street."

The Koch administration submitted a $2.5 million financing request to the City Council on Monday night to complete the exterior demolition of the closed 89-year-old building following a first phase that included interior demolition and asbestos removal.

The project comes in the middle of a dramatic redevelopment of the entire Coddington Street corridor at the gateway to Quincy Center,

The ladder in North Quincy, manufactured in 1995, is the oldest of the Quincy Fire Department's three ladder trucks. The chief said ladder trucks generally have a 20-year lifespan.

"It's showing its age," Barron said. "It's down for repairs more than it should be."

with projects including the recent opening of the City's first regulation-sized running track, a new YMCA, the new Quincy High and the restoration of the historic former Coddington School.

The Coddington School restoration, which will renovate the building into offices for the Quincy Public Schools and the City, is set to begin in the next several weeks.

"The Coddington Street corridor is undergoing a remarkable transformation, and the completion of the campus surrounding the gorgeous new Quincy High is a key element of these improvements," said Mayor Koch. "The renewal of this area is another great example of so many people, in both the private and public sectors, coming together in the best interest of our City's future."

The campus plan for the new High School will be weighted heavily toward creating additional green space around the school, but could also include a small number of additional parking spaces, Koch said, adding that those plans will be taking shape in coming months.

After the school initially closed, the City analyzed costs associated with potentially re-using the school building. When renovation and code-improvement requirements were calculated, the city Department of Public Buildings concluded rehabilitating the building into usable shape would cost upwards of $30 to $50 million.

The City is also using the remaining money from construction of the new Quincy High as part of the campus plan, making it cost-efficient, Koch said.

The City Council's Finance Committee will consider the bond request during a meeting on June 10. Councillor Doug Gutro asked the administration to provide information on any asbestos abatement that has already taken place at the high school building, and for detailed plans on how the land will be used.

"Could I request that we get a breakdown of any and all moneys spent to date relative to any asbestos abatement - if that's taken place - and the source of where that money has originated from," Gutro said. "And then plans for that site. It's been explained to us that it's going to be part of campus, but if there's any specific plans for the site."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked that the council be provided with a copy of the state historical society's ruling authorizing demolition.

"I know it was under the ruling of Mass. Historic relative to their ruling on demolition. I'm assuming if we're moving forward with that we've received a recommendation. I'd like to get that as well," Laforest said.

Council Rejects C-Mart By 5-3 Vote

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council said no to a proposed North Quincy C-Mart Monday night, rejecting for the second time in four years a proposal to convert the Boston Gear Works building on Hayward Street into an Asian supermarket.

Five councillors - Kevin Coughlin, Brad Croall, Kirsten Hughes, Margaret Laforest, and Michael McFarland - voted to reject the proposal this time around, while Councillors Joe Finn, Doug Gutro, and Brian Palmucci voted in favor of it.

In May 2009 the council rejected a similar proposal by a 7-1 margin, with Finn casting the lone vote for the project. C-Mart owner Michael Fang appealed that decision, and a settlement between him and the city remanded the issue back to the council and also ordered Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee to recuse himself this time around.

As in 2009, councillors who voted against the project Monday cited traffic concerns. During two public hearings that lasted a combined eight hours the council heard from numerous individuals living the neighborhood, particularly residents of Holmes Street condominiums, who voiced opposition based on traffic. Hughes - the Ward 5 councillor whose district includes the Boston Gear Works building, voted in opposition because she felt the impact would be too much of a burden on those living nearby.

"I cannot support this project because this is a detriment to the neighborhood that I believe is not acceptable," Hughes said. "I do not think it is reasonable that we would ask the neighborhood to put up with this burden and I do think it is far too burdensome of a project."

McFarland, the council president, said the proposed supermarket was too inaccessible to be feasible. The Boston Gear Works building is wedged between Hancock Street and the MBTA tracks, and there is no immediate access between its parking lot and Hancock Street, meaning vehicles would have to use either Holmes or Hayward Street to get in and out of the location.

"At the time this came before us four years ago I voted against it and the reason I did is because the idea and the concept works well, however, there is no way to get there and get out of there from that location. It just does not work," McFarland said. "The proposal that came before us after the judge's remand is primarily the same proposal. There still is no way to get from

Koch, Bellotti Kick Off Yellow Dot Safety Program

Dot Decals Indicate Elderly Drivers Have Medical Information In Their Motor Vehicles

By EMILY TAFT

Mayor Tom Koch and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti kicked off the Yellow Dot program Tuesday morning.

"Our role here, as you know, in the Sheriff's Office is primarily care and custody of upwards of 700 inmates on a daily bases, but we do have a public safety component where we will work in a very complimentary way with the cities and towns, particularly the police chiefs and fire chiefs," said Bellotti. "It's another example of the Sheriff's Office assisting the front line folks. This program is very, very important. It's another example of recognizing that seniors in this country, particularly in Quincy which has a disproportionate number of seniors, population wise, are not just one of the fastest growing populations right now in terms of segments of age groups, but they are living healthier and longer. We want to make sure we give them every single tool possible to live independently and freely in the highest of quality of life for as long as possible in the community."

The program, which benefits elderly drivers, has enrollees fill out a medical information packet and place it in their car's glove compartment and then place a yellow dot decal on their rear windshield, allowing emergency first responders to know to look in the glove compartment for medical information.

"The Yellow Dot program is an extension of the File of Life program, which Sheriff Bellotti also sponsors, this is medical information that most people put on their refrigerators and first responders know to look on the refrigerators and find this information," said Triad Director at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Joe Canavan. "They wanted to bring this to automobiles, it started in 2002, and over the years it has been tried in different communities around the state. We consolidated this in a uniformed fashion and brought it to Norfolk County."

Seniors can sign up for the program, which is free of charge, at the Council on Aging at 440 East Squantum St. on June 7th from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. During the sign up seniors will receive a medical information card to take home and fill out. The card will then be placed in an envelope, inside their glove compartment, with their name and picture on the front so that first responders are able to identify the person in the vehicle.

"It's very simple, they'll come in that day, they'll pick up a medical information card, they'll take that home and fill it out with pencil, and they will also get their photo taken," said Canavan. "They can come back in a couple of days and what they will be given is an envelope with their name and picture on the front. First responders, especially during a car accident where information is slow to come out and it is a confusing and dangerous scene, they will see the yellow dot, know to go in the glove compartment and be able to identify the person that's in the accident."

Koch said that the programs that have come from the Sheriff's Office have helped and added to what is done every day in Quincy and surrounding communities.

"As Michael (Bellotti) said his main job is to house the inmates under his jurisdiction, but he is seen to be creative over the last several years in reaching out to the towns in the county, and the city in this case, with so many wonderful programs that augment what we do every day," said Koch. "We can't do it all, he can't do it all, but when we come together we can be so much more creative, imaginative, and proactive in each of our communities."

• On June 4, 1896, Henry Ford unveils the "Quadricycle." The 500-pound vehicle had two driving speeds, no reverse, no brakes, rudimentary steering ability and a doorbell button as a horn. It could reach about 20 mph.

• On June 7, 1913, Hudson Stuck, an Alaskan missionary, leads the first successful ascent of Mt. McKinley, the highest point on the American continent at 20,320 feet. Stuck and two others began the climb in March and faced challenges of difficult weather and a fire at one of their camps, which destroyed food and supplies.

• On June 6, 1933, eager motorists park their automobiles on the grounds of the Park-In movie theater in New Jersey, the first-ever drive-in movie theater. Inventor Richard Hollingshead had come up with the idea in the driveway of his own house, where he perfected projection and sound techniques.

• On June 8, 1949, Hollywood figures, including film stars Frederic March and Edward G. Robinson, are named in a FBI report as Communist Party members. The FBI report relied largely on accusations made by "confidential informants," supplemented with some highly dubious analysis. Helen Keller also was on the list of radicals.

• On June 5, 1968, U.S. Sen. Robert Kennedy is shot at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles after winning the California presidential primary. Kennedy was shot by 22-year-old Palestinian Sirhan Sirhan, and died a day later.

• On June 9, 1972, a flash flood hits Rapid City, S.D., when 15 inches of rain fall in only six hours. The spillway for the Pactola Dam got clogged with debris, leading to the collapse of the dam and a devastating wave of water that crushed most of the nearby buildings and swept away 238 people.

• On June 3, 1989, with protests for democratic reforms entering their seventh week, the Chinese government authorizes its soldiers and tanks to reclaim Beijing's Tiananmen Square. By nightfall on June 4, Chinese troops had forcibly cleared the square, killing hundreds and arresting thousands of demonstrators and suspected dissidents.

Hartford, a strong supporter of the island, is loaning the flag for Sunday's ceremony.

Scenes From Yesterday

Sea Street, looking South, Hough's Neck, Mass.

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of Sea Street near the end of Hough's Neck. The building on the left was on the corner of today's Thomas Street. On the right the Casino was a large amusement center known at the time as Power's Pavilion. The casino was built in the late 1800's between Winthrop Street to the immediate right and Shennen Street at the tree. Power's offered food, dancing, bowling and pool tables along with outside activities including fishing from a pier with boats for rent on the North Bay side of the Neck. The casino was gone by the 1920's, probably by fire. The small building in the left center near the horse and carriage was Hough's Neck's first firehouse that was located on the Furnald property. The old trolley tracks from Quincy Center ran down the right side of Sea Street. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Southern Artery Median Dispute

By SCOTT JACKSON

Owners of many Southern Artery businesses, especially small businesses, expressed concerns that a proposed median strip on the artery would harm their bottom lines.

The City Council's Public Works Committee was proposing to install a seven-inch tall grass median in the middle of Southern Artery from McGrath Highway to Washington Street. The median would be eight feet wide, tapering down to six feet wide in the more residential stretch closer to Washington Street.

The plan also called for new left turn lanes on both sides of the median and the installation of traffic signals along the route.

Robert Pitts, manager of Dunkin Donuts, said fast food businesses would suffer if the proposal went through. Drivers, he feared, would rather not take left turns and instead would drive right by. Pitts added that the construction period, estimated to take two whole construction seasons, would force other businesses to close.

Many of Pitts' fellow businesses owners expressed the same sentiments. David Reinstein, owner of Howdy 'N Beef Burger, said nearly all area businessman were concerned about the possibility of a median being built.

"It's going to hurt the small businesses very badly. Ninety-five percent of the businessman are very much against the strip," Reinstein said. "Once it's in, it's in. We're going to have to live with it. They're not going to say the made a mistake and dig it up."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Public Works Committee chairman, said speed control on Southern Artery was long past due, citing the number of serious accidents on that road.

"The businessmen are being given every possible consideration," Kelly added.

QUINCY TRACK CLUB FOUNDED

Quincy became the first community in Massachusetts to have its own chartered, city-sponsored track club after officials announced the founding of the new Quincy Track Club.

Carl Leone, coordinator of athletics for the School Department, was chosen as the club's first president. Frank Kelly was named vice president, Quincy High track coach Tom Hall was appointed secretary, and North Quincy High track coach Lou Tozzi was selected as treasurer.

"I think this is a great step forward for the city and you can give much credit to our high school track coaches," Leone said. "They came forward some time ago with a suggestion for such a club and everyone in the city is interested and willing to give us a hand."

The club was expected to begin operations within a month and hoped to hold weekly track meets at Veterans Memorial Stadium throughout the summer. In addition to those Hall and Tozzi hoped to conduct clinics and instructional periods once or twice a week throughout the summer.

Condo Trustee Questions City's New Trash Contract

I am a Trustee at Aquarius Estates Condos here in Quincy and I find it hard to believe that Mayor Koch could possibly have signed a contract for trash pick-up with Sunrise Scavengers and claim it's going to save us money.

First, Sunrise wants all "rear load" dumpsters. We have been told that "rear load" dumpsters are passe'.

Second, they will be charging us a monthly fee to rent them.

Thirdly, we have been told they do not have side doors.

A majority of condo owners are senior citizens and are unable to lift the tops lids.

Condo owners are paying real estate taxes, just like all homeowners in this city.

Ten years ago, after much ado, we were finally put on "city collection," after (in the case of Aquarius) paying for trash pick-up for 25 years. Charging us rent for the dumpsters is the beginning of getting us to pay for trash pick-up again. I guess this is one way our Mayor is going to save the city money.

Next, we have been told there has to be two people in each truck: one to drive and an assistant to get out and wrap a chain around dumpster so driver can pick it up. How can two men on every truck be saving the city money?

Lastly, why was just one letter sent to each Condo association? As taxpayers, every owner should have received the info.

When the politicians are looking for votes, every resident in the city gets bombarded with mail, so don't say it was the cost of the postage.

It Could By Google

Regarding the mystery aircraft circling over the city, it could be Google.

I saw a Google Street View vehicle cruising the streets in Wollaston. I made an inquiry and got this response: "...Google does hire companies to take aerial views of cities for the 45 degree angle aerial views that complement the satellite images."

Five Quincy Students Cast In AWHs Theatre Ensemble Musical

Five students from Quincy were part of the Archbishop Williams High School Theatre Ensemble's original musical production entitled "This is the Story," written and directed by Theater Director Susan Picillo.

More than 40 students participated in the production, a story about familiar fairy tale characters who must put aside historic differences and band together to protect the forest where they and their stories live. The play featured both heroes and villains including Snow White, Scar, The Three Little Pigs, Little Red Riding Hood, Cruella (D'Ville) and many more.

Students from Quincy who were part of the cast were Lauren Carter '15, Sarah Golden '16, Emma McDonnell '14, Abbey O'Connell '13 and Stephanie Stinfort '13.

Students dedicated the production in loving memory of Mr. Joe Ondus, longtime theology teacher and Director of the AWHs Campus Ministry program, who recently passed away stunning the tight-knit school community.

"To have so many students involved in this production is a wonderful testament to our theater program and tribute to Mr. Ondus," said Ms. Picillo. "I like to think of the theatre as a place of creating new stories. Why not make a strong statement about his impact on our lives?"

The actors and actresses, also known as "Dramabees" practiced an average of 12 hours a week for six weeks in order to raise the curtain.

The set and backgrounds were constructed under the leadership of AWHs history teacher Gus Lawler, with the help of some of the actors' parents. The tech crew managed the lights, sound, curtain, and microphone.

The play was enthusiastically received with great applause as audience members enjoyed the twists on classic characters and appreciated the effort put in by the cast, crew and advisors.

A Monthly Chronicle Of The Adams Family 'In Their Own Words'

Editor's Note: This week The Quincy Sun debuts a new column written by Kathleen Sullivan-Moran. The column offers a monthly chronicle of the Adams Family 'in their own words.'

We hope our readers enjoy this new feature in The Quincy Sun and we thank Kathleen for her submitting the column.

By KATHLEEN SULLIVAN-MORAN

Richly woven into the history of Quincy are four generations of the Adams Family. Farmers, lawyers, diplomats, presidents, first ladies, soldiers, essayists, historians, and mayors... the men and women of this remarkable Quincy family were active participants and key witnesses to the founding of our nation and its early republic.

Over a span of 200 years, the Adamsses chronicled the times in which they lived. Today, more than 300,000 pages of their letters, letter books, personal diaries, and manuscripts survive as a lasting tribute to their legacy. Under the auspices of the 1906 Adams Manuscript Trust, the great-grandchildren of John and Abigail Adams deposited, for safe-keeping, their family papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society (MHS) in Boston. Included in this collection are 1,170 letters exchanged between John and Abigail! In 1956, the Trust conveyed ownership of the Adams Family Papers to the MHS which has opened this amazing compendium to historians and scholars. As part of its mission, the MHS continues to edit, publish, and up-load the Adams Papers to its web-site, www.masshist.org

Utilizing this plethora of Adams material, I look forward to beginning a monthly column of quotes from Adams Family. Titled "In Their Own Words", this column will feature quotations and passages from the Adams Family that correspond with the current month. If you have a favorite Adams quote you'd like to see featured here, please feel free to email it to me at kmsreality@aol.com.

We begin with an early letter from the progenitor, John Adams. Six months prior to his marriage to Abigail Smith, 28-year-old John traveled to Boston to be inoculated against the small pox virus. While quarantined, John penned the following letter to his betrothed:

Boston - May 7, 1764

I promised you, Sometime ago, a Catalogue of your Faults, Imperfections, Defects, or whatever you please to call them. I feel at present, pretty much at Leisure, and a very suitable Frame of Mind to perform my promise...for this is my sincere Aim, in laying before you, this Picture of yourself.

In the first place,...you have been extremely negligent in attending so little to Cards...that noble and elegant Diversion.

Another Thing, which ought to be mentioned, and by all means amended is, the Effect of a Country Life and Education.

In the Third Place, you could never be prevailed on to learn to sing.

In the Fourth Place, you very often hang your Head like a Bulrush.

Another Fault...is that of sitting with the Legs across. This ruins the figure...injures the health.

A sixth Imperfection is that Walking with the Toes bending inward...commonly called Parrot-toed.

Thus have I given a faithful Portraiture of all the Spots, I have...discerned in the Luminary. Near three weeks I have...studied for more, but more are not to be discovered. All the rest is bright and luminous—

In response Abigail wrote:

Weymouth May the 9, 1764

The 5th fault, will endeavor to amend...but you know that a gentleman has no business to concern himself about the Leggs of a Lady.

About the Author

A Quincy native, Kathleen Sullivan-Moran is a real estate broker working in the Quincy and South Boston market. This year marks her seventh season as a volunteer for the historic interpretive program at the Church of the Presidents. She thoroughly enjoys this role, and feels that it is a small way to give back to the city that she loves.

While in college during the Bicentennial, Sullivan-Moran worked at the Adams Birthplaces while the houses were still under the control of the City and the Quincy Historical Society. Later, she worked as a Park Ranger at the Old House at Peace field. A long-time member of the Quincy Historical Society, Sullivan-Moran served on the Board of Trustees in the late 1980s.

Turkey Cutlets, Mango & Cranberries

My niece Daria and I were having lunch recently, and she was telling me about a new recipe she had tried the day before. It was a turkey cutlet entrée that sounded very delicious and different as you will note when you read this.

TURKEY CUTLETS

WITH MANGO & CRANBERRIES

6-8 turkey cutlets (chicken can also be used)

1- cup Panko breadcrumbs

2 eggs (mixed with a little milk for coating)

Flour for coating

½ cup fresh parsley (chopped)

2 shallots (minced)

3-4 tablespoons vegetable oil

1 large mango (sliced)

1 cut frozen or fresh cranberries

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

Season the flour with salt and pepper. Coat the cutlets in the flour first, then the egg mixture and then the Panko bread crumbs.

Sauté the cutlets in the hot oil until browned and both sides. Drain on paper towel and set aside. Wipe the pan slightly and then add a couple of tablespoons of butter and sauté the shallots, the mango and the cranberries. Cook until it blends. Add the parsley and the Dijon mustard and stir again until hot.

Serve the cutlets with the mango mixture on top. So delicious!

A Delicacy: Artichoke Balls

Artichokes like many other vegetables can be eaten in many ways. Usually the most popular way is to eat the leaves with our fingers—just pull off the leaves one at a time.

When I make stuffed artichokes, the leaves are tasty just plain, but the leaves can be dipped in butter also.

Today's recipe is for artichoke balls made with artichoke hearts also very delicious and much easier to make.

ARTICHOKE BALLS

½ cup butter

1 small onion (minced)

1 - 15 ounce can artichoke hearts (minced)

and drained)

1 clove garlic (minced)

½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

½ cup plain breadcrumbs

½ teaspoon salt

In the heated butter, sauté the onion, artichoke and garlic until the onion is shiny. Remove from the heat. Then add the cheese, salt and breadcrumbs. Mix until well blended.

Form into bite sized balls and bake in a 300 degree oven in a slightly greased cookie sheet for 8-10 minutes.

Keep in a warming oven until ready to serve.

$1.4M Quincy Ave. Intersection Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state is planning a $1.4 million project to correct the intersection of Quincy Avenue and East and West Howard Street.

Currently, there is a 40-foot offset between the two ends of Howard Street. The MassDOT project would correct that aligning East Howard Street with West Howard Street. The project also calls for new curbing, auxiliary turning bays, improved signalization, and bicycle lanes on the shoulders.

The project is being undertaken by MassDOT as part of the $244 million Fore River Bridge replacement project; money from that project will likely go towards paying for the intersection.

"The $1.4 million project cost likely will be rolled into the Fore River Bridge replacement project. This is a principle artery vehicles will be entering to get into the area," MassDOT spokesman Michael Versek said. "It seems wise and fair to be tackling this now."

The project is currently in the planning and design stage. A major component of that that was a recently completed audit of the intersection, which thoroughly examined every aspect of it and how vehicles, pedestrians, and bicyclists.

"The design process can take a while," Versek said. "That can be a good thing. We'll get a better design and a better project."

To make the changes to the intersection, the city was required to take easements, the largest of which will come from the Fore River Shipyard on the south side of East Howard Street. The easements will cost a combined $21,100, which was approved by the City Council in April.

"This $21,000 really serves as the preface for what I believe is going to be a good story of a renovation of an intersection that is clearly ailing, to put it politely," Ward 2 Brad Croall said. "We'll be the beneficiary of new signalization, new curbing, new road work and a street that actually lines up and pedestrians as well as motorists can safely proceed."

Croall thanked MassDOT for working with the city to fix the intersection, and credited House Majority Leader Ron Mariano for helping tie the intersection project to the Fore River Bridge replacement.

"I'm very grateful for the partnerships. It's a story about people working together and most importantly it's the right thing for the residents. For those folks living in the East Howard, Quincy Avenue, Bower Road sections of Ward 2 this is huge and this is real," Croall said.

Quincy Fire Receives $139,640 FEMA Grant

The Quincy Fire Department has been awarded a $139,640 grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

The grant was awarded under the Assistance to Firefighters (AFG) program. The program awards federal grants to meet the firefighting and emergency response needs of fire departments and nonaffiliated emergency medical service organizations.

AFG funds have helped firefighters and other first responders procure equipment and provide resources needed in their effort to protect local communities, including protective gear, emergency vehicles and training.

"I want to commend Chief Joe Barron and the entire Quincy Fire Department for their hard work and commitment in securing this grant," said Cong. Stephen Lynch, who represents Quincy. "This federal funding will help ensure that our firefighters have the equipment necessary to do their jobs effectively, keeping their communities and themselves safe."

Former Planning Director To Head QHA

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Jim Lydon, former Planning Director for the City of Quincy, is officially the new Executive Director of the Quincy Housing Authority according to a contract signed on May 16 with the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD).

The one-year contract calls for Lydon to earn $128,000. About 30 percent of the salary is funded by the state.

"[Lydon] has a sparkling resume with extensive experience in the realm of public housing, though not specifically as an executive director for a PHA," said QHA Commissioner Thomas Lynn. "His background will allow us to be perhaps a bit more innovative."

Lydon, who is transitioning from his current position as Senior Vice President at Mass Development, has worked in both the private and public sectors.

He has served as director of Urban Studios for the Daylor Consulting Group, director of Economic Development for the Boston

JIM LYDON

Redevelopment Authority, president of Urban Consulting, Inc., and president and Executive Director of the Boston-Fenway Program.

Along with two other candidates, he was screened based on education and industry recognition. In addition, each candidate received a standard questionnaire which addressed pertinent issues affecting the authority such as personal experience with unions, strategies for stretching out limited U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) funds, and methods for building a positive image for the QHA.

"I loved the time I spent in Quincy," said Lydon in referring to his nine years as Planning Board director.

His career path eventually led him to work with the City of Boston. "I was approached by a bunch of friends of Tom Menino's and [he] was having a very difficult time getting his economic development program up and running," he said. "I had a great reputation coming from Quincy - having been here for the start of Marina Bay, the start of Crown Colony, and the Stop & Shop building downtown - and they asked me if I would become the first ever director of economic development for the City of Boston."

As QHA's new director, Lydon said he plans to engage the residents, board and employees to address current and future needs.

"I'd really like to engage the residents and the board and the employees in a long-range planning process; kind of a visioning thing," he said. "What are we doing right? What are we doing wrong? What aren't we doing that we should be doing and where do we want to be five, ten years from now?"

Three years as director of Marketing for Mass Housing also helped him secure the position.

"I went to Mass Housing, and I became the Director of Marketing for the rental development division; that's a 2.5 million dollar annual loan fund that's directed at the creation of affordable housing."

A letter sent to Chairwoman Mary Ann Morris from the DHCD indicates Lydon will take on his new role two weeks after signing the one year contract.

Lydon served as the city's planning director for several mayors, including Francis McCauley. McCauley praised Lydon's appointment.

"Jim is a very capable guy and did a very excellent job" McCauley said. "I'm very confident that Jim will do a good job (as QHA director). He has broad experience in the private and public sector."

Lydon succeeds James MacRitchie who retired after serving eight years as director.

FLYING PAST 55!

Not only is the remarkable variety of chrysoberyl known as Alexandrite the birthstone for June, it is also used to celebrate 55th wedding anniversaries. It takes a lovely gemstone to mark such an important event, and Alexandrite certainly has a lot to recommend it. Most noticeable is Alexandrite's ability to appear bright green in shorter-wavelength daylight while also having the ability to take on a rich red color in longer-wavelength artificial light. These optical properties have earned it the reputation of being an "emerald by day and a ruby by night," certainly good company in which to find itself. Aside from being remarkably beautiful, Alexandrite makes an excellent ring stone, with a hardness of 7.5 on the Mohs scale.

Alexandrite is a truly remarkable gemstone. Depending on the light source, it can change from a beautiful teal to an alluring magenta. It is always a conversation starter. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find everything you're looking for in alexandrite jewelry. Yazwinski Receives Lions' Frank McCauley Service Award

The Quincy Lions Club honored Father Bill's & MainSpring CEO John Yazwinski recently, when the community service organization presented him with its 2013 "Frank McCauley Community Service Award."

Yazwinski received the award at a special club luncheon held May 16 at The Neighborhood Club in Quincy. Quincy Lions Club President Charles Phelan said Yazwinski was selected for the award in recognition of his efforts to end homelessness across the South Shore.

"When you meet John, the first thing he'll tell you is that his goal isn't to manage homelessness — it's to end homelessness," Phelan said. "John's commitment to helping individuals move from emergency shelters into permanent housing where they can become self-sufficient makes him well deserving of this honor."

In accepting the award, Yazwinski thanked the Father Bill's & MainSpring staff, many of whom were in attendance, for their dedication to the organization's mission. He also praised the award's namesake — former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley — for the role he played in helping Father Bill's assist the city's homeless population during its earliest years.

"Frank McCauley was a problem solver," Yazwinski said. "He didn't just talk about issues or pass the buck; if there was a problem, he immediately set to work to find a solution, and we at Father Bill's are very grateful for the role he played in helping to secure the emergency shelter. So it's very humbling for me to receive the award named in his honor."

In 2010, the Quincy Lions Club recognized former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley's 50th anniversary as a member of the club with the creation of the "Frank McCauley Community Service Award." Presented annually, the award honors a local resident, activist or community leader who has demonstrated a commitment to being of service to others and the community.

In addition to the McCauley Award, the luncheon ceremony also included the presentation of the Melvin Jones Fellow award to Past President Jennifer Logue. The highest honor bestowed by Lions Clubs International, the Melvin Jones Fellow is named for the founder of Melvin Jones Committee Chair Don Uvanitte noted that Logue's father, Frank McCauley, was one of the Quincy Lions Club's first Melvin Jones recipients, making them the first father-daughter recipi-

With more than 1.3 million members around the world, Lions Club International is the largest service organization in the world. The Quincy Lions Club, founded in 1941, raises thousands of dollars each year to fund eye research and to provide free eye glasses and eye exams to local residents in need. The club also provides college scholarships to local high school seniors and funds other worthwhile community projects.

Josiah Quincy House Open June 1 For Free Tours

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 1, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The Quincy House is undergoing a three-year focus that includes the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators are reinstalling rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first Saturday of the month. In addition, the Quincy House will be open for Discover Quincy Days on July 13, Aug. 10, and Sept. 5. The house, located at 20 Muirhead St. in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

Council Rejects Proposed C-Mart By 5-3 Vote

here to there — it just does not work.

"There's no doubt in my mind that an Asian supermarket in North Quincy would be wonderful for the neighbors. It certainly would be a tremendous boon to the area. However in this particular location, which is bordered by the MBTA station in the back and Hancock Street in front and a couple side streets that are inadequate, it just does not work."

Coughlin, who represents portions of North Quincy as Ward 3 councillor, spoke against the project for more than 20 minutes. He said mitigation proposed by Fang, including installing a left turn lane from Hancock to Hayward, adding a traffic light at that same intersection, and re-signalizing intersections along the corridor, would not work. Shaw's agreed to those same measures when it received a special permit for its supermarket, located right next to the C-Mart site, and Coughlin said the measures didn't work there. (That Shaw's is now a Hannaford supermarket.)

"The reality is that the classification of the Hayward Street intersection is a level of service F as present and a continuing level of service F after mitigation is not acceptable. Various mitigation plans suggested will not solve the problem of in effect trying to stuff ten pounds of soil into a five-pound bag. The infrastructure only has so much capacity," Coughlin said. "Shaw's engaged in the same traffic mitigation measures as part of their special permit — turning lane, traffic lights, signalization — and yet the traffic problem on the Hancock Street corridor remains to this day unabated."

Coughlin also strongly rejected the notion that race was a factor in his or any other councillor's vote. During the March 25 public hearing on the proposal, multiple speakers accused members of the council, and others opposed to the project, of harboring an anti-Asian bias.

"In my opinion those proponents, and it was virtually exclusive to proponents, who introduced race and ethnicity into this matter brought shame and dishonor upon themselves whether they were their own words or those that had been scripted for them by others — which often appeared to be the case," Coughlin said. "It appeared to be an orchestrated effort to inject ethnic bias into the record of this matter."

Both Palmucci and Finn voted in favor of the proposal because they felt uses for the property that would not require a special permit from the council — as of right or by right uses — would be more detrimental than Fang's C-Mart proposal, which included 25,000 square feet of retail space and additional warehouse and office space. The settlement that remanded the issue back to the council ordered the council to compare the impact of the as of right uses with that of the proposed C-Mart.

"I'm compelled to vote to support this project tonight because I'm a member of the SPGA (special permit granting authority) and because of the judge's instructions and order to this body that we are to consider this project, the traffic impact, not against nothing but against what is a by right use," Palmucci said. "The by right uses presented to the body, and the traffic studies for those by right uses, I think are far more detrimental to the neighborhood."

"What it really just comes down to is the fact that this has been remanded to us for consideration and the key point, which I think Councillor Palmucci stressed very well, is that as we gauge this traffic we have to base it on those studies that were presented before us and we have to present it based on what the proponent can do as a matter of right," Finn added. "I see that as a very significant, significant test to pass, and I do not feel the testimony overcomes that."

As part of their submittal to the city, the C-Mart team included traffic impacts for a multi-use facility — a combination movie theater, office, garden center, restaurant, and medical/dental office — that could be placed on the site, which is in an industrial zoning district. The traffic study done on C-Mart's behalf found the as of right uses would generate 19 more trips during the weekday morning peak hour and 75 more trips during the Saturday midday peak hour, but 132 fewer trips during the weekday p.m. peak hour than C-Mart would.

Gutro, who served as Ward 5 councillor for a decade prior to being elected at-large, gave a number of reasons why he supported the project this time after opposing it in 2009.

He noted residents who opposed another Asian supermarket, the Super 88 at 731 Hancock St., also cited traffic concerns before it was ultimately approved. "Many folks predicted extraordinary traffic gridlock," Gutro said. "As a ward councillor none of the concerns ever manifested themselves and I never had those problems."

Gutro went on to contrast the C-Mart proposal with two larger developments — the already approved $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center and a proposed mixed use development at Marina Bay.

"It's ironic here we've had a 3.5 million square foot mixed use development in Quincy Center — 1,400 apartments, 200,000 square feet of street-level specialty retail, 320,000 square feet of retail space. We've got I think it's 350 units right now at Marina Bay — I know some of the folks down there are concerned about some of the parking projections, but that seems to be moving in a direction to being permitted," Gutro said. "Then I think about this, a 25,000 square foot grocery store."

Gutro added that rejecting C-Mart would not alleviate traffic along Hancock Street or help solve any flooding problems on Holmes Street.

"Denying it doesn't improve traffic or the level of service along the North Quincy corridor and the city has nothing on the books to do so with the exception of an important, long awaited realignment of the intersection of Squantum Street," Gutro said. "Denying this does zero to improve flooding that happened this past weekend or last week down on Holmes Street."

Following the meeting Steve Crawford, a spokesman for Fang, said it was too soon to say whether or not Fang would appeal the council's decision again.

"The vote is just minutes old. I don't know what our next steps will be," Crawford said, before adding that such a decision would be made "in short order." He also said that Fang, who was not present at Monday's meeting, was disappointed by the vote.

"He's obviously disappointed and I know that his supporters in the neighborhood were disappointed as well that that's not going to move forward. It appears that the opponents would prefer that nothing be in that building," Crawford said.

Crawford went on to say he felt the process was unfair. He pointed to a lengthy statement made by city engineer Frank Tramontozzi at the beginning of Monday's meeting. In that statement Tramontozzi came out against the C-Mart proposal, saying among other things that the mitigation wouldn't work and the as of right traffic studies by C-Mart were flawed. Ed Fleming, the attorney who represented C-Mart during the council process objected to Tramontozzi's statement during the meeting, and Crawford said Tramontozzi raised issues not presented before.

"At the beginning of the hearing a member of the mayor's staff spoke and presented evidence before the board that we had never heard before," Crawford said.

When asked, however, which evidence his side hadn't heard previously Crawford could not provide a specific answer. He did say that they should've had a chance to review it beforehand, and that it was unclear in what role Tramontozzi was testifying in.

"We weren't given an opportunity to review his text beforehand and there's a requirement, set forth by the court I believe, that we have an opportunity to see that," Crawford said. "It was unclear to me under what status he was testifying — was he testifying as a member of the mayor's staff who is opposed to it or was he testifying as an engineer — that was never made clear either."

McNamee declined to comment following the vote. "The council has spoken — I have no comment," he said.

Memorial Day Parade, Ceremonies Monday

Quincy Chapter, Norton is a past commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council; past Norfolk County commander of the American Legion; national vice chairman of the American Legion's Foreign Relations Council; a member of the National Legislative Council, Department of Massachusetts, American Legion; and past departmental commander of the American Legion, among other positions in veterans' organizations.

Norton now resides in Quincy with his wife, the former Ruth K. Steen. They have three children — Pamela, Michael, and Kevin — two daughters-in-law, Julie and Tara, and two grandchildren, Michael and Corbett.

Norton said he was selected to speak this Memorial Day because of his work with Vietnam veterans in the city, which includes organizing the annual memorial service at Marina Bay and square dedications throughout the city. He plans to "tell it from the heart" Monday, and talk about the experience he and many other Vietnam veterans had when they returned home.

"The government wasn't ready for us," Norton said. "The administration turned their backs on us; the American people turned their backs on us. It's not how you're supposed to treat heroes, but it's how we were treated."

Norton also plans to explain how the national opinion of Vietnam veterans has changed in recent years.

"It's changed over the last 15 years. We've won over the hearts of the American people," Norton said.

The parade and ceremonies are among the city's Memorial Day observances.

During the week preceding Memorial Day, veterans' organizations will decorate squares and memorials throughout the city.

Memorial services will be held at the Hancock Cemetery, Hall Cemetery, Christ Church Burial Grounds, and Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

QHS Named National Green Ribbon School

Quincy High School was one of four schools in Massachusetts chosen as recipients of the U.S. Dept. of Education's Green Ribbon Schools National Award.

On April 22, U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan, along with the White House Council on Environmental Quality Chairwoman Nancy Sutley and acting EPA Administrator Bob Persiachepe, announced QHS was among 64 schools and 14 school districts nationwide that were announced as 2013 Green Ribbon schools honorees. The honored schools and districts were selected for their exemplary efforts to reduce environmental impact and utility costs, promote better health, and ensure effective environmental education, including civics, STEM and green career pathways.

"Today's honorees are modeling a comprehensive approach to being green," Duncan said. "They are demonstrating ways schools can simultaneously cut costs; improve health, performance and equity; and provide an education geared toward the jobs of the future."

Quincy High was nominated by the Massachusetts Department of Elementary & Secondary Education to receive the award. Mayor Thomas Koch and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCris-tofaro said the award was the result of solid teamwork by both city and school officials.

"We are very proud of the award-winning work achieved in this collaborative effort between Planning Department staff, Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro and [Assistant Principal] Ellen Murray, as well as the Director of Public Buildings Gary Cuniff," Koch said. "I am extremely proud that their accomplishments have received national recognition for the City of Quincy."

"In order to be nominated for such a significant honor, a consistent collaboration of school and city staff is necessary," DeCristofaro said. "I am certain that the city of Quincy and the school system will continue to find ways to reduce environmental impact and provide students with environmental education opportunities."

The school was honored on May 13 in the Great Hall at the Massachusetts State House as part of the Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs Rick Sullivan's annual Excellence in Energy and Environmental Education Awards ceremony, and will be presented its award at the U.S. Department of Education Green Ribbon Schools National Awards Ceremony on June 3, 2013 in Washington, DC.

TOPPED OFF - A construction worker places the last steel beam on the new $30 million YMCA facility on Tuesday afternoon during a topping off ceremony where community leaders, donors and supporters of the South Shore YMCA signed the final beam before it was hoisted up to the top of what will be the new building. According to Paul Gorman, President of the South Shore YMCA, they hope to have the new building completed by mid fall. So far all the steel, underground plumbing, and the track in the field house has been completed on the building which is across from the new Quincy High School and next to the original YMCA building at 79 Coddington St. When the new building is complete, Gorman said that they expect their 10,000 members to double.

New Ladder Truck Eyed For NQ Station

to purchase a new ladder truck with a similar design, because that set up works best in Quincy.

"It will be another 110-foot aerial, a similar type just upgraded with a rear mount," Barron said. "This configuration works best in Quincy on the congested streets."

At Monday night's City Council meeting, Mayor Tom Koch submitted a $900,000 bond request which would allow the department to purchase the new ladder truck. The council's Finance Committee will debate the bond issue during a meeting on June 10. Barron said it would take about ten months to purchase and prepare the new ladder before it could enter service. The old North Quincy ladder truck would be saved as a spare model that could be used when another ladder was in for repair.

The city last purchased a ladder truck in 2012. That truck, dubbed Ladder 1, is located at Fire Department headquarters on Quincy Avenue. The third ladder, stationed in Wollaston, is from 1998 and Barron said he will look into replacing that one in two years.

Before looking into replacing that ladder in Wollaston, Barron said the department wants to purchase two new fire engines, a process that would start in 2014. The new engines would replace a 1988 model currently stationed in Houghs Neck and a 1989 model stationed in Squantum. The new models would go to fire headquarters and the department's West Quincy station

- the two busiest stations in the city - and the 2005 model engines in those stations would be transferred to Houghs Neck and Squantum to extend their usable lives.

"The '05 ones would go to the peninsulas," Barron said. "We extend their life by rotating them."

Barron has yet to begin pricing the new engines trucks, but estimated they would cost about $300,000 each based on his conversations with other chiefs. The department last purchased engines trucks in 2007, when they bought three.

Manet Community Health Dinner Raises $100,000

ManetCommunityHealth Center raised $100,000 at its Annual Dinner and Auction held recently at the Boston Quincy Marriott, according to preliminary figures.

The money will help subsidize unfunded mandates and wrap-around service and programs, designed to increase access to health care for residents of the South Shore. "We're thrilled at the success of our single biggest fundraiser of the year, and want to thank the community for showing its support for improved health care services," said Joseph Reardon, president of the Manet Board of Directors.

More than 390 attendees at the dinner were welcomed by Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch. Among those also in attendance were Cong. Stephen Lynch, state Sen. John Keenan, state Reps. Bruce Ayers and Walter Timilty along with city councillors Kevin Coughlin and Douglas Gutro.

One highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Manet Medallion to Bob Rivers, President and COO of Eastern Bank, in honor of its commitment to the Community Health Center movement and equity in health care access.

Manet also announced the first-ever Barbara A. Morris Distinguished Service Award to recognize an outstanding employee. The name of the award came as a surprise to Morris, a longtime Manet board member and resident of Quincy Point. "Barbara doesn't know this, but her fellow board members unanimously decided there could be only one possible name for this award," said Reardon.

He called Morris up from the crowd to help present the award to Andree Caldwell, a resident of the Hough's Neck neighborhood in Quincy. Caldwell is a 33-year employee, who began working at Manet several months after its doors first opened in 1979. The program also included the reflections of three Manet patients.

The evening emcee was Mary Richardson, former co-host of WCVB-TV's Chronicle. The Event Sponsor was Quincy Medical Center, A Steward Family ly Hospital. Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts donated members of its "Blue Crew" to help during the festivities, which included a popular silent auction.

Jack Conway & Company Realtors returned to the event to help sell the popular raffle tickets. Included in the items auctioned off to raise funds were Boston Red Sox tickets, a White House tour from Congressman Lynch, jewelry, and merchant restaurant gift certificates.

Manet Community Health Center is a not-for-profit health and social services provider and it exists to be your partner for a healthier life. Founded in 1979, it serves the broad health needs of South Shore residents. Each year, it serves about 14,000 patients with 52,000 patient visits. Manet has been accredited by The Joint Commission since 1999, demonstrating it meets the highest standards of quality. In 2011, Manet's Diabetes Program (all five locations) received accreditation by the American Association of Diabetes Educators.

DA Morrissey Awards Grants Supporting Prom, Graduation Safety

Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey has awarded Quincy High and North Quincy High separate "Operation Graduation" and "Project Prom Sense" grants for the third year in a row.

"The parents and school officials who organize substance-free events on prom and graduation nights are doing their kids and their community a great service," District Attorney Morrissey said. "Providing seniors with a constructive place to meet their classmates on prom and graduation nights creates an important alternative to being on the roads, perhaps driving from party to party, or in situations where there is underage drinking or other high risk behavior."

Quincy High and North Quincy High have both won the prom safety grants in each of the three years Morrissey has been the District Attorney. This year, Quincy High also applied for an "Operation Graduation" grant, and the DA approved.

Morrissey awarded 15 "Operation Graduation" and 10 "Project Prom Sense" grants county-wide this spring, each for $250. All of the money used was drawn from assets seized from drug dealers, and ordered forfeited by a judge following a successful drug prosecution by the Norfolk District Attorney's Office - not tax dollars.

"The work these parents do is very important, and I'm pleased to be able to offer the support and assistance of the District Attorney's Office," Morrissey said. "This makes a real difference."

Receiving the award from Mayor Menino was Company President and CEO Christa Hagearty.

which uses no hazardous chemicals. They also have an outside trainer that comes in regularly to develop its team's ability to consistently increase the amount and types of garments that are wet cleaned. Lastly, for every wedding dress cleaned, Dependable Cleaners donates $3 to Carbonfund.org, which more than offsets any carbon created through the cleaning and preservation process.

South Shore Chamber Relocating To Rockland

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce will relocate its headquarters from Quincy to Rockland next month.

South Shore Chamber of Commerce will move from its current site at 36 Miller Stile Road in Quincy to 1050 Hingham Street (Route 228), Rockland, near the Route 3 (Exit 14) interchange.

"In planning the relocation, we took into account that we serve businesses and communities across the entire South Shore, and our membership extends from Quincy to Plymouth and beyond," said Chamber President Peter Forman. "The Rockland location is a convenient and central setting, and will help us as we look to strengthen and grow our membership throughout the South Shore."

Forman said the Chamber's Board of Directors and leadership believe that the location will provide a central, highly visible, easily accessible and well-branded location for its members to meet, gather and work.

South Coastal Bank has presented $10,720 to The One Fund Boston, on behalf of its employees and MountainOne. South Coastal Bank is a MountainOne subsidiary.

The One Fund Boston was created at the request of Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino and Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick. The Victim Relief Fund of The One Fund Boston will be used to assist families of the victims who were killed and those who were injured as result of the Boston Marathon terrorist act on April 15, 2013 and related events on April 18th and April 19th.

South Coastal Bank's significant contribution was a combination of employee giving, matching funds and a special contribution. Employees raised $2,860.00, which was matched by MountainOne, for a total of $5,720.00. MountainOne and its subsidiaries also contributed an additional $5,000.

"As a part of the community, South Coastal Bank, MountainOne and our employees are honored to be able to support those who were most seriously affected during the tragic events at the Boston Marathon," said Robert Fraser, President and CEO, South Coastal Bank. "We hope this contribution helps them with their recovery and overcoming the pain of these events."

Quincy Softball Dashes North Quincy Playoff Hopes

Win Keeps Presidents In Postseason Hunt

By JEFF OHLSON

If you were told going into a game that one pitcher would strike out 10 hitters while tossing a shutout, you would probably consider that performance worthy of attendance.

If you were told that the opposing pitcher would be vying for their second no hitter of the season heading into the final inning, it would be a must watch.

Throw in a walk off single and the elimination of a rival from playoff contention and you have last Thursday night's Quincy versus North Quincy softball game, one of the more exciting games all year from the rivalry.

North Quincy pitcher Natasha Sautter was cruising all game as she stifled the Quincy offense, holding them to no hits through six innings.

"She was pitching really well all night and it was a shame to see the game end the way it did for her. She's been fantastic for us all year," said North Quincy Coach Kerry Ginty. "It was really tight all game and in the end it just came down to a few plays."

In the bottom of the seventh with the crowd quiet and a base runner on third, it was Leann McColgan who stole the show by pulling off the game winning hit for the Presidents, lining a single to center field to scoring Angelina Avitabile who reached on a North Quincy error and advanced to third on a wild pitch. The Quincy bench went wild and stormed home plate to celebrate.

"It was a clutch hit by a clutch player. She's been on a good streak and she squared one up at the end there and it couldn't have come at a better time," said

QUINCY'S RACHEL PAPILE puts the tag on North Quincy's Liz Kelly on an attempted steal of second base.

Quincy coach Greg Sommers.

With the win, the Presidents ended North Quincy's playoff hopes, as they can no longer qualify for the state tournament.

"Honestly, I think you always want both school represented in the tournament. That's really what you hope for and what you wanna see," said Sommers. "But it's a great win for us and we just need to win three of our next four to get in (the tournament)."

For Quincy High, pitcher Saxon Bresnahan was electric all night, striking out 10 Red Raiders and only allowing three hits and one walk. Coach Sommers knows how good Bresnahan can be.

"She's definitely been great for us all season and obviously she was fantastic for us tonight. When we know that she's starting, we know we have a good chance to win and the whole team is confident in that," said Sommers.

The unsung hero for Quincy however, is catcher Angelina Avitabile who had a great game behind the plate throwing out two would-be base stealers to kill any rally North had going.

"Angelina is a stable force for us, being able to throw out runners at the rate she does really helps out our pitchers," said Sommers.

For the Red Raiders, Caitlin Bulger was 2-3 with two singles and Courtney Campo was 1-3 with North Quincy's other basehit.

"There's just days when it goes your way and today wasn't one of those days for us," Ginty said. "It's a tough way to lose a game but you really gotta give it to the girls on the other side, it was a really great game and they pulled it out."

North Quincy has two games remaining in their season, one against Quincy, and one against Hanover, both of which will be home games.

"We got a couple more games left and for us now the goal will be to finish strong and take as many positives out of this season as we can," said coach Ginty.

Quincy High is now 7-9 and entering the week had games remaining at Stoughton, North Quincy, Archbishop Williams and Stoughton again. The Presidents have to take three of those four games to qualify for the tournament.

Quincy 7, North Quincy 2

Paulo, Salvucci Power Presidents Past Red Raiders

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy had been building towards this game. The young Presidents had improved dramatically and played terrific baseball in the stretch run of their season.

They had beaten first-place Silver Lake. They had been seasoned by hard late and extra-inning losses to Whitman-Hanson, Hingham, Duxbury and Scituate. They were right there with the best in the Patriot League. They were moving towards that one game when all the pieces fit perfectly together.

The breakthrough came on the perfect night against just the right team. Sophomore Greg Paulo gave just one earned run through six innings, sophomore Bobby Salvucci led a 12-hit attack with three singles and two RBI, and Quincy backed it all with an airtight defense to drop North Quincy, 7-2 in a Patriot League game at Adams Field Thursday night.

"This is the first time we've beaten North since I've been here. I think it's been like eight games, so I feel good for the seniors. They had never beaten North," said third-year coach Pat Bryan. "We're still learning, but tonight we made the plays and got the key hits you need to beat good teams."

"We played such great team defense over the first half of the year, but we weren't as sharp over our final stretch of games. We had seven games in nine days and that is tough," said North coach Dan McHugh whose team finished 6-14 and lost an outside chance to tie for second place in the Fisher Division and a tourney berth with the loss to Quincy.

It begins with the pitching, with Paulo and a couple of unusual story lines. Most sophomores are nervous in their debut against an archrival. Paulo showed little of that. Most sophomores grow unsettled when their best pitch isn't fully effective. When Paulo's curveball wasn't there, he switched seamlessly to the fastball, kept it low and on the outside part of the plate, and controlled the Red Raiders on six hits while striking out five.

He gave two in the first and was a properly-executed double play away from escaping without a run. He then strung together five scoreless innings, gave his offense a chance to win the ball game and that is exactly what Quincy did.

"There were maybe a few nerves in the first inning, but I tried to treat it like any other game," said Paulo. "My curve hasn't been as sharp my last few games. I went with my fastball and tried to keep it away from them which is important against a team like North."

"He had us off balance," said McHugh.

And Quincy hit the ball. There were 12 singles and there were no bleeders or bloopers. There were line drives. Robbie Munroe, a hitter on a spree, and Johnny Marsinelli had two hits, a run scored, and an RBI. Padraig Geaney had a pair of hits and a run scored, Tyler Beach had a walk, a single and an RBI, and Mike Carnavale had a double, a run scored and an RBI to lead an impressive offense which bunched together three hits, two walks, and three stolen bases in a five-run fifth which won the ball game.

"We hit the ball hard and we got hits. We've been playing great baseball and tonight we got the hits when we had men in scoring position," said Bryan.

The Presidents made an error in the first and were flawless the rest of the way. Beach was excellent at short, but for the most part, there was nothing spectacular. As Bryan said, Quincy simply made the plays and they made them with a poise which is striking for a team which had one senior on the field against North. The best is yet to come for this team.

"Tonight, it came together for us. We're still learning, but the defense was good. Beach made some big plays at short," said Bryan.

For North it was a difficult ending for a team with 12 seniors which started the season fast. The Red Raiders captured their vacation tourney and won four of their first six. However, they saw everybody's ace as they made their tourney run and Paulo was simply too good in the final game.

"There are some good pitchers in the league and the way the rotation worked out, we saw everybody's top guy down the stretch. It's difficult for the seniors, but they played hard right through the final game," said McHugh.

Andrew Currie had a double, walk and scored a run for North. Pat Verhault, Josh Hayward, Shawn Grady, Mike Alibrandi, John Tattlebaum and catcher Pat Gould had singles. Gould was on base three times, threw out three runners at second base and came within a centimeter of a fourth. It was a fitting end to a remarkable two-sport career by a rare high-school athlete.

"It breaks my heart to lose him. He was a great, he's a tremendous kid and an excellent athlete," said McHugh.

Verhault and Grady had singles as North jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first. Quincy answered with RBI from Carnavale and Beach in the second. The Presidents won it with five in the fifth keyed by hits from Marsinelli, Munroe and Salvucci.

In action earlier last week, Quincy fell, 6-5 in eight innings to Whitman-Hanson.

NORTH QUINCY'S JOSH HAYWARD had a hit for North Quincy. The Red Raiders jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning but Quincy scored the next seven runs to win 7-2.

Munroe went 3-4 with an RBI and a run scored. Marsinelli had two hits, a run, a stolen base and an RBI.

Marshfield defeated North, 6-4. Verhault and Currie had hits while Dave Lawlor pitched well in his first start of the season for the Red Raiders. Middleboro edged North, 2-0. Sophomore Brian Turner pitched another strong game while Verhault, Grady and Danny Gould had hits.

Quincy is 7-11 and travels to BC High on Wednesday before finishing its season at Stoughton Friday.

Quincy's Jeff Russell Inducted Into Suffolk University Athletics Hall Of Fame

Quincy's Jeff Russell was recently inducted into the Suffolk University Athletics Hall of Fame at the university's fourth Hall of Fame dinner at the Royal Sonesta Hotel in Cambridge.

Suffolk's 2000 Baseball team was enshrined as part of the awards dinner that honored the team's 19 members and three coaches.

Russell was a key member of that 2000 team as he helped anchor a pitching staff that set a school record for wins in a season with a 38-9 record en route to their first NCAA Championship Tournament appearance, while winning both the Great Northeast Athletic Conference (GNAC) and Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) championships.

Russell was 8-2 that year on the mound for the Rams as he logged the second most innings on the team with 82 in 10 starts. He struck out 85 hitters while completing six games and logging a 3.74 earned run average.

Russell pitched the ECAC Tournament Championship game as Suffolk defeated Tufts University, 12-3. During the 2000 season the Suffolk pitching staff led all NCAA Division-III programs in ERA (2.69) while striking out a nation-high 401 hitters.

Russell graduated from Suffolk University in 2002 with a bachelor's degree in communications.

Presidents Girls' Tennis Defeats W-H, North Quincy

By BILL GRIFFIN

There is good news and more good news for Quincy's girls tennis team.

The Presidents swept to two straight wins last week over Whitman-Hanson and archrival North Quincy. They are 9-5 and they are headed to the state tourney. They have an astonishing number of 70 kids involved in the tennis program. Their team also boasts many of the finest students in the school.

They're smart. They play well. They work hard. They beat North. They're going to the tourney. Everyone loves tennis. Perhaps someone could sprinkle the court with 100 dollar bills to improve their situation, but short of that, everything is just fine.

"I expected a good year. We have six seniors who have been playing since they were sophomores," said coach Meghan Matthews. "They've worked hard and exceeded my expectations. We've won a lot more 4-1 and 5-0 decisions than 3-2 matches as we did in the past."

The most satisfying win came with a 3-2 win over North. In recent years, the gifted Sullivan sisters (Sara and Elizabeth) had made North an imposing force and when the Presidents tasted sweet victory in this special rivalry last week, it meant something.

"North was the highlight of the year. No question," said Matthews.

The Presidents won a pair of three-setters en route to the victory. Rachel Smith earned a 6-4, 2-6, 6-2 decision at No. 2 singles. Christine Tran and Amanda Wong fought for a 6-0, 4-6, 6-2 victory at first doubles and Samantha Pham and Tanya Tonnu rolled at second doubles 6-0, 6-1.

In other action last week, No. 1 singles player Emily Sato romped 6-0, 6-0 in a 4-1 win over Whitman. Earlier in the year Quincy pushed one of the Patriot League's Big 3, Duxbury, in a narrow 3-2 loss in a fine performance.

"Along with Hingham and Scituate, we think of Duxbury as part of the Big 3, so to play them that tough meant something to us," said Matthews.

Sato, a junior who is ranked near the top of her class academically, uses her quickness and groundstrokes to frustrate opponents. She was 9-4 on the season at the end of last week. Her plan is simple. She always hits the ball back.

"She's like a human backboard," said Matthews. "And the fact she gets to every ball frustrates her opponents. You can see the frustration grow as the match goes along."

Smith, a senior who is headed to Fitchburg State as a graphic designer, has a strong serve and accurate placement of all her shots. She posted an 8-5 record for her first 13 matches.

"She's had some minor injuries, but she's played through them with character and toughness," said Matthews.

Senior Kathleen Conroy (8-6 on the season) has used determination and hard work to make remarkable strides over the past two years. Her strength is from the baseline. She is an honors student who will attend UMass Boston.

"As a JV, she barely knew how to hold a racquet," said Matthews. "She just worked. She didn't just work with high school team, but she sought out opportunities to play with clubs teams. She made amazing progress."

Tran and Wong (7-6 on the season) are a fitting pairing at doubles. Both are seniors. Both will attend the Mass. College of Pharmacy. They know well each others' game. Tran likes the baseline. Wong loves to come to net. They are close friends. They are born to play doubles together.

"And they are smart," said Matthews. "They are able to recognize an opponents weakness and attack it. That's one thing I like about my whole team. They're not just out there whacking the ball. They know tennis and how to play it."

Pham and Tonnu (8-4 record) are a good mix. They can each play the baseline and the net and they are another pair who understands the game well.

"They also can find an opponent's weak spot. Plus they are good friends and that helps," said Matthews.

They're a lot of good friends playing tennis at Quincy. Matthews has 70 kids involved in her program. Some will move to the varsity. Some will not. All of them have fun. They willingly stand two and three deep at the court waiting for a chance to play.

"We will get some varsity players, but the important thing is they enjoy the game," said Matthews.

Matthews is as proud of her team's academic success as she is of its accomplishments on the court.

"We have mostly honors students, students who are in advanced placement classes and rank near the top of their class," she said. "They work hard in school and they work hard at tennis. It makes them a pleasure to coach."

Quincy will face North in a rematch on the clay of the Quincy Tennis Club Wednesday, May 22, at 3:35.

Marshall, Snug Harbor Schools Charity Softball Game June 11

Clifford Marshall and Snug Harbor Staff and PTO will face off at their 3rd annual charity softball game Tuesday, June 11th 2:30 p.m. at Fore River Field.

Tickets are $2 each.

The charity match-up began in 2011 with a little friendly competition between two schools that have a great relationship. Clifford Marshall challenged Snug Harbor and decided that proceeds would go to Red Cross for disaster relief. That year $1,000 was raised.

In 2012, the schools selected to support "One Mission Kids Cancer Buzz-Off." The charity would raise money to support Children's Hospital Boston Pediatric Cancer patients.

"Team Awake" was formed including Marshall's PTO President, Amy Drinkwater and her husband Kenn, along with their friend Kayur Shah. They agreed to raise money in exchange for shaving their heads bald.

Daniel Gilbert, principal at Snug Harbor School, ran $1 raffle for students to win a chance to shave his head. The schools raised over $1,000 for their charity in ticket sales and raffles. This brought "Team Awakes" total to over $6,500.

Proceeds from this year's charity game will go to Germantown Food Pantry. Germantown Food Pantry provides fresh and non-perishable food to hundreds of families in the community and the need is becoming greater each year.

Scituate stopped North, 4-1. the Red Raiders finished the week at 7-5.

North meets Quincy in a rematch at the Quincy Tennis Club Wednesday.

Quincy's boys lacrosse team showed improvement in recent games against the best teams in the Patriot League and from the South Shore.

Last week, Hingham dropped the Presidents, 13-1. Freshman Jake Hallisey scored on an assist from Pat Dowling while Andy "Doc" Johnson had a fine game in goal, making 21 saves.

Hull defeated the Presidents twice. Last week, Hull earned an 18-6 win. Mitchell McGowan, who had 12 goals in the past two weeks, had four while Max Hurley also scored for Quincy. Andrew Cooke scored his first varsity goal for the Presidents.

Earlier, Hull stopped Quincy, 18-5. McGowan scored twice. Brian O'Callaghan and Steve Ross scored for Quincy. James Guerin earned his first goal of the year.

Defending state champion Duxbury downed Quincy, 16-0, but coach Bob Foley saw improvement in his club.

"We showed progress with the numbers of shots we had on goal, our clearing plays and our transition game," said Foley.

In other recent action, Quincy downed South Shore Voke, 15-4 behind six goals and two assists from McGowan. Dowling added four goals and two assists while Ross had three goals and one assist.

Hurley won 65 percent of his faceoffs and Johnson played a strong game in goal.

O'Callaghan, Ryan Higgins and Aidan Pigsley had strong defensive games.

"The addition of Hallisey to attack helped our offense with athleticism," said Foley. "John Quirk, Shaun Brennick, Ryan Harty, and Gavin O'Hare played well offensively and defensively."

Quincy faced North Quincy at Veteran Stadium Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Stoughton rallied to defeat Quincy's softball team, 3-1 Friday. The loss dropped the Presidents to 7-10 at the end of last week. The Presidents needed to win their final three games to qualify for the tourney.

Quincy hosts Archbishop Williams Thursday at 3:30 p.m. and faces Stoughton again in a makeup game Friday.

The North Quincy boys volleyball team swept to 3-0 victories over Taunton and Wareham last week. In a rematch, Taunton dropped North, 3-1.

The win lifted the Red Raiders to 16-2 overall and 9-1 in the Southern Alliance. The victories all but wrapped up the league crown for North. At the end of last week, North had a one-game lead in the loss column over Greater New Bedford. The Red Raiders' only remaining league game is against winless Wareham.

Quincy Baseball No-Hit By Archies' Anderson

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a dangerous spot on the schedule for a let-down, and Quincy had one against the wrong pitcher and the wrong team.

Righthander Scott Anderson pitched a no-hitter and Quincy native Jason Pekkinen led the attack with four hits to lift Archbishop Williams past the Presidents, 11-0 in a non-league game called after six innings at Adams Field Monday.

"We had difficult one-run games last week," said coach Pat Bryan. "We lost a couple and the kids knew they weren't going to the tournament. We got ourselves back up to play North, but we had a letdown today."

Anderson (6-0 on the season) was not overpowering. He struck out only two, but he moved the ball around and changed speeds well. The Presidents hit the ball hard, but the line drives went right at people and the Bishops made all the plays.

"He had a no-hitter last year, and it was the same thing," said Bishops' coach Pat Clifford, a Quincy native. "He has three pitches and he uses them all well. He had people on base in his first no-hitter as well, but it got to be the fifth inning and we realized nobody had a hit."

Quincy had its chances. In the second, Robbie Munroe and Bobby Salvucci reached on errors to start the inning. Pekkinen, a third baseman, made a terrific charge on a tapper for one out, and catcher Mike Davis made a great throw to second to start a 2-6-2 double play when Quincy tried to work the double steal with runners on first and third.

In the fourth, a walk and an error put Greg Paulo and Munroe on second and third with no out. Salvucci ripped a frozen rope directly at second baseman Eddie Riley, another Quincy native, and Riley turned it into a double play. Mike Pugsley lined out hard to right to end the inning.

In the sixth, Tyler Beach drove a deep shot to left which Mike Sorenti ran down. Pdraig Geaney followed with a rising liner which shortstop Dylan O'Brien went high to grab for the play of the game which preserved the no-hitter.

"Anderson is a good pitcher, but we hit some balls hard. We just didn't finish any open spots," said Bryan.

Pekkinen, who plays for Morrisette Legion in the summer, had a fine game. He was 4-4 at the plate, drove in three runs, and scored another. He is a senior captain headed for St. Anselm's and is third in the Catholic Central League in batting with an average of .450.

"He's been right on the ball all year," said Clifford. "He had a walk-off home run to beat Bishop Fenwick in eight innings last week. He's hit for average and power. He's been our leader."

Pekkinen also handled a pair of chances at third, including the play in the third which saved a run.

"He's been great defensively all year. He's almost certain to be a league all star at third," said Clifford whose club finished second in the league and has an 11-4 record.

Williams scored two in second, three in the third, two in the fourth and four in the sixth to earn the win. Riley helped the offense with a hit and two runs scored in three trips to the plate.

Pugsley made an excellent play at second in the second inning for Quincy. He ranged far to his right, skidded to ground, fielded an O'Brien bouncer cleanly and fired to first for the out.

Quincy (7-12) finishes the road against BC High Wednesday and Stoughton Friday.

"We want to get back to work and finish strong," said Bryan. "BC High will be a big measuring stick. They're excellent and they're the kind of team you have to be able to stick with if you're going to do anything in the tourney in the future."

MORE PROBLEM THAN SOLUTION?

In an ironic twist that one might expect from a drama, some of the very medications people take to relieve themselves of headache pain actually cause headaches. "Medication overuse headache" (MOH) is most commonly associated with opioid pain relievers such as codeine and oxycodone and medications containing the barbiturate butalbital, but it has also been linked to acetaminophen and ibuprofen. Many suspect that MOH arises from repeated use of pain medication, which somehow sensitizes the nervous system to pain. The problem may be further exacerbated by pre-emptive use of pain relievers, which leads people to take more than they need. The first step in resolving MOH involves cessation of medication use. Then, drug-free chiropractic treatment may help alleviate headache pain.

Do you have headaches? Chiropractic care has helped millions of people. Let us at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC help you perform your personal best. The goal of the chiropractor is to remove interference that may be impairing normal health through specific chiropractic adjustments, allowing your body to heal itself. Gomez Pledges Two-Term Limit If Elected U.S. Senator

At Campaign Stop In Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON
At a campaign stop in Quincy, Republican Gabriel Gomez vowed to serve only two full terms on Capitol Hill if Bay State voters send him to Washington in next month's special senatorial election.

Gomez, a Navy SEAL-turned-businessman, spoke briefly to the press in front of the bronze statue of John Adams in the McIntyre Mall. Flanked by two-dozen supporters, the Cohasset resident said that members of the House and Senate should be term limited, just as the president is.

"The president is term limited. I think congressmen and senators should be term limited. I'm going to go down there, serve my full two terms, and come back," Gomez said. "The problems down in D.C. are reflective of what happens when you have not only career but hyper-partisan politicians down in D.C. who are not working together, trying to do what's best for the people of Massachusetts and, equally important, for the people of the United States."

Adams, Gomez explained, advocated for elected officials to serve only briefly and then return to their private lives.

"One of our greatest Founding Fathers here, John Adams, advocated strongly for the citizen-servants to go down there, do your time, come back, meet with all the people you served," Gomez said.

Prior to his Senate campaign Gomez had only ran for election once before, finishing third in a three-person race for a seat on Cohasset's Board of Selectman in 2003. His opponent in the June 25 election is Cong. Ed Markey, a Malden Democrat first elected to the House in a 1976 special election.

"I respect him (Markey) but he's been down there for 37 years and voted against term limits," Gomez said. "He's been down there not only since I was playing Little League baseball, but before Tom Brady was born."

Gomez was asked if he felt having experienced politicians serving in Congress was important. He said experience in the world outside of politics is needed in Washington.

"I think the word 'experience' can be defined different ways. I think what we need in D.C. is experience in the real world," Gomez said. "Having worked in the private sector, having been in the military, I can go down there and relate to the issues that are affecting the American people."

"That's the economy - getting jobs back here, dealing with the $17 trillion in debt - and also dealing with national security issues - I think the marathon bombing really awakened us and reminded us about the dangerous world we live in."

Gomez at his Quincy appearance. She said recent controversies in Washington - the IRS investigations of conservative groups, the Department of Justice seizing AP phone records, and the executive branch's handling of a terrorist attack on a consulate in Benghazi, Libya - as reasons why the Senate needs a fresh face like Gomez.

"For the past week we have woken up to news report after news report of scandals in D.C.," Hughes said. "The same old politicians have the same old answers and the same old minds they did last time there was a scandal in D.C. It's time if you ask me, and you're all asking me, to send a new politician to D.C."

On Monday, Markey criticized Gomez's two-term limit pledge as the Republican Senate hopeful campaigned with Arizona Sen.

John McCain. McCain has served more than 30 years in Washington.

"It's impossible to really do anything except, maybe laugh a little bit, when he brings in someone who is the Republican poster boy for term limits and then have that candidate then say that it's time for a new face," Markey was reported as saying at a campaign stop with construction workers in Boston.

On May 11 at approximately 3:47 p.m., Officer Jim Sullivan was dispatched to a bar at Marina Bay after Communications received a call from the owner stating that a male came into the bar showing off a firearm. The owner stated that the suspect left the bar and was now sitting on a bench across the parking lot.

Upon arrival, Officer Sullivan located the suspect on the bench, parked his cruiser at a safe distance from the bench area and slowly approached the suspect. The owner of the bar confirmed the identity of the suspect as he pointed from the bar to the suspect.

Officer Sullivan, concerned for his safety, removed his service firearm from his holster and pointed it directly at the male subject as he gave a verbal command, "Put your hands up." The suspect did not obey the command, so the Officer continued the order as he neared the suspect. Officer Sullivan then made a sudden move at the suspect and was able to handcuff him. A strong odor of alcoholic beverage was coming from the suspect's breath and he had slurred speech. When asked where the gun was, the suspect said, "What gun....it's fake." After patting the suspect down for the weapon, the Officer again asked where the gun was and the suspect replied, "It's over there in the bushes."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

At this point, with the suspect still on the bench, State Trooper Brian Dunn and Officer Jamie Karvelis arrived on scene. Officer Sullivan conducted an immediate area search and found the hand gun approximately 6-8 feet away. The weapon and the magazine clip were empty. The suspect was placed into a cruiser after being searched.

The Officer found a car key in the suspect's pocket, which belonged to a car nearby.

Sergeant Joseph Lencki arrived on scene and searched the suspect's car, which belonged to another male from Malden. Inside the vehicle was a large amount of cash in the center console along with a Malden Police Department police radio. The cash in total, $364.00, keys, and the police radio were taken as evidence. Once at the station, Sergeant Lencki contacted the Malden Police Department about the recovered radio. Officer Sullivan interviewed the Bartender, who said that the suspect came into the bar at 3:15 P.M. and immediately began playing keno.

During the next 45 minutes, the suspect ordered and consumed Ketel One drinks as he showed off how much money he had on him. As he reached into his pocket to gather the money, the bartender said that a gun came out and landed on top of the bar. The suspect then said, "Someone didn't believe I was gonna be in Quincy." The bartender said she then froze in shock. The suspect then advised her, "You didn't see that." The bartender, quite shaken, replied,

"You need to leave....you need to leave.....you need to leave now." The bartender then walked away and walked over to a patron and pulled him aside, telling him that the suspect had a gun.

Officer Sullivan spoke with this witness, who said that once he heard that the suspect had a gun, he went outside and told the bar owner, who then called the Police.

They then watched as the Police Officer arrived and then confronted the suspect.

After further investigation at the station, it was determined that the firearm was not a real firearm. Back at the station, Officer Sullivan called the owner of the car, who stated that his car was being fixed at a collision center. The Officer told him that his car was towed away and advised him of the circumstances. The suspect, a 28 year old Malden resident was charged with, "Disorderly Conduct." This incident ended well due to the training and experience of the responding Officers.

Nice Work!

Electrical Outlets Don't Sit Straight

Q: In my mom's home, I noticed that a few of the cover plates on the outlets don't sit flush with the wall. Some are angled out so there is a small gap between the plate and the wall, for example. I tried tightening the center screw on the plates, but this didn't help, and one of them cracked when I over-tightened it. How can I fix this? -- Sarah in Syracuse, N.Y.

A: It's likely that the receptacles themselves, or their housing, are misaligned. This can be caused by the screws holding the receptacle in place being loose, or the housing (the junction box) not being properly secured. Because the receptacle or junction box doesn't sit straight, the cover plate doesn't sit straight. Hence, the gap between the cover plates and the wall.

Turn off power to the crooked outlets, at the circuit panel. To make sure power is no longer reaching an outlet, plug a radio or a lamp into each of the two outlets of the receptacle. If they stay off, power is most likely off. However, always treat electrical hardware and wiring as if it is live.

Remove the cover plate and take a look at the small screws on either side of the receptacle. If they're loose, tighten them so that the receptacle sits straight within the metal junction box.

Straightening the receptacle should fix the cover-plate alignment problem. However, if it doesn't, check to see if the junction box itself is straight. It may have been installed at a bad angle.

If this is the case, adjusting the box is more complicated. You'll have to remove the receptacle, disconnecting its wires and labeling them so that you are able to reconnect them correctly. Then you'll have to unscrew the junction box from the stud, use a level to find the correct angle, drill a new hole or holes in the stud, then attach the junction box via the new holes, rewire the receptacle and put it back in place. This can be time consuming and frustrating, because you are working in a tiny space. If you've never wired up a receptacle or light switch before, there are several risks involved, from damaging the receptacle to injuring yourself.

In many cases, the first fix -- tightening the receptacle screws -- generally does the trick. However, if the second issue arises, consider the amount of work involved and whether you're confident in doing it. If you're not sure you can do it, consider having a licensed electrician come in to straighten the junction boxes and give the house's entire electrical system a look over for any other issues.

HOME TIP: Use a small appliance, like a radio, lamp or a fan, to test whether power is reaching an outlet, by plugging the appliance into it.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An apparent act of injustice might turn out to be either an error in judgment or just plain stupidity. So calm down and cool off, and let the explanations roll out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's upsetting when someone you trusted might have failed you. But with new opportunities ahead, you'll soon be too busy to feel even a wee bit sorry for yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sense of uncertainty could be a good reason to change your position on an important matter. Someone close might try to talk you out of it, but it's your decision to make.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Being too zealous in pursuing your goal could create some resistance. Try to be more mindful of what you ask people to do, and they'll be more likely to do it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things change as you go from being ignored to being lionized once again. This is a good time to reintroduce those previously rejected ideas to a more receptive audience.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone new in your life creates both anticipation as well as anxiety. Avoid the potential for misunderstandings by watching what you say and how you say it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch your budget so that you don't overspend now and have less to invest when the time is right later on. Arrange to share your weekend with someone special.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The temptation to involve yourself in a friend's or family member's personal problems is laudable. But get the facts before you make a firm commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to keep the faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You've reached an important point in your ongoing pursuit of your goals. You might now want to consider letting someone you trust join you on your journey.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been going through a spate of uncertainty involving people you care for. But it might be time to take a stand on a position you feel sure you can defend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Treading water keeps you busy, but it won't get you where you need to go. Time to stop making excuses and to start moving ahead toward your goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: You see life as both creative and pragmatic. You would not only be a fine artist, but also a successful one.

Relay For Life To Benefit Cancer Society June 21-22

Walkers will go around the clock in the battle against cancer when the 2013 American Cancer Society Relay For Life® of Quincy gets underway with teams of residents gathering at Pageant Field on June 21st-22nd at 4 p.m. to 8 a.m.

Relay For Life events are held overnight as individuals and teams camp out at an athletic track, park or other gathering area, with the goal of keeping at least one team member on the track or pathway at all times throughout the evening. Teams do most of their fundraising prior to the event, but some teams also hold creative fundraisers at their camp sites during Relay.

Pageant Field is located at the top of Merrymount Parkway by the Adams Baseball Field.

"Relay is a unique opportunity for our community to come together to celebrate people who have battled cancer, remember those we've lost, and fight back against the disease," said Gordon Behrer, Volunteer Co-Chair for the Relay For Life of Quincy. "Many of the participants are cancer survivors, which serves as a reminder that our community is not immune to this disease and that by participating in Relay, we are joining with the American Cancer Society's efforts to create a world with less cancer and more birthdays," Mr. Behrer added.

Funds raised at Relay For Life of Quincy are enabling the American Cancer Society to impact the lives of those touched by cancer within the community by supporting vital, cutting-edge cancer research; providing cancer patients with services such as transportation to treatment, free lodging at Hope Lodge, and round the clock support at our national cancer information center available at 1-800-227-2345 anytime, day or night; publishing lifesaving literature on cancer prevention, detection and tobacco control; and developing a new generation of medicines that help those battling cancer.

Also a part of the Relay For Life of Quincy is the "Fight Back" Ceremony, in which a community leader will inspire Relay participants with his or her own commitment and will challenge them to take a personal pledge of action (e.g., stop smoking, eat more healthily, exercise regularly, etc.) in fighting back.

For more information, call 1-800-227-2345 or visit RelayForLife.org.

A Message From Social Security Social Security Brings The Office Outside

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Ah, the great outdoors. With sunny weather, green trees, blooming flowers, and fresh air, many have already flocked to the outdoors to spend as many hours as they can before autumn leads way to winter. Whether you prefer to spend your time hiking in the woods, tossing a ball in the back yard, gardening, or reading on the beach, it's refreshing to get in some outside time.

If you have Social Security business to tend to when you're not tending to your lawn, that's no reason to ditch the outdoors. You don't have to drive to and wait in an office — you can handle much of your Social Security business from your laptop, tablet, or smartphone, wherever you may be.

Let's say you're enjoying a camping trip — but brought your tablet along to stay connected. Your wife mentions she hasn't gotten her Social Security Statement this year, and you remind her that she can get it online after creating a my Social Security account available at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount. In a few moments, you both are reviewing your Statements together and dreaming about your future retirement years — with precision — as you gaze at the stars.

Or perhaps you're at the baseball game with your uncle, your team just hit a home run, and after your cheering subsides he reminds you that you were supposed to look into a Social Security question for him. Simply pull out your smartphone and search our frequently asked questions at www.socialsecurity.gov/faq.

Imagine yourself vacationing on the beach. Fresh from a swim, you're sunbathing on a lounge chair with a cool lemonade, tableside. And it hits you: this is where you want to be! You have your years in, so what are you waiting for? Just exchange your beach book for your tablet and you can apply for retirement benefits from the very place you want to spend your retirement.

Learn more — and do more — at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Two Cited For Illegal Clamming

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy Police have cited two people for illegal clam digging within the past week.

The department cited one person for illegally clam digging on Wednesday, May 15, and another on Sunday, according to City Clerk Joe Shea, who is also Quincy's shellfish warden. Each person was fined $50.

Quincy's shores are currently closed to clam diggers, because the clams in them are not yet mature enough to be harvested. It is possible though that the digging grounds will open up later in the summer, if the state determines the clams are mature enough.

"Our flats are closed. The only place on the South Shore people are digging is Hull," Shea said.

Even if they open, residents wouldn't be able to go clamming on their own.

Clam diggers can only operate in Quincy with a commercial license; the city doesn't issue residential shellfishing licenses. The commercial licenses require digger to work with a master digger, who purchases the freshly caught clams and transports them to a plant in Ipswich where they are specially cleaned.

Residents can, however, receive a permit to dig for sea worms that are used for bait. The city has issued 11 such permits to residents this year, Shea said. Some people who obtain that permit believe it enables them to dig for clams, but it does not.

"Some of our newer residents are buying a sea worm permit thinking it's a clam permit," Shea said.

Shea said several members of the police department work with him as assistant shellfish wardens to crackdown on illegal clamming. The department has issued five citations for illegal clamming in each of the past two years, but Shea thinks that number could grow to 10 this year because two citations have been issued so early in the season.

"It seems to be accelerating this year," Shea said. "It happens every spring and when the weather gets warmer."

While illegal shellfishing is a misdemeanor during the daytime, it is considered a felony at night.

"If you dig a clam after dark it's considered a felony - they can arrest you and impound your car and your equipment," Shea said.

Brown Algae Cause of Wollaston Beach Odor

A strong rotten-egg smell that lasted several weeks at the northern end of Wollaston Beach was caused by a brown algae more frequently found on the North Shore, according to tests conducted by state authorities.

The algae, identified as Pilayella littoralis, emits hydrogen sulfide gas when it dries out in the sun. It is not harmful, but produces a severe stench that affected nearby residents, particularly at the Moorings complex on East Squantum Street, for more than two weeks.

At the request of the City, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority conducted tests to confirm what was causing the smell. The City also performed bacteria testing and enlisted chemists from the University of Massachusetts to determine the cause of the smell.

Officials found no evidence to suggest that the City or State sewage systems were compromised.

The algae has been an issue for many years on North Shore beaches, particularly Nahant Beach, and officials are working to determine how it made its way to Quincy and if it poses a long-term issue. The smell has since abated substantially.

"Although red algae was observed in earlier reports it was not 'red tide' per se," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee. "That is, it was not a toxic marine event that required posting on the beaches."

Purple Heart Recipient Lawrence Norton Keynote Speaker At Memorial Day Ceremony

'Vietnam Veterans Play A Major Role In Our Survival'

By SCOTT JACKSON

At the city's Memorial Day ceremonies Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, keynote speaker Lawrence Norton reminded the crowd that Vietnam veterans have played, and continue to play, a major part in shaping the U.S. since the war's end despite their mistreatment by the American people.

"Such as our forefathers, the Vietnam veterans play a major role in the survival of our country — from police, firefighters, elected and appointed officials, and yes, Indian chiefs," said Norton, a Purple Heart recipient and president of the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces. "We sent the best and brightest off to an unpopular war — disrespected them. But thank your God that they did not disrespect you, their God, or their country."

During his address, Norton recalled the start of the Vietnam War in the early 1960s. President John F. Kennedy had been able to avoid nuclear war with the Soviet Union during the Cuban Missile Crisis, but another conflict was brewing half the world away in Southeast Asia.

"There was another war that was starting up in a split country called Vietnam," Norton said. "Yes, the North against South routine sounds like a place called Korea or another war a long time ago — I think they called that the Civil War."

Like it was during the Civil War more than a century prior, the U.S. was divided once again during the Vietnam War, Norton continued, and during that upheaval the nation turned their collective backs on those serving overseas.

"America had its second civil war during the Vietnam War — our country was divided between warmongers and peaceniks," he said. "Civil disobedience was the order of the day."

"In the midst of turmoil — riots, flag burning, and protesting — the people, elected officials, clergy, parents, sisters, brothers, etc., people who we counted on the most, turned their backs on the very young men and women that they sent off to war, 18 and 19 year old kids, only because their elected officials failed."

LAWRENCE NORTON, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, was the keynote speaker at Quincy's Memorial Day ceremonies held Monday at the World War II Podium at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Norton focused on the treatment of Vietnam veterans when they returned home. "We sent the best and brightest off to an unpopular war — disrespected them. But thank your God they did not disrespect you, their God, their country," he said.

Norton remembered hearing President Lyndon B. Johnson announce he would not seek reelection in 1968, and felt disappointed when Johnson didn't make one mention of the thousands of Americans killed in Vietnam at that point.

"The president declared he would not seek reelection. He had a heavy heart; a man who lives in my house — a staff of hundreds, planes, cars, security — nothing but the best for the pres.," Norton said. "Not one word about the 25,000 estimated young sailors, soldiers, airmen, and marines who died in the Republic of Vietnam — at that time not a word, is that audacity or is it ludicrous?"

Even when they returned home, Norton said the mistreatment of veterans did not cease.

"Vietnam veterans received no homecomings such as a hello, good job, or nice going," Norton said. "Instead the people rained insults and unmentionable cruel words to a son or daughter who gave it their all."

Even those charged with helping veterans, hospitals run by Veterans Affairs Department, mistreated homecoming veterans, Norton added.

"Those of us who needed care at the VA were told to get in back of the line with or without their legs or arms," he said. "Post traumatic stress ruled the VA. Give them more drugs was the prescription of the day — even those who didn't need them."

Norton began his speech by saying the veterans being honored were friends of Americans and people in numerous countries around the world, referencing the Bible.

"Scripture tells us that there is no greater love than a man laying down his life for his friends," Norton said. "The men and women that we honor and remember today have proven that they are not just friends to us as Americans, but they are friends to men and women in countries around the world."

More than 150 people attended the ceremony, held after Monday morning's Memorial Day parade. Mayor Tom Koch thanked the crowd for attending; he called their presence the greatest gift they could give to family members of the deceased.

"Across this country today in every city and town and village and hamlet, we gather to remember those who have gone before us — those that have paid the ultimate sacrifice," Koch said. "The gift of your presence here is the greatest gift you can give to those families."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, chairwoman of the council's Veterans Services Committee, asked those in the crowd to pray veterans killed in combat.

"Memorial Day evokes such a wide range of emotions for our veterans, their families, their friends and communities they fought and died to protect and defend in the name of freedom and liberty," Hughes said. "Today I ask you to pray and for God to bless those who died in service to our country."

School Budget Calls For Nearly 25 New Staff

By EMILY TAFT

The $3.65 million increase in the FY2014 budget for the Quincy Public Schools is allowing for a total of 24.8 positions being added system wide including the addition of 10.5 teacher positions and funding to staff middle and elementary school libraries.

The budget, which is a total of $93.66 million, is a $3.65 million increase from last year's budget. Funding for next year's budget comes from the Mayor's appropriation of $91.15 million, an increase of $3.6 million from last year, and projected Circuit Breaker funding of $2.5 million, a $50,000 increase from last year.

"We have a $1.69 million for above-level service funding and we have worked with the school committee to restore programs, quality class size as well as look at academic support," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "With this budget we are able to restore the middle school extracurricular funding, provide funding for the new common core text and learning material, and look at one of the real priorities which is school libraries."

Funding for this year's budget will allow for contractual obligations for the 2013-2014 school year including percentage raises and step and level increases to be met, provides $1,692,962 in additional funding to address class size, academic programs, academic support, non-academic support, academic expenses and non-academic expenses. It also allows for additional funding to staff middle and elementary school libraries, funding for middle school extra curricular activities, and increases funding for text and learning materials to address the new Common Core Standards.

"On the May 13th the school committee reviewed the superintendent's leadership team's suggestions for allocating the budget, which was given to us and presented at the last regular meeting of the school committee," said Barbara Isola, School Committee vice chairwomen and chairperson of the Budget and Finance Subcommittee. Senate Passes FY 2014 Budget

State Sen John F. Keenan reports the Massachusetts Senate recently passed a $33.9 billion budget for fiscal year 2014.

Debate concluded after the Senate passed 195 amendments, most of which were targeted to local aid, public safety, education and human service initiatives. The Senate's spending plan closes a $1.2 billion budget gap while investing in some of the most essential elements of state government.

Keenan's priorities in this year's budget debate focused on vital local aid funding. The Senate budget calls for an increase of approximately $1.234 million in general and educational local aid for Quincy.

The final Senate budget also includes $50,000 for the Quincy Fire Department Hazardous Material Response Team, allocates additional funding for local libraries, targets new funding for Quincy's Elder Affairs and local council on aging programs, and directs additional funding to Quincy's Shannon Grant Program, which combats gang violence through prevention and intervention. Senator Keenan was also the primary sponsor of a successful amendment that increases funding for the Head Start Program, which serves children from birth to age five and their families in areas such as education, health, nutrition, family support and parent involvement.

George Nicholson's Message At Sons Of American Legion Memorial Day Observance

'We Are Here Because Of Those Who Are Not'

George Nicholson, Commander of the Quincy Veterans Council and a Past Commander of the Morrisette American Legion Post, was the guest speaker at Sunday's Cyril P. Morrisette Post, Squadron 294, Sons of the American Legion's Memorial Day observance at Flags for Veterans Island in Quincy.

The following is the text of his Memorial Day message.

When you look across this island, completely, and beautifully awash in the red, white and blue of so many of our nation's flags, there are two thoughts that come immediately to mind. The first is what a moving, awe-inspiring and inspirational site it is and what a Quincy landmark it has become. The second is the realization that every flag here represents a life and the life story of a very special American citizen.

I would like to take a moment and just touch on the life of one of the citizens whose life is represented by a flag here.

He was a member of what Tom Brokaw described as America's Greatest Generation. At age 22, when World War II broke out, he was in apprenticeship as a machinist at the Charlestown Navy. Since his job was defense industry related, he was exempted from military conscription for shows to enlist anyway. He trained in the states for almost two years as a tank commander and primarily was a forward artillery observer. He was assigned to the 4th Armored Division and the 37th Antitank Battalion under the command of the legendary Creighton Abrams (the man for whom today's most modern and deadly American battle tank is named.)

His first actual experience with warfare came on June 6, 1944 - D-Day at Omaha Beach. When the ramp was lowered on his landing craft there was an explosion and he was blown to the back of the boat. With a headache and a shredded uniform, but otherwise incredibly unscathed, he eventually got to the beach. One week later during fighting in the infamous hedgerow country, he would earn the Silver Star for saving the lives of countless GIs by penetrating the heavily defended German lines. Locating heavy mortar battery was wreaking havoc on the Americans and calling in the artillery coordinates that would destroy it.

Of the three-man observation team that made that effort, only he survived it. He would remain in combat, almost constantly, for the rest of the war. Of the dozens of foreign observers who trained with him in the states and deployed with him he would be the only one to survive the war. He would go on during the war, to be shot out of a tank three times; wounded four times; captured by and escaped from the Germans twice and would see the discovery and liberation of two concentration camps. He would also earn a unique place in history of World War II, during the Battle of the Bulge, when Gen. Patton made his famous run with the 4th Armored Division to relieve the American troops who were surrounded by the Germans at Bastogne.

He was tasked with trying to find a way to the weakest part of the German perimeter in order to get in and let the 101st know that the 4th Armored had arrived. He found what was literally no more than a cart path that did not appear on any of the roadmaps of the Bastogne area. He would go on to earn the Bronze Star and many other decorations, by the end of the war.

During the immediate postwar occupation, he was assigned the task of hunting down German SS officers and he did that with unbridled gusto until he rotated back to the states. After the war he resumed his career with the Charlestown Navy Yard, become one of its top master machinists and frequently being assigned to the most challenging task and repairs of the United States Naval fleet would present. He would become commander of this local VFW Post. He married and raised three children and at times worked two jobs to support them. He would become active as a volunteer leader with the Boy Scouts. He would become an avid golfer and membership president of his favorite golf course.

He would always be known as a client sociable and respectful man. He provided for the good life and served as a good role model. He smiled a lot and had a good sense of humor. The fact is very few people in his life knew that he was a veteran. Even fewer had any inkling as to what he had seen, done and experienced in World War II.

Like so many, he seldom spoke about it. He focused on the needs of his family and the requirements of his job and he was excellent at both the world around him. You knew him only as a good man.

What it could not know was that his family listened to him scream in his sleep with his combat nightmares every night of his remaining life.

There are so many like him represented among these flags.

In 1861, General John A. Logan called on all Americans, across the land, to do we continue here today and will do again tomorrow. Since that time, the cause of freedom has taken many lives and changed so many more.

Today, we honor those who cannot walk among us. We honor their memory. We relish and remember their spirit. We, who are veterans, honor our brothers in arms, who died beside us or who served along side us and survived. And we always will. That is the legacy we share and carry.

You may be here honoring those who died alongside us. You may be here honoring a veteran who lived among us after his military service. That is a legacy that you share as well. But I think that we may have forgotten something - or possibly never have given it any real thought - and that is: our real and eternal obligation to them. Our debt to them, for all the freedoms we enjoy, we know we will never forget. Our obligation to them is something that we must live.

It is something that I had not thought about until I was reminded of it in the words spoken by the Hon. G. Patrick Murphy, Chief Justice, U. S. District Court of Southern Illinois when he spoke as our guest speaker on Vietnam Veterans Day down at Marina Bay. The obligation that we all owe to all of those veterans who have passed, is to live our lives to the fullest and to the best extent possible.

If you saw the movie called "Saving Pvt. Ryan," you see what you realize, at the end of the movie, an aged Pvt. Ryan, in the twilight of his years, looking at the graves of the soldiers who gave their lives to save him and remembering what they did for him and he tearfully asked his family "have I been a good man? Have I led a good life?"

His family seemed somewhat confused by his question, although they could certainly understand the reason for his tears. What he meant by his questions, what he was asking was "did I validate the value of the sacrifices of the lives of these brave and good men by living my life as an American to its fullest potential . . . whatever that may have been?"

Did I contribute to the better quality of life of those around me? Was I a good example of a role model for my family and my community as I could be? Was I productive? Did I contribute to the better quality of life of those around me? Did I help make my community a better place . . . and my Country a stronger Nation? When I stand in judgment before these men, would they be proud of me?

There is a particular picture that hangs on one wall at our Post. It depicts a man dressed in business attire, standing with his head bowed and hand placed upon one particular panel of the Vietnam Memorial wall in Washington, D.C. Reflecting back at him from the glossy confines of that wall are they ghostly images of several men still dressed in their Vietnam fatigues and combat gear. It is a very moving and poignant depiction in and of itself. But I know the artist, George Skypeck and that painting is not just a depiction. That painting is a reflection of his own personal experience.

He was a captain in the United States Army, who served two combat tours in Vietnam and those ghostly reflections. Looking back at him in that picture as some of the men who died while serving alongside him. He told me that these were some of the finest men he had ever known, and that they remain an inspiration to him in all the commemorative artwork he has done for the military and for veterans. In spite of his amazing talents and his prolific contributions to this nation - and we've all seen his work - he continues to ask himself every day: 'Am I worthy of their sacrifice?'

This is a fair, simple, and truthful question, that each of us needs to ask ourselves every day. Each of us knows that it doesn't seem fair that we are here and they are not. It has often been said and indeed is a belief held by many that each of us is here on this Earth for a reason. For a purpose. Few among us ever get to actually realize that purpose or recognize that calling in life and devote ourselves to it.

Success in life can be measured at many levels. And in reality, most of those levels are far more personal than public. Each of us shares in the knowledge that someday we will stand before these men and women and face that final assessment. . . Did I live my life well enough to ensure that when it is held up to their scrutiny and judgment that they will feel that they have made a worthy sacrifice. For any of us to go forth and live life here in the United States of American and not give thanks to these veterans is truly a selfish act.

I think that it can and should be said that the American way of life is one in which each of us remembers that we are here because of those who are not. It is one in which each of us remembers that selfishness is the only attribute that can be an equitable answer to their sacrifices. It is one in which we remember that these men and women died trying to make this world a better place. And it is one in which we resolve that we will do the best with our lives, to the best of our abilities, for them and for our nation, because that, in their final judgment, is all that they will ever ask for us, and that they, as no one else can, have earned the right to expect that obligation from us.

Enjoy the rest of the weekend for yourselves - and for them.

Thank you and God Bless America and all who have served her.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1951 real photo postcard view of the 26,000-ton SS Constitution passing through the Fore River Bridge for her first sea trial run in Massachusetts Bay. Named after the historic Old Ironsides, she was a sister ship of the SS Independence that was completed at the Fore River Shipyard the same year. At 682-feet long she was built to carry exactly 1,000 passengers, but if necessary she could be converted into a troopship and carry 5,000 soldiers. She was powered by two powerful steam turbine engines also built at the Quincy Point yard which gave her a very fast cruising speed of 23 knots. The ship's first 17 years were mostly spent crisscrossing the Atlantic Ocean on the then popular Mediterranean route. Often appearing in movies and on television perhaps her most famous voyage was taking actress Grace Kelly across the Atlantic to marry the Prince of Monaco. The advent of jet airplanes pretty much ended the transatlantic cruise business and the ship later was reconfigured into all first class cabins and used many years for weeklong cruises around the Hawaiian Island. After 46 years of sailing the world the Constitution was sold for scrap in 1997. She unexpectedly sank after taking on water while being towed to the Far East. So instead of being converted into tuna fish cans, or whatever, she is now at rest at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean about 700 miles north of Honolulu, Hawaii. JDRF Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes A Success

On Saturday, May 11, the Quincy public elementary schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), along with families, friends, teachers and coworkers of Quincy Public elementary schools, participated in the second annual "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes."

Under partly sunny skies, several hundred walkers turned out this year, a marked increase from last year, to walk for a cure. This capped off six weeks of collecting pledges and donations by the students which included some innovative fundraising such as lemonade stands, videos and student presentations to their schools, as well as Type 1 Diabetic (T1D) children and their families sharing their personal experiences.

While pledges and donations continue to be collected and counted, thus far this event has raised more than $25,000. It also gave the children in our community an opportunity to learn about healthy living and healthy eating and living lifestyles.

This year the walk was fortunate enough to partner with and wanted to acknowledge our wonderful sponsors and supporters, including Hon. Mayor

Tom Koch, Supt. Rick DiCristofaro, Sen. Bruce Ayers, Sheriff Michael Bellotti, City Councillors Doug Gutro and Kirsten Hughes, The City of Quincy Food Services department, CeQur Corporation, Jim DiPietro, Sparkles The Clown, DJ Mike, and facepainters, all of whom generously donated their time and talents.

The support of the principals at each participating school, as well as the school nurses who care for many of these children on a daily basis are also honored. Those students, family and friends from Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Parker, Lincoln Hancock, Montclair, Wollaston and Merrymount were entertained afterwards by a barbecue courtesy of Sherriff Belotti's staff, snacks and drinks from Stop and Shop, Shaw's, Roxies, and Roche Brothers Supermarket.

The JDRF is the largest organization that funds type 1 diabetes (T1D) research in the world. Their goal is to lessen or remove the impact of T1D from people's lives until we achieve a world without T1D. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and research-related education.

There was a marked increase in the turnout and participation for this year's walk, with this year only being only the second year -- and our goal is for that to continue to grow. There promises to be more fun and excitement for our third annual in May 2014!

For more information, or how to get involved in the planning for next year's event, please contact Stephen/Jennifer Golden at 617-786-8738.

Neighbors Thank Lincoln-Hancock School

As neighbors of the Lincoln Hancock Community School on Granite Street in Quincy, we would like to take this opportunity to thank the teachers and students of said school for their hard work in beautifying the school grounds.

Last fall the Wollaston Garden Club had initiated The Red Emperor, Journey to North-tulip bulb planting opportunity to Quincy Public Schools. Teachers who wanted to participate in this hands-on educational opportunity receive these bulbs in September and October. Lincoln Hancock Community School was among the schools that participated.

As a result, this spring the brilliant red tulips adorned the school gardens. This was not only for the students to learn how small bulbs planted in the fall, store its energy, and for students to study the parts of flower and its reproductive system when in bloom in April. Most perfect setting for outdoor field laboratory. At the same time, the students and their teachers helped beautify our neighborhood. We thank you for that and appreciate your hard work.

Lincoln Hancock School Community School is surrounded with arboretum like parkland with extensive plantings of trees and shrubs. The Wollaston Garden Club, with the help of Parks Department has started to classify and label the trees for study and identification purposes. Students have planted additional trees annually by the teachers and students as part of their Arbor Day Celebration.

Thank you Lincoln Hancock Community School from your neighbors.

Officials Protest Airplane Noise

By SCOTT JACKSON

Officials from across Quincy decried new flight patterns for planes taking off and landing at Logan Airport that routed the flights over the city.

Mayor-Sen. Arthur Tobin and Reps. Michael Morrissey and James Sheets fielded a number of complaints -- primarily from the Squantum and Atlantic neighborhoods, though some complaints came in from Willard Street in West Quincy.

In response to the complaints Tobin sent a heated letter to Massport Director David Davis, urging the agency to adjust flight patterns.

"It is a tragedy that the Port Authority would sneak in this new flight pattern," Tobin said in the letter. "They should be considerate of the noise all over the South Shore... With the Atlantic Ocean all to the east of Logan Airport, it just seems to me that a new flight pattern could be created so the densely populated areas, which I represent, would not be adversely affected."

Morrissey said he had been in contact with Massport officials who told him the flight patterns had changed to a 195 degree heading three or four weeks prior, sending the planes straight over the Neponset River.

"The noise has been getting worse and worse. I think over the Memorial Day weekend a lot of people were home and more conscious of the noise," Morrissey said.

Ron Kaufman, a spokesman of Sheets, said Massport met with Morrissey and Sheets to discuss the flight patterns, but failed to work with the city as promised.

CITY LAUDED AS RIGHT PLACE FOR BUSINESS

At a special development conference aimed at promoting growth in Quincy, business leaders and city officials touted the city's potential for new development.

"It's got permanence. It's got leadership. It's attractive from a cost viewpoint. It has a full range of services and amenities," said Robert Grant, vice president of the National Fire Protection Agency, which had recently taken an option on 40 acres of land in West Quincy.

Kevin Phelan, a vice president of Boston realty firm Meredith and Grew who formerly worked on the State Street South project, said Quincy was turning into a first-class office market.

"It's a town whose time has come and it's ready for additional company relocations and even speculative builders," Phelan said.

The Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide development director, said Quincy was prepared to lease two parking lots in the downtown, including the Hancock Parking Area, for $1 a year to developers willing to construct 200,000 square feet of new buildings at either site.

ABIGAIL ADAMS ON NEW SILVER COIN?

As the U.S. Treasury Department debated over whom to place on a newly designed silver dollar coin, Mayor-Sen. Arthur Tobin filed a resolution on Beacon Hill calling on Congress and President Jimmy Carter to consider Abigail Adams -- the wife of John Adams and mother of John Quincy Adams.

The Treasury was also considering women's suffrage leader Susan B. Anthony and "Miss Liberty," a fictional character.

Quincy Historical Society President William A. O'Connell also supported the Adams coin in a letter to Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

"She would be well accepted, both as a woman who played a unique role in our early history and as a prototype of the high caliber, self-esteeming whom we would seek to honor," O'Connell wrote.

Chicken With Red Wine

Although my favorite part of the chicken is the dark meat from the thighs and drumsticks, using the whole chicken cut up is still much more flavorful.

Today's recipe is for chicken cooked in red wine and is done all in one pan and delicious.

CHICKEN WITH RED WINE

- 1 broiler (cut up)
- 1 medium onion (chopped)
- 2 cloves of garlic (minced)
- 1 tablespoon Rosemary
- 1 cup Red Wine (I used Merlot)

- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Salt and pepper

Season the cut up broiler with the salt, pepper and Rosemary.

Heat the oil and sauté the onion and garlic. Add the chicken and sauté until golden brown on each side. Add the wine turning until well done, and most of the juice is absorbed. (about 35 minutes). It takes on a nice dark look.

Mushrooms can also be added if preferred.

Can be served with rice or potatoes.

Anita's Spinach-Rice Pie

I get recipes from family and sometimes friends, and find it so interesting when there is one a little different than I haven't tried.

And so it was recently when my niece Anita e-mailed me from Arizona - with a delicious way to cook spinach. She asked if I wanted to include it in my column, which is the recipe for today.

SPINACH RICE PIE

- 1 1/2 cups milk (I used 1%)
- 1-9 ounce package frozen spinach
- 1 cup uncooked instant rice (brown or white)

- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 ounces shredded swiss cheese
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 2 eggs beaten

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees

Defrost the spinach, but you don't have to cook it. Drain it well.

Heat the milk but do not boil. Add the rice and spinach. Then add the eggs, and all of the other ingredients and mix well.

Place into a slightly greased 9-inch baking dish, and bake for 25-30 minutes.

No Tax From Green

The mayor of Quincy wants to rip down the old Quincy High School to make more green space.

Quincy is blessed with an abundance of green space: Blue Hills, Wollaston Beach, Faxon Park, Merrymount Park, three golf courses, Broad Meadows, new Squantum marsh and on and on. Fifty percent of Quincy is green.

The sad thing about green is it pays no taxes.

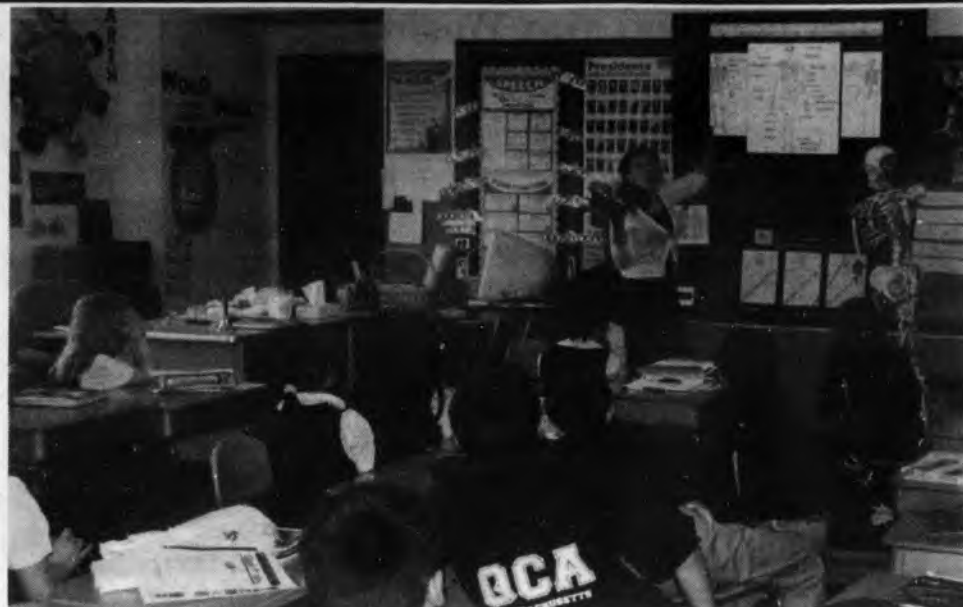

Mayor Koch has taken more tax property off the books than all the mayors that ever existed in the history of Quincy. In the past 30 years there has been billions of dollars in new construction in Quincy, yet our taxes never went down.

The new Quincy Center will put our taxes through the roof.

The proof is in the pudding. The old Quincy High School would make a great Adams Presidential Library.

Quincy High Student James DeAmicis Helps Support The troops In Afghanistan

James DeAmicis, a sophomore at Quincy High School, recently organized a drive at the school for the troops in Afghanistan this year.

Examples of some of the items he collected were baby wipes, toothpaste, office supplies, t-shirts, movies and bug repellent.

"The reason I did this was because I wanted the troops over-seas to know that their home country appreciates their dedication and bravery and that we want them to remember that by sending them this supplies.

It was a lot of hard work at the beginning but I manage to get it done and deliver all the supplies with a little help and support from my school," DeAmicis said.

The supplies were donated to an organization called Abington Cares for Troops which was started by Michele Christian Oldham and Christie Coombs of Abington this year.

"I only wish to say thank-you to the current troops in Afghanistan and every veteran for serving our country and I hope that they will be returning soon," DeAmicis said.

NQHS Quiz Show Team Wins Governor's Cup

Six Students Earn Title As Top Team In MA & NH

By EMILY TAFT

The six students comprising the North Quincy High School quiz show team have added another victory to their belt out-smarting New Hampshire champions Plymouth Regional High School in the first ever Governor's Cup this past Sunday.

"It was just an incredible experience the way the team bonded and the way the community supported the team was something like I have never seen before," said Mera Kriz, one of the team's faculty coaches. "They became a strong unit and worked really hard. We took it one match at a time and our main goal was just to do well. Every single win was just so exciting because we had no expectations."

The six students — Yi Fung, Celeste Dang, Cindy Nelson, Tim Bill, Nathan Donohue, and Kasey Shen — won the title of Massachusetts State Champions when they faced off against Lexington High School on May 19th.

"NQHS's school spirit and energy were already quite high, but the Quiz Show team's run has brought them even higher," said NQHS Principal Robert Shaw. "Their remarkable achievement reflects their preparation and dedication. These students have become local celebrities and they deserve every bit of attention they are getting. We have our work cut out for us fielding an equally talented team next year."

The six students traveled to WGBH headquarters in Boston on Jan. 26th to compete against 15 other high schools in the fourth season of High School Quiz Show. The last show aired on May 19th where the team faced off against Lexington High School. As the winners, NQHS then faced off against Plymouth Regional High School who won the New Hampshire championship game.

"It was extremely exciting not only to see the team competing but to see the support they had from students, faculty, and administrators from QPS at the taping of the competition," said Shaw. "It was very exciting thing to be a part of."

Back in November, the team competed against 89 other Massachusetts public schools to make it onto the top 16 schools that would compete on the show. In January, the 16 teams started single elimination rounds pairing off against each other until only two schools remained at the end of four rounds: North Quincy High School and Lexington High School.

In each round of the competition the teams would collect points by answering random topic questions, multiple choice questions, and category questions depending on each round.

Round one had teams faced other teams answering short answer and multiple-choice random topic questions worth 10 points. Round two, the head-to-head round, individual players of teams face other players answering random topic, short answer only questions for 10 points. Round three, the category round, teams again faced other teams and players picked from a board of six themed categories each have five short answer or multiple-choice questions. The points in round three range from 10-30 depending on the level of difficulty. Round four, the lightning round, placed the final two teams against one another to answer random category questions in short answer form for 20 points.

"The students were just all so excited to win and they are such bright kids that it's not like we didn't have a chance against the other schools but we didn't have any expectations going into this," said Kriz. "We never expected any of this and the students continue to talk about how much of a positive and fun experience this has been. We can only say good things about our time as a part of the show."

As the winning team NQHS received a $250 award towards the team/school and the title of High School Quiz Show Champs along with a trophy and commemorative plaque for each student and their two coaches, Kriz and Danielle Fernandez.

"It was really a special thing to watch the kids really pull together as a team," said Fernandez. "The best part was watching them come together and become confident as a team. Two of the students are juniors and will be joining us again on next years team and we will be holding tryout at the end of the school year to begin to get ready for next years competition."

First Phase of Downtown Construction About To Become Visible

With interior demolition and asbestos removal nearing completion on the first block of the Quincy Center redevelopment plan, construction and demolition will be moving to the exterior within the next few weeks.

The first phase includes the construction the Merchants Row housing and retail complex on the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Crews will soon be working on utilities and exterior demolition within the project's scope.

In anticipation, the City, Street-Works Development and Suffolk Construction are launching a multi-pronged public information process that will keep nearby business owners and residents citywide informed of all construction-related issues.

There will be parking and traffic changes in the area immediately surrounding the construction site, and construction managers will be meeting regularly with neighbors of the site to address any concerns. Residents should visit the City's website, www.quincyma.gov and Street-Works' Quincy Center project site www.quincytyme.com for updates.

'Remember The Men And Women In The Armed Forces'

U.S. Marine Jeffrey Clifford Speaks At NQHS Assembly

By EMILY TAFT

North Quincy High School held its annual Memorial Day assembly on May 24th where guest speaker U.S. Marine Jeffrey Clifford reminded students to remember those serving and giving their lives for others.

"Memorial Day Weekend is a weekend that ushers in the summer, it's a weekend to celebrate, to have cookouts, to be with family members, but it's also a weekend to remember," said Clifford. "I want you to remember the men and women that represent you in the Armed Forces. I want you to remember what they stand for, especially the men and women who traded all of their tomorrows for us, and a little baby girl in a warzone. Remember."

Born and raised in Quincy, Clifford joined the Marine Infantry after high school and served in Operation Desert Storm. He then went to school and graduated from UMass and then Catholic University Law School. He became an assistant district attorney for Norfolk County and then an ADA for Suffolk County. After leaving Suffolk County he went to work for State of Massachusetts of Industrial Accidents as an attorney, while working there he decided to re-enlist in Marine Corp and served in First Battalion 25th Marine where he was deployed to Fallujah, Iraq. Clifford served in a mobile assault platoon in Iraq as the section leader and vehicle commander for the lead vehicle in the mobile assault platoon.

Clifford spoke to the students of NQHS that filled the Peter Chrisom Auditorium about his time in Iraq and the mission to save a little girl who needed to be sent to the United States for emergency surgery. While questioning a man in Fallujah, Iraq Clifford and his patrol were shown a small baby girl who was suffering from infection.

"The child was extremely sick, she looked pale, she was very lacking in energy, but she was crying relatively loud. Her mother lifted up her clothing and showed us her stomach, and her bladder was completely exposed on her stomach, and her small intestine was sticking about four inches out of her body and they were beat red, she had a significant infection going and a fever," said Clifford. "When we arrived back at camp we decided we wanted to take care of the baby and keep her clean until she was able to be sent back to the states so we came up with the option of doing extra missions, on top of our assigned combat missions, to go out and take care of the baby, which we ended up doing around 40 extra missions to take care of her.

"During one of those missions on Sept. 4, 2006 we were patrolling back from the area that we had been taking care of the baby. As we are making our way back we split up so we could cover more area. We heard a loud explosion, and as soon as we heard the explosion we knew it was bad. We did a J-hook back, I set up security around one of the vehicles in second section, we immediately dismounted and what I saw was a terrible sight, one of the vehicles blown up, flames coming out of the vehicle and thick black smoke coming out of the vehicle. We lost three men that day. September 4th 2006. You might not know what the worst day of your life was, but I certainly know what the worst day of mine was."

After the attack Clifford said the men still wanted to carry on with the mission of getting the baby help and they continued to do so until arrangements were made for her to fly back to the states with her grandparents. The girl received the surgery and help she needed and is now a healthy baby girl.

Clifford was awarded the Navy and Marine Corp Achievement Medal with combat distinguishing device, which is an additional honor that not all recipients of the Navy and Marine Corp achieve, and is awarded when the recipient has demonstrated valor in combat. He was awarded the medal for capturing three heavily armed insurgents in Fallujah. The insurgents had three AK47's, a loaded rocket propelled grenade launcher, and a hand grenade. They were about to attack the key bridge that expands the Euphrates River. He not only captured them but he interrogated them and testified against them via video teleconference in a Baghdad courtroom.

During the small assembly the schools choir sang and the ROTC presented the colors along with a small ceremony, which honored all members of the armed service.

We Are Free Because Of Those We Remember

Once again I marched in this year's Quincy Memorial Day Parade through the streets of Quincy. Folks were lining the sidewalks cheering and waving flags.

I watched as a young Vietnamese family stood together waving flags and smiling as the contingent of veterans passed them by.

I watched as elderly veterans, no longer able to march, stand at attention as Old Gory passed them.

Decades ago the streets would have been packed as mostly World War I and II veterans filled the ranks of marching veterans. Today that assignment has fallen to my generation, those that served and fought in Vietnam. However, still there are a few survivors of World War II and Korea in the line of march. Slowly those who served in Iraq and Afghanistan are beginning to show up, too.

I heard the Memorial Day Parade up in Beverly was cancelled due to too few veterans able to march and even fewer folks to cheer them on from the sidelines. We can not cancel out human national debt to those that fought and those that sacrificed all so that we can live in liberty. We take too easily our rights for granted.

We are free Americans because of those we remember on Memorial Day, those whose lives ended so that ours could continue in freedom.

I will always march in the Memorial Day Parade to remember those who can't because of their sacrifices. They died for us to live as free Americans.

The parade ends at Mount Wollaston Cemetery where the real heroes lay after they did their duty for the country and for the generations to follow. It is up to us to pick up and march on from this holy ground continuing to do what is right for our democracy that countless generations before us perished in its defense.

God Bless the U.S.A.

LIVING IN THE MOMENT

While a diamond solitaire ring worn on a woman's fourth finger of her left hand hardly needs explanation, a diamond ring worn on the corresponding finger of the right hand sometimes raises questions. All you need to know about "right-hand rings" can be found in the hearts and minds of the single women who wear them as a sign of their independence and fulfillment. As the saying goes, "Your left hand lives for love. Your right hand lives for the moment." Right-hand rings, which are typically encrusted with several small diamonds, declare that the wearer is both available and happy. In order to be loved, you must first love yourself. A right-hand ring is a symbol of self-confidence.

As a reward for your determination, a right-hand diamond ring is a ring that you buy for yourself. It signifies your freedom and your good fortune in life. We are located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find passionate, mesmerizing and stylish diamonds. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and allow us to assist you in crafting the one of a kind right hand ring. Our experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident purchase.

mander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, told everyone present they have an obligation to live a life worthy of the sacrifice made by veterans interred in Mount Wollaston and countless other cemeteries around the world.

"Look at every single flag that's out here today. That represents a man or a woman who either died in service or came back and lived among us," Nicholson said. "All who have left us live on in our memories, they always will. That's not the end of the line. We all have an obligation to everyone who lies in the hallowed ground beneath us and that is for every single one of us — man, woman, and child — to live our lives to their best and fullest potential possible."

"It's what they lived for, it's what they died for, it's what they hoped for themselves, and it's what they hoped from all of us. When our final judgment day comes we'll stand before these men and women. When they get to pass judgment on us the question they'll ask is 'was my sacrifice and my death worthwhile and vindicated by the quality of life that you led after my passing?'"

"It's not a one day a year thing, it belongs to all of us for the rest of our lives."

Senate Passes FY 2014 Budget wealth and to the municipalities which we represent, while investing in areas that will strengthen and grow our economy," Keenan said. "We strive to do this in a balanced manner, i.e. we seek to do it as efficiently as possible, without overburdening the taxpayer. I believe this Senate budget achieves that balance."

As the Senate Chair of the Joint Committee on Public Health, Keenan also advocated for funding critical to public health. The Senate adopted three amendments filed by Keenan that would provide for additional inspections by the Department of Public Health in areas ranging from health care facilities, to food safety, to recreational camps and swimming pools. This additional funding would also shore up the Board of Registration in Pharmacy's ability to monitor and inspect compounding pharmacies across the state, a move that Keenan says is critical in the wake of the deadly meningitis outbreak caused by errors at the New England Compounding Center in Framingham.

Keenan also joined with Sen. James Welch to allocate nearly $40 million in additional funding to hospitals, such as Quincy Medical Center, that serve a very high proportion of patients on public insurance or free care. Such facilities would receive higher reimbursements for inpatient care, outpatient care, and for behavioral health services to children and adolescents.

Several higher profile amendments were filed during the budget process, such as placing photographs on EBT cards. The amendments were defeated, but the Senate is drafting comprehensive legislation on such matters, which it expects to act on later in the legislative session.

The Senate and House budget plans will now go to a conference committee, which will reconcile the differences and send a final budget proposal to the Governor.

For more information, contact Keenan's office at 617-722-1494 or by email at John.Keenan@masenate.gov.

School Budget Adds Staff

was looked at and the summary of what the leadership team suggested to spend the $1.69 million broke down to academic classroom teachers, 27.68 percent, academic programs, 25.6 percent, academic support at 22.62 percent, non-academic support at 5.4 percent, academic expenses at 23.6 percent, and non-academic expenses -4.96 percent."

Overall there will be an additional 24.8 positions being added including 10.5 academic classroom teachers to be added to accommodate enrollment shifts and increases. Nine of those 10.5 positions will be placed at the elementary level, while one will go to grade five at Point Webster Middle School and the half positions will be at Quincy High School. Including meeting the contractual obligations, $1.67 million in additional funding is needed for the academic classroom teacher segment of the budget.

There will also be an addition of 2.5 ELL (English Language Learners) teachers to meet the growing population and reinstate the ELL high school department chair position, which is shared between the two high schools. Along with the addition of ELL teachers for the academic programs section of the budget there will also be an increase in the literacy team by a half-time teacher at Montclair Elementary School, and the creation of 2.5 library teacher positions at the middle school level which will be half time at each of the five schools. The investment made into library services at the elementary and middle school levels totals $268,000 and will benefit more than 6,000 students.

"Within the budget we were able to work hard to open all the elementary and middle school libraries which will increase the level of reading which is a great thing," said DeCristofaro. "For the elementary schools their libraries will be open during the day allowing students to access them and increase their own level of reading. In the middle schools, the school committee was in favor of our recommendation to add 2.5 teachers who will be half time at all middle school libraries. We wish we could look at adding full time teachers but in order to sustain growth right now it is not feasible but I am sure we will continue to look at that in the future."

To meet program demand there will also be an increase in Chapter 74 programs for North Quincy High School in carpentry (0.5 positions), plumbing (0.2 positions), and in fashion technology (0.2 positions). The total amount needed in the budget for the academic programs portion is a $781,315 increase, which includes step and level and contractual raises.

For academic support next year's budget is looking to increase the guidance staff by two positions with 0.5 in elementary, 0.5 in the middle school level, and 1.0 at the high school levels. The addition of 12 long-term substitute positions for the elementary library/technology support will also be funded in the academic support section. Funding will also be restored for middle school extracurricular activities.

A $163,169 increase in the non-academic support section of the budget will include the increase of one position in custodial staff at the new Central Middle School along with meeting contractual obligations and increasing the overtime line.

New textbooks and learning materials for the Common Core State Standards means that a $400,000 increase is needed in the academic expenses system reserve in able to purchase new materials. Contribution of funds from the rental revolving account will offset the additional textbook purchases.

Class sizes are anticipated to be at or below the School Committee guidelines in all grades with consideration given to technology and science labs at both high schools.

There will be no increases in sports user fees and minimal changes to lunch and breakfast fees at the elementary and middle school levels, while the high schools will see no change to breakfast or lunch costs. In the elementary schools students can expect a 10-cent increase at lunch to meet the minimum state requirement of $2.20. The middle schools will also see a 10-cent increase in their lunch costs going from the current cost of $2.35 to the state minimum of $2.45.

Firefighters Visit Wollaston Hill Montessori School

Preschool students at the Wollaston Hill Montessori School in Quincy were delighted when Lieutenant Steve Grazioso, Lieutenant Mike Kelly and their team of Firefighters from Wollaston Fire House arrived at their school recently for a visit.

Ladder-2 was the first to appear, followed shortly by Engine-4. With Firefighter Bill Knox at the controls, the ladder was raised and the young children watched in amazement as Firefighter, Chris Carthas, raced to the top. All applauded when he reached the summit.

Lt. Grazioso and Lt. Kelly then gave a mini lecture on Fire Safety followed by a question and answer time supported by Firefighters Dave Grindle and Mike Casey. Wearing a S.C.B.A. (Self-Contained Breathing Apparatus), Firefighter Casey proceeded to show the children how they would dress when entering a burning building. When he asked the children what they would do if he approached them in his full attire during a fire, one child shouted, "Run!"

"Yes, it does look a bit scary," said Firefighter Casey, but he reassured them that the best thing to do was run towards him, not away. By touching and exploring the apparatus, the students became more familiar with it, which put them at ease.

Then came the fun part: students were invited to line up and take their turn in the driver's seat of Ladder-2. They got to sound the horn and shout their commands through the loud speaker. Some were very keen to participate and others preferred to appreciate from afar.

LT. STEVE GRAZIOSO talks about fire safety with Eren Hasan, a student at the Wollaston Hill Montessori School.

One little boy insisted on "driving" both trucks and beamed from ear to ear as he took charge. But then, a call came through and the Wollaston Fire House team was called back to duty. All waved good-bye, sad to see them go, but elated by this memorable event.

"It was a wonderful experience for the children and the parents that were present", said Oonagh Connolly, director of the Wollaston Hill Montessori School.

thing. "We are very thankful to these guys, not only for them putting their lives on the line for our community every day, but also for taking the time to educate our little ones, who just adore them. Thank you Wollaston Fire House."

Planning Department Employees Receive Council Commendations

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee presented commendations to three Planning Department employees at a recent council meeting.

The first employee he recognized was Melissa Horr. A research assistant planner, she was honored for her work with the Opportunity Quincy initiative. She helped organize the new initiative, based on the bipartisan Opportunity Nation campaign, which aims to close the opportunity gap nationwide. Horr organized the first meeting of the Quincy initiative in December 2012.

"Over 75 people representing 40 agencies attended Melissa's workshop, which addressed a number of initiatives, chief among them sharing region-wide expert knowledge and resources on Opportunity Nation's three dimensions of opportunity — economy, education, and community health — very important areas," McNamee said. "The workshop was a great success. The participants elected to keep the ball rolling by creating an action planning council and unanimously selected Melissa to serve as coordinator of the council."

The council identified three key areas to focus on — access to healthy food and physical activities, youth academic and economic inclusion, and volunteerism and community involvement. In addition to her work with Opportunity Quincy, Horr also organized two service fairs at the high schools to help students find volunteer opportunities to complete their community service requirements.

"Through your work you have built and strengthened relationships among local and regional agencies working on similar initiatives by increasing communication and knowledge of data and resources through networking and outreach. Your efforts in providing a better quality of life for the youth of our community has served as a model for others to emulate," McNamee said. "We thank you so much and we're very, very proud of you."

The other two employees McNamee recognized were Steve Connelly and Liz Manning. The two were responsible for disbursing an $881,000 Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant (EECBG) over a three-year period starting in November 2009. The money from the grant went towards a variety of projects that benefited both Quincy and its residents.

"This federal block grant, funded through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, provided the city the opportunity to begin comprehensively addressing its energy efficiency and conservation challenges," McNamee said. "Utilizing grant funding, Quincy enacted policies and ordinances that encourage renewable energy and energy efficiency across all sectors."

"Grant activities range from transportation to consumer energy to energy efficiency retrofits. Among the many accomplishments of this grant was the Energy Smart Quincy campaign, which connected hundreds of residents to free energy audits and renewable energy programs; the designation of Quincy as a Massachusetts green community; and the installation of energy efficiency equipment, LED and solar lighting in public facilities and in neighborhoods around the city."

Quincy College Honors Veterans

Quincy College honored its veterans for Memorial Day.

College faculty, staff and students were encouraged to submit the names of their loved ones who have served in the United States Armed Forces. Throughout the month of May, Quincy College is posting banners throughout its campus buildings in honor of the living, deceased, and fallen soldiers who have dedicated their lives in service to our country.

QUINCY COLLEGE COMMUNITY is again honoring and remembering military veterans this year. The college community was asked to submit the name(s) of any veteran they would like to remember this Memorial Day. For the third consecutive year, a poster was created for every veteran named — posters line the halls of every Quincy College building throughout the month of May.

South Shore Walk Raises $18,000 For ISS, One Fund

Over 300 local residents participated in Interfaith Social Services' recent South Shore Walk raising $18,000 for Interfaith's crucial community based programs and The One Fund - Boston, the charity established after the Boston Marathon tragedy to help families affected by the bombings.

Participants came from all over Massachusetts, including some who ran and volunteered at the marathon. As walkers gathered many people in the crowd could be overheard discussing the events of the previous week. "It was cathartic to be together with so many people and to feel some normalcy again," said Sue Whitehead of Quincy.

The spirit of celebration and community permeated every aspect of the event. The scenic 3-mile route around the Quincy neighborhood of Squantum culminated with a party at Quincy's Kennedy Center.

Walkers enjoyed lunch courtesy of Stars on Hingham Harbor, Tedeschi's

Food Shops and Atria Marina Place. For kids, young and old, there was a variety of activities such as raffles, a silent auction, face painting, a bouncy house, a photo booth, frozen treats donated by New England Ice Cream, an inflatable soccer game provided by the New England Revolution, and massages provided by Facilitated Healing Center.

Interfaith Social Services operates a variety of programs designed to help the community. Each year Interfaith's food pantry serves over 18,000 South Shore residents. Their homelessness prevention and emergency assistance program assists hundreds of families every year. Whether they have health insurance or not, Interfaith's New Directions Counseling Center starts the healing process for many local families and individuals who are dealing with traumatic and emotionally charged issues.

"Our clinicians are here to help," said Interfaith's counseling coordinator

AMONG THOSE PARTICIPATING in Interfaith Social Services' South Shore Walk to raise awareness and funds to fight poverty on the South Shore were Chris Laliberte and Chelsea Laura of Quincy with Lulu.

Claire Hagan. "Many people in our region, directly and indirectly, witnessed a traumatic event with what transpired at the Marathon. If someone is struggling to cope with their emotions we hope that they will reach out for help from a professional, before these feelings spiral out of control." To contact one of Interfaith's counselors call 617-773-6203.

Quincy Youths Govern State At Youth In Government Conference

Ryan Miller, David Coletti, Michael Lethin and Brendan McAdams of Quincy, all seniors at Boston College High School, for three days in March took over the State House and ran the government at the Youth in Government annual conference.

This year's conference was especially memorable as three statewide leadership positions were held by Boston College High School students. Miller, Coletti, and Evan Maras of Bridgewater were elected by their peers at last year's conference to serve this 2013 year as the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and Attorney General for the entire Commonwealth. Lethin was elected Senator and McAdams Representative. This is the first time in the program's history in which all three major leadership positions have been held by students from the same high school delegation.

Lethin has been a four year member of the Youth in Government program. He served this year as BC High's delegation president and, as a senator, debated in the very same Chamber as our actual legislators.

Miller's aim as Governor, after attending the Youth Governor's Conference last June in Washington D.C., was to rejuvenate the program-recruitment strategies and inspire more delegates to get more involved in both the state program and real world politics and campaigns.

Massachusetts Youth in Government is a YMCA led program that gives hundreds of teenagers across the Commonwealth the opportunity to serve in a legislative simulation of what our representatives do within the state government. Each Spring delegates from dozens of high schools gather in Boston for a weekend overnight conference. The day sessions are held in the actual chambers and committee rooms of the State House and everyone at the conference stays the weekend at the Historic Omni Parker hotel.

Under the program's motto, "Democracy must be learned by each generation," high school students learn first hand that every person can make a difference. The exciting memorable experience inspires young people to become active citizens in the community and leaders of not tomorrow, but today.

"Youth In Government," says Miller "is an incredible opportunity to see how state government works and forge lasting friendships with peers from across the Commonwealth. Participants have opportunities to develop skills, make friends and learn how they can make a difference."

Memories, Milestones, Progress For Girls' Lacrosse Teams

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a day of milestones and memories.

Quincy wrapped up the second best girls lacrosse season in the history of the school behind the offensive firepower of Kayla McArdle, Kerry Phelan and Gabby Zorkers with a 17-6 win over North Quincy in the season finale for both teams at Veterans Stadium last week.

"That's quite an accomplishment," said coach Tim Lewis whose team finished 6-10-2. "It's the second best season we've ever had. I was proud of the effort all season and I was impressed with how the confidence of the kids grew as the season went on. We had a good shot at the tourney, but a couple of bounces didn't go our way."

For North, it was a season of development under first-year coach Megan Therrien. The Red Raiders won one game, but the improvement from the start to the finish of the season was obvious. Against Quincy, the Red Raiders put five players in the scoring column, played a strong first half and received excellent goaltending from sophomore Marguerite Belcher who turned aside 10 shots in the first two quarters.

"North improved drastically from our first game. Give Coach Therrien all the credit," said Lewis.

"I liked our energy in the first half. The sad part is just when you start to see the improvement, the season is over," smiled Therrien.

Kayla McArdle scored six goals and Phelan added four for the Presidents who led 10-3 at the half. Quincy continued to play with purpose with the large lead and finished with a strong second half.

"Kerry and Kayla have been there all year for us. They've scored consistently," said Lewis. "I was pleased with the way we played in the second half. We had a good lead, but we played hard right to the end of the game."

Zorkers had one goal, her 50th of the season. She was named a Patriot League All Star. The junior is more than a goal-scorer for Quincy. She was the center of the offensive action once again against North, making good decisions and spotting teammates when they found an open patch of grass for scoring chances.

"Fifty goals in 18 games is an impressive milestone," said Lewis. "Gabby has an exceptional lacrosse IQ. She's sees things other players don't. She makes good decisions and we get good scoring chances. She's our quarterback, the center of our offense."

Senior Rachel Mullin had two goals while Sam McArdle, Marleina Forster, Nicole Lee, and Olivia Wallace added singletons in the balanced attack which had eight Quincy players in the scoring column. Quincy returns its top four scorers - Zorkers, Phelan, Kayla McArdle, and Courtney Ryan - next year, so the future is bright.

"I'm looking forward to next year," smiled Lewis.

The defense, which was the main reason for Quincy's strong surge in the second half of its season, was solid against North. Ryan, Eileen Skudris, Gabby Jerahian, Sam McArdle, and Emily Hatfield guarded well the scoring area and when shots did get through, junior goalie Maddy Kamb handled them with confidence.

Senior Jenny Scarnici did a fine job clearing the ball out of the defensive zone.

"Our defense is the one area where we've come the furthest this year. They played well today and they really stepped up in the second half of our season. Maddy had a great year in goal," said Lewis.

Marissa McGue led North with a pair of goals. Molly Brown, Caitlin Coneran, Ciara Forde, and Kristan Abban chipped in with single goals. All the goal scorers return for the Red Raiders as do Belcher and Molly Minton who had a fine game against Quincy with her aggressive defense.

"We are very young, and the girls gained valuable experience," said Therrien.

Therrien was especially happy with the transition play of her team. North was able to move the ball from defense to offense well and that accounted for three of its goals against Quincy.

"We improved as a whole, but especially in transition. We moved the ball from defense and got it to players in scoring position better as the season went on. We did that well against Quincy," said Therrien.

Senior Erika Histen had a strong game on defense and senior Leah Ryan helped energize the Red Raiders with her rushes up the field.

"We'll miss their leadership," said Therrien.

North loses six players from an excellent group of seniors. Scarnici, Mullin, Sam McArdle, Skudris, Lindsey Nazzaro, and Patricia Brennan all graduate this spring.

"It's a good class. We will miss them," said Lewis.

Lewis had special praise for Scarnici, an invaluable player and leader who was an important player for Quincy in several ways that are not reflected in the scoring column.

"She didn't get the credit she deserved sometimes," said Lewis. "She wasn't a player with big stats, but she was a leader and a solid player all year. She'll leave a hole with her absence that will take a long time to fill. She's always positive, always helping lead the team. She's a special young woman."

Quincy's Jalen Green And Jaquan Harris; North Quincy's Dan Gould And Pat Gould

4 Gifted High School Athletes Framingham State Bound

By BILL GRIFFIN

They lit up the fields and courts with their brilliant play and filled the city's sporting life with rich memories which will never fade away.

Quincy's Jalen Green and Jaquan Harris and North Quincy's Dan Gould and Pat Gould may well be the finest foursome of athletes the city has produced in a decade. The four also have something in common. They will go to the same college.

Green, Harris, and the Gould brothers will attend Framingham State University. Get out that GPS. Get yourself an FSU schedule. Prepare for a road trip or two. The show is not finished. There will be a second act.

Green was a superb tailback on the football team. He gained 1,689 yards on 233 carries and averaged over seven yards every time he rushed the ball. He scored 17 touchdowns and 129 points. Green kicked field goals, extra points, ran back kickoffs and ran back punts. He has explosive power for a small back and can accelerate through the tiniest of cracks in a fraction of an instant. His performance on Thanksgiving this season was the stuff of legends.

Harris is an Athlete. He is a two-sport Patriot League All Star in football and basketball. In football, he scored four receiving and FOUR OF THE city's best high school athletes - Quincy's Jaquan Harris (left) and Jalen Green (right) and North Quincy's Dan and Patrick Gould - will be taking their studies and skills to Framingham State University this fall. two rushing touchdowns. He ran back an interception and a kickoff for a touchdown. He had eight TDs and 62 points. He caught 18 passes for 358 yards. In basketball, he led his team in scoring with over 13 points per game and also averaged six rebounds, four assists and three steals.

In track he won the 200 meter and ran a leg on the winning 4x100 relay team in the Patriot League championships. He has qualified for the state championships in the 100, 200 and long jump. He will play football and basketball at Framingham State. The only reason he won't run track is because Framingham State does not have a track program.

Danny Gould shot basketballs with a pure, perfect stroke. He averaged 15.5 points per game and led North in scoring for three straight years. He finished with 907 career points, good for No. 8 on North's all-time list and knocked home 58 three-pointers at a 42 per cent shooting clip. Like all the good ones, he shot his best in the big games, pouring in 28 against Braintree and 23 against Newton in North's historic tournament run, the first time in 40 years the Red Raiders advanced to the sectional finals.

Pat Gould combined with Dan and Marquis McClelland to post 45 wins, the largest total ever by three players to wear a North uniform. He averaged over 10 points per game, made 83 per cent of his free throws, and turned the ball over about once a month. He received the highest compliment a point guard can receive in the tournament. He handled the ball so well that Newton North and Mansfield, two, quick athletic teams, didn't even try to press the Red Raiders. Two of the best teams in the state gave up the press because Pat Gould did not give up the ball.

It is great fun watching an athlete trying to advance to the next level. It is risky business predicting whether he or she will succeed. Their coaches think Green, Harris, Pat Gould and Danny Gould have a great shot to take the next step.

"I think Jalen and Jaquan will succeed at the next level," said Quincy football coach Bill Reardon. "Jalen is the best back I've coached, an absolutely unique back with his explosion and acceleration. Jaquan is so versatile, such a great athlete. He can do anything. He loves the big moment, the big game. That will serve him well in college."

"When I first heard Danny and Pat were going to Framingham together, my first thought was: I'll get to watch them for four more years," said North basketball coach Kevin Barrett. "They will do the work in the weight room to get bigger and stronger. There's no doubt about that. Not only will they do the job on the court, they will bring the intangibles like leadership and heart that they brought to North. That's what I told the Framingham coaches. I think they will succeed."

Whatever they do once they leave here, what they did here will not soon be forgotten. They played out rare and wonderful theater for a lover of sports and this writer has a simple message for the four athletes as they leave high school for college.

Thank you.

Here are each of their own stories.

JALEN GREEN (right) - Quincy High School Presidents

"I made the decision to go to Framingham because it was such a welcoming place. I connected right away to coach (Ainsley) Rosenbaum and being able to connect with people is important to me. I like to communicate.

"Education is first. I'm majoring in business management, but I've done a lot of broadcasting as well, so I might try that. Maybe, you'll see me on ESPN.

"I want to test myself on the next level of football. There are a lot of 'me's' out there, kids who were great high school players. I want to compete and measure myself against the them.

"Going with Jaquan is great. I want to make new friends, but with Jaquan I know I have someone I can relate to, someone I can room with. We've been together a long time.

"I have two memories which stand out. The first is when we beat Durfee. It was the first time we beat a Big 3 team and it felt like it was something special for Quincy. The second is North this season. It was Thanksgiving, my senior year. I always have something to look back on, we always have bragging rights. Nobody can take them away.

"I'd like to be remembered as one of the best backs Quincy produced, but more important, I want to be remembered as a good person, someone who put a smile on peoples' faces. I like to have fun. I can talk to students, teachers, coaches, the principal, anyone in the school. I enjoy people."

JAQUAN HARRIS - Quincy High School Presidents

"I had a good vibe from Framingham right away. My overnight visit went well and I already had friends there and they liked the school. Another thing was the coaches were good about me playing both basketball and football.

"What matters most is my GPA, my education. I do not want to miss this opportunity. I've always wanted to be an accountant. This is my chance. I want to make the most of it.

"I want to go to the next level. I know I have to get stronger and faster, but I want to play against better talent. I want to improve my tackling, be able to bring down a runner no matter how big he is.

"Jalen and I grew up together. We played against each other in Pop Warner. The fact that he was going to the school influenced me a lot. We know each other, sometimes words aren't even necessary.

"I have two main memories. The first is Duxbury in football. Since freshman year, they were so good we played with fear on the field. I competed. But we just hoped not to lose by too much. This year there was no fear. We played right with them and we almost beat them. The second is Thanksgiving. It was historic this year with the 80th renewal. We had never beaten North before this year and it's a memory I'll always have.

"I'd like to be remembered as a good kid, someone who worked hard and dedicated himself to sports. It was great being here. I enjoyed my years at Quincy."

DAN GOULD - North Quincy Red Raiders

"By the end of the season, I knew I wanted to play in college. Coach (Evan) O'Brien was the most loyal to us. He was at all our games, he called and emailed to see how we were doing. I got the love of the school from him and that was a big part in choosing Framingham.

"I don't know what my major is, but education always comes first. I've always loved to compete. I love playing in the big games against the best, and I want to do that on the next level.

"I know I have to improve as a ball handler and on defense. I have to create more shots because the defense will be quicker and stronger. I have to work hard with the weights to make myself bigger and stronger to compete.

"Down deep, Pat and I did want to be together, but I purposely didn't talk to him about it while we were making our decision. I wanted to be my own man, and I wanted Pat to be his own man and make his own choice. When he made it and it was Framingham, I was thrilled. Four more years together will be great.

"My best memory was the Newton North game in the tourney. I'll never forget the environment. The college gym was packed. There were people from North Quincy and a lot of people who weren't from North Quincy. Nobody gave us a chance. Nobody thought we could win. We jumped out 10-0 and did something no team from North had done since the early 1970s. A lot of players go through their whole careers without experiencing something like that, and I am grateful that I did.

"I'd like to be remembered as a student-athlete with the emphasis on student. I hope people remember me as a happy, easy-going kid who laughed a lot, had great years North Quincy, loved the city of Quincy and tried to make the whole city proud of our team."

PAT GOULD - North Quincy Red Raiders

"We heard from a lot of colleges, but when I went to Framingham, I just loved the place. I liked the small campus and when I saw the gym, I just thought I would love to play here. I'm going to major in education. I'd like to be a teacher and a coach.

"I want to take a step up and the Division 3 level is great competition. I want to play the best. I know I have to get better. I have to work on getting my shot off the dribble, my defense and maybe come up with a float-off the drive. In college, you have to create more.

"Danny (his twin) and I didn't have to go to the same school, but it is a good fit. We each made our own decision and it was only after we did, that we knew it was Framingham. I love it. He's the best player I've ever seen and it's great to stick with him.

"I have so many memories from North. One was my freshman year. Dan and I were called up for a tournament game against New Bedford. During the game, we were on the floor with my older brothers Ned and Paul. All four Gould brothers played together in a tournament game. That's something not many families can say.

"The run in the tourney this year was incredible. Nothing I've experienced can match it. So many people cared about us. It was great to be a part of it.

"I hope I'm remembered as a good person. Sports and academics are important, but the most important thing is: are you a good person. I hope people remember me as someone who helped others, was respectful and polite, and made the right choices. That's what matters most."

Same Score, Another Classic: Quincy Edges North In OT

By BILL GRIFFIN

For the second time this spring, the scoreboard read: Quincy 9, North Quincy 8

However, the real winners were the sport of lacrosse and the grand rivalry between two proud teams.

The match was the second of two classics the pair have played out this season. Both ended with Quincy winning, 9-8. Both will long be remembered.

With the final minute of overtime wasting away and the sky darkening to gray with cold and clouds, sophomore Ryan Higgins finished it with an underhand drive from 20 yards after a dash which took him the length of the field with 32 seconds left as Quincy edged North in another brilliant match at Veterans Stadium last week.

"It's the rivalry that makes it special. When we get on the field against North, everything changes," said Higgins.

"It's not only great for lacrosse, it's great for the city. To have two teams so vested in a rivalry and a sport that they play a match like this is a great thing," said Quincy coach Bob Foley.

Higgins was an unlikely hero. He is a defensive defenseman who rarely strays far from his own goal. However, when ball squirted loose late in the OT, Higgins scooped it up. As soon as he started forward, he met a cluster of North defenders and the ball was knocked free. He picked it up and saw something he never expected. Open space.

"My teammates got the possession back for me," he said. "I saw the daylight and I ran to it."

As he roared through midfield, North's defenders pinched in from the side and Quincy's attackers scurried for an open spot of land to take a pass. While this was happening, Foley had a thought. He thought about calling a timeout.

"We had so many turnovers on plays like that," said Foley. "I thought about a timeout. It was a 50-50 thing. I almost called it, but I decided to put faith in the kids in overtime."

Good idea. Higgins entered the attack zone and showed surprising offensive instincts. He thought about passing inside to Mitchell McGowan. He thought about pulling back and cycling the ball for an organized attack. He thought about all this and he shot the ball. He let it go underhand an instant before a North stick check, and it scooted through a screen for the winning goal.

"I can't explain. It was a spur of the moment, in the heat of the action decision. Nothing seemed open, so I just let it go," he said.

"It's great theater. It's been the same for the five years I've been around. It comes down to a bounce of the ball when these two teams play," said North coach Michael Joyce.

North (3-14) rallied from three goals down in the first match and the Red Raiders rallied from three down to force overtime in the second match. There's a certain symmetry here. Quincy (6-13) built a 5-2 lead early in the third on three goals from Steve Ross and a pressing defense which took the Red Raiders out of their rhythm.

"The press threw us off," said Joyce. "In the second half, we recognized it better and moved the ball more quickly."

They beat it by passing the ball. There were long passing plays which covered most of the field, the kind a coach draws up on a blackboard. The first went from midfield from Nolan Greene to Mike Finn to Chris Gorman, perfect checkerboard passing from center to the left wing to the front of the net.

In the final seconds of the third, Finn started the play of the game. He controlled a long pass on the left wing from Greene. He knew about the clock and he knew where everyone was on the field. He let the play develop, fed Gorman, who slipped it to Timmy Glynn in front for a goal as the clock struck 0:00 to cut Quincy's lead to 7-6 entering the third.

"For Finn to show that kind of composure is amazing," said Joyce.

Glynn finished another beautiful, long, looping pass from Greene to tie it early in the fourth at 7-7. McGowan and Glynn swapped goals in regulation. North's goalie Benson Chau made two dazzling saves on point-blank chances from Gavin O'Hare and Ross early in the OT. Greene made a terrific rush to set up Gorman for a chance which went just wide to set up the final act for Higgins.

"Without Chau, the game is over right there. Those were two amazing saves," said Joyce.

Ross had three for Quincy, including a laser as time ran out in the first period. McGowan, who was named Honorable Mention to the Patriot League All Star team, added two goals and four assists. Freshman Jake Hallisey had two goals and two assists while Pat Dowling had a goal and an assist. Midfielder Brian O'Callaghan, another Patriot League Honorable Mention, played a fine game on defense and in transition for Quincy. Andy Johnson had a strong game in goal, especially in the second half when North's offense started to click.

"He had huge saves. He kept us in it in the second half," said Foley.

Finn, a Patriot League Honorable Mention as well, had four goals to boost his season total to 46. Glynn added three goals in the second half and fought for every inch on the field. Gorman had a goal and an assist while Greene had two assists and was a dominant force in the middle for the second half and overtime.

"That's the toughest game Timmy Glynn has played all year," said Joyce.

In other action last week, Finn scored seven goals and Gorman added four to lift North past South Shore Voke, 16-8. Chau had 18 saves in goal.

Let's leave the final word about the season finale for both teams to Mr. Higgins.

"I hope little kids from the city saw the game and decided they might like to play lacrosse," he said.

QUINCY CATCHER Angelina Avitabile (left) and pitcher Saxon Bresnahan are all smiles moments after the Presidents defeated Stoughton 5-3 Monday to earn a spot in the state tournament. Bresnahan Powers Presidents Into Softball Postseason

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was surely finished.

Quincy had made a fine stretch run at the tourney, but with four outs remaining in the final game of the season which the Presidents had to win to make the playoffs, they trailed by two runs. There were two outs in the bottom of the sixth inning. Nobody was on base. The No. 9 hitter in the order stepped to the plate.

It was surely finished.

Quincy never made those four outs. With their season hanging by a most slender margin, five straight batters hit safely to push home four runs. Sophomore Saxon Bresnahan who breathed life into Quincy's season with her pitching, put the Presidents in the tourney with her hitting, driving in the winning run in a dramatic 5-3 non-league win over Stoughton before an excellent crowd at Mitchell-McCoy Field Monday.

"It took a lot of guts," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers whose club finished 10-10 and won its last three to make the tourney.

"As much as anything, it came down to they wanted it for each other. They wanted to keep playing softball."

Bresnahan pitched complete-game victories in all three games. In the three games, she gave up a total of three runs, six hits and struck out 42 batters in 19 innings, 19 innings in which Quincy needed her to continue its season. She drove in all three runs in a 3-0 win over Archbishop Williams last week. Monday she was 4-4 at the plate, gave three hits and struck out 15. She is only a sophomore.

"I'm so happy that it's all coming together for her," said Sommers. "She loves softball. She plays all year. She plays in club leagues. She goes to batting clinics. It is all starting to pay off now and the timing couldn't be better."

"I knew what was at stake the last three games and I think my focus was sharper," said Bresnahan.

There was more than one star Monday. With two outs in the sixth, the bases empty and Quincy trailing, 3-1, freshman Nicole Jorgensen drove a deep shot to left for a double. The rally had begun.

"It would have been easy to give in at that point, but Nicole had a quality at bat and put a good swing on the ball," said Sommers.

Senior Devon Varmahmoodi drilled a hard ground ball up the middle for a single. Jorgensen scored and it was 3-2. Varmahmoodi took second on the throw home and moved to third on a wild pitch. The Presidents had life.

"She's a senior captain and when she was on second, I could tell from the look in her eyes how much she wanted it," said Sommers.

Taylor Parry beat out an infield hit. Varmahmoodi scored and it was 3-3. Quincy was even and the flow of the game had changed and changed completely.

"Taylor got just enough of it. She has good speed and she hustled out a hit," said Sommers.

Quincy had risen, drawn even and Bresnahan stepped up with the rally, the inning, the game and the season waiting to be decided. She belted a booming double to left center for her fourth hit of the game. Parry flew around from first to score. In four batters Quincy had gone from a season-ending loss to a one-run lead.

"I was just hoping for a chance," smiled Bresnahan.

"The big thing for me was to keep from getting nervous. I wanted to stay calm, keep my head on the ball and try to hit a good line drive."

Sophomore Angelina Avitable joined the parade with another blast to left for a double. Pinch runner Dana Varmahmoodi scored her second run of the game for a 5-3 lead. Five batters, four runs and a trip to the tournament.

"Angelina has hit the ball well for us down the stretch," said Sommers. "She's made good contact. Some balls have gone right at people, but she delivered big time today."

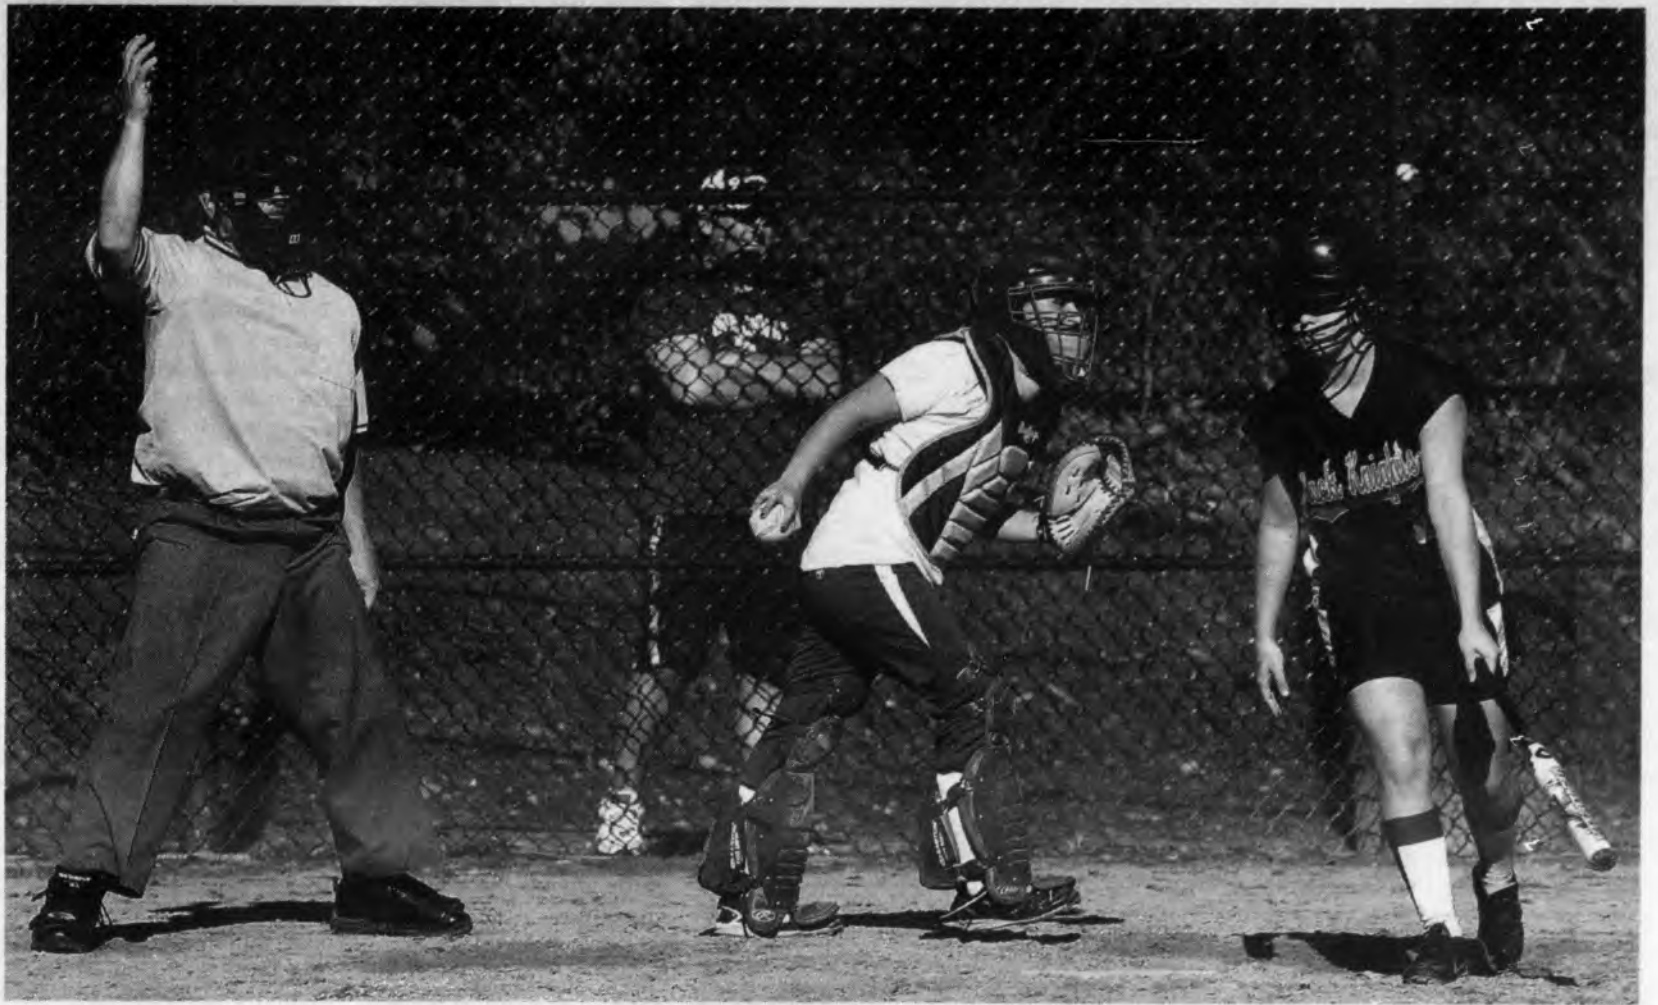

There were three outs left, and there was only one fitting way for Bresnahan to get the them. She struck out the side. It was the perfect ending to a terrific day.

"I thought I got sharper as the game went along," said Bresnahan. "I concentrated better and I think I hit my spots later in the game."

"You could see it. Her velocity, her movement got better as the game went along," said Sommers.

After Stoughton scored in the top of the third, Quincy tied it at 1-1 in the bottom half on an infield hit from Bresnahan, an error, and an excellent bunt from third baseman Devin McMahon who played a strong game in the field. The Black Knights bunched two doubles around an error for a pair in the top of the sixth for a 3-1 lead before Quincy took back its season back in the home half of the inning.

The Presidents had every reason to go away quietly.

QUINCY CATCHER Angelina Avitable is ready to celebrate with teammates after a Stoughton batter struck out to end Monday's game. The Presidents rallied from a two-run deficit to plate four runs in the bottom of the sixth to defeat the Black Knights 5-3 and earn a spot in the postseason tournament.

They left the bases loaded in the first. They stranded eight runners through the first five. They were facing a quality pitcher in Stoughton's Emily Cramer who had limited Quincy to one run in a 3-1 loss in the final two weeks of the season. However, a team that doesn't quit always has a chance, and Quincy proved that true Monday.

"This means a whole lot," smiled Bresnahan. "I love softball, I love Quincy and to help my teams make the tournament means everything to me."

QUINCY SAILING TEAM recently competed in the Massachusetts Bay League Championship. The team placed first in their division, winning out over Cambridge, Brookline, Natick, Newman Prep and Newton North among others. Senior captains Jillian Norris from North Quincy and Bridget O'Brien were both essential to this success, with their strong leadership and fun attitudes. Strong contributions also came from juniors and new team captains Elio Daci and Carolyn Schwartz. The team will compete in the state competition on Wednesday at MIT. THE QUINCY-BASED U.S. A-Team will leave on June 10th for The World Hydroplane Championship in Italy. The race, which will be held on June 14-16, will take place in the Northern Italian town of Barcis which is located on the eastern edge of The Italian Alps. The Team Captain, Billy Allen from Squantum, was last year's World Bronze Medalist at The Championship Race in Germany. He was the only American in the race. Allen said he is confident going into this year's contest and said the boat is running strong and handling well after a busy early spring of intense testing sessions. Allen also thanked the many Quincy companies who donated to the team in order for them to afford to ship their boats across the ocean for the event. Among them are Abdon's Auto Repair, Bill Shea's Countertops as well as The Law Offices of Cosgrove, Eisenberg and Kiley. "We are an independent team paying all of our own expenses" said Allen. "We are competing against many corporately and nationally backed programs and these donations from Quincy businesses really help to get an American team to the World Championships". High School Sports Wrap-Up

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy girls tennis team posted three wins in singles to drop Quincy, 4-1 and earn a split of their season series on the clay courts of the Quincy Tennis Club last week.

Quincy had won the previous match between the two, 3-2.

Tiffany Leung, Mallory Devoe, and Sanjana Kadivel all earned straight-set singles wins for North (8-5). Leung swept to a 6-0, 6-0 win at first singles. Devoe posted a 6-1, 6-4 win at second singles, and Kadivel won at third singles, 6-3, 6-2.

Kayla Sugrue and Cynthia Vu won at doubles 6-4, 6-7, 6-2 for North. In the previous meeting, Quincy had swept both doubles matches.

"This time in doubles we were more aggressive. We moved to the net and attacked earlier in the match," said North coach Francesca DiBona.

Quincy's point came from the doubles team of Samantha Pham and Tanya Tonnu, 6-2, 6-4.

North's strength all year has been in its singles. Leung, who was named a Patriot League All Star, went 11-2 out of the No. 1 spot which is an impressive achievement in a league with powers like Duxbury, Hingham and Scituate.

Devoe was 8-3 at second singles, and Kadivel was 9-3 on the season. Devoe and Kadivel were named as Honorable Mention from the Patriot League. The cumulative record of the three singles players was 28-8 for the Red Raiders.

"I think the singles has been steady all year," said DiBona. "Tiffany has been dominant from the beginning. Mallory has been very consistent. I think the biggest improvement I've seen has been from Sanjana. She's more confident, more willing to be aggressive and attack with her groundstrokes."

Quincy finishes the regular season at 10-5. Quincy and North both qualified for the state tourney which will begin later this week.

"We go into the tourney with a nice high with the win over Quincy," said DiBona. "It's especially satisfying because they beat us recently. I think we'll be pumped and motivated for anyone

Presidents' Bats Come Alive

By BILL GRIFFIN

One of sports' great charms is all things are possible. There is no script, no neatly-crafted plot whose ending is planned and certain. Just roll out the ball and play the game. Anything can happen.

Quincy and North Quincy played two games of softball against each other in less than a week. In the first, Quincy didn't have a hit or a run through six innings before rallying for a 1-0 win.

In the rematch, Quincy scored seven runs in the first inning. The first inning. The Presidents rapped out 13 hits to support the wipeout pitching of Saxon Bresnahan and defeat North, 13-0 in a game called after five innings at Mitchell-McCoy Field last week.

Anything can happen.

"We just started hitting and the hits kept coming," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers.

How much of an explosion was it for the Presidents who have relied on pitching and defense all season? The seven runs in the first inning equaled Quincy's total in its previous three games. The total of 13 runs was four more than the Presidents scored in their previous five games. It took awhile, but when they hit, they surely did hit.

Anything can happen.

"You could see it coming," said Sommers. "We were striking out less and putting more balls in play. We were making better contact and it paid off tonight."

Before detailing the hitting, it is fitting to begin with Bresnahan who was untouchable once she had a big lead. She gave two bunt singles and struck out 14. There were 15 outs in the game. Bresnahan accounted for 14 of them with strikeouts. She didn't allow a ball hit out of the infield.

we play in the tourney."

North Quincy's volleyball team, which finished the season at 16-3, is seeded third out of 12 teams in the Division 1 South Sectional Tourney.

The Red Raiders earned a bye in the quarterfinals and will face the winner of No. 6 Greater New Bedford (13-6) and New Bedford (8-8).

Newton South and Needham are the top two seeds.

The Red Raiders have lost in the semifinals of the sectionals the past two years.

Andrew Jaehnig, a Quincy native, had a single and two doubles to lead BC High past Quincy (7-13), 12-0 in a baseball game last week.

"Their pitcher was outstanding," said North coach Kerry Ginty.

In two games against North, Bresnahan gave five hits, fanned 24 and allowed no runs in 12 innings. Her low fast ball borders on the unhittable. Her control and poise on the mound have grown more sharp. She is mixing in a curve and a changeup. She is hitting her spots with increasing frequency. She is a sophomore and she could be something special.

"Saxon has been great all season and she has kept improving," said Sommers. "Her movement on her pitches and her control are better. She just took over the game."

Sophomore catcher Angelina Avitabile led the attack with four hits, four RBI and two runs scored. She drilled a two-run double in the first inning explosion. She has also formed a good working rapport with Bresnahan and should be a ideal partner for her for the next two seasons.

"Angelina went to a lighter bat and it increased her bat speed. It's made a big difference," said Sommers.

Freshman first baseman Nicole Jorgensen had a three-run homer and scored two runs. The blast came in the first, cleared the high fence in left easily and landed on a slide in the adjacent kiddie park. Softballs hit right on the sweet spot have a certain sound. Jorgensen's shot sounded like it was going a long way.

"From the moment it hit the bat, you knew it was gone," said Sommers.

Eight players hit safely in the balanced attack. Third baseman Devin McMahon had two hits, an RBI and scored twice. Leann McColgan, hero of the first game against North, added a double, single, an RBI, and a run scored. Devon Varmahmoodi (hit, two runs scored), Bresnahan (hit, three runs scored), Ashley Faeilla (single, run scored, RBI) and Rachel Papile (hit, run scored) all contributed to the offense.

"It was good to see everyone get involved in the hitting," said Sommers.

The Presidents sent 10 batters to the plate in the first inning. They had seven hits and two sacrifice bunts. Out of the 10 hitters, nine had productive at-bats. It was the offense that Sommers was looking to see.

"It's the best we swung the bats all year against a quality team and a quality pitcher," said Sommers.

For North, senior Caitlin Bulger dropped two beautiful bunts for hits. Senior shortstop Liz Kelly finished a brilliant four-year varsity career by ranging far to her right to make plays on three ground balls that would have been clean singles to left against any other shortstop.

"I was happy to see Caitlin get on twice because she's hit the ball for us all year. Liz is the best defensive shortstop in the league," said Ginty.

The game was held up by rain for over 45 minutes in the top of the fifth due to rain. North finished its season at 5-9.

The seniors from the two schools exchanged flowers in a short ceremony before the game.

Hanover dropped North in action earlier last week. Kelly had two hits while Kelly Thompson had a hit and two RBI. Bulger had an RBI for the Red Raiders.

FASCINATING FACETS

Each of the human body's 24 vertebrae has four protrusions ("articular processes") that interface with their adjacent counterparts on vertebrae above and below to form "facet joints." While facet joints provide the spinal column with flexibility, they may become misaligned due to a variety of causes. Facet joints can become worn through osteoporosis, an accident, or chronic poor posture. In addition, the ligaments that maintain the joints in alignment may become shortened due to the aging process or scar formation after injury. Once shortened, they can force the joints out of alignment. As a result, painful muscle spasms may arise. The chiropractor's goal is to gently correct such misalignments, relieve pain, and restore proper function.

While chiropractic adjustments of the joints are commonly associated with our profession, we are not just limited to manipulation of the spine. Your nervous system controls and regulates every cell of your body. When your nervous system doesn't work right, you don't work right. And when you don't work right, you're sick! At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC we have the knowledge and experience to identify the cause of your discomfort. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment at your convenience. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

Man vs. Mole

Q: My next-door neighbor told me that the small dirt clumps and holes I'm seeing around my backyard are probably moles or some other burrowing rodent. He says they're not good for my garden. How can I stop them from making themselves at home? -- Larry R., Indiana

A: You'll probably get tons of advice on how to get rid of moles that dig into and ruin your lawn or garden, but not all of it is good. Moles can be difficult to chase off, and many remedies, like treating the lawn with lime, or using rodent bait to trap the moles, don't work, according to Purdue University's Plant & Pest Diagnostic Laboratory.

A mole's favorite food is earthworms. It will eat grubs, but not often, and it doesn't eat grain or seeds like mice or squirrels do.

That means that baits, poisons and traps labeled for rodents won't work for moles. Baits that are labeled as being for rodents and moles also probably won't work well. Instead, look specifically for bait and/or traps for moles and no other pest.

There are two effective ways to get rid of moles: poison them, using a bait that attracts them and is laced with a specific poison; or trap and remove them, using traps specifically created for moles and the tunnels they burrow.

Now, if you're opposed to killing small creatures -- whether on principle, or due to the ick factor -- you can trap and remove the mole to a remote location away from other people's lawns. If the problem is not too bad -- you have a couple of dirt mounds in the yard or in an inconspicuous place like the edge of the garden -- you can consider not doing anything, since moles do help aerate the soil. But if the problem is pretty bad, you do need to take action, one way or another.

HOME TIP: To discourage moles from taking up residence in your lawn or garden, try spreading castor oil granules around tunnel entrances, or spray a solution of castor oil and cayenne pepper into mole tunnels.

On Tuesday, May 21, at approximately 7 a.m., Officers Patrick Folan and Ed Bagley were dispatched to a Merry-mount address on a report of a domestic violence incident.

Upon arrival, the Officer pulled up to the home and immediately heard a woman yelling in an argumentative tone. Officer Folan approached the front door, which was partially open. He observed a woman standing in the living room with a man and she was screaming in the man's face in a fighting position. After requesting the back up officer to pick up his response, the officer, fearing that physical violence was about to occur, knocked and announced his presence as a police officer. The woman's demeanor suddenly changed from extremely violent to passive and she began to cry.

Officer Folan then observed a third person in the home - an elderly woman seated on a stairway. The Officer requested the combative woman to step outside the home in order to separate her from the male. The male was informed that another police officer would be there to interview him. From all the Officer's observations, he determined that the male was cooperative the entire time.

Officer Bagley arrived on scene and began the interview process with the two people inside the home. The woman being interviewed by Officer Folan immediately became hostile again, yelling, "Go ahead and put the cuffs on me now." The officer told her at this time he only wished to interview her. The woman told the officer that she lives in the home with her boyfriend (the male) and his mother (elderly woman). She added that they were in a dating relationship for five years but no longer date.

The woman told the officer that her ex-boyfriend allows her to reside in his home or she would be homeless. She added that he also had a restraining order against her but it expired. The woman stated that she woke up this morning and did not feel well, so she intended to call in sick, but her ex-boyfriend grew angry upon hearing this and told her, "No - you are not calling in."

The woman said that her ex then grabbed the phone from her and "started to viciously assault me." When asked to describe the assault, the woman said that he repeatedly punched her directly in the face. Upon examination, the officer could not find any bruising, swelling or discoloration, so he asked her if he punched her with a closed fist in the face and she said yes.

Although there were no signs of injury, Officer Folan asked if she desired medical attention. This seemed to anger the woman, who then became verbally abusive to the officer and then embellished the assault from her earlier account. Officer Folan then requested that the woman remain outside while he conferred with Officer Bagley to get the rest of the story.

Officer Bagley said that the male tried to wake the woman for work but she groggily said she did not want to go and suddenly grew angry. The male said that he did remove the phone from her hand but did not assault her. He confirmed that an argument ensued which resulted in the woman picking up a 40-ounce bottle and intentionally swinging it at his head, narrowly missing. At this time, the male used the same phone he took away from the woman to call the "911" emergency line. Officer Bagley added that the male's mother er witnessed the entire incident and confirmed the accuracy, including the male's denial of hitting the woman.

Aside from removing the phone from the woman, the only other action the male took was to hold out his hands in an open palm manner to fend off the woman as she approached him yelling and screaming.

Based on the available information and statements, the demeanor of the woman, the eyewitness account and lack of physical evidence of the alleged assault, Officer Folan determined that the woman was most likely the aggressor in this incident. The officer then informed the woman, a 30 year-old Quincy resident that she was under arrest for "Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon" for swinging the bottle at the male.

Although the male victim did not want an emergency restraining order issued against the woman, he stated that he was intending to obtain a restraining order when the court opens in the morning. Back at the station, in the cell block, the woman was totally uncooperative and at one point attempted to run out of the cell block (which is practically impossible) but was stopped by Officer Chin.

Once she calmed down, she was removed from her cell and officially booked.

Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cheer up, Lamb. Your emotional impasse will lift once you allow your highly tuned sense of justice to guide you on what to do about an associate's questionable behavior.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) News about a project you hoped to work on might need more clarification. Take nothing just on faith. Draw up a list of questions, and insist on each being fully answered.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Giving your time to help others is fine. But don't lose sight of your own needs. Make plans for an energy-restoring getaway with that very special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulate yourself on getting that difficult job done to everyone's satisfaction. This could be the first of many such challenges you might be offered down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With your enthusiasm soaring again, you feel ready to tackle a tough new assignment. Good for you! And remember: Don't be too proud to accept help when it's offered.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Cupid rules the week for single Virgos eager to make a romantic connection. Meanwhile, Virgo couples experience renewed commitment in their relationships.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Home and work issues vie for your attention through early next week.

Rely on your Libran sense of balance to keep you from being overwhelmed by either side.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creative projects might have to go on standby as you tackle other matters making demands on your time and energy. Things should ease by the middle of next week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energies are high, and so are your aspirations. But be careful not to let work dominate the week. It's also important to spend time with family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good time to set aside your pride and stop nursing those hurt feelings. Instead, consider restoring relationships you want to have back in your life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might be miffed at not being shown more appreciation for your hard work. But don't brood over it. Recognition comes in its own time and in its own way.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With your inner creative juices starting to boil and bubble, this is a good time to launch a new arts-related project, or go back and restart the one you had set aside.

Frank Santoro To Receive Richard Koch Service Award

Flag Day Parade, Fireworks June 15

Retiring Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro, who has dedicated more than 40 years to educating local young people, has been selected to receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The award will be presented Saturday, June 15th at Pageant Field following the 62nd annual Flag Day parade.

Born in Boston, Santoro attended Quincy Public Schools from kindergarten through grade 12, graduating from North Quincy High School in 1967. He earned his Bachelor's Degree from Framingham State College and his Master's from Eastern Nazarene College. His teaching career began in the Boston Public Schools in 1972 and he transitioned to Brookline Public Schools from 1982 to 1999.

During his time in Brookline, he served on the Quincy School Committee for eight years, also fulfilling the role of Vice Chair. His tenure on the School Committee included service to the Quincy Park & Recreation Board.

Mr. Santoro joined the Quincy Public Schools staff in 1999 as principal of Central Middle School. In 2004, he was appointed principal of Quincy High School, a position that afforded the opportunity to play an integral role in the development of a new high school facility. "I was fortunate to be able to have input in designing a brand new high school, built for the 21st century," said Santoro. The design has won three national awards for interdisciplinary learning and recently won the Green Ribbon School Award representing Massachusetts."

The Youth Service Award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club

Palmucci, Hughes Proposal Gets Lukewarm Reception Planning Board New SPGA?

By SCOTT JACKSON

A proposal by Councillors Brian Palmucci and Kirsten Hughes would give the Planning Board, and not the City Council, final say on major projects in Quincy.

Currently, the council acts as the special permit granting authority (SPGA) for all planned urban development (PUD) projects — either projects built on parcels greater than 100,000 square feet or ones in specially designated PUD zoning districts. The proposal by Palmucci and Hughes would make the Planning Board, a body whose members are appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council, the special permit granting authority for those projects.

In the past year the council has considered two SPGA projects — it approved a renovation and expansion of the Presidents City Inn and rejected a proposed C-Mart, both in Ward 5, which Hughes represents. A third project, a 180-unit apartment building in Palmucci's Ward 4, is undergoing council review. The C-Mart proposal was before the council this year after

Mahoney Seeks New Athletic Partnership

By EMILY TAFT

During a recent school committee meeting, Committeewoman Anne Mahoney submitted a resolution to create a Quincy Athletic Partnership Pathway program to support athletic programs through sponsorships.

"I would like to submit a resolution to the school committee to create a Quincy Athletic Partnership Pathway program, which will be an extension of the Quincy Business Partnership Program," said Mahoney. "Obviously we have problems with the way we are funding things and I've said it many times before that even though we are able to sustain many programs in the Quincy Public School System they are teetering and they are not foundationally solid and we need to actually make sure we are creating that solid foundation. It's important that we create sources of funding as well, because we obviously are going to be running into

Mayor Will Work With New Trash Contractor Koch: No Dumpster Rental Fees For Condo Owners

By SCOTT JACKSON

The mayor has 'no intention' of making condo owners pay rental fees for dumpsters and will work with the new trash contractor to avoid them, a spokesman said, after the City Council balked at funding Quincy's new trash contract.

In March, Mayor Tom Koch signed an agreement with Boston-based Sunrise Scavenger, one that is projected to save Quincy several million dollars over its 10-year lifespan. The new deal ended a partnership between Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth – the three cities had negotiated a waste disposal contract together with Capitol Waste Services under a pilot program.

In April, the Department of Public Works notified the city's 87 condo associations that Sunrise Scavenger's fleet of trash haulers were equipped to handle only rear-loading dumpsters. Letters written to each association said that those currently using front-loading dumpsters – or any that received a dumpster from Capitol Waste – would need to either purchase a new dumpster, reach an agreement to rent a dumpster for $20 to $30 a month from Sunrise, or reach an agreement with another trash disposal company, by July 1. Condos that use curbside collect, allowed for buildings with eight or fewer units, would not be affected.

Councillors raised the issue during the Finance Committee's review of the DPW budget last week. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, himself a condo owner, asked that the committee hold off on approving the trash disposal budget. He said it would be unfair to charge the fees when condo owners already pay the same property taxes homeowners do.

"Currently condos aren't being charged any fee to rent these dumpsters from Capitol Waste. Under the new contract we're converting to a system where folks may have to rent a particular rear-loading dumpster," Palmucci said. "We're talking

Freshman Sports, Full Varsity Schedule Retained

By EMILY TAFT

After concerns about a $125,000 deficit in the athletic revolving account arose during the last Budget and Finance Subcommittee meeting Mayor Tom Koch, chairman of the school committee, presented a proposal to cut $200,000 from the common core curriculum budget line and move it into the athletic budget, which will allow for freshman sports and full varsity schedules to be brought back into the schools.

"To cut to the chase, I'd like to propose that we cut the core curriculum line by $200,000 and move that $200,000 into athletics, which would do three things, one is it takes care of the structural deficit, number two it brings back freshman sports, and number three it brings back full schedules at the varsity level," said Koch during the May 29th subcommittee meeting.

Covenant Church Seeks Children's Pantry Donations

The Children's Pantry at The Covenant Church of Quincy is in need of donations of gently used or new children's clothing, books, and supplies.

"For more than 15 years our church members, neighbors, and members of other Quincy churches have helped us with donations," said Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of the congregation. "This is a very important ministry to our congregation and to the community. We are very grateful for all the help and now we need people to help again. We need all sizes of children's and teenage clothing; from newborn to size 14 teen."

The Children's Pantry, located at 315 Whitwell St., serves children and their families by providing needed clothing, books, and supplies, free of charge. Many of the visitors have become good friends of the pantry because they have been coming for years, very often donating clothing their children have outgrown.

Hours for the Children's Pantry are Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Or call the church office at 617-479-5728 to make an appointment for drop off.

Catching Up With Capt. Tom Lyons

It's been nearly three years since Tom Lyons stepped out of Quincy Fire Headquarters as a retired fire captain.

But the Quincy native hasn't walked away from his passion: preaching fire safety and prevention.

Lyons, who grew up on Russell Street and Williams Street in North Quincy, served 33-plus "wonderful" years on the Quincy Fire Department before retiring in October 2010 at the age of 61. Nearing his 64th birthday (Aug. 23), Lyons is now the fire safety coordinator at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, a post he's held for 15 months since February 2012.

The safety coordinator's job fits Lyons like a professional baseball player's favorite glove. It felt right from the moment he tried it.

"It's a lot of education, it's a lot of fire prevention," he says of his job as fire safety coordinator. "Education I always thought was the most bang for the buck. Why I love the institute – if you have an incident, which is almost unavoidable whether it be a simple malfunction of a smoke detector – there is a meeting afterward to critique what happened and how we can improve on it."

Education has been a main prong of Lyons' fire prevention mantra.

Quincy Sun readers will recognize Capt. Lyons for his more than 200 Fire Prevention columns that appeared in this newspaper for four years until he retired from the department. He credits former Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth with finding his fire prevention voice in Quincy.

"I had an epiphany here at The Sun. I said, 'Mr. Bosworth, would you print three or four stories and he said 'Sure Captain, I'll do it.'" Then he asked me for a photo and gave me a byline.

"I like to think Henry saw something in me because as that time on my own I had an epiphany. I grew up in a firefighter's home. We were taught within that house fire prevention. And it occurred to me through what I've experienced after half of my career that most folks don't have that benefit. I felt I had an obligation to share what most people don't know."

And what people don't know can become a dangerous lesson to learn.

Lyons recalled the story of a Quincy resident who improperly disposed on linseed oil.

"You just don't bundle it up and throw it in a corner" he says. "I wrote an article for The Sun on the proper care of any product with linseed oil. Didn't we get a multiple fire down in Wollaston? A gentleman came in for his fire report and I said to him, 'Did you know two weeks ago I wrote an article on linseed oil?' And he said, 'My God, I wish I had read it.'"

The gentleman had disposed of linseed oil in a rubber trash barrel in his basement. In time, it will generate its own heat when it dries. If it's bundled up, the heat can't disperse and it will ignite.

The barrel ignited and caused a fire, severely damaging the house.

"He didn't know about the dangers of linseed oil. That's what I tried to do whether it was smoke detectors, propane grills, whatever it may be. My dad's generation grew up with fire. You had range ovens; fire was more prevalent and you respected it."

"In this century, people just don't seem to have that same awareness."

At Dana Farber, Lyons works a 32-hour week. Most of his time is spent at Dana Farber's six-building main campus in Boston but he also provides fire safety expertise at its other facilities including the new wing at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

"For the most part, I create educational programs and I implement them," he explains. "I lead discussions on the topics of fire safety, whether it be clinical facilities, housekeeping, personnel. We have a lot of satellite programs."

"I do a great deal of risk assessment walking through these facilities and just as I did in Quincy build upon build upon build upon – if you see something, correct it. I like to say there's a foundation being built there. It's a great institute, extremely proactive when it comes to fire safety and safety as a whole but I think I bring an experience there where I can take it to another level."

Lyons is a third-generation firefighter, although he didn't plan on following in his father and grandfather's footsteps. His father – Captain Frank Lyons – was a Quincy firefighter for 34 years. He died in 1996.

"He loved it," Tom Lyons says of his father's career. "He hated to leave (65 is the mandatory retirement age for Quincy firefighters). He was one of those guys where you have to pull them through the door and his fingernail marks are still on the door jams."

His grandfather was a Boston fire lieutenant and was about to be promoted to captain when he lost an eye on the job. He retired in 1942.

With firefighting in his blood, it's not surprising that Lyons found his true vocation as a Quincy firefighter.

"I didn't grow up wanting to be a firefighter but I became one and interesting enough that's where I found my passion and my vocation. You just don't know. Keep your head up and look towards the horizon. You don't know where it will lead you."

He added:

"I graduated from Northeastern and I don't remember my father bringing the job home. I think an awful lot of other things that I saw in him because he was working for the fire department and whether subconsciously or not I was drawn to that."

Reflecting on his 33-year-plus career, responding to his first fatal fire left an indelible impression on Lyons that has undoubtedly shaped his career path.

"To this day, I will still reference that fatality when in fact it was obvious to me there was no evacuation plan for this individual. This individual had a window within almost an arm's distance to get out of but within a smoke condition prior to it flashing he was going to dress himself and walk out the front door like he always did."

"And he dropped dead right there. The smoke detector with the two-prong wires had no batteries. I used to collect all of that information and in those days really trying to be a better firefighter but ultimately it was a tremendous motivator in fire prevention."

"All of that stuff stuck with me. That's in my estimation what develops passion. I would go back to the fire house and I would say 'what would I do differently?'"

"Try to learn, learn, learn. That's the beauty of (my job at Dana Farber.) I'm not talking from book knowledge. It's easier for me to sell fire prevention when you've experienced it and I've witnessed it so people know when they are sitting with me that I'm not b.s.ing them."

The feedback Lyons' receives underscores the fact that his messages are received and retained.

"One nurse told me 'I've been in this business a long time but fire safety has never been conveyed in such an effective way as you have just done so to me.' I've had a number of those. I just know that even walking the halls with people that I've spoken to that there's a connection developed there and my point is if there's a connection then there's a connection with some message as well."

And what's his main fire prevention message?

"They don't have to be ruled by fear of a fire incident but that they can prepare for it. They can prepare by a proactive awareness of where their exits are because they won't be able to take an elevator; know where a pull station is so they can activate an alarm and notify the fire department."

"Our fire response plan comes simply into the acronym RACE – Rescue, Alarm, Contain and Extinguish. I tell them if they can remember that – whatever they are distracted with if they come across an incident – if they can remember that and if they are going to lunch, pass by and say 'oh yes, there's a fire extinguisher, there's a pull station.'"

"You don't have to live in fear, you don't have to live in darkness but you can live with a little awareness and a little homework makes a major difference in an emergency."

TOM LYONS

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1931 real photo postcard view of Sam's Restaurant that was at 729 Quincy Shore Dr. on the corner of Davis Street which is on the right. Sam Cohen, who lived in Hull, owned the restaurant and a similar operation at Nantasket Beach. Sam's featured their own salt water kisses and home made sugar cones that they made on site and they claimed their 31 flavors of ice cream was the largest variety in New England. They also sold fried clams, French fried potatoes and sandwiches of all kinds. The clams probably came from Wollaston Beach. Sam's closed in 1937 and this building was then used by The Black Casino and then The Playroom but it was pretty much empty during World War II. After the war, it became home to Roger W. Kent's Carpet Store operated by Roger and his silent partner, Don. The brothers grew up just a few blocks away on Hamden Circle. Don Kent, who became known as the legendary dean of New England weather forecasters, began his forecasting career in the late 1940's from a small shack the brothers built on top of this building. He used the name Don Dixon when he first started broadcasting for Quincy radio station WJDA. This building, built in 1923 to beat the zoning changes along the beach, burned several years ago and this site is now known as Don Kent Park. Note the two young fellows at the second window checking out the young ladies strolling by. The two older guys in the next window are also not minding their own business. Parents Commended For School Cleanup

By SCOTT JACKSON

Fourteen South Quincy parents were to be presented with Certificates of Appreciation from Mayor James R. McIntyre for helping cleanup $30,800 in vandalism done to the Adams School.

During a mid-May weekend, vandals broke into the school - they smashed water pipes, causing flooding in the basement; shattered windows; and destroyed records, books, and scattered catalogue cards in the media center.

Initially, custodial staff and other maintenance workers began to repair the damage, installing new windowpanes. When the school reopened on Monday, the 14 parents rolled up their sleeves and went to work.

"This was a very fine civic gesture on the part of these parents," McIntyre said. "They are to be commended for getting the school back in shape and for saving the city thousands of dollars by volunteering their services."

BELLOTTI IN GOVERNOR'S RACE

Former Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti announced that he would run for governor once again.

A Wollaston Democrat, Bellotti declared his candidacy during press conference at Boston's Sheraton-Plaza Hotel. He cited a need for leadership in a time of social changes.

"This is a time of unbelievable change - a time of social revolution," Bellotti said. "The need is for strong and committed leadership - I can provide this leadership."

Bellotti served two years as lieutenant governor after being elected in 1962. He had run for governor in 1964, beating incumbent Endicott Peabody in the primary before losing to John Volpe in the general election. Bellotti then made an unsuccessful run for attorney general in 1966.

In his press conference Bellotti said he would submit his candidacy to delegates at the Democratic state convention and to voters in the party primary. He said the balloting at the state convention should be done secretly.

"If the other candidates truly want anything that resembles a free and open convention, then I ask for them to join me in calling for a secret ballot," Bellotti said.

CONSTRUCTION ON FINAL MBTA BRIDGE

Mayor McIntyre announced an agreement between the city, state, and MBTA to evenly divide the $450,000 cost of the School Street Bridge, the last of seven bridges built in Quincy as part of the transit agency's expansion project.

"The next step will be necessary land takings involving a few homes," McIntyre said. "Actual construction should start very soon."

McIntyre said construction of the new bridge wouldn't be adversely affected by a month-long strike of cement truck drivers. That strike, however, did slow overall construction of the transit line. The new branch of the Red Line was supposed to open on Christmas Day, 1969, but the new target date was September.

Kudos To The NQHS Quiz Show Team Champs

I was thrilled to see the photo and the piece by Emily Taft about the North Quincy High School team which won the W.G.B.H. Quiz Show for Massachusetts - and for New Hampshire!

I watched almost all their appearances and was amazed by their performances each time against some of the "top" high schools in Massachusetts - and now N.H. My daughter is a graduate of NQHS, and she and my granddaughter, separately, enjoyed watching the win-

I congratulate The Quincy Sun for giving almost a full page to this event and to the winning North team - almost as much as a sports team would get.

Thanks and kudos to the team's faculty coaches,

Quincy Brothers Chad, Luke Gosselin Form Alternative Country Band 'The Big Lonesome'

Local Band Playing For Love Of Music

By EMILY TAFT

Twenty years ago Quincy resident Chad Gosselin and his brother Luke picked up guitars and fell in love with music, and now the brothers along with band mates Joe Ziemba and Michael Moore are heading out on their third tour as the band the Big Lonesome.

"The two of us just started playing growing up. I picked up a guitar when I was 12, and he is four years younger than me and was basically always stealing my guitar. My mother finally bought him a guitar and we basically started playing together from there," said Gosselin.

Gosselin's love for singing and writing came after he was unable to play guitar for six months when he injured his rotator cuff and decided to start writing songs and sing just to keep busy.

"Three years ago I moved back here, to Quincy and essentially what happened was I just started writing songs for kicks," said Gosselin. "If you asked me 10 years ago I would never have thought I would be writing and singing. Singing is fun, it feels good, and it feels awesome to just kind of let it go."

The band's first show was at Coffee Break Café in Quincy, and since then they have played at venues in Rhode Island, Maine, Vermont, and during their recent tour they made stops in New Hampshire, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

"We're going to try and branch out a little further, that's kind of the idea. When we play at new places we usually tend to do a stripped down, kind of coffee shop thing," said Gosselin. "Our focus is to get a little further out and start playing into New York, Philadelphia, and Connecticut."

"The whole goal is to develop a significant draw in the area before we move on to another area. I don't know if I ever want to get to the point where it feels like we are so divided from people. It's nice to play to people that you feel like you know."

Gosselin said that the band's sound, which has been described as alternative country, came from when he first started writing songs for their first album.

"I didn't even listen to country, but when I started writing music it just kind of came out that way," said Chad. "I think it probably came originally from the fact that I started writing on an acoustic guitar and it just kind of got a natural twang to it."

The new tour, which covered six states, is being done in hopes to raise money for their new album. Gosselin said that they want the new music to be a little cleaner and more produced than the first, which is why they are using the money from the tour to record the new album.

"The first one we had no idea what we were doing. I bought a computer and some microphones and just tried to figure it out," said Gosselin. "It was fun, but the music is developing in a way where it would be cool to produce it up a little more. Before it was kind of like bare bones and now we want to get a little more larger than life on this one. I want this one to sound really good."

Even though being under a record label might make the band more money, Gosselin said their main goal isn't to become rich and famous but to continue to do what they love.

"Working with a label there is a lot of advantages, but I would say a lot of setbacks as well. We kind of like being in control of everything we are doing, to a certain degree, and we don't really want to compromise that too much," said Gosselin.

"It's not the goal of the project to get rich and famous, it's just to play the kind of music we want to play and take it to people who want to hear it. I'm happy with where I am. It's a good life when I can play guitar for a living and hang-out and support a family off that, that's not a bad thing."

Maria Droste Fashion Show Features 'Celebration Of Spring'

The Annual Fashion Gala to benefit Maria Droste Services in Quincy was recently held at Lantana's in Randolph.

The "Celebration of Style" featured an evening of cocktails, dinner, music, a silent auction and runway fashions.

For the eighth time, the gala event was dedicated and named in honor of Darlene Sheehan. For the past seven years, the success of this event is due in no small part to a collaboration of the Maria Droste Fundraising Committee and the Friends of Darlene Sheehan.

Some of Darlene's friends as well as several local male and female "trend setters" took to the runway to model four fantastic collections of spring ensembles. For the ladies, both playful and professional collections from

GOLD'S WARMER SIDE

Because pure 24-karat gold is too soft to be used in jewelry making, it must be alloyed with other metals to increase its hardness. At the same time, alloying also provides an opportunity to modify gold's natural yellow hue to other lovely colors. For instance, by combining gold with small amounts of copper, pink gold is created. "Rose gold," as it is otherwise known, is again back in fashion because its rich pink hue goes with virtually everything. Start with pink diamonds, topaz, and sapphire, and then run the gamut of red gemstones from rubies and pyrope to almandine and rubellite. Rose gold exudes a wonderfully warm glow that casts many jewelry pieces in their best light.

We invite you to take a look around our rose gold jewelry and see if you find an item you truly adore. We have fantastic pieces just waiting to be worn. We carry a spectacular variety of designs and are fully confident that you will find a piece that suits you. Our store is located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find that rose gold is a true joy to wear. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and allow us to assist you in purchasing a sophisticated piece of rose gold that blends timeless appeal and durability.

Leftover Vegetable Fritters

Anytime there are left over vegetables, I use them up by making fritters, which is a great way to enjoy leftovers.

Last week, I found myself with a couple of vegetables left and then I decided to add a couple of more and they turned out so good that leftovers or not it will be a good way to prepare them at any time.

LEFTOVER VEGETABLE FRITTERS

- 1 egg beaten
- ½ cup flour
- ¼ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- 1- teaspoon garlic powder
- ½ -teaspoon salt
- ½- teaspoon pepper
- ¼ cup milk
- 2 cups vegetables

(I used broccoli, asparagus, cauliflower and string beans)

Vegetable oil for frying

I already had the leftover broccoli and cauliflower. I added the string beans and asparagus so it equaled two cups of the vegetables in all.

I used frozen asparagus and string beans, and cooked them both before I made the fritters.

Cut all the vegetables in small pieces. In a bowl, add the egg, flour, baking powder, milk, garlic powder, grated cheese, salt and pepper and mix. Add the vegetables and mix until the mixture resembles pancake mix.

In the hot oil, drop the battered vegetables by the spoonful turning until they are brown on all sides. Drain on paper towel and place in a warm oven until ready to serve.

Spinach Rollatini

Remember when the cartoon character "Popeye" used to open a can of spinach when he wanted a source of strength to lift something heavy or perform a tough task? And it was used so that the kids who didn't like to eat spinach would see the cartoon and then try it.

Well today's recipe for spinach rolls is so delicious everyone will like it, even the kids.

SPINACH ROLLS

- 1- large bag spinach
- 1 clove of garlic (chopped)
- 2 eggs (beaten)
- ½ cups of Parmesan or Romano grated cheese
- Salt and pepper to taste

2-3 tablespoons olive oil

Boil half bag of the spinach. (Keep the other half for the latter part of the recipe)

After it is cooled, chop it up as finely as you can.

In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and the spinach. Then add the eggs, grated cheese, salt and pepper and cook until done. Set aside and cool.

Boil the rest of the spinach just for a couple of minutes.

On a cookie sheet, spread out the leaves and place the egg and spinach mixture in the center of each leaf. Roll them up and tuck them around the edge.

Keep in warming oven until ready to serve.

Quincy Chamber Of Commerce 'Taste Of Quincy' June 18

The evening will feature live music and samplings from over 25 local restaurants.

Abby Park, Adams Pub, Alba Restaurant, Assembly, Babycakes, Bubble Tea Stop, Coffee Break Café, Common Market Restaurant, Craig's Café, Fratelli's,

South West Quincy Association Meets June 26

South West Quincy Neighborhood Association (SWQNA) will host its summer meeting and get-together Wednesday, June 26 at 7 p.m. at the Granite Street Café, 378 Granite St. in Brewers' Corner.

The topic for the evening is to hear updates from City Councillors Brian Balmucci, Kirsten Hughes and Doug Gutro. In addition, Community Police Officer, James Silcox will speak of his work in the area.

The residents have asked the Association to explore the Neighborhood Crime Watch initiative with the assistance of the QPD and the city councillors.

According to Anneli Johnson, a member of the SWQNA, the Association continues to investigate the reasons the Quincy Public School buses utilize the Granite Street entrance to the Lincoln Hancock schools, instead the school bus lane on Water Street side of the building.

She said while school-buses are loading and unloading students, no traffic can move. The line of cars can reach two blocks down the street, while the buses are blocking the traffic. No emergency vehicles can proceed or pass the idling traffic, as the street is only one-lane roadway. This situation not only concerns the safety of the neighborhood but also adds to CO2 emissions. The Association is seeking to resolve this safety issue with the city officials prior to new school year begins.

The South West Quincy Neighborhood is open to anyone living in the area of Ward three, four or five. Light refreshment will be served by Granite Street Café.

For additional information, call 617-479-1601 or 617-376-0746.

Proceeds will benefit the historic Souther Tide Mill, one of America's oldest surviving tide and grist mills.

Wine and cheese will be served. There will also be a display of photos and information on the tide mill plus a presentation by Carolyn Marks.

The evening will be hosted by Douglas Morrill with the help of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill.

A donation of $25 is suggested.

$200,000 From Core Curriculum Retains Freshman Sports, Full Varsity Schedule

"I'm not saying that the $200,000 will do everything for athletics because the cuts have been much deeper than that over the years, but I think it's a good step forward to send a message to our families that we care about a lot of things and we also care about athletics, which is a meaningful part of the school experience. Be assured that come the fall I'd put that $200,000 back into the budget to go back into the core curriculum line. There is plenty of time for me to figure out where I draw that $200,000 from and I am certain that won't be an issue for the council."

"I view the athletic stuff as a structural deficit and I want to get rid of it. I don't view the core curriculum creating a structural deficit in that we are going to paying this out over a couple of years. I think it's consistent with my general thoughts and policies over the years about structural deficit. This at least establishes the minimum on the athletic budget, the minimum that we need to keep freshman sports and a full program for varsity," Koch added.

The proposal was voted through unanimously with committee member Paul Bregoli - who is also the head coach of the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team - abstaining from the vote.

In the past the curriculum reserve had $200,000 in it; this year they had increased that $200,000 by an additional $400,000, which brought the total up to $600,000. That total would have helped pay off the first 50 percent of the money for the elementary reading series and according to Assistant Superintendent Colleen Roberts they will still be able to do that because they will receive the $200,000 back in the fall.

"That money will help purchase not only the elementary reading series but also we have been able to, this year with $200,000 reserve, finish off purchasing the elementary and purchase the middle school math. We also potentially will have enough money to purchase the high school math," said Roberts. "Next year we will be worrying about reading, English language arts and the following year we will be purchasing science material."

During the May 21st budget and finance subcommittee meeting, Director of Business Affairs Jim Mullane told committee members that the athletic revolving account would have a $125,000 deficit.

"The athletic revolving account is the only account that gets a substantial amount of revenues from the revolving account as well as the Quincy Public Schools budget. The projected revenue is at $240,000; we're anticipating that we're going to need to spend $365,000 from this account so we're going to have a net deficit of $125,000," said Mullane.

"This has obviously caused some concern for the SLT (School Leadership Team) and Jim Rendle, the Athletic Director. We've been able to subsidize, we had a pretty good size amount of revenue built up, that has been chipped away pretty significantly over the past year and a half and we anticipate going into this year making no change."

According to Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, the amount of user fee funding they anticipated didn't meet their expectations. The revolving account has around $225,000 in it and after the $125,000 from this year comes out they will only have $100,000 to cover expenses.

"The athletic account is unique because it has funds coming in and out of it, and the amount of user fee funding that came in didn't meet the expectations we had," said DeCristofaro. "We thought we could receive enough user fees to sustain the programs, which we are, but we are reducing that account balance. We certainly have enough money in the account to cover the deficit we have ($125,000). The real issue is that the balance is being reduced at a pretty good pace."

With the proposal to move $200,000 into athletics the deficit will be covered and the $125,000 will remain in the revolving account.

"I thank the mayor for making this move because the last meeting I think I said I was stunned a few times when I ran into that $125,000 deficit. The only way to stop that snowball from growing is to come up with some funding to drop into the budget to make it go away," said school committee member Dave McCarthy.

"I think it's a great thing for athletics. It's nice to see us bringing back as much as we can in the budget, but in this case the athletic line, so that the new athletic directors and company will be able to at least start with their heads above the water in regards to managing it and having a foundation of money in there that we can work with. It's good for the city and if we can do these things I'm all for it."

Union Workers Oppose Proposed SQ Apartment Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than a dozen union workers voiced their opposition to a proposed South Quincy apartment building during a City Council public hearing.

Boston-based developer Cabot, Cabot & Forbes is proposing to build a six-story, 180-unit apartment building, known as Zero Penn Street, in the wedge-shaped parcel at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Penn Street. The project site is across Penn Street from the Lowe's store and opposite the Quincy Adams MBTA Station on Burgin Parkway.

The new building would have an enclosed garage located at street level topped off by five floors of rental units, including studio and one and two bedroom apartments. Ed Fleming, a Quincy attorney representing the developer, explained that the developer and property owner Michael Verrochi had altered the original proposal at the behest of neighbors who attended community meetings on the plan.

"This new proposal addressed height by lowering the building from 12 stories to six stories. It addressed surface parking by enclosing all parking within the facility in a garage on the first level and it added additional amenities that the neighbors had expressed hope for — things relative to amenities that they would see relative to landscaping and other features at the site," Fleming said. "The results of these two neighborhood meetings that we had, and a well thought out concept by both Cabot, Cabot & Forbes and Mr. Verrochi, is a beautiful development — one that will be a gateway to the city."

Zero Penn would also include two courtyards, located on top of the garage level and not visible from the street. The south courtyard, facing Burgin Parkway, would feature a swimming pool while the north courtyard would have garden space.

Before heading to the council for approval, the Conservation Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals both vetted the project, Fleming said. The Conservation Commission issued an order of conditions, which contained a series of steps the developer needed to take to ensure appropriate water flow in the nearby Town Brook. The ZBA granted a special permit-floodplain and several variances, including one that allows the development to have one parking space per unit, for a total of 180, because of the proximity of the site to the MBTA station.

As part of the City Council's 2008 review of the Lowe's store, the company was asked to include in its traffic study an analysis for 22,500 square feet of retail development at what is now the Zero Penn site. During the presentation on Zero Penn, Mike Hall, a traffic engineer for Tetra Tech, compared the results of the that 2008 traffic with one for the 180-unit apartment building.

According to Hall, the apartment building is expected generate a total of 910 daily trips on weekdays and 868 on Saturdays. The 2008 study found that retail development would add 1,932 trips a day during weekdays and 2,707 daily trips on Saturdays. Hall said the difference was significant because Lowe's was asked to pay for $2 million worth of traffic mitigation — reconstruction of the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Penn Street and re-signalization of Water and Liberty Streets — based partially on the added trips retail development at the Zero Penn site would create.

"All the intersections that were improved and designed incorporate the traffic associated with the 22,500 square feet of retail," Hall said.

At the end of Fleming's presentation to the council, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said the developer had 'fallen short' on meeting community standards — one of the criteria the council bases their approval of projects on — by not reaching an agreement with labor unions. Fleming said Cabot, Cabot & Forbes had been in contact with unions and reached agreements.

"We've had numerous meetings with representatives of the trades and have agreements with members of trades on this particular project — a meeting of the minds that they will be involved," Fleming said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin then asked Fleming which unions the development had agreements with. Fleming said that the developer and a carpenter's union were close to an agreement, and discussions with sheet metal workers were ongoing. Those comments drew a strong rebuke from sheet metal workers present at the meeting, who said no such conversations had taken place.

After the presentation 16 union workers and leaders spoke out, urging the developer to reach an overarching agreement with the Quincy & South Shore Building Trades Council to allow union workers to build the site.

"I want to set the record very clear — we have no working agreement at all with Cabot, Cabot & Forbes. They refuse to enter into an agreement," Bob Rizzi, president of the trades council, said. "We built Munroe Place, we built Presidents Place with our pension money. There is not a veteran's park in this city that we haven't done for free. Father Bill's we did for free. The Germantown Neighborhood Center we did for free. We've done over $2 million worth of work in this city for free and not ask for a damn thing."

"All we ask for is a fair wage with benefits so people can retire and live with some dignity in this city."

"It's a travesty to have this developer come in here and try and circumvent the authority of the Quincy & South Shore Building Trades and negotiate and separate the trades and sign separate agreements," added Brian Brousseau, president of Roofers and Waterproofers Local 33. "There should be an agreement on this job for Quincy residents and Quincy construction workers to build this project and it should be done through a memorandum with the Quincy & South Shore Building Trades. That's the only way it should be done and at this point in time, I, and my members and their families, rise to oppose this project until such is done."

The project did receive the backing of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce during the hearing. Chamber President Dean Rizzo said developments like the Zero Penn proposal complement the $1.6 billion Quincy Center project, and said the council should support it.

"This is the type of project that complements that type of project and this is the type of project we envisioned all across the city — as the development takes place downtown we're going to see people taking advantage and investing in their community," Rizzo said. "We should commend that and support that and do what we can to continue to support this periphery development. This, I would argue, is the exact type of development we want at this site in the city."

A City On The Move

Proposal Would Shift SPGA From Council To Planning Board

being rejected in 2009 – the property owner sued the city and a settlement remanded it back to the council. C-Mart wasn't the first controversial SPGA project – in 1999 the council rejected a permit for the Highpoint apartment complex and the developer sued before reaching a settlement allowing construction to go forward.

Both Palmucci and Hughes alluded to changing the PUD process during the council's vote on the C-Mart project in May. The proposal was introduced Monday night, and both cited the difficulties sitting on a permit granting body presents to ward councillors, who need to be advocates for their constituents at all times except when sitting at the SPGA.

"Most of us have had some issues or some difficulties relative to performing our duties to the best of our abilities as ward councillors while also simultaneously trying to juggle the difficulties of remaining impartial when there is a proposal in your ward, such as there is in mine currently," Palmucci said. "I think it's certainly worthy of this council to consider this change."

"It's very difficult for someone who advocates for the ward, and for those constituents, to wear a completely different hat," Hughes added. "I think it's difficult for the constituents that I serve to understand that. Quite frankly that's not their job to understand – they see all of us as their advocates and I think it's too much to ask of the people that we serve to completely discount talking to their councillors, asking them to advocate for the neighborhood."

The proposed change received a lukewarm reception from the council Monday night. Councillor Joe Finn said he was inclined to vote against the measure. He recalled that Mark Bobrowski, a New England Law professor, praised Quincy's PUD vetting process when the zoning code was rewritten in 2011.

"I'm probably going to oppose it quite honestly," Finn said. "I remember when we were going through the whole recodification of the zoning ordinance, Prof. Bobrowski had testified that PUD, the way it was exercised in the City of Quincy was one of the most innovative, most flexible, ways he found for ensuring that development met the needs of local neighborhoods, local communities, and the like."

Finn added that he was happy the proposal was made, because it would give councillors an opportunity to better know their role as SPGA members.

"I do look forward to the discussion very much because I think, if nothing else, it becomes a better time to come to a clearer picture and understanding of our role, both as elected legislators and as people sitting on such an authority," Finn said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin also said he was leaning towards opposing the change. He said that given Quincy's Plan A, or 'strong mayor,' form of government, voting on PUD projects is one of the most important roles the council has.

"I appreciate the opportunity to have a healthy discussion on it but to analogize it to the work I do in the court system I don't think there is any stronger capacity we sit in than as a quasi-judicial body," Coughlin said. "I can make recommendations, and do, to judges everyday but at the end of the day the buck stops with the judge who makes that final decision."

"I believe that people similarly elect us to hold some type of decision-making authority and in this form of government there are limitations on our ability to either establish policy or have some type of significant level of control over what happens in a neighborhood. I can go to the Planning Board or Zoning Board and testify and make recommendations but at the end of the day I don't control the outcome."

While not voicing support or opposition to the giving the authority over PUD proposals to the Planning Board, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he was concerned over the timing of the proposal.

Boston Harbor Islands Presentation June 12

The Squantum Community Association will host an informative presentation by Boston Harbor Islands Park Ranger Donald Cann Wednesday, June 12 at 7 p.m. at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Squantum.

The public is invited to attend.

Cann will discuss the beauty, tranquility, history, and outdoor activities available at the Boston Harbor Islands National Park, including hiking trails, beaches, ranger-led tours, camping, kayaking, nature walks, and historic sites. The Park features 34 islands and 35 miles of coastline.

"I think it's an important discussion. The timing of the discussion though I have some concerns about," McNamee said. "Just because we have situation where there is a particularly tough SPGA vote to be taken in their ward, that all of sudden there is some sort of new or more emergent reason for us to consider this, I just don't think this is the way we should frame public policy."

The matter was referred to the council's Ordinance Committee for further discussion. Though it is a zoning change, it was not sent to the Planning Board for an advisory opinion. Councillors felt that board shouldn't review a plan that would increase its authority in the city if it were approved.

"It almost seems to me to be a conflict of interest because they're going to vote on essentially expanding their power base," Councillor Doug Gutro said. "My sense is if the Planning Board or the mayor want control we'll get a positive recommendation and if they want to leave it with us we'll get a negative recommendation."

"If I were to amend an ordinance of this city," McNamee stated, "shifting authority that resides in this body to let's say the director of inspectional services, would I refer that order to the director of inspectional services? No."

Union Bullying Backfires When Children Targeted

By RON COGLIANO

A union organizer heckling through a megaphone during the singing of the National Anthem shocked the civic minded crowd at a recent South Shore YMCA ceremony, but it's not surprising given the track record of organized labor. When unions fail to win competitive bids, they routinely resort to bullying tactics in an attempt to pressure the project owner to cave to their demand, which is hire union only.

In building a new facility, the Quincy-based YMCA accepted bids from qualified contractors, both union and non-union. According to reports, 35 percent of all bids were awarded to union contractors, but a firm not affiliated with the union was low bidder on the electrical work. This sparked the misguided resentment and vengeance of the electricians' union, IBEW 103, which has a history of deplorable retaliation.

In Newburyport, IBEW 103 chartered a plane to disrupt a high school graduation so the crowd could read a banner flying behind it that protested construction at a local hospital. In Boston, an official of IBEW 103 released live rats into a crowded restaurant that hired non-union electricians, according to the arrest record and court documents listed on www.unionsalaries.com.

The audacity of the YMCA to employ fair and competitive bidding to achieve the best value for their construction dollars resulted in organized labor outrageously threatening local restaurants participating in the Y's Taste of the South Shore last month, an annual fundraiser to send needy kids to summer camp. Show up at the event, restaurants were warned, and the union would publish health inspection reports or picket eateries. The union must have run out of rats to put in restaurants.

Unfortunately, some restaurants succumbed to the union's threats and pulled out of the event, while other restaurateurs proudly stood their ground for the sake of the children. The fundraiser was a success, in part because the local business community chipped in to make up the shortfall caused by organized labor's dirty tricks.

What's truly shocking and repulsive about the behavior in Quincy of IBEW 103 and its affiliate, the Building Trades Council, is the negative impact on the underprivileged children served by the YMCA. Those of us who work for merit shop, or non-union contractors, are accustomed to union bullying. We're grownups, we can take it. When the union bullying targets children, it's time to say enough is enough.

The irony is, in protesting the use of merit shop contractors and employees on the Quincy YMCA, the unions are acting like children, throwing temper tantrums and screaming fits in hopes of getting their way. The merit shop community and anyone who has the temerity to hire responsible, qualified nonunion contractors often encounter abusive treatment by organized labor. It includes harassment, character assassination, name calling, picketing, slander and other unprofessional behavior.

The unions have found themselves on the defensive for their boorish behavior. Restaurant owners publicly criticized them, and 18-year old student Ciana Bonfiglioli captured the public sentiment when she told the press the unions' behavior was "off-putting." The unions are experiencing a public backlash in Quincy, much as they did in Newburyport where a spontaneous community organization formed to support the expansion of the hospital project IBEW 103 opposed.

However, they don't appear to be getting the message, in part because of silence from elected leaders.

Quincy City Hall, including Mayor Thomas Koch, has been absent in calling the unions to end their harassment of the YMCA. These so-called leaders should have exhibited real leadership and put an end to the bad behavior quite some time ago, when organized labor first put underprivileged children in their crosshairs.

But then again when it comes to reigning in the unions' scurrilous antics, there has almost always been a dearth of leadership in Quincy City Hall. Elected officials in Quincy ought to realize that they represent the entire community, not just the special interest labor unions.

If the union bosses won't change their ways, and Quincy City Hall fails to offer leadership, then maybe it's time for rank-and-file union members to explain to their so-called leaders that their tactics are embarrassing and backfiring.

Ronald N. Cogliano is President of the Merit Construction Alliance, a Kingston-based trade organization representing the interests of merit shop contractors and employees.

Union Workers Oppose Project

reminded the council that developer Beal/Street-Works made the Quincy Center project a union one.

"There have been references from the business community tonight about how this is important with all the downtown development that's about to happen," Brett said. "It's 100 percent union - that developer chose to work with us and put in controls and do everything that was possible between the parties and worked out an agreement. Those jobs are going to be built, the developers are going to make money, and it's going to be a great project."

Rosemarie Martin, a Penn Street resident who spoke at the meeting, urged councillors to support the project.

"I strongly support this project. I think it's necessary for this city to go forth and have something that looks wonderful coming off the highway instead of what's there now - it's horrible," Martin said. "Mr. Verrochi has been an asset to the city as long as I've known him. He has donated, given everything he can to churches, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts - anybody that's asked him for any help, he's always come through. It's time we stand behind him and give to him what he's given to this city and allow this project to go forth."

The council's next meeting on the proposal is scheduled for Wednesday, June 12, at 7:30 p.m. inside the temporary council chamber in City Hall.

Koch: No Dumpster Rental Fees For Condo Owners

$30 a month – that is $3,000 that would be charged by Sunrise over the lifetime of the contract. Under the previous contract [condo associations] didn't have to pay anything, so you're getting the same thing but now you're paying more for it.

"Folks in condos pay property taxes just like folks in a single-family home pay property taxes. As part of our property taxes, we've said traditionally in Quincy that trash removal is something we're going to provide as a service without any additional costs to the taxpayer. But now if you live in a condo and you don't already own a rear loader you have to pay $3,000 over the course of this contract."

On Monday, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker told The Sun that Koch would reach out to Sunrise to resolve the situation. The mayor's intent, Walker explained, is to come to an agreement that would keep condo owners from paying the fees.

"The mayor is going to have a discussion with the contractor and determine the best way to move forward," Walker said. "However it works out in the end there won't be an additional cost to condo owners – the mayor has no intention of having that happen."

Walker said he expects an agreement to be reached within a couple weeks, and doesn't expect it to cost the city a substantial amount.

During the Finance Committee meeting Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin also voiced their concerns about the contract with Sunrise. They said that condo associations in their respective wards had purchased new front-loading dumpsters before the city and Sunrise signed the contract, and were concerned about having to eat that cost. Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi said his department and Sunrise president Joseph Lombardi would work with them to find a market for the dumpsters.

"We will do whatever we can and this fellow (Lombardi) is a quality individual. If somebody has bought one it's unfortunate and we understand that," Raymondi said.

Croall was also concerned that seniors living in condos could have issues accessing the new dumpsters if their openings were too high or if they lacked side panels. John Sullivan, director of waste management for the DPW, said it would not be an issue.

"The only ones that are really tall are the 10-yarders and all his 10-yarders will have sliding side doors," Sullivan said. "Even if they're 10-yarders, they all have a trunnion bar that is four feet high – the trunnion bar is where the opening is. So no matter what size, they're already getting the trash up that high no matter what kind of dumpster they're using."

"I am honored to receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award," Santoro said. "Richard Koch and the entire Koch family have always given of themselves to the youth of the City of Quincy. Receiving this award at the end of my career, in their name, means a great deal to me," said Santoro, who will close the books on an impressive career at the close of the school year.

"It is nice to know that you live in a community where the partnership between elected officials, the school system and philanthropic citizens like Richard Koch have always provided opportunity for its youth to learn and grow physically," he added.

The award will be presented by Mayor Thomas P. Koch, son of the late Richard J. Koch.

"Frank Santoro dedicated his career to creating opportunities for young people to succeed," said Koch. "It is fitting to honor Frank's service as he winds down his career, however, no tangible award can truly capture the essence of making a difference in the life of a child," Koch added.

and in some cases rebuild the programs. Community businesses are being asked by multiple individuals and sports teams for donations with no visible or pride return on their investments," said Mahoney.

"Parents and boosters are in competition for the same funding sources and are in need of partnership and programmatic development to ensure equitable opportunities for all athletic programs. The Quincy Athletic Partnership Program, an extension of the Quincy Business Partnership Program, exists to support the athletic program as a funding source through sponsorship. Therefore be it resolved QPS move forward with the creation and development with the Quincy Athletic Partnership Program to support the QPS athletic program to include sponsorship, advertisements, social media and sports venues through a specific graphically unified and branded manner plaque programs."

Mahoney added that she would be doing the legwork and research, working collaboratively with anyone who wanted to work on the project along with talking with other school districts to see how they have built programs similar to the one she is proposing.

"There will be research that I will work on collaboratively with anybody else that would like to work with me," said Mahoney. "I have established a meeting next week with another community that we can go in and look at their baselines of how they did it so we don't have to rebuild the program from scratch."

The program would be for both high schools and middle school programs and was moved to be reviewed and discussed in Policy Subcommittee.

EBT Reform

By State Sen.
JOHN KEENAN

Many have written or called to seek my thoughts relative to the EBT audit recently released by the State Auditor, and others to ask why during recent debate on the Fiscal Year 2014 budget I voted against several EBT amendments.

First, let me explain my recent votes related to EBT reform. The EBT reform amendments which were filed last week during the budget process addressed such issues, among others, as requiring that identification photographs be placed on EBT cards, that there be set annual re-enrollment periods, and that an entirely new eligibility verification system be developed and put in place. Quite frankly, each of these ideas may work. But the problem is, they were presented during budget debate, along with approximately 722 other amendments relating to all areas of the State's approximately $33.9 billion fiscal plan. Those offering the amendments were seeking to have the Senate act quickly, and I wouldn't just sign onto budget amendments without the opportunity to review, study, and analyze them.

Also, even if I thought the EBT amendments to be good ideas, I wouldn't commit to them without knowing where the money would come from to pay for the costs involved. For instance, the cost to implement a photo identification program for 800,000 individuals is unknown. Some estimate the cost at nearly $15 million in the first year, and then $5 million thereafter. Those who filed the amendments did not offer any amendments or other guidance as to where the money would come from to pay the upfront cost. Likewise, they did not offer any information as to how much might be saved under such a system.

Fiscal responsibility in its most basic form means analyzing the up front and continuing costs of new programs, making sure the savings warrant the investment, and making sure we know how to pay those up-front costs in a rational and reasonable manner.

What I hope to convey with the above, is that the budget process, with 725 proposed amendments on all kinds of matters, is not the best way to consider and implement comprehensive reform.

Now, with regards to the recent audit of the Department of Transitional Assistance, particularly the EBT program, I have read the audit report and have many thoughts. Without getting into details, the most alarming thing I discovered in the audit is that the Department of Transitional Assistance has available to it all kinds of information and data about EBT card use. It has enough information, data and management reports available to detect and observe patterns of use by individuals and merchants. This information could, and should have been used to root out and prevent fraud and abuse. For whatever reason, the information, data and reports were not utilized.

What the above clearly indicates is that there has to be accountability not only by those receiving benefits, but also by those charged with administering the EBT programs.

The State Senate is working on and has committed to filing comprehensive benefits reform within the next few weeks. The Senate has already announced that it will consider the placement of photographs on EBT cards, and will consider a whole host of other ideas. In this process, the Senate will review the audit, further research the matter, come up with a comprehensive plan to not only combat EBT fraud, but to make sure the program is run efficiently. The Senate will also figure out how to pay for the plan upfront so that long-term savings are realized. This is the best way to ensure that those who truly need benefits get them, and that taxpayers are best protected against fraud and abuse.

Markey Supports $1.6 Billion Downtown Redevelopment

Cong. Ed Markey, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, has endorsed Quincy's $1.6 billion downtown redevelopment.

In a statement released by his campaign, Markey said:

"The downtown Quincy redevelopment project is a great example of how, when the private and public sectors work together, good jobs can be created, and the local economy improved. He cited the nearly 18,000 construction and permanent jobs that will be created by the project. The first groundbreaking on the project will take place in the next few weeks, when construction will start on the Kilroy, a 15-story residential building, and Granite Trust Lofts, along with office and retail space.

"Mayor (Tom) Koch, and all the local and state officials in Quincy have done a great job with the Quincy redevelopment project," said Markey, "and as a United States Senator, I would welcome the opportunity to help them at the federal level."

"Our economy is starting to improve after the worst financial recession since the Great Depression. But there is still work to do to grow our economy and create great jobs," said Markey. "Investing in projects like the downtown Quincy redevelopment, repairing structurally deficient bridges, and improving our transportation infrastructure all across the state, creates jobs right away for workers in the Commonwealth - jobs that can't be outsourced. Such projects also mean that the economy of Massachusetts will continue to grow and remain competitive."

The statement also said Cong. Markey has worked to promote an innovation economy that will create hundreds of thousands of new jobs of and for the future. "I know Quincy has taken important steps recently towards attracting new innovative biotechnology companies," pointed out Markey, "and I look forward to being its partner in these efforts." In 2012, Massachusetts received more than 5,000 NIH grants and a total of nearly $2.5 billion, which helped companies to innovate to find new cures to diseases and conditions affecting millions of Americans.

As part of his economic plan, Markey also stressed how important it is for students to have access to the tools of the 21st century. "We have to make sure that the students of today have the tools to become creative, productive drivers of tomorrow's economy," Markey created the E-Rate program to make sure schools and libraries have access to the Internet. To date, his program has distributed more than $30 billion to ensure schools have access to the Web. Quincy Public Schools has benefited with thousands of dollars under the program.

Neighborhood Demographics Focus Of New Map Series, Report

The City of Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) have compiled a series of maps depicting 2010 U.S. Census and 2011 American Community Survey (ACS) data at the neighborhood level.

Map themes include total population, population by age, population by race, median age, households in poverty and educational attainment, among others. The maps and a report entitled "City of Quincy Demographic and Census Data Analysis" can be found on the City website at www.quincyma.gov/government/PLANNING/Demographic-maps.cfm.

Data reflected in the demographic report are taken from the 2010 decennial (10-year) census which is a 100 percent population count and the 2011 ACS which reflects a five-year sampling period from 2007 to 2011.

"Unlike past decennial census data releases, the yearly ACS data enables the City to analyze population, housing, economic, and other data on a real-time basis, facilitating planning for the many federal grants and other programs administered by PCD on behalf of Quincy," said Planning Director Dennis Harrington.

Notable trends within the Census data include higher educational attainment and household incomes, along with increased racial diversity. For example, the percentage of Quincy's population 18 and older holding a bachelor's degree increased 59 percent from 1990 to 2011, while households earning more than $50,000 increased 113 percent over the same period.

Planning staff, under the direction of Harrington and Community Development Director Sean Glennon, are accessing a free Census data virtual warehouse at the University of Minnesota Population Center which was featured in the November 2012 issue of the American Planning Association's Planning Magazine. The National Historic Geographic Information System posts map-ready Census data on a timely basis and also provides historic Census data back to the original Census in 1790.

Registry of Deeds Joins Partnership To Revitalize Distressed Properties

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has joined Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley and Registers of Deeds from across the state in supporting the Distressed Properties Identification and Revitalization Grant Program (DPIR Grant).

The program which targets Massachusetts municipalities with high rates of distressed and vacant properties will utilize funds recovered by the AG's Office through a multi-state settlement concerning unlawful foreclosure methods. The program which is designed to identify bank owned properties and return them to productive residential use will also seek to ensure that property owners are in compliance with state and local ordinances in bringing properties into a state of good repair.

"This program is a great example of the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office partnering with local organizations to address a layer of the foreclosure crisis," O'Donnell said. "This grant opportunity will turn unproductive properties into a productive part of our communities."

Up to $1 million will be available for the DPIR Grant and eligible applicants must be Massachusetts gateway municipalities with a high jurisdictional or geographic rate of distressed property and municipalities may apply jointly. Selected applicants will be tasked with working with the appropriate register of deeds and municipality to identify properties and partner with property owners for proper rehabilitation and a return to residential use.

"Communities with high rates of distressed properties are encouraged to utilize this grant to help return homes to acceptable standards and encourage owners to place them back on the market," Coakley said. "Our extensive grant opportunities are designed to mitigate the impacts of the foreclosure crisis throughout the Commonwealth, and it's our goal to provide this direct relief to municipalities in need."

Interested applicants can visit the Attorney General's website, www.mass.gov/ago/grants for additional information and to download application materials.

Proposals for the DPIR Fund are to be delivered via email to AGOfgrants@state.ma.us by 4 p.m. on June 13th.

DOVE, QCAP To Present Affordable Housing Workshop

- Are there other kinds of public housing?

At commencement, comedian Steve Sweeney, M.F.A., delivered the commencement address and received the Distinguished Speaker Award for his contributions to the entertainment industry and his lifelong dedication to education.

Rebecca Silva, M.S., M.T. (ASCP), the recipient of the 2012-2013 Patricia M. McDermott Award for Excellence in Education and outstanding service to the Quincy College community.

Rahmy Eltoury of Quincy has been named to the Dean's List for the spring and its students, serves as mace bearer for the ceremony.

Sweeney's career has included performances at all major comedy clubs throughout the country. He has had roles in approximately 30 movies including "Back to School"; "Celtic Pride"; "Something about Mary"; and "Me, Myself, and Irene." He was the first local comedian to break into television on the Boston-based sit-com "Park St. Under" and has appeared on "Late Night with David Letterman."

Sweeney has also donated his time and his talents to causes both large and small. He is an adjunct professor at Suffolk University, where he teaches Creative-writing and Screen-writing; and has also taught Creative-writing at Quincy College.

A Charlestown native and graduate of Charlestown High School, Sweeney earned his BA in Theatre Arts from the University of Massachusetts and his Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing from the University of Southern California. He has lived in Quincy for the past 20 years.

Silva received both her B.S. and M.S. in Clinical Laboratory Science, with a concentration in Adult Education and Biotechnology, from the University of Rhode Island. Prior to entering the academic arena she worked in various hospital-based laboratory positions to refine her technical skills and hone her management style.

Professor Silva retains employment in the clinical lab to keep her skills current and provide her students with knowledge of the cutting edge technology used in healthcare today. This commencement completes her fourth academic year of teaching the next generation of laboratories at Quincy College. Further, in this last year Professor Silva was instrumental in a partnership with the City of Boston that brought the College and her students an $800,000 tuition-based grant opportunity her current students, as well as future students, could take advantage of to ease their financial journey through the challenging MLT program.

In addition to her work at Quincy College, Professor Silva is also pursuing a Doctor of Education in Higher Education and Adult Learning from Walden University.

emester at Nazareth College in Rochester, N.Y. Eltoury is a junior majoring in music education.

Third Time No Charm For NQ Boys' Volleyball

By BILL GRIFFIN

One of the hardest challenges in sports is to beat a good team three times in the same season.

The difference between the two is too small, the margin for mistakes too slim, the power of the law of averages too great. All the emotional pull belongs with the team which lost twice, with the team looking to prove its worth and avenge the two earlier defeats.

North Quincy defeated Greater New Bedford Vocational twice during the regular season. The No. 3 seeded Red Raiders took the first game of last week's tournament match behind brilliant play from seniors Michael Tran and Matthew MacPhail, but the sixth-seeded Bears rallied to sweep the final three games and oust North, 3-1 in the Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinals.

The scores of the games were: 17-25, 26-24, 25-22, and 25-19.

"It is hard," said North coach Jason Cai whose team finished the season as Southern Alliance league champs with an overall record of 16-5. "No matter how much you guard against it, it's human nature to feel a little complacent, to take it a little easy if you've beaten a team twice. That might have come back to hurt us tonight."

North won the earlier matches, 3-1, but each game was tight, with margins of just a few points. New Bedford Voke (14-6) was very close. The Bears knew this. They also knew something else. Their season ended last year against the Red Raiders in the same North Quincy gym where the two played last week. They had motivation from this spring and from last spring. It was a strong force.

"Every one of our kids was here last year and they all remember what it was like going home on the bus with the seniors crying and there was no more volleyball to play," said Voke coach Richie Gomes. "We made some defensive adjustments, but the big thing was the emotion from last year and the first two games this year."

Tran, the best of an excellent senior class for North, finished his career with an outstanding match. He had 19 kills and three digs. He showed touch and power at the net, especially in big points. He covered the court with hustle and talent, saving points and putting his teammates in position for good scoring shots.

"Tran is a from a very knowledgeable volleyball background. He has excellent instincts and it shows in his play," said Cai.

Cai said before the match that he wanted a fast start and his team gave it to him. The Red Raiders took a six-point lead at 10-4 and maintained it steadily for a 25-19 decision in the game and a 1-0 lead. Tran, with help from Efthim Butka (five kills) controlled the net. MacPhail (11 kills, three assists), Andrew Sok, and Jackie Chen served effectively. North passed the ball well. Oresti Bega (40 assists) set the ball for smashes and touch shots at the net. North's quickness kept rallies alive. All seemed well.

"The key thing in the game and the match was our passing," said Cai. "In the first game we got our passes where they belonged. We didn't pass well the rest of the game and they did. That was the difference."

North had a chance to seize the match in a taut, exciting second game. There were 12 ties and 11 lead changes in the game. Tran, Butka, and Felix Man (six kills) were powers at the net. Sok played well on the backline, sliding and keeping points alive. The Red Raiders led, 23-22 and were two points away from a 2-0 lead. It was tied at 22-22, 23-23, and 24-24. North was right there. However, a Derek Lewis smash and a service return error gave the Bears the deciding two points and the game for a 1-1 tie.

An opportunity slipped away and it did not return.

"Service returns in the set were a key for us," said Cai. "We missed six in that game. They had good serves, but they were returnable. If we convert half of those misses, we're able to win the set."

In the final two games, Lewis (a 6'4" athlete) took over the match with his speed, power and skills. He not only controlled the net, he also made passes and saved points with his reach and reactions. He set a school record of 39 kills last week, and against North, it seemed like he had 139.

"He has the ability to take over a match and he did tonight. North is a hard team to beat," said Gomes.

"We knew he was the player we had to stop, but in the final two games he took control," said Cai.

The final two sets followed a similar pattern. New Bedford Voke spurred to a narrow, early lead and held it. In the third game, the Bears went up 4-0 and

Presidents Bow To Oliver Ames In Quarterfinals

Quincy Softball Plays Hard Until The End

By BILL GRIFFIN

They played hard until the final out of the final inning of the final game of their season.

Quincy had to win its last three games to make the tourney. The Presidents won them. They had to rally from two runs down in the bottom of the sixth inning in the regular-season finale to march into the playoffs. They rallied. They wanted to finish their tournament game with pride. They finished it by hitting line drives.

It wasn't until Oliver Ames' shortstop Kayla Soucie leaped high to grab a smoking liner by Taylor Parry that Quincy's season ended with a 5-2 loss to the Tigers in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional Softball tourney in North Easton last week.

"We didn't give up which is all a coach can ask. We kept running and hitting right until the end," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers whose team finished the season at 10-11.

Quincy trailed 5-0 with two out and nobody on in the seventh inning. The odds against them were great, but they kept playing. Rachel Papile hustled out an infield hit and freshman Nicole Jorgensen (3-3 for the game) singled. They moved along on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Devon Varmahmoodi.

They would not give up. They were within 5-2 with a runner on second. Memories of the Stoughton rally danced in the head. Parry drilled a shot which seemed headed for the left center gap, but Soucie went high for an excellent catch to finish the game and season. It was fitting that Quincy ended it with a hard line drive.

"If that ball goes through, it's 5-3 and who knows what might happen. What matters most to me is they didn't get down on themselves. They gave it a great effort," said Sommers.

Quincy had another fine shot, trailing 1-0 in the top of the fifth, Jorgensen lined a two-out single. Varmahmoodi followed with a sinking line drive to right. Oliver Ames' Jamie Gottwald gambled, slid along the top of the grass and made the catch inches from the ground. The gamble worked. If it didn't....

"...It's a tie game and Devon is on second. That was a great catch," said Sommers.

The best lesson Quincy learned was that the tourney is friendly to teams with experience. Oliver Ames played smallball, bunting, stealing bases to build an early lead. Pitcher Mattea Sarnicki kept the Presidents swinging and instant too late or instant too soon with a mix of her off-speed stuff which yielded 10 outs by flyballs or popups.

Toss in errorless defense, two-game changing plays and Oliver Ames had the all the ingredients for a tournament win.

"They're more experienced than we are and it showed. Their pitcher was good and their defense was excellent. We knew that," said Sommers.

Quincy had only three seniors on the field and four on its roster in the tourney. The seasoned players will be missed, but this is a sophomore-junior team which learned well how difficult it is when one loss ends a season.

"These girls know that they don't want to do this again," said Sommers who has made the tournament for all his four years at Quincy. "They don't want to cry in the outfield because there is no more softball to play again. It's hard but this is the best kind of experience to gain."

One of the most promising players is Jorgensen. She was a significant factor in Quincy's late charge to the tourney. She hit a three-run homer which landed in the Kiddie Park against North. Her single started the winning rally against Stoughton with two out and nobody on base. She stung the ball for three hits against Oliver Ames. She has power and she makes contact.

"She grew up as a softball player," said Sommers. "Her improvement from the beginning of the season to the end was huge. She learned on the varsity level and by the end of the season, she was making contact consistently."

Quincy also returns its sophomore battery of Saxon Bresnahan and catcher Angelina Avitabile. Bresnahan struck out 11 against the Tigers and gave Quincy another complete-game effort. Only two of Oliver Ames' runs came from hits. Bresnahan struck out 53 batters in her last 25 innings. She experienced the test of pitching games her team had to win and she flourished.

"Her command of her stuff and her poise on the mound got better on the season went along. I'm proud of her," said Sommers.

Avitabile handled a high, twisting, major-league pop-up which came directly out of a tough sun and nailed a base stealer with a strong, accurate throw in the fifth. Varmahmoodi contributed to the defense with a difficult juggling catch with her back to the plate in center in the fifth.

"Angelina has played great defense all year. She's only a sophomore, but we knew we could count on her," said Sommers.

Sophomore Emma Kelly and Parry also had hits for Quincy. The Tigers scored one in the first, one in the fifth and three in the sixth for the five-run lead which held up under Quincy's closing rush.

Varmahmoodi, Devin McMahon, Ashley Faiella and Mallory McKinnon are graduating seniors. They are the first class that Sommers worked with as a coach at Quincy, and he will miss them.

"Their leadership, the way they never gave up was excellent," said Sommers. "Over four years, I watched them grow up and it's tough to see them go. They are a great group of kids."

QUINCY HIGH'S Devon Varmahmoodi shined at the recent Patriot League All-Star Game, collecting three hits and two RBI in the Keenan Division's 7-1 win over the Fisher Division. Five other local softball players were featured in the all-star game played at Quincy's Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Six Local Softball Players Patriot League All-Stars

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was a strong Quincy flavor to the Patriot League All Star softball game played at Mitchell-McCoy Field last week.

Quincy High's Devon Varmahmoodi, Angelina Avitabile and Saxon Bresnahan all contributed to the Keenan Division's 7-1 win over the Fisher Division.

North Quincy was also well represented. Liz Kelly, Natasha Sautter, and Caitlin Bulger all played for the Fisher squad.

Varmahmoodi was the big star with two singles, a double and two RBI for the winners. It was Varmahmoodi's first appearance in the all-star game and the Quincy senior captain enjoyed her big day.

"It was an honor and I was excited," she said. "I was a little nervous because I didn't know a lot of the girls, but everyone was welcoming. It was a great experience."

Bresnahan pitched two strong innings and went 2-2 at the plate. Avitabile, a sophomore catcher, had 1-2 game at the plate.

Kelly played shortstop, Sautter pitched and Bulger saw action in the outfield for the Fisher squad.

NORTH QUINCY'S Liz Kelly was among three Red Raiders selected for the Patriot League All-Star Softball Game.

never trailed in the game despite good work at the net by Tran, MacPhail and Sebastian Francois (six kills, four blocks). Tran served well and North was within, 23-22, but the Bears and Lewis finished it with a smash and a service winner for a 2-1 edge.

"It was a match of runs. They had a lot of three and four-point runs and those helped them in the last two sets," said Cai.

After two winners from Man in the fourth set, the Bears ran five straight points for a 9-5 lead. North never led again. They were even at 12-12, 13-13, and 16-16 on a Tran kill, a Francois block and a Bega putaway at the net. The Red Raiders were within 20-18, but with all their focus on controlling Lewis, his teammates took control of the net and finished the match with smashes and strong shots which forced North errors.

North won the first game, was tied at 24-24 in the second, and were within 23-22 in the third and 20-18 in the fourth. The margin was most slim just as it was in the first two matches between the teams this season. This time the edge went to New Bedford Voke. The law of averages? It is hard to sweep a good team three times in one season.

"I don't think we brought our A game tonight and give them credit. They took advantage," said Cai. "It gets back to the passing. If we pass the ball well to the center and set up our chances, it might have been a different story."

The Red Raiders lose seven seniors, including Sok, Man, MacPhail, Tran and Francois. Emmitt Harrow and Jesse Huynh are also seniors who contributed for North.

"They've been a good class and they played some great volleyball," said Cai whose team advanced to the sectional semis in 2011 and 2012. "Tran is a three-year starter and a lot of the seniors started for two years. They contributed a great deal to the program."

Assistant Coach Succeeds Jim Connor;
'I'm Looking To Build Players With Character'

Mark Nutley New NQHS Head Football Coach

By BILL GRIFFIN

Anyone who watched the football game on Thanksgiving knows well what the problem is for North Quincy. The problems is numbers.

Quincy fielded a roster twice the size of North. Quincy has a new school, state-of-the-art athletic facilities and its own gleaming practice field set to open footsteps from the locker room in the fall. The school holds a great attraction for students and athletes.

"Let's face it. The odds are stacked against us," said Mark Nutley who will succeed Jim Connor as head coach of the Red Raiders in the fall. "But I think we can do it. We have our players talking to friends about playing for North. We're tapping into a new market with new faces and so far it has gone well. Another thing is I tell the kids is no one has a position. If a player is good enough as a freshman, he'll play on varsity."

North may well have found the man who can handle then challenge. Nutley is a Quincy guy who knows Quincy kids. He played from 1989-1993 for Jack Raymer at Quincy. He learned Bob Noble's imaginative offense for three years as an assistant at Quincy. He has been an assistant the last three years working at North with Connor and Ken McPhee.

He has coached on the Pop Warner level with the Houghs Neck Manets. He was North's first lacrosse coach and led the the Raiders for eight years. He has worked in the Recreation Department coaching lacrosse for more than a decade with young players. In the fall, he will be coaching kids whom he has known since they were six or seven.

He knows the kids and they know him. That is a good thing.

"I've known a lot of the kids for a long time. They're Quincy kids which means they're good kids," said Nutley. "I can connect with them. Maybe a kid will remember they played lacrosse for me when he was younger and decided to give football at North a try. I think it's a plus for us."

Nutley's three years as an assistant at North are another advantage. A coach from outside the program would have to evaluate his talent, relate to his players, and understand their history before he could begin with offensive and defensive plans. Nutley knows the ability and character of his players and how they best mix together.

"I think it's a huge plus," he said. "A coach coming in blind has to get to know the talent before he can plan anything. I already have a pretty good idea of the offense and defense I want to run."

Nutley likes the quality of the players who are returning for North. He feels he has four cornerstone players in backs Eddie Guinto and Antoine Allen and linemen Don Sharpe and Vinny Tran.

"Antoine was an All-Scholastic caliber back last year and Eddie was just a notch below that. If they have daylight, they can run the ball," said Nutley. "Sharpe is an excellent lineman and Vinny will be a four-year starter up front. They are four very good players to build a team around."

Nutley played guard and offensive lineman at Quincy. He went on to play four years at Fitchburg State as a guard a defensive lineman. He was an assistant at Quincy, Stonehill College, Marshfield (a Super Bowl champ when he was there.), and North Quincy. He was especially influenced by Noble, Chris Woods at Stonehill, and Connor and McPhee at North.

"I learned a lot of offense from Bob Noble. I picked his brain. I loved his game plans," he said. "My time at Stonehill was great. I was the defense and special teams coach. I was totally submerged in football. Chris is an excellent coach. He coaching at Mississippi now."

McPhee is Massachusetts Hall of Fame coach who led North to its Super Bowl championship in 1992. Connor has a deep background in the game which includes his brother Dan, who starts at linebacker for the New York Giants.

"Kenny has been coaching for, what, a 150 years, so you have to learn something," smiled Nutley. "Jim has such a knowledge of the game. His father was a coach in Pennsylvania and his brother plays in the NFL. They were great to work with and I learned a lot from them."

Nutley's goal is to build more than football players. He wants his players to be good citizens. That sounds like something Ken McPhee might say.

"I'm looking to build character," said Nutley. "I think a lot of kids look up to football players, playing that one big game a week under the lights. I want the players to respond to that, help out and do the right thing around school. I look at it as a way of 'paying it forward' for football players."

North Quincy has a great fit as coach with Nutley because of experience, talent, and personality. He has been an assistant at Quincy and North. He has worked the offensive and defensive side of the ball with excellent head coaches. Few know the city or its athletes better. He has given countless hours to working with kids in the recreation department. He brings an enthusiasm and optimism which will serve well his football team.

"With the new playoff system, I honestly think we can compete for a playoff spot. That's our goal and I think we can reach it," he said.

GETTING FIBROMYALGIA PATIENTS ON THEIR FEET

Fibromyalgia is a perplexing disorder that produces symptoms that include fatigue and widespread pain in muscles, tendons, ligaments, and multiple tender-to-the-touch spots on the body. Causation is unclear. While it was once thought to be a purely psychological condition, health professionals are coming to understand that fibromyalgia involves the nervous system, owing to the notion that fibromyalgia patients have overly sensitive pain receptors in their brains. In addition, their brains contain high levels of neurotransmitters that conduct pain signals. Possible explanations for what makes their brains more sensitive to pain include spinal trauma. For some, chiropractic treatment brings pain relief by increasing range of joint motion and enabling fibromyalgia sufferers to engage in low-impact exercise.

Fibromyalgia sufferers can often be the victims of severe fatigue, sleep problems and insomnia, stiff joints, headaches, as well as depression. Aches and pains are signs that your body isn't working right. Your brain, spinal cord and all your nerves control how your body works. Pain relief and wellness for the entire family are our main concern at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC. We believe that our patients deserve the best of health. Start feeling better - call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and treat yourself to the natural benefits of chiropractic care. Visit our office located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. North Quincy Boys' Tennis Nets Tourney Spot

Hard Work Pays Off In 'Rebuilding' Year

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was expected to be a rebuilding season, but North Quincy's boys tennis team made it much more than that with a formula which almost always brings success. They worked hard.

"I think the thing that helped us most this year was our conditioning. The kids went the extra mile, worked hard in the off-season and I think being in such good shape set us apart in our matches," said coach Greg Conklin.

The Red Raiders went 8-8 on the season, and qualified for the a state tourney before losing 5-0 to New Bedford. Their run to the playoffs was surprising because they lost an excellent player in Peter Liu to graduation.

"He was our captain and our No. 1 player. It was a big loss," said Conklin. "I was surprised with how well we played. We played better than last year and made the playoffs which is quite an achievement for the kids."

The high points of the season were a pair of 3-2 wins over archrival Quincy. The second Quincy match took place on the clay of The Quincy Tennis Club and was a memorable afternoon for Conklin and his team.

"There's the rivalry which is so important, it was played on a unique service and it was a close, exciting match. It was a great experience for our players to play on the clay," said Conklin.

Senior co-captain Justin Guan had an excellent season at first singles. He moved up to the No. 1 spot during the season and used his power, hustle and knowledge of the game to enjoy a successful spring.

"He's not big but he generates a lot of power. He has a good forehand and a kick serve," said Conklin. "He's tenacious and he knows the game. He's almost like a mini-coach the way he works with his teammates on their game."

Senior co-captain Dan Pham won the deciding point in both Quincy matches. He is also a good doubles player and he uses his talent well at the net in singles as well.

"He's consistent at net and he can keep a rally going," said Conklin.

Junior Matt Lau, a tall lefty, posted a 10-6 record at third singles. He has a strong serve-and-volley game, and he finishes points quickly.

"Matt has a lot of potential," said Conklin. "His height is an advantage and he's decisive. He puts shots away."

Senior Tommy Nguyen and junior Yi Liu combined at first doubles. They are tall and enjoy a good serve and net games. Each has a solid first serve which he can control.

"They can serve a hard, flat serve or they can spin it," said Conklin. "They cover the court well."

Junior Yefeng Chen and senior Andi Weng fit together well at second doubles. Chen is in outstanding condition and excels at net while Weng is a strong hitter from the baseline.

"They communicate well and they are a tough, resilient team," said Conklin.

In the New Bedford match, Lau played extremely well and had North's best chance at a point. The heat was difficult and North Attleboro is a fine, experienced team.

"They came out firing and they had more playoff experience than we did," said Conklin.

Lau, Liu, Chen, Matt Pham, and Jason Tan return next year and should form a strong nucleus for the Red Raiders.

"I'm optimistic. There's some talent there. If we work as hard on our conditioning as we did this year, I think we can contend for the tourney again," said Conklin.

Quincy Girls' Tennis Fall To 5th-Seed Falmouth

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was an exciting win in second doubles and the satisfaction of a match well-played for Quincy's girls tennis team in the first round of the state tourney.

"I'm proud of all my players. I thought they all played well and gave their full effort. It was just a case of playing a very strong team," said coach Meghan Matthews after the 12th-seeded Presidents fell to fifth-seeded Falmouth, 4-1 in the first round of the tourney Saturday.

Tanya Tonnu and Samantha Pham earned Quincy a point with a terrific 6-4, 7-5 victory. The pair trailed 5-4 in the second set, but played excellent tennis under pressure to sweep the final three games and earn the victory.

"The biggest thing is they stayed calm and played their game when they fell behind," said Matthews. "There was no panic."

Tonnu and Pham developed into a strong pairing for the Presidents over the course of the season. They are a well-balanced team capable of mixing it up between the baseline and the net.

"They both improved at net and Samantha is an excellent player from the baseline. They cover the court well," said Matthews.

Quincy finished the season at 10-7 which is the best record the Presidents have posted in Matthews' six seasons as a coach.

"It was a great season, one of the best Quincy has had in a long time," she said

"There was improvement in the individual play and they all made good progress as the season went on. The two wins over North are great memories."

The Presidents lose an outstanding senior class. Rachel Smith and Kathleen Conroy, who played at second and third singles, graduate along with Christine Tran, Amanda Wong, Leslie David, Tonnu and Pham.

"They were an excellent group of seniors and they'll be hard to replace," said Matthews. "They were committed to the game. They were leaders and they put in a great deal of work in the off-season. They played a lot of tennis on their own, and it showed in their skills and conditioning."

North Quincy Girls' Tennis Bow To 4th-Seed Wellesley

By BILL GRIFFIN

There were several fine stories highlighting the North Quincy girls tennis season which ended in the first round of the South Sectional Division 1 tourney with a 4-1 loss to No. 4 seed Wellesley last week.

The first was the quality of the play the Red Raiders showed against a perennial tennis power. They gave nothing away.

"I thought we played well in every match. Wellesley is just very good," said coach Francesca DiBona whose team won eight of its last 12 matches to finish the season at 8-6.

"We didn't lose because of unforced errors or mistakes," said DiBona. "The points that Wellesley won were clean points, points they won because they hit good shots."

Junior Sanjana Kadevil played with confidence and poise in earning a straight-set win. She won the first set, 6-3 and captured a tie-breaker in the second for the victory.

"What I liked best was she wasn't nervous," said DiBona. "She played aggressive tennis and hit out on all her shots."

It was the final match for senior Tiffany Leung who had a brilliant season at first singles for the Red Raiders. She compiled a 10-3 match record and advanced to the quarterfinals of the South Sectional individual tourney. Leung didn't play a lot of tennis last year. She found her game early this spring, and led the Red Raiders to a tournament berth.

"Tiffany became much more aggressive and she started to go for it on all her shots," said DiBona. "She has such a well-rounded game. She generates a lot of power. Her serve and forehand are excellent."

The Red Raiders also gathered momentum under their first-year coach after dropping their first two matches of the year.

"We worked hard and we had good talent," said DiBona. "Our goal was to make the tournament. We were able to reel off a string of victories, and we achieved our goal."

Mallory Devoe, Kayla Sugrue, Borrianna Tzveskova, and Leung are part of a senior class which contributed greatly to this year's tourney team.

"They were especially helpful for a first-year coach," said DiBona. "They helped me get started with tryouts and working with the JV. I knew I could always count on them and that's a big thing for a first-year coach."

Four America FC Teams Advance To Playoffs In Cape Cod Challenge, Upcoming Tryouts

AFC brought eight teams to the 2013 Cape Cod Challenge, and out of the 6 teams eligible to make the playoffs, four advanced to the playoff round (U12G, U12B, U14B, U16B).

The U12G and U14B both were able to reach the championship game, but were edged out in heart breaking fashion in both games. AFC's two U10 teams (U10B and U10G) for whom there are no playoffs, both did very well, with the Boys going 2-2 and the Girls 2-1-1 in the Open A division.

While the wins were nice to see at the younger ages, what impressed the coaches and parents the most were the many moves, feints, and skilled play that AFC focuses heavily on.

Congratulations to all America FC United Teams for a great showing. To see examples/fun from the weekend, check out our team pages under the Academy tab on our website, www.americafcunited.com for photos and videos from the Cape Challenge and 2013 season.

Those interested in trying out for America FC United the club will be holding tryouts for the 2013-14 season over the next few weeks.

The tryout schedule is:

- June 13 for U9, U10 and U11 players (Therrien Field)

- June 18 for U15 and above players (Therrien Field)

- June 19 for U12, U13 and U14 players (Veterans Stadium), Extra day for those who cannot make scheduled tryout date on June 20 (Therrien Field).

All tryouts are from 6 to 7:30 p.m., and more information and registration can be found at www.americafcunited.com.

Maya Umoren Third In Shot Put

North Quincy's Maya Umoren took third place in the shot put with a throw of 39-3 in the Eastern Massachusetts Division 1 Track Championships at Andover.

The Red Raiders' Rose Bennett grabbed eighth in the high jump.

BC High won its holiday tournament behind excellent play from two Quincy natives, Dan Cobban and Andrew Jaehnig.

Cobban pitched the Eagles to a 5-2 win over Methuen in the opening game of the tourney. The Eagles then stopped Reading, 7-2 in the championship game.

Jaehnig, who will play for Morrisette Legion in the summer, had four hits in the two games and was named the tournament's outstanding player.

The pair continued their fine play in the opening round of the Division 1 South Sectional for the Eagles. Cobban pitched six innings of scoreless relief to push BC High past New Bedford, 15-5.

Jaehnig drove in four runs in the win.

On Tuesday, May 28, at approximately 10:28 a.m., Officers Ronald McKim, Barry DeFranco, Mark Millane and Dave Cooper were dispatched to the Wash & Dry located at 87 Copeland St. for a report of an Unarmed Robbery that had just occurred. While en route, the officers learned from Communications that the suspect was wearing a black jacket, black hat and black backpack.

Upon arrival, Officer McKim interviewed the female victim, who said she was just robbed by a young man aged between 17 and 20 years old, was a little taller than her, but shorter than the officer. She added that the jacket that the suspect was wearing was a North Face brand jacket.

She said that she was doing her laundry when she noticed that her hand bag was opened and two items inside were gone – her purse with her ID in it, and a smaller purse with $1 and her MBTA disability pass in it. She stated that she then observed the aforementioned suspect leaving the store. She stated that she saw the suspect in the store earlier and was unsure if he left then returned or had been in the store the entire time.

She said as he left she could see her missing purse in the suspect's hand. The victim said she followed the suspect out of the store, then confronted him on the sidewalk. She stated that she was able to grab her purse away from him, but when confronted about the smaller purse, the suspect fled on Copeland Street, towards Water Street.

An updated description was given out to all cruisers in the area as the interview continued. Minutes later, a suspect matching the description was stopped a short distance away on Brook Road. The victim was brought to the suspect's location and after viewing him, stated that she was not sure that it was the suspect, especially since he was not wearing the North Face jacket that she saw him wearing. This suspect was then released and the search continued.

As Officer McKim was bringing the victim back to the Wash & Dry, Officer Cooper stated that he was out with another suspect, this time on Centre Street. This time, the victim said she was "100% certain" that the person being viewed was the suspect. That suspect was wearing a black North Face Jacket, with a hood, and a Black Back Pack. The suspect, a 19 year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Larceny from a Person." An inventory search of his belongings did not produce the missing items. The backpack and clothing items used to describe the suspect were taken as evidence.

Once at the station, Officer McKim started his arrest report but was interrupted by a telephone call from the owner of the Wash & Dry, who said that he made a copy of the security video which showed the suspect reaching into a hand bag. Officer McKim met with the owner and reviewed the video which showed the suspect remove the two items from her handbag. This evidence clearly showed that the suspect under arrest was the person who stole from the victim.

Nice Work!

WARNING: Recent scam is getting considerable publicity. The victim gets a call stating that their loved one, usually a daughter or son, has been kidnapped. The instructions are to wire a large sum of money and not contact the Police.

A simple first step is to ask the suspect caller what the name of the "kidnapped" person is. If they get that right, which is unlikely, contact that named person and check to make sure they are o.k. They are most likely o.k. and unaware of the identity of the caller.

Contact the Quincy Police Department to ensure that this is a scam. People often watch too much television and assume that this happens, but in reality, the chances are remote and usually are directed at people of wealth.

CAR SEAT INSTALLATIONS/INSPECTIONS AND CHILD FINGERPRINTING will be offered Friday, June 7, at the Quincy Walmart from 3 to 8 p.m.

No reservations are required and there is no residency requirement. If there is inclement weather, the event will be cancelled.

For more information, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative side is enhanced by indulging yourself in as much artistic inspiration (music, art, dance, etc.) as you can fit into your schedule. Take someone special with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a little restorative time out of your busy life. Go somewhere quiet this weekend. Or just close the door, turn on the answering machine and pretend you're away.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your advice might be much in demand by family and friends this week. But reserve time for yourself to investigate a project that could have some unexpected potential.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work-related issues demand your attention in the early part of the week. Family matters dominate Thursday and Friday. But the weekend is yours to spend as you please.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your temper in check as you deal with someone who seems to enjoy showing disrespect. Losing your Leonine cool might be just what the goader hopes to see.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A heated confrontation needs some cool-off time before it boils over. Better to step away than to try to win an argument where emotions overrule the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone very special in your life finally sends that reassuring message you've been hoping for. You can now devote more time to the tasks you had put aside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Job pressures begin to ease by the week's end, leaving you time to relax and restore your energy levels before you face next week's emerging challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual strength helps calm a friend who might be facing an unsettling change in his or her life. An offer to help comes from a surprising source.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) By midweek you could learn some surprising facts about an associate that might cause you to reconsider a long-held view about someone in your past.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) One of those rare-for-you darker moods sets in in the early part of the week. But by Thursday, the clouds lift and you're back doing nice things for people in need.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use that sharp Piscean perceptiveness to reel in more information about a promising offer so that you have the facts to back up whatever decision you make.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you prefer the status quo, you easily can adapt to change when it's called for.

A Celebration of Life for Melanie Jane (Lyons) Deware, 48, of Easton, formerly of Quincy, was conducted Tuesday in St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Deware died May 31 after a brief battle with cancer.

Born in Meriden, CT, Melanie moved to Boston to attend Simmons College and decided to make the area her new home. After graduating from Simmons, Melanie became an After School Programs and Camp Director at the YMCA, in Quincy. She met her Husband of eighteen years while representing the YMCA as a board member on the original Quincy Asian American Committee and the Committee for Immigrants. For several years she organized and Co-Hosted the Quincy August Moon Festival and the Quincy Asian New Year Celebration. She later moved to Quincy and while dating Scott worked part time at the Deware Funeral Home. She assisted in many areas at the funeral home and would talk warmly about the experiences she had helping families through the difficult times surrounding death.

After leaving the YMCA Melanie went to work as a Director at Head Start in Brockton. It was there that she started to get the bug to teach. On a whim she took the Massachusetts State Teachers exam. After passing the test Melanie answered one job advertisement, had one job interview, was offered a position and became a teacher. She often commented that after her first day as a Social Studies teacher at Bristol Plymouth Regional Technical High School, BP for short, in Taunton, she knew she had found her calling. The teachers and students of BP became her second family. Melanie became a Class Advisor to many classes including this year's Junior Class. Throughout her four months of chemotherapy, and technically on sick leave, she insisted on assisting in raising funds for the class and was preparing for the Junior Prom. Melanie was even at school selling Prom Tickets just days before her final trip into Mass General Hospital. As well as being a class advisor she was an advisor for the Honor Society Advisor, a true friend and role model to thousands of students, and an easy mark to get a piece of candy from in the afternoon.

Melanie and her husband Scott met during a busy time in Scott's race driving career when he was transitioning from professional power boat racing to auto racing. As usual she embraced this as part of her life saying on day one "give me a job; I don't plan on just standing around." They embraced racing together. Scott proposed marriage at one of the race team Christmas parties, the wedding was planned around the race schedule and the honey moon was even delayed a week because of a race. But that was all part of the life she knew she was marrying into.

And Melanie jumped in head first with roles that ranged from taking tire "temps" and pressures on pit lane during race practice, in the scoring tower during the races and paying the bills and making the team travel arrangements. Probably her most appreciated role however was bringing sandwiches to the races made with her homemade jam. She was often kidded by other teams about this, but on many an occasion crew members and drivers from other teams made their way into the teams transporter to grab one Melanie's simple delights.

During this time Melanie and Scott both dreamed of creating an organization that would be able to provide a real racing experience to physically challenged children. When the team moved from SCCA Road Racing to the NASCAR BUSCH North Series Melanie saw the opportunity. She coaxed the race team members to build in their spare time a special race car that would look exactly like the real NASCAR race cars they raced, but with not only a custom designed passenger door, but a seat that could swivel out so that a child could be placed in the car. In the spring of 1993, at Lee Speedway NH the Dream Car Foundation was introduced. Later the program was increased to include children with emotional challenges as well as physical. For several years the Dream Car foundation fulfilled hundreds of dreams for boys and girls around New England by providing a day at the track as a real team member highlighted by a solo ride in the Dream Car driven by Scott. One of Melanie's saddest days was when the Dream Car foundation had to cease operation due to a lack of funding. It was always her goal to revive the dream and to find a way to start a new Dream Car Foundation.

Not to be done, Melanie also saw a need for an organization that could help bring the women and children of the NASCAR BUSCH North Series together to provide fun and emotional or financial support. With this idea she became one of the founding members, and first President of the NASCAR BUSCH North Women's Auxiliary. She was later awarded for her efforts as their first Outstanding Achievement Award winner.

In 1995 Scott and Melanie moved to Easton, MA. They purchased the oldest house in the town, the 1717 Josiah Keith House. Another project. Often described by Scott as a real "love - hate relationship", over the next decade they restored the property into a home that was both warm and educational. Two things very important to Melanie. During this time she developed a love for Easton and its history.

Not one to sit around, Melanie was elected to the Easton Historical Commission and soon became its Chairwoman. As a member of the Historical Commission she took on the goal to save many of Easton's historic properties that were at risk. She spearheaded the passing of a demolition delay bylaw to help prevent the unnecessary destruction of historically important buildings. She assisted with the filing of numerous grants and other fundraising to assist with the work in the town. Her greatest challenge though was the Ames Shovel Shops development. With her efforts the site was listed as one of the top ten most endangered historical sites in America. Over several years Melanie and the Commission battled for a development plan for the historic industrial revolution property that would both respect its history and be a viable productive piece of Easton's future. The current work now underway at this site is in itself a testament to her resolve and tenacity. Recently, it was announced at town meeting that the museum to be built on site will be dedicated in her memory.

In addition to the Historical Commission Melanie also became the Chair of the Easton Cemetery Commission. Easton has the distinction of having more cemeteries per square mile than any other town in America. Over 25 cemeteries, many dating back to the town's founding. While attempting to find the grave of Josiah Keith, the builder of her house, she realized that the town did not have accurate records for many of its cemetery's and no records for some of them. Over several years Melanie researched and recorded every burial in all of the towns cemetery's and created a data base that is now accessible to the public for genealogical and historical use. During her work Melanie and the commission replaced and repaired many damaged and broken historical grave markers and established an "adopt a cemetery" program for people to sign up and assist with the cleaning and maintenance of many of the historic grave yards.

Melanie was also a board member of the Easton Historical Society and loved to volunteer at open houses at the Historical Society. Although only an Easton resident for less than twenty years, in her heart she was a townie.

Because of Melanie's love and dedication to preserve the history and character of the town of Easton, the Easton Lion's Club recently awarded her with their 2013 "Outstanding Service Award." In addition Melanie was recognized by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts House of Representatives for her service to her community.

As a child Melanie loved going to fairs and entering her canning, pickles and other preserves and visiting the rabbit and chickens on display. She continued this love throughout her life and won over 200 blue ribbons and countless other awards. She has passed this winning tradition and love of tradition on to her girls and all three are award winners, entering their handiwork in several fairs each year.

With her husband Scott still very involved in motor sports and a NASCAR Nationwide team owner, Her other activities did not allow her to attend many race events but she still loved to talk about the sport and took great pride in knowing the inside gossip. When her third girl, Eden, was born one of her friends lamented that Scott must be heartbroken that he did not have a boy to continue the racing tradition. Melanie's retort was immediate asking her friend "what was wrong with one of her girls becoming a race driver?" Last November Melanie beamed proudly as her oldest daughter Lily was crowned the American Power Boat Association New England and Northeast Junior Hydroplane Racing Champion as well as the New England and South Shore Outboard Association Rookie of the Year. Melanie was now anticipating the opportunity for her other girls to join in.

Melanie was also a tireless supporter of her daughters in their activities including school and Girl Scouts.

Although she refused to join Scott on the ski slopes, Melanie was an enthusiastic supporter of her three girls skiing interest and especially their Ski Racing. She was very proud of their successes on the race course as well as their becoming "Junior Ski Instructors" and assisting teaching other children (some older than themselves) how to ski. Whether it was a dance recital, school concert, Girl Scout Bridging ceremony, Bethany winning her first ski race, Lily winning her boat races or Eden, the littlest skier in her racing age group beating the "big kids", they were her girls.

A diehard Red Sox fan, Melanie would tell people that she came from a "broken family" Connecticut style. Her Dad was a Red Sox fan and her Mother a Yankees fan.

Melanie was also a member of the Easton Grange, the Former Wollaston Chapter of the Eastern Star, Current member of the Braintree Chapter of the Eastern Star, Member of the St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church in Quincy. A graduate of Simmons College, Boston she received a Master's in Education from The University Of Massachusetts, Boston as well as doing additional post graduate work at Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, MA.

Melanie passed away at home surrounded by family.

Nearly 300 Attend Mayor's Prayer Breakfast

Following a welcome from Mayor Koch various religious leaders offered prayers and musical numbers and three speakers from the community addressed the theme of Living our Faith. Susan Bruce, age 100 and a congregant at Central Baptist Church, talked about her experiences living in Quincy for the past century and how her faith has sustained her. Between prayers and musical numbers from other religious leaders Kevin Coughlin, of the Quincy City Council talked about the formative power of faith and family in his life. The final speaker was Matthew Nielsen an 18 year old member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and son of Dr. Steven Nielsen of Nielsen Eye in Crown Colony. Matthew is graduating from Boston College High School this month and has been called to serve as a missionary for his church in Vancouver BC. He spoke about what it means to be a Mormon and how his personal religious convictions, high school education, friends and family all shaped his decision to become a missionary for the next two years.

The breakfast concluded with all 275 attendees signing God Bless America. Rev. David Wooster executive director for The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion commented "Partnership, community, neighbors - this is what Quincy is about and the Prayer Breakfast is a reminder that these things come from our faith. The Prayer Breakfast is a welcome antidote to the flood of bad news that sometimes distracts us from the good that is happening in our community every day."

Proceeds from the breakfast benefited both The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion/Quincy Crisis Center and Interfaith Social Services. Many more pictures from the event can be seen on Interfaith Social Services' Facebook page.

NEARLY 300 people turned out for the third annual Quincy Prayer Breakfast, hosted by Mayor Thomas P. Koch at The Tirrell Room on May 2nd. The program featured faith leaders and members from dozens of denominations. Rev. David Wooster, Executive Director, Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion and Pastor David Martinez of Central Baptist Church in Quincy discuss program logistics at the breakfast.

Larry Taglieri's Focus As QHS Principal: Continue To Build On Excellence

By EMILY TAFT

For new Quincy High School Principal Larry Taglieri, being named the school's new principal will start a new adventure in a school that runs deep in his family roots.

"It will be a new adventure; there is definitely newness to it. It's not just the same job I do at Broad Meadows there are different pieces to the job. It's a different step. I'm very eager to get started and work with the Assistant Principal Ellen Murray, the department chairs, the guidance counselors, the custodians, the cafeteria workers, everybody, and that's just really my belief, is that everybody that makes up the school makes up the culture of the school.

"Certainly there is nothing more important than the students and the parents that we serve in the community," said Taglieri.

Taglieri has served as the principal of Broad Meadows Middle School for seven years. Last week, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCrisofaro announced Taglieri will succeed Frank Santoro who

Point Webster Principal James McGuire Retiring: 'I Will Miss All Of It'

By EMILY TAFT

After 14 years as the Principal at Point Webster Middle School James McGuire will be retiring on July 12th leaving behind a school, students, and staff he cares deeply about.

"I'll miss all of it. I'll miss the kids; I have a nice connection with a lot of students. I love my staff; I'm really going to miss them," said McGuire. "I'm just kind of ready. Everybody says when you're ready you know you're ready, I guess I just know I'm ready. Working with kids, making a difference with kids, I just felt it was my calling, that's what I was here for, to make a difference with kids. Quincy is part of my being. As I tell my staff, I bleed green and white, which are the school colors."

McGuire grew up in Quincy Point on Baxter Ave. where he attended Point Webster Middle School in the mid 1960's before moving on to Quincy High School where he graduated in 1970. He went on to attend Babson College where he played soccer and received a degree in finance. It was there that he first

Countdown For Merchants Row Demolition

By SCOTT JACKSON

A groundbreaking for the $120 million Merchants Row project - which includes the first two buildings being constructed as part of the $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center - will take place in less than two weeks.

Developer Beal/Street-Works is constructing the Merchants Row project in the wedge-shaped parcel bounded by Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Cottage Avenue. Three buildings - the two buildings south of the Granite Trust Building on Hancock Street and the building in the parking lot on Chestnut Street - will be demolished to make way for the project. There is no firm date on when those buildings will be razed, but

7-2 Vote Passes 3% Retroactive Hike Council OKs Pay Raises For Department Heads

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's Finance Committee approved nearly $130,000 in retroactive raises for department heads and other non-union employees Monday night.

The money for the raises

- a total of $129,221 - was taken from the city's request for appropriation account in the FY13 budget. It will give the department heads and other non-union workers a retroactive pay raise of about three percent on their

FY13 salaries - the retroactive raises will equal the raises proposed for those employees in the FY14 budget, currently being reviewed by the council.

QHS Freshman Class Buries Time Capsule

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of Quincy High's freshman class buried a time capsule full of personal items and school assignments under the school's courtyard yesterday (Wednesday). It will remain in the ground there until 2036 — 20 years after the freshman class graduates.

A number of items were included in the time capsule. Among them are assignments the students did over the past year, including letters to their future selves, a 16th century newspaper project they completed, and lists of the students' favorite music. A number of personal items such as books, magazines, headphones, a signed Class of 2016 t-shirt, and an Xbox 360 video game console were given by students for the time capsule. Additionally, a copy of The Quincy Sun's June 6 edition and the Sun's 2013 special Historic Quincy supplement were placed inside.

Quincy High Principal Frank Santoro was expected to speak at the time capsule dedication ceremony. San-

QUINCY HIGH history teacher Jane Lundquist helped organize a time capsule assembled by the freshman class that was buried yesterday (Wednesday) in the school's courtyard and will be opened in 2036. The capsule contains a number of assignments and personal items from the students. Here, Lundquist places a copy of The Quincy Sun's June 6 edition and the Sun's special Historic Quincy supplement into the capsule Monday.

Flag Day Parade Saturday To Honor First Responders

The City of Quincy Flag Day Committee will honor all first responders at Saturday evening's 62nd annual Flag Day Parade & Celebration. The parade, which begins on Coddington Street in front of Quincy High School and marches down Hancock Street to Adams Field, will step-off at 7 p.m.

"Our police, fire, and EMTs put it on the line everyday to protect, serve and care for those in need," said Mayor Koch. "The tragic events surrounding the Boston Marathon truly remind us of the danger and risks they face, sacrificing self in the name of service to others."

"It is not only in the name of the response that captured a national audience that we recognize these important individuals, but for what they are called to do each and every single day that makes them so deserving of our community's eternal appreciation and gratitude," Koch added.

Police, firefighters, EMTs, doctors and nurses from or serving Quincy and surrounding communities are invited to join in the line of march, giving residents a chance to honor their dedication, skills, and sacrifices.

The parade and celebration originated in 1951 and was started by the late Richard J. Koch and the Koch Club and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country. Each year, an award is given in his name honoring an individual who has gone above and beyond to ensure that the youth of our community are given the opportunity to succeed. This year's recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award is retiring Quincy High School principal Frank Santoro.

The Grand Marshal and Youth Service Award Winner will be honored in the parade and at a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park immediately following which will include a flag raising of a massive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, patriotic music and sing-a-long, and a dazzling fireworks display set to start at approximately 9:15 p.m.

Council Seeks More Details On QHS Demolition

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors balked at approving a $2.5 million bond to pay for the demolition of the old Quincy High School building and related work, citing a need for greater detail.

During Monday night's Finance Committee meeting, a memo from Public Buildings Director Gary Cuniff breaking down the costs of tearing down the school, completing a wall of the new school, and engineering and landscaping the site was provided to the council.

The memo said that demolition of the building would cost $687,000 and monitoring for hazardous materials during demolition would cost another $27,000. If the old building is razed, a wall of the new high school building would be left exposed and the city would have to pay $745,000 to complete it. Engineering costs for the site would total $150,000 and landscaping was estimated to cost $1.5 million.

All told, the demolition and related work would cost $3.1 million. The proposed bond would pay most of those costs, with the remaining $600,000 coming out of the bond used to pay for construction of the new high school, of which $1.4 million remains unencumbered.

Councillors felt the information provided to them in the one-page memo was inadequate. Councillor Doug Gutro said the council should have been provided more information, such as cost estimates.

Mayor Honors NQHS Quiz Show Team

By EMILY TAFT

Mayor Thomas Koch Monday honored the six students on the North Quincy High School Quiz Show team who won the Massachusetts Championship and the Governors Cup.

Koch invited the team to his office to congratulate the students on their success in WGBH's High School Quiz Show competition. The students and their coaches each received a proclamation from the mayor along with a copy of a book on the Adams National Historic Park.

"As mayor I want to say how extraordinarily proud we are of each of you and your terrific performance on the quiz show. You really made us proud," said Koch. "Each of you obviously bring a talent to the table but then coming together collectively as a team was so, so impressive. You brought tremendous pride to our city."

The six students, Yi Fung, Celeste Dang, Cindy Nelson, Tim Bill, Nathan Donohue, and Kasey Shen, won the title of Massachusetts State Champions when they faced off against Lexington High School on May 19th and more recently won the first ever Governor's Cup challenge against New Hampshire champions Plymouth Regional High School on May 26th.

During their visit with Koch they spoke of their experiences during the competition along with what is in store for next years team. Four members of the team graduated this year, leaving two to return next year. According to coach Danielle Fernandez they plan on holding auditions for next years team as opposed to hand selecting them like they did this year.

"The thing about the quiz show is the questions are so random so we put it out to the faculty of the school and told them we really wanted a broad range of students to be a part of the team," said Fernandez. "We've are already started thinking about next year. We plan to hold auditions instead of hand selecting them like we did with this team."

The team competed against 89 other Massachusetts public schools in November to make it as one of the top 16 schools that would compete on the show. In January the 16 teams started single elimination rounds pairing off against each other until only two schools remained at the end of four rounds.

"Even though the whole thing was only filmed in three days we spent a lot of time together and it was really fun to be able to get to know everybody else on the team. It was really a good experience in that way," said Tim Bill who has also participated in other competitions such as the History Bowl and National Spelling Bee. "I actually thought this competition was a lot more rewarding. It's different when it is televised and there is a studio, it was really an exciting thing to be a part of."

Quincy Police will offer car seat installations/inspections and child fingerprinting Wednesday, June 19 from 3:15 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy Walmart, Falls Boulevard.

There's never been a better time to buy a first home

Three reasons why:

- 1) Rates are at all-time lows – a huge advantage for first-time homebuyers. Your money goes further. And you get to lock in historically-low monthly mortgage payments.
- 2) The eastern Massachusetts real estate market tends to be resilient. Prices here have stabilized...or are starting to move up. Waiting now could cost you later.
- 3) With Colonial Federal's First-Time Homebuyer Program, you get: > A reduced downpayment with no PMI required > A mortgage with a competitive rate > You work one-to-one with our responsive lenders, professionals who want to help you get into your first home > All from a local neighborhood bank specializing in helping people buy homes since 1889.

This is an outstanding opportunity – most likely once-in-a-lifetime – for first-time homebuyers. Is that you...or someone you know? Come see us. Or call VP/Retail Lending Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

Walking Mount Wollaston Cemetery With Tom Galvin

This Saturday, City Historian Tom Galvin will lead one of his popular walking tours of Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

If you love local history – especially the rich heritage of Quincy's granite industry – go.

It's a unique educational experience not to be missed.

In fact, you may be so overwhelmed with Galvin's vast knowledge of the granite industry and history of Mount Wollaston Cemetery – you may find yourself making plans to take part in the next one, too.

The tour takes about three hours and during those 180 minutes Galvin points out the historical significance of dozens of monuments as well as the craftsmanship that went into creating these magnificent memorials. He explains what kind of granite the monuments are made of as well as the background and community contributions of many business, government and civic leaders who are interred in the cemetery.

In short, Galvin considers Mount Wollaston Cemetery an outdoor museum. The tours focus on one of Galvin's favorite subjects: Quincy's granite industry.

"I clearly focus on the granite industry. I love all of Quincy history and I know a lot of Quincy history. Perhaps what I like the best is the Quincy granite," Galvin said during an interview after one of his recent tours.

"I love the Quincy granite. You watch the Red Sox – I love Quincy granite. It's just one of those things. I have a lot of samples and a lot of Quincy granite at home.

"The tour is my contribution as the city historian," Galvin continued. "People have offered me money after taking the tour but I refuse. I don't do this for the money. I do it for the fun."

At Mount Wollaston Cemetery, there are hundreds of examples of monuments made of Quincy granite. Before monuments were standardized (similar shape and size), earlier memorials were created that were unique and beautiful. Galvin's tour points out these older mon-

- On June 29, 1613, the Globe Theater, where most of Shakespeare's plays debuted, burns down. The Globe was a round wooden structure with a stage at one end, and covered balconies for the gentry. The galleries could seat about 1,000 people, with room for another 2,000 "groundlings," who could stand around the stage.

- On June 24, 1803, Matthew Thornton, one of New Hampshire's delegates to the second Continental Congress, dies at age 89. Because he did not arrive in Philadelphia until September, he missed the initial approval of the Declaration of Independence, but later added his signature to the document.

- On June 26, 1911, athlete Mildred "Babe" Didrikson is born in Port Arthur, Texas. At the 1932 Olympics in Los Angeles, Didrikson won gold medals in the javelin and 80-meter hurdles. She had qualified for five events, but women were restricted to three events at the Olympics.

- On June 28, 1928, a 26-year-old Louis Armstrong and his Hot Five fellow jazz instrumentalists record a song called "West End Blues." The technology didn't allow for playback, so when Armstrong and his Hot Five ended their session, they hadn't even heard the recording that is recognized as a critical influence, even on rock 'n' roll.

- On June 30, 1936, Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" is published. While recovering from a series of injuries, Mitchell began writing the story of an Atlanta belle named Pansy O'Hara. A publishing company later convinced her to change the name to Scarlett.

- On June 25, 1950, armed forces from communist North Korea smash into South Korea, setting off the Korean War. The United States sprang to the defense of South Korea and fought a bloody war for the next three years. More than 55,000 American troops were killed in the conflict.

- On June 27, 1976, a factory storekeeper in Sudan becomes ill and dies five days later, marking the beginning of the first Ebola virus epidemic. By the time the epidemic was over, 284 cases were reported. Scientists still do not know what causes the disease to return or how to cure it.

QUINCY CITY HISTORIAN Tom Galvin (left) shares his vast knowledge of the city's granite industry and other local history with participants during one of this recent walking tours of Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Galvin's next historical walking tour of the cemetery is Saturday, June 15 at 1 p.m. Participants should plan on meeting at the Greenleaf Street gate.

uments, from the Jonathan S. Swingle Monument created from "extra dark" Quincy granite to Quincy's other "Granite Gazing Ball" that adorns the final resting place of Theophilus King, a renowned Quincy banker, businessman and philanthropist. (Photos of some of the monuments appear on Page 43.)

It's easy to understand why Quincy granite was so prized in its day and remains such an alluring artifact: monuments created with local granite over a hundred years ago barely look they have aged a day. That's in sharp contrast to other materials such as marble that tend to discolor as time passes due in part to acid rain.

Galvin began these historical walking tours about 10 years after a suggestion by Sally Owens of the Quincy Environmental Treasures program.

"Sally asked me to do and I hadn't really thought about doing it to be honest with you but I did it and I've been doing it ever since," Galvin said. "We had a big crowd that first day – about 75 people."

On a Saturday afternoon in May, about 25 local residents and history buffs turned out for the Galvin tour. That's a good number because Galvin likes to get in the group and talk to people face-to-face.

"It's really fun when you get a group of people who really care," he says. "The people who take the tour are truly interested in Quincy granite and or Quincy history. Mount Wollaston Cemetery is a beautiful cemetery and it's an outdoor museum to both those things. Cemeteries allow us to know about people we never met and to come close to events that are long behind us," he added.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery was consecrated on Nov. 1, 1855. The original portion – 12 acres – was one of America's early garden cemeteries.

Tour participants each receive a printed Mount Wollaston Cemetery walking guide pamphlet that marks noteworthy monuments on the graves of 60 prominent Quincy granite industry leaders as well as 26 other monuments made of Quincy granite. This is a just a sample, Galvin says, noting there are hundreds of other Quincy granite moments at Mount Wollaston not listed on the walking map.

Galvin says each tour is different and he doesn't carry any prepared notes with him on the tour. He says he enjoys doing research on the monuments because "researching these people is how you learn history."

He hopes the citizens who take part in the tour gain an appreciation for the granite industry. He notes that this year marks the 50th anniversary of the closing of the city's last working quarry – Swingle's Quarry. Back in 1963, a new owner tried to reactivate the quarry and a crew was put in place to work in the quarry that was deeper than a 35-story building.

"A couple of fellas from New Hampshire were killed in an accident and the owner said, "that's it." It was too treacherous to continue quarrying."

Quincy granite is famed all over the world. The Bunker Hill Monument and King's Chapel in Boston are made from it. So too are monuments in Gettysburg and in our nation's capital.

But you don't have to leave the city to see its enduring qualities and beauty. Old City Hall is constructed from Quincy granite. And if you have a few extra hours to walk Mount Wollaston Cemetery with City Historian Tom Galvin, he'll give you a history lesson that you won't want to miss.

Galvin's next tour is Saturday, June 15 beginning at 1 p.m. Tour participants should meet at the Greenleaf Street gate on Southern Artery.

Rain date is Saturday, June 22 at 1 p.m.

Galvin says he also plans to conduct a tour sometime this fall.

METROPOLITAN BOULEVARD WOLLASTON, MASS.

THIS 1908 POSTCARD is a view of Wollaston Boulevard and the beach as it appeared when opened to the public in June of that year, 105 years ago this month. This was the southern end of the road at the time with Rye Island the rise in the foreground. Rice Road was just to the left. The Metropolitan Commission had built the road along Quincy's shore on top of a two-mile long dike that stretched from here to East Squantum Street. A road on top of a dike is known as a boulevard, thus the original name Metropolitan Boulevard of what is now known as Quincy Shore Drive. The sandy beach was created by gradually sloping the Quincy Bay side of the dike to the water's edge at low tide. On the inland side of the dike the marshes and lowlands were isolated by a steep slope topped with a post and rail fence. In 1912, the Boulevard was extended another two-thirds of a mile across Black's Creek to join with the new Furnace Brook Parkway, and then on to Sea Street. To build the extension Rye Island and the adjoining Rufe's Hummock were leveled and the soil was used to fill in the marshes that are now the site of the Princess Eve Drive neighborhood. The parking lot across from the end of Rice Road is all that's left of Rye Island. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thanks For Making Quincy Senior Olympics A Success

Another Senior Olympics has been completed and, as always, a tremendous amount of people and organizations have to be praised and thanked for the enjoyment provided to our senior citizens.

My favorite event, and the favorite of many participants, is bocce, hosted by the Torre Dei Passeri Club of Quincy. Their hospitality and friendliness is amazing. I feel fortunate to have met and enjoyed the company of Mario Ignagni, Antonio Iacovangelo, and Mr. Pettinelli. It was also great to see a friend, Bill Draccio, there.

Entering the complex you are greeted by with coffee and donuts. After the competing, a wonderful chicken dinner awaits, served with enthusiasm and kindness. Thanks to all of you, my Italian friends.

I took the liberty of collecting all the names of those marvelous young people directed by Barry Welch and Michelle, who organize and supervise all of the track and field events so efficiently and cheerfully. With young people like the following growing up, the wonderful City of Quincy is in good hands – we are so lucky to have them: Courtney Timmins, Kerry Coughlin, Taylor Dennehey, Bridget Hawko, Mary Kate Nelson, Mary Pat Henry, Sarah Sullivan, Kara Reardon, Sue Pacchetti, Stacey Roche, Yvonne Boness, Tyler Brown, Mara Dela Groce, Paul Carson, Edward Grennon, Joe Barton, John O'Callaghan, Terence Rooney, Larry Liuzzo, Timmy Luizzo, Paul Cuniff, Bobby Koslowski, Curran Jorgenson, Aiden McMorrow, and not so young Gerry Pratt. I think Gerry is a senior citizen masquerading as a youngster. However, each and every one of those mentioned above deserve the accolades of everyone in the city.

Now, on a more serious note, how about that beautiful track that Mayor Koch fought so hard to provide for us? along the way, as usual, there were detractors, who we all know, but in the end the mayor prevailed, thank God. It not only beautifies that section of the city, but provides joy to all, from grammar school children to the elderly and every one in between.

On a personal note, this year I missed two wonderful friends. Frank Masciulli, who passed away. I and many miss you Frank. The other was Al Cameron, who was ill, and I wasn't able to harass him unmercifully for the entire games. Get well soon Al, and we all continue to pray for you at the Kennedy Center.

The two special people to emerge from this year's Olympics, and who received special plaques, were Herb Cameron and Ruth Kundsinn. Congratulations to both.

Providing the luncheon at the Kennedy Center, and reception and dessert at the awards night function, was the River Bay Club. Each of these events were handled so flawlessly and professionally by Donna Flynnne, Cath Toland, Marie Hanna, Taty O'Neal, and Lynn Schwartzman, under the supervision of the lovely and always smiling Kim White.

I would be remiss not to mention the Quincy Police Dept., Quincy Fire Dept., Fallon Ambulance and the EMTs for their protective services.

For the facilities provided at the Kennedy Center, Council on Aging, and all of the preparation involved, thanks to Tom Clasby, Linda Bowes, workers and volunteers. You are all great.

Thanks again to Mayor Koch; I look forward to having you as my mayor for not only the next two years, but an additional four years after that.

Thanks also to the great coverage and attendance by the representatives of The Quincy Sun, a great local newspaper.

Marshall Co-Authors Oil Spill Ban

By SCOTT JACKSON

Reps. Clifford H. Marshall of Quincy and Robert B. Ambler of Weymouth co-authored a new bill designed to prevent oil spills.

The Marshall-Ambler bill would make oil terminal owners responsible for using wooden or plastic booms to catch spillover. Owners who failed to do so would face a fine of $1,000.

The two representatives filed the bill after an estimated 100,000 gallons of fuel oil spilled into Fore River from a ship at the East Braintree Citgo terminal. The oil penetrated up to six inches deep into the sand at Wessagusset Beach in North Weymouth. Clam flats at Wessagusset and King Cove Beaches were expected to be closed up to two months because of the contamination.

"We have got to do something to stop spillages which are ruining our beaches, destroying fish and wildlife, damaging boats and waterfront property and causing fire hazards," Marshall said. "If we have to get tough about it by imposing a $1,000 fine on violators, then let's get tough about it."

Citgo officials said they tried to contain the spill with a 1,500-foot boom but powerboats in the area caused the oil to splash over it.

The Marshall-Ambler bill was patterned after an ordinance Marshall proposed at a City Council meeting two months prior. That ordinance would carry no fine, but make terminal operators financially and legally responsible for cleaning up beaches damaged by oil spills. That ordinance was in committee for study.

HAZELTINE COMPLEX GROUNDBREAKING

The Hazeltine Corporation, a defense electronics contractor, broke ground on its $6 million Quincy complex.

The 13-acre facility at Echo Lake, a former quarry near Bower Road, was expected to bring the city at least $200,000 annually in tax revenue. Some 800 people were to be employed at the site, with an estimated yearly payroll of $10 million.

Hazeltine President David Westerman said the area around Echo Lake was an ideal site for the testing of highly sophisticated electronics and communications equipment for submarines and underwater acoustics.

Mayor James R. McIntyre, on hand for the groundbreaking, called the event a historic occasion for the city.

"This is a truly momentous and historic occasion for the City of Quincy," the mayor said. "For the first time in our history we will have an oceanographic laboratory within our city limits. This opens a completely new vista for existing areas of growth in Quincy."

8 CANDIDATES PULL NOMINATION PAPERS

Eight residents, including two incumbents, took out nomination papers within the past week for Quincy's preliminary election in the fall.

Among the eight candidates to pull papers was Ward 5 Councillor Walter J. Hannon, who ended speculation he would not seek re-election. Two other residents – John J. Brady and William A. Delahunt – also took out nomination papers for that seat.

School Committeeman Paul C. Kelly, who was appointed to an open seat, pulled nomination papers to run in his first election. Nicholas V. Trifone, a former assistant city planner, also pulled nomination papers for the School Committee.

The others who took at papers in the past week were Stephen E. O'Meara, council-at-large; Warren F. Spencer, City Council Ward 2; and Pasquale S. DiStefano, City Council Ward 3.

Council President J. Vincent Smyth also announced he would seek re-election, but had not yet pulled nomination papers. In all 14, candidates had pulled papers for the preliminary election.

Thanks For Making Quincy Senior Olympics A Success

Another Senior Olympics has been completed and, as always, a tremendous amount of people and organizations have to be praised and thanked for the enjoyment provided to our senior citizens.

My favorite event, and the favorite of many participants, is bocce, hosted by the Torre Dei Passeri Club of Quincy. Their hospitality and friendliness is amazing. I feel fortunate to have met and enjoyed the company of Mario Ignagni, Antonio Iacovangelo, and Mr. Pettinelli. It was also great to see a friend, Bill Draccio, there.

Entering the complex you are greeted by with coffee and donuts. After the competing, a wonderful chicken dinner awaits, served with enthusiasm and kindness. Thanks to all of you, my Italian friends.

I took the liberty of collecting all the names of those marvelous young people directed by Barry Welch and Michelle, who organize and supervise all of the track and field events

so efficiently and cheerfully. With young people like the following growing up, the wonderful City of Quincy is in good hands — we are so lucky to have them: Courtney Timmins, Kerry Coughlin, Taylor Dennehey, Bridget Hawko, Mary Kate Nelson, Mary Pat Henry, Sarah Sullivan, Kara Reardon, Sue Pacchetti, Stacey Roche, Yvonne Boness, Tyler Brown, Mara Dela Groce, Paul Carson, Edward Grennon, Joe Barton, John O'Callaghan, Terence Rooney, Larry Liuzzo, Timmy Luizzo, Paul Cuniff, Bobby Koslowski, Curran Jorgenson, Aiden McMorow, and not so young Gerry Pratt. I think Gerry is a senior citizen masquerading as a youngster. However, each and every one of those mentioned above deserve the accolades of everyone in the city.

Now, on a more serious note, how about that beautiful track that Mayor Koch fought so hard to provide for us? along the way, as usual, there were detractors, who we all know, but in the end the mayor prevailed, thank God. It not only beautifies that section of the city, but provides joy to all, from grammar school children to the elderly and every one in between.

On a personal note, this year I missed two wonderful friends. Frank Masciulli, who passed away. I and many miss you Frank. The other was Al Cameron, who was ill, and I wasn't able to harass him unmercifully for the entire games. Get well soon Al, and we all continue to pray for you at the Kennedy Center.

The two special people to emerge from this year's Olympics, and who received special plaques, were Herb Cameron and Ruth Kundsinn. Congratulations to both.

Providing the luncheon at the Kennedy Center, and reception and dessert at the awards night function, was the River Bay Club. Each of these events were handled so flawlessly and professionally by Donna Flynnne, Cath Toland, Marie Hanna, Taty O'Neal, and Lynn Schwartzman, under the supervision of the lovely and always smiling Kim White.

I would be remiss not to mention the Quincy Police Dept., Quincy Fire Dept., Fallon Ambulance and the EMTs for their protective services.

For the facilities provided at the Kennedy Center, Council on Aging, and all of the preparation involved, thanks to Tom Clasby, Linda Bowes, workers and volunteers. You are all great.

Thanks again to Mayor Koch; I look forward to having you as my mayor for not only the next two years, but an additional four years after that.

Thanks also to the great coverage and attendance by the representatives of The Quincy Sun, a great local newspaper.

THE CHRONOGRAPH

The specific type of watch known as a "chronograph," which dates back to 1821, is easily recognizable by the three subdials (known as "totalizers" or "registers") embedded in the watch face. Popular among sports enthusiasts, chronographs function as a stopwatch in addition to displaying the time. By virtue of pushing a button on the side of the watch case, users are able to begin measuring lap times and other time-specific events; a second push of the same button (or nearby button) stops the time. The subdials on the watch face display the seconds, minutes, and hours. While quartz chronographs can measure events down to 1/10 of a second, their automatic counterparts may be as accurate as 1/5 of a second.

It's about time! Shop for one of a kind chronograph watches at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. Our professional and knowledgeable staff is anxious to work with you to make sure you have the best buying experience possible. With so many watch styles to choose from, you'll want one of each. Call us at 617-773-3636, and allow us to assist you. Chronograph watches are very popular these days, based largely on looks or style. While they look cool, they also are very functional.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Stovetop Broccoli Casserole

It seems that no matter where I go and people find out that I write a food column, they almost always tell me about a recipe that they enjoy.

This time it was the physical therapist Michael who told me about a recipe that his grandmother used to make that he makes and enjoys so much.

It's a good way to enjoy eating broccoli that is so good for us, and an easy way to prepare it. It's actually made like a casserole, but on top of the stove.

STOVE TOP BROCCOLI

1 bunch broccoli

2 eggs (beaten)
1 cup seasoned breadcrumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic

Cut the broccoli in small pieces. Boil until soft. Mash the same way as potatoes. Set aside. In a skillet, heat the olive oil and garlic. Sauté the broccoli, and stir in the beaten eggs with Parmesan cheese. Add the breadcrumbs on top and cook until blended. Sprinkle more of the cheese on top. It makes a wonderful side dish that will go with anything. Cauliflower could also be used.

Easy Recipe For Boston Cream Pie

I was looking over a recipe for Boston Cream Pie and there isn't much difference in the recipe as there is in a golden cake except for the addition of baking soda.

And the cream filling that goes into it is the same recipe that my mother would use for filling cream puffs in place of whipped cream.

BOSTON CREAM PIE

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs (beaten)
2 cups cake flour (I used Swan's Down)
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2/3 cup milk
Preheat oven to 375 degrees

Melt the butter and sugar in a mixer or large bowl. Add the eggs and mix well. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk.

Mix for two minutes.

Pour into two greased 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake in the preheated oven for 20 minutes. Turn out on cake racks to cool.

CREAM FILLING

½ cup sugar
2 ½ tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 egg (beaten)
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar, flour and salt in a saucepan. Add ¼ cup of the milk and stir until smooth. Add the rest of the milk and cook on low heat until thickened. Then slowly add the eggs and cook for two more minutes and then add the vanilla and cool.

Put together with cream filling in the center of the two cakes. Top with powdered sugar or shredded coconut. Cut and serve when cooled.

Wine And Cheese Social To Benefit Souther Tide Mill

A wine and cheese social will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston Yacht Club to support the restoration of the Souther Tide Mill.

The Wine and Cheese

Social will include a presentation of the Mill's rich history, a recap of the work of the past few years, and anticipated future efforts.

The cost of the event is $25 and includes entertainment from Rick, Andy, & Judy, a Peter, Paul, & Mary tribute group.

Two years ago the City of Quincy and Jay Cashman combined efforts to make a substantial improvement to the Mill. The City continues to make a commitment to the restoration of the Mill with Community Preservation Act funds. However, there are many things that these funds can't be utilized, for - for example, educational signage or a security system to protect the Mill from vandalism and squatters.

The Board of Directors for the Friends of the Souther Tide Mill recently voted to begin a two year effort to raise $20,000 for capital improvements at the Mill.

Friends of the Souther Tide Mill President Doug Morrill said, "It is our hope that our efforts will show the City that the Friends are committed to more than just advocating, but are willing to put our own effort forward towards the preservation of the Mill."

Longtime Mill advocate and past Friends President Carolyn Marks said "We continue to explore additional fund raising grant opportunities but feel that it is equally important that a local public commitment from the citizens of Quincy be made to show the support that exists for the Mill's preservation."

For more information, call Doug Morrill at (617) 471-3628.

Wollaston Garden Club Receives State, National Awards For Civic Projects

At the 86th Annual Meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts (GCFM) held recently in Mansfield, the Wollaston Garden Club received formal recognition for their civic beautification work at both the Peace and Atrium Gardens at the Thomas Crane Library, the club-designed Intersection Planters around the city, and other club projects.

The Atrium and Peace Gardens at the main branch of the library needed renovation and garden club members, with the support of Friends of the Thomas Crane and the hard work of the Operation Days Work students and their advisor, Ron Adams, from Broad Meadows Middle School, have worked to beautify the grounds with new shrub and perennial plantings.

Claire Fitzmaurice, WGC civic beautification member and board member of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library has been the both the creative and driving force in the restoration of these gardens with support from both the Quincy Parks Department and the Quincy DPW Grant Program.

The GCFM recognized these gardens by awarding Wollaston Garden Club, the Virginia Thurston Landscape Design Award for design and on going maintenance of the Peace and Atrium Gardens at the Thomas Crane Library.

The Intersection Planter Program of the garden club, with support from the Quincy Park Department, began in 2009, led by the garden club's civic beautification chair, Jo Costello, and dedicated members of the club's civic beautification committee.

The goal of this program is to beautify Quincy's intersection planters with drought-tolerant shrubs and perennials, providing four season interest.

The garden club designs, plants, provides horticulture support, along with greens for winter interest and protection; and the city plants annuals and waters the planters during summer's hottest days.

The garden club was awarded the GCFM's Continuing Civic Projects Award and a National Garden Club, Inc Civic Achievement Award for the planting of thirteen city planters at Quincy's busy intersections.

The club also received a First Place award for their 2012 Yearbook/Directory which each member receives to keep track of the club's calendar and contact information; a Second Place award for their 2012 Press Book; and a Certificate of Appreciation: Protecting Aquatic Ecosystems from the New England Region for the club's advocacy of the Town Brook.

The club's Awards Chair, Colleen Lawler said members are "excited that the Wollaston Garden Club is receiving state, regional, and national recognition for its civic work."

DEMOLITION OF THE two buildings pictured above near 1400 Hancock Street is expected to begin by the end of the month at the latest. They will be razed to make way for the five-story Granite Trust Lofts, which will include retail on the ground level and 66 residential units. The Granite Trust Building (seen here at left) will be renovated during construction of the Merchants Row project.

CONSTRUCTION CREWS have already begun utility work on Chestnut Street in advance of the $120 million Merchants Row project, the first step in the $1.6 redevelopment of the downtown. The building seen here will be demolished by the end of June as part of the project. The Kilroy, a 15-story building with 240 residential units and 186 underground parking spaces, will be built at the site.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

that's expected to happen soon.

"We anticipate demolition within the next couple weeks," Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said Tuesday. "We can't pinpoint it at this time, but we're getting closer every day."

Demolition is expected to start before the groundbreaking ceremony, scheduled for 5 p.m. on Monday, June 24.

"We expect there to be some degree of demolition done by that point," Walker said.

Two other buildings on the block — the Granite Trust Building that includes the space occupied by Rogers Jewelry and the building at the corner of Hancock Street and Cottage Avenue, which includes Alba Restaurant — will remain intact. The Granite Trust Building will be renovated as part of the Merchants Row work, and non-original features in the building's rear — including a drive-up ATM and HVAC equipment — will be removed.

The first step of construction, installation of new utilities, is already ongoing and is expected to continue into December, according to a summary schedule of the project provided to The Sun. Earlier this month, the city removed 14 parking spaces from Chestnut Street, eight spaces from Hancock Street, and six from Cottage Avenue to accommodate the construction. Five 15-minute only parking spaces were added to Chestnut Street so Bank of America customers can use the bank's ATM.

The larger of the two new planned buildings is the 15-story Kilroy, which will be constructed on the corner of Chestnut Street and Cottage Avenue, where a parking lot is currently. Once completed, the building will feature street level retail and 240 apartment units on the remaining floors. A 186-car parking garage will be built underneath the building. The Kilroy will look like a 'G' from above — plans call for a central courtyard that opens on one side to a new public way that will run across the block from Hancock Street to Chestnut Street.

According to the project timeline, the Kilroy's construction will begin with installation of slurry walls, which should be completed in November. A month of excavation on the site would follow, and by the middle of February 2014 the concrete foundation would be completed. The next step would be construction of the building's skeleton, completed near the end of May 2014. By the mid-January 2015, the entire Kilroy would be completed and ready for opening.

The other new building included in the project is the five-story Granite Trust Lofts. That building, to be located adjacent to the Granite Trust Building on Hancock Street, will feature street level retail and 66 residential units. It will feature loft apartments and mimic the look and feel of the Granite Trust Building.

The Granite Trust Lofts will be finished before the Kilroy. Excavation for that building is expected to commence next month and continue until the end of August, according to the construction schedule. The concrete foundation would be poured between early August and late October. The building's structure would be installed by the end of this December, and the building would be ready for opening in August 2014.

Construction vehicles accessing the site will travel up Burgin Parkway from the highway to Hannon Parkway/Revere Road, before turning onto the Dennis Ryan Parkway, which leads into Chestnut Street, where the main entrance point will be. Chestnut Street will remain open to the public during much of the construction period, but will need to be closed at certain points.

"Chestnut Street at some points as the project moves along will be closed to traffic," Walker said.

The Merchants Row project was first announced by Koch last June, and Beal/Street-Works filed formal plans with the city in October. The Planning Board gave its approval to the project in December. During his midterm address in January, the mayor announced that Chicago-based LaSalle Investment Management had committed to investing $56 million in the Merchants Row project.

Construction of Merchants Row had been scheduled to begin earlier this spring, but was delayed because of difficulties dismantling utilities on site.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ANTIBIOTICS FOR JOINT-REPLACEMENT PATIENTS?

In the interest of erring on the side of caution, dentists have previously insisted that patients who had had joint-replacement surgery take antibiotics prior to undergoing dental procedures. The reasons for this recommendation has been that bacteria in the mouth could enter the blood stream during a dental procedure (including a routine cleaning), travel to the site of an artificial joint, and cause a prosthetic joint infection. However, new guidelines released in December, 2012 by the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons and the American Dental Association says that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant furthering this recommendation. If you have any questions regarding this matter, you are encouraged to discuss them with your dentist.

Patients and their families

Finance Committee Approves 12 Department Budgets

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's Finance Committee approved 12 departmental budgets without making any cuts during its most recent meeting.

The Fire Department's $20.14 million budget was the largest those approved. The department's FY14 budget is up from its $18.43 million FY13 budget. The budget does not include money for new firefighters, but it does absorb the cost associated with nine firefighter positions being paid for by a grant that expires in September. The FY14 budget also provides nearly $300,000 in additional funds for overtime costs, which is meant to keep all stations open and avoid brown outs.

"The mayor's office has been very supportive and does not want to see any apparatus browned out or stations closed," Fire Chief Joseph Barron said.

Barron anticipates that up to six firefighters could retire in FY14. That includes one mandatory retirement and three firefighters currently on long-term disability. Ernie Arient, president of the local firefighter's union, is also expected to retire during the next fiscal year, likely over this summer.

The budget also includes money to purchase new turnout gear – the protective suits worn by firefighters. Barron said the department purchased 30 new sets of turnout gear in the current fiscal year. He hopes to purchase at least 50 new sets, each worth approximately $2,500, in FY14.

"We're attempting to catch up with some of the older equipment. Replace that and find what's serviceable and have that repaired to use as a backup set," Barron said.

The Fire Department's budget also includes almost $70,000 for the purchase of new air bottles, and money to purchase a device that would allow the department to test the seal between a firefighter's face and their mask.

The Finance Committee also approved the budget for the Emergency Management Department, which Barron also leads. The department's budget for FY14 is $57,000, up $2,000 from FY13. The increase provides the department's secretary with a raise.

The Inspectional Services Department's budget was also approved during the meeting. The department will receive an increase of just under 10 percent, from $1.06 million in FY13 to $1.14 million in FY14. Most of the added money, $75,000, is for a digital scanning system and a clerk to use it. The scanning equipment and software will allow that clerk to go through old records – permits and complaints issued – and scan them so they can be looked up on a computer instead of by hand.

"The system we have right now is antiquated," Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca said. "It doesn't work for us. We can't rely on it to query data, so everything we do – everything the council has asked me for over the past year – I've had to do by hand. The new system we'll be able to just press a button and have that information."

Like the other budgets approved so far by the Finance Committee, the Inspectional Services budget was approved by voice vote without opposition. Councillor Doug Gutro, however, voiced his displeasure over the fact that the department does not currently have a dedicated conservation agent. The position is shared between Duca and two other employees.

"I'm extraordinarily disappointed that we don't have a full time conservation agent. Across the Commonwealth of Massachusetts there are 100 full time conservation agents – half of municipalities have full or part time [conservation agents]," Gutro said. "It's probably the communities under 5,000 people that don't have a conservation agent. My guess, and I haven't polled every city, is that you would not find another city in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that does not have either a full or part time conservation agent.

"We could blame it on the cutbacks two, three years ago. I think it's inexcusable now."

The Finance Committee also approved the Public Building Department's $4.9 million FY14 budget, up about $700,000 from the current fiscal year. The budget adds two $91,000 a year jobs – energy manager and systems technician – as well as other new maintenance workers. Also included is $225,000 for maintenance work.

A number of budget's falling under the umbrella of public works were approved by the committee. They include the city's Traffic, Engineering, and Drain Departments and money for snow and ice removal and street lighting.

The Traffic Department's budget was set at $763,000 for FY14, up from $475,000 in FY13. The budget includes three new line items – $50,000 for painting lines on streets, $20,000 to replace signage in the city as part of a federal mandate to do so by 2018, and $18,000 for crosswalk supplies. The department's budget also projects a $100,000 decrease in parking receipts, from $700,000 in the FY13 budget to $600,000 in FY14, used to offset personnel costs in the department.

The Drain Department's FY14 budget was set at $1.4 million, up from $960,000 in FY13. The budget includes $35,000 for pump station repairs, $20,000 for catch basin repairs, $50,000 for tide gate repairs, and $155,000 to hire a contractor to clean catch basins.

"The initiatives here are tremendous," Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymond said. "Unlike water and sewer this is on the tax rate, I'm very sensitive to that, but these are initiatives that are long overdue. We need to repair our tide gates – we're a flood prone community, we need to do a better job doing that. Our catch basins are in desperate need of repair and we can't say our drainage pump stations don't need work."

Other new items in the Drain Department budget include $10,000 for safety training, $10,000 for police details, and $5,000 for out of grade pay.

roof in my house. I got three estimates – the estimates were two-and-a-half, three pages long – for a $12,000 roof," Gutro said. "I'm not impressed with the level of detail, if it's my pocketbook, for any of this."

"I think we could revisit this with a better schedule because right now it's being presented at such an executive summary level that you really can't see what's going on," Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee added. "I'm going to agree with Councillor Gutro – it's not that I disagree with what your plans are, but I don't think we're at a level of specificity here to make this vote."

Even if more details were provided, Gutro said he would have moved to cut $1.5 million from the bond because there are no solid plans for landscaping the site after demolition.

"I'd make a motion to cut the $1.5 million until we had some kind of proposal from a landscape architecture or engineering firm that speaks to what it would cost to grade, construct the site, deal with the drainage, do the design," Gutro said.

Selling Star Of The Sea Church Sends Wrong Message

By MAUREEN MAZIRMAS and SEAN GLENNON
Friends of Star of the Sea Church

For the second time in less than ten years, the Archbishop of Boston, Sean Cardinal O'Malley, has placed Star of the Sea (SoS) Church and Rectory in Squantum on the real estate market.

Over the past decade, parishioners have exercised their rights under the Code of Canon Law of the Roman Catholic Church, and challenged two decrees issued by the archbishop: the suppression of the parish of Star of the Sea in October 2004, and the deconsecration of the church in July 2011.

After the decree of suppression was issued, parishioners began the canon appeal process in spite of the fact that the decree was never made available to them, although as parishioners in good standing they were entitled to this legal document.

As part of the many dozens of Archdiocese of Boston parishes suppressed in late 2004, the parochial church of SoS was locked up. However, given the groundswell of opposition by Boston-area Catholics to what was at the time the most massive parish closing program in the history of Catholic America, the archdiocese "reconsidered" its actions, and the church was reopened by Archbishop O'Malley (not yet elevated to the rank of cardinal) in July of 2005 as a "chapel," i.e., a Catholic worship site.

In an effort to restore their place of worship as a parish, parishioners pursued their appeal against the parish suppression all the way to the Vatican's Apostolic Signatura - its highest tribunal. Years after the fact, in May of 2010, the court rejected the parishioners' appeal, but SoS remained open for Catholic worship - presumably based on the recommendation of the Meade-Eisner Reconfiguration Review Committee, which was established by O'Malley to take a second look at some of the parishes that he suppressed.

This might have sufficed for the spiritual needs of Squantum's Catholics, but a mere four months later, the cardinal-archbishop of Boston had the church locked up again without any of the required canon law formalities, notably a "decree of relegation to profane use."

It took the cardinal another 10 months to legitimize his action, through a decree issued on July 14, 2011. A new round of canon appeals were then launched against the Bastille Day decree. This was pursued, again, all the way to the highest tribunal which on February 1, 2013, issued a final, non-appealable decree rejecting the recourse of parishioners.

It is perplexing that the diocese has acted so erratically for over nine long years, by (1) suppressing (i.e. extinguishing) a vibrant parish in the fall of 2004 without the requirement - and without the common Christian charity - of a decree to which Squantum's

Catholics were fully entitled; (2) doing a turnaround by reversing the decision several months later, in July of 2005 when public concern throughout the archdiocese was at a peak; and then (3) coming back a full three hundred and sixty degrees with another U-turn in the fall of 2010, by locking up the church, again without the canon law requirement and without the common Christian charity of a decree to which the parishioners were entitled.

What is worse, by the record of this appeal, it is clear that the Archdiocese of Boston misrepresented some significant facts that weighed against the parishioners throughout the appeal process. The most blatant misrepresentations are the following, from the documentation of the case:

"The Archbishop [of Boston] maintains that '[in English] they [Mazrimas and Glennon] prefer to pursue their cause before the Holy See rather than before their own Archbishop.'"

This is false. There is voluminous correspondence on the record, as well as records of several meetings, which show clearly the willingness of the SoS parishioners to settle this matter locally.

Moreover, canon appeals are the right of Catholics under the Code of Canon Law (canon 221).

In the case documentation, there is also a statement which indicates we, as the "Friends of Star of the Sea," lack the standing to be able to file a canonical appeal to the Vatican. This is also false. We have always filed our appeals using and signing our own names, and have never filed appeals on behalf of the Friends. The disturbing fact of the matter is that our most recent set of appeals were rejected on the basis of a made-up technicality. Our canonical advocate in Rome, who happens to be the most senior member of the apostolic bar (and who advises the Pope annually on Canon Law) is both shocked and appalled at the Vatican's blatant disregard for its own set of laws with respect to Star of the Sea.

The truth is that the archdiocese is now in an unholy hurry [in the literal sense of this term] to sell the SoS property. Which gives rise to a puzzle:

One of the highest priorities of the Roman Catholic Church is 'the New Evangelization', namely an outreach effort to bring back lapsed Catholics. In the Boston area, this is also the theme of an expensive 'Catholics Come Home' media campaign. So what is logic of repelling hundreds of loyal Catholics by driving them from their spiritual home, the parish of Mary, Star of the Sea, established in 1945, and built and maintained entirely through parishioners funds over the past 68 years? "Come Home" to what?

So, the question becomes - where do we go from here? Well, a recent poll of the Friends of SoS reveals that 4% of our membership believes the organization should end its mission to save SoS; 4% have no opinion; and an overwhelming 92% feel strongly that efforts should continue to save SoS. What those "efforts" will be are ultimately up to the Friends' legal committee, but suffice it to say, the voyage continues along these uncharted waters. The Friends pray for the intercession of Our Lady of Good Counsel to bring an amicable resolution to this very unfortunate and spiritually unhealthy period in the history of the Archdiocese of Boston.

D.A.'s Drug Task Force Earns Regional Awards

The New England Narcotics Enforcement Officers' Association conferred two separate awards to Massachusetts State Police Detectives working in District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey's drug task force at the organization's spring conference.

"The sergeant and four troopers assigned to this unit have built productive relationships with our local police departments and with federal law enforcement, and that coordination is paying off the way I hoped it would," Morrissey said the awards ceremony held recently in Portsmouth, NH. "They are a dedicated group, and they are being effective in regional investigations and coordination across jurisdictions."

Morrissey said that although the awards named specific officers, the sergeant in command of the unit said the officers preferred that individual names be omitted from press coverage. "They work as a unit and they succeed as a unit," Morrissey said. The awards are given for operations completed in the previous calendar year.

The Norfolk DA's Drug Task Force joined with the US Postal Inspection Service in receiving the John "Sonny" Carbone Memorial Award for an operation resulting in five arrests, the seizure of six kilograms of cocaine, two motor vehicles used in drug transportation, and $60,000 in cash used to fuel drug transactions. "We are also thankful for the support and assistance of the Randolph Police Department in that investigation and in executing search warrants at the suspect residence in that community," Morrissey said.

The Perry H. Henderson Memorial Award was awarded to several agencies participating in "Operation Tito," an investigation led by the Drug Enforcement Agency into a large-scale heroin and cocaine distribution organization in both Norfolk and Suffolk counties. That investigation resulted in nine arrests and the seizure of roughly 50 kilograms of cocaine and 30 kilograms of heroin. Authorities also seized five vehicles used for conducting drug transactions and more than $1 million in suspected illegal narcotics profits.

"I think it is telling that both of these awards arise from operations where our Drug Task Force is working in partnership with other agencies having local, state or federal jurisdiction," Morrissey said.

"That is our business model. It is clear to me that law enforcement works most effectively when we work together across levels and jurisdictions."

Squantum School PTO Awards Scholarships

Council OKs 3% Pay Hike For Dept. Heads

ing Stephen McGrath, director of human resources for the city, said those employees hadn't received raises since FY09 began in July 2008. Since that last raise, McGrath said union workers employed by the city received raises totaling seven percent.

"During the time that none of these raises were received by department heads and appointees, the unions had approximately a seven percent increase - this is a three percent increase," McGrath said. "It isn't parity. It's a little bit less. I think it's fair."

The raises were approved by a 7-2 vote of the committee, which includes all council members. Finance Committee Chairman Joe Finn and Councillor Doug Gutro both opposed the measure. Finn said it was inappropriate to fund the raises out of the reserve for appropriation line.

"When you came before us in FY13 we voted on a reserve for appropriation that you told us at that particular time was for the specific purpose of honoring collective bargaining agreements that you were in the process of negotiating at that time," Finn said. "To talk about funding non-union management positions out of that same type of reserve, to me is wholly inappropriate. It's almost a stealth raise."

Finn suggested that the administration should've instead rolled the money into the FY14 budget, using it to double the raises already included in that budget for non-union employees. "Integrate it into FY14 and give a significant raise that will continue after FY14 going forward," he said.

McGrath said that both he and Mayor Thomas Koch had mentioned raises for non-union employees when the FY13 budget was presented last spring.

"I remember an allusion by the mayor and myself that we were looking at raises and the collective bargaining units were a part of it and the idea was that department heads and appointees were also," McGrath said. "There was a desire not to appropriate it until such time that we had the lion's share of collective bargaining units settled."

Gutro said he could not recall whether or not the raises were discussed during that time. His concern was about handing out the raises retroactively.

"Obviously in my judgment these people deserve the money and that's why I support it in the FY14 budget. But I feel a sense of discomfort on the retroactive piece," Gutro said.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said that it's not unusual for municipalities give raises to non-union employees in similar circumstances.

"Municipalities routinely, under parity situations, give the same retros to non-unions as the unions enjoy. This is not unusual," McNamee said. "It's a matter of equity and fairness. It's a way to communicate to employees that there is equal value recognized."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said the council had awarded retroactive raises in June 2006 when he served on a panel tasked with reviewing salaries for non-union workers.

"It did not fit neatly into a fiscal year and I am 99 percent sure that in fact there was some retroactivity back to the beginning of the fiscal year of the timeframe of the work that we did," Coughlin said. "It was a very detailed analysis that we undertook and I do remember the retroactivity being a component of that."

Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, will hold a regional conference Friday, June 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy, 1000 Marriott Dr., Quincy.

The conference, entitled "Celebrating the Past, Embracing the Future," will examine Quincy's past opioid abuse prevention accomplishments, celebrate White House recognition of the "Quincy Model", and look to the future with a new and unique regional initiative on opioid and prescription medication misuse and abuse prevention named the "Massachusetts Opioid Abuse Prevention Collaborative" (MOAPC), funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Bureau of Substance Abuse Services.

Impact Quincy's regional partners include the City of Quincy and Towns of Braintree, Randolph, Stoughton, and Weymouth.

Keynote speaker will be Michael Botticelli, Deputy Director of the Office of Drug Control Policy, Executive Office of the President.

Botticelli has more than two decades of experience supporting Americans who have been affected by substance use disorders. Prior to joining ONDCP, Botticelli served as director of the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, where he successfully expanded innovative and nationally recognized prevention, intervention, treatment, and recovery services for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Other confirmed speakers include:

- Dr. Kevin P. Hill, M.D., M.H.S., an Associate Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and Psychiatrist-In-Charge at McLean Hospital Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment Program.

Point Webster School Principal James McGuire Retiring

thought about becoming an educator.

"About mid-way through my career at Babson I kind of started to wonder about whether or not I wanted education and would enjoy education. So I thought about it, graduated, got a job at a bank in Boston, was in banking for a couple years, and took a few courses at Bridgewater State and decided I wanted to be an educator," said McGuire. "When the opportunity presented itself at Quincy High School to apply for the Quincy High School soccer coach I applied and got the position in 1976."

While coaching he was also student teaching at Eastern Nazarene College and Central Middle School before he was hired as a math teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School where he taught for four years and also met his wife, Cookie, who retired this past December after 32 years in education. At the end of his four years Proposition 2 1/2 came along and he, along with his wife, were rified (reduction in force), so he went back to Babson College where he served as the Associate Director of Undergraduate Admissions until 1986.

After finding there was too much traveling required at the college level McGuire returned to Quincy taking a position as a teacher at North Quincy High School in 1986 until 1990 when he became assistant principal at Sterling Middle School. After four years at Sterling he was asked to be the assistant principal at Broad Meadows. Then in 1999 he interviewed for the principal position at Point Webster.

"When I interviewed for the job with the superintendent there was a principal position open at Point and at Central. The superintendent said he hadn't decided and I said if I had my choice I would certainly want Point," said McGuire. "I told him how invested I was and how much the Point means to me, and always will. It's a wonderful part of Quincy, and I don't think enough people know what a wonderful part of Quincy it is."

When he was hired as the Principal at Point Webster 14 years ago the building was going through $7 million in renovations.

"I was hired in February so I was involved in the construction portion of it, and we opened the building in September of 1999 with 240 students in grades six, seven and eight. The following year we took the fifth grade from (Clifford) Marshall and ended up with 340 students in grades five, six, seven, and eight. We were the first and only fifth grade middle school at that point," said McGuire.

"Coming in and opening a school the way I did is an incredible advantage as opposed to the principal that gets hired and inherits the building and inherits the staff that is already there. I had the opportunity to bring people that I had worked with at Sterling Middle School back with me, and as time has gone on I have been able to hire people. When you hire the people that you interview and you meet and they strike you as positive people for your particular school that's a real advantage and not every principal gets that opportunity."

McGuire added that at the middle school level is where a teacher can really make a difference in a child's life, which is what his staff does every day.

"I tell people when they come in to interview, it's the level that you can really make a difference in. You can meet kids that are maybe not academically focused or they have issues that are outside of the school that they have to deal with that are tough challenging issues and you can make a difference for those kids and really get them to be successful in their lives. Kids come back all the time wanting to see teachers and thank teachers for what they've done which is really a rewarding part of est accomplishments is the work he has done within the Quincy Point neighborhood.

"I think the thing I'm most proud of is working with kids in the Quincy Point neighborhood. Having grown up in the Quincy Point neighborhood and experiencing things now that I experienced back then, there is a level of acceptance and tolerance of kids that live in Quincy Point that I think is exemplary," said McGuire. "I think the kids accept everyone else for their differences and appreciate that. That's something I was very aware of as a student there and something that I've tried to bring along. It's a population of students that need our support, need our help, we've always tried to make their school day a positive day and a normal part of their day."

After a total of over 36 years as an educator McGuire said he isn't sure what he will be doing the days following his retirement.

"I don't know yet. I'm going to take a little bit of time and think about what exactly I like to do, what strikes my fancy," said McGuire. "The really interesting part of it for teachers is that you've gone back to school every September since the time you were in kindergarten, and you do it in college, you do it if you're a first year teacher starting, so to go through 61 years and suddenly you're not going. Now there were two years I didn't, those were the two years I was working at the bank in Boston, but every other fall my entire life I've gone back to school so this will be the first one coming up that September doesn't mean go back to school."

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said that McGuire is a principal that will surely be missed by the Point community.

"He is certainly a principal that will be missed in the community that he grew up in," said DeCristofaro. "Jim has always been extraordinary in the way he respects the students, the way he respects the staff, and the families, which were fortunate to be apart of his career."

52 Billings Road North Quincy

Larry Taglieri New Quincy High School Principal

is retiring as the principal of QHS.

Taglieri's Quincy High School roots run deep.

"There are a lot of roots there for me at Quincy High School," he said in an interview shortly after his appointment. "I graduated from there in 1986. I have two brothers who graduated Quincy High School, two sisters who graduated Quincy High School. My parents were class of 1957, graduated from Quincy High School. My grandmother was on the custodial staff for a good solid 14 years.

"My family has always been supportive and were all ecstatic when they found out I got the job. My wife, Tricia, is also a graduate of Quincy High School so she is just as excited as I am. She really understands what the role of a principal is, and the work that it requires and has always been encouraging."

Taglieri has worked for the Quincy Public School system for 20 years. His career in education began as a substitute at Quincy High School just out of college. He attended St. Edward's University in Texas and knew once he finished he would return to Quincy to begin his teaching career.

"There was no doubt that I would be coming back here after college," he said. "Jobs weren't a plenty at that time, so I did what a lot of people did during that time which was substitute. So I was subbing at Quincy High for a little bit, then they started doing something a little different with the security positions in the schools, and they were hiring people to work on the security staff, and I actually did that for about a year and a half at North Quincy High School."

After over a year working security he received a position as the Physical Education teacher at Central Middle School and then at North Quincy High School before becoming a Dean at NQHS. In the fall of 2002, he became the Assistant Principal at Broad Meadows Middle School after earning his Masters in Educational Administration from Eastern Nazarene College. After three years as the Assistant Principal he was appointed Principal of the middle school in 2006.

After seven years as the principal at Broad Meadows, Taglieri said that he just decided to apply for the Quincy High position because the idea of moving up to the high school, his alma mater, appealed to him.

"Certainly I absolutely love Broad Meadows, there is no need for me to run away from Broad Meadows. It is an outstanding community and an unbelievable staff; everything really comes together like a family there. It's just an unbelievable place to work.

"I will miss the community support and the staff. The unique piece about middle school is the amazing growth that is between grades six and eight. It's really special," said Taglieri. "The idea of going up to Quincy High now really appealed to me. It would be very neat for me to be back in there and be at that end of the educational trail again. What can I say, that's my alma mater."

Although Taglieri admits he is nervous to step into the new role but it is something he is very excited about doing.

"Someone asked me if I was nervous to move up there, to Quincy High School, well I mean whenever you're trying to do something that is important to you it is kind of like a good nervous. I am very excited about it," said Taglieri. "It's going to be a bigger scale. I think you would be surprised about the amount of work that goes into being a principal at the middle and the elementary school level. Certainly the staff is the biggest at the high school, but your responsibility to your community, and to the staff and to the students, I think every principal in Quincy feels that anxiousness, and they want to do the best that they can. We do all the same things, but this will be at a grander scale."

Taglieri says he is looking forward to being able to see his students from Broad Meadows, which he prides himself in knowing each one by name, at the high school next year.

"I went through that same thing a little bit at Central. There were some kids I had for three years at Central, and then when I moved up, they moved up, so I actually had some kids for seven years, which I said that will never happen again and it's going to happen again," said Taglieri. "We follow our kids (at Broad Meadows), how they are doing up there, in the high schools, what are their successes. My biggest goal will be to get to know the students. I pride myself in getting to know the students. At a smaller scale, at Broad Meadows, I know every kid, I really do. It would be a challenge and a goal to get to know every kid at the high school.

"School climate is so important for me. For parents to feel welcome, for students to want to go to school, to understand how important their education is for them, and I think school climate plays a big part in that."

For now, Taglieri said, his focus will be to build on the tradition of excellence the school exudes and the work done by retiring principal Frank Santoro.

"My focus now is Quincy High School and continuing to build on that tradition of excellence and the work that has been done by Frank Santoro and all the staff that is there now. I'm not scared of it (the shoes he has to fill). I am aware of it and I like the bar set high. Frank Santoro is a one-of-a-kind type of principal. I really understand the role we play as a high school in the city, the amount of impact we can have in the community around us. This position certainly helps, to help others."

On Friday, May 31 at approximately 9:50 p.m., Officer Paul Holland was dispatched to the intersection of Trevore and Dorchester Street for a report of two suspicious parties sitting in a vehicle.

Upon arrival, the officer observed two males exiting the vehicle. As the officer approached the two males, he immediately recognized the passenger (suspect 1) as a local resident known to abuse opiates. The officer approached the male suspect 2 on the driver's side, then looked inside the vehicle to find a spoon and hypodermic syringe on the driver's seat. Officer Holland then contacted Quincy Police Dispatch for an additional unit to assist.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer pat frisked both suspects out of concern that they may have more needles, which could pose a threat to his safety. A warrant check revealed that suspect 1 had a default warrant from Cambridge District Court. At this time, Officers Jimmy Chen and Sean Kelley, who were checking parks for after hours activities, arrived on scene, as did Sgt. Patrick Faherty.

Suspect 1 was placed into custody and searched, which produced two pills identified as Oxycodone. Suspect 1 could not produce a prescription for the pills. Suspect 1 also had a bottle cap containing a brown substance believed to be heroin. A check of the vehicle also showed a needle, a spoon and a clear glassine bag with a white powder believed to be heroin. Suspect 2, a 24-year-old Wollaston resident, was also placed under arrest and charged with "Possession of Class A-Heroin."

During booking, Det. Brian Coen observed suspect 1 shifting his weight between his legs and frequently put his hand to his crotch and buttocks. Det. Coen instructed suspect 1 to spread his legs apart, which caused two uncapped syringes to fall from inside the suspect's buttocks area. Det. Coen also conducted a search of suspect 1's mouth, and found a glassine bag-containing heroin.

Suspect 1, a Squantum resident, was charged with "Possession of Class A-Heroin, Possession of Class B-Oxycodone, and Misleading a Police Officer/Impeding a Police Investigation.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Monday, June 3, Officers Sean Glennon and Greg Mar were conducting surveillance in the area of McDonald's in North Quincy. Over the past few months, the officers received information from numerous sources that a male was procuring alcohol and cigarettes for students in and around North Quincy High School. On Thursday, a staff member at North Quincy High also expressed serious concern about students socializing with this same man. The male was being described as black, in his 50s, bearded, and appeared to be homeless.

At approximately 6:45 a.m. on June 3, the officers observed this male associate with a boy and girl known to be students. Although nothing criminal appeared to be occurring, based on their information the officers were concerned for the well being of the students. The officers, along with School Resource Officer Steve Burgio, approached the male and requested identification, which the male provided. A check for warrants revealed the male had a warrant for failure to register as a sex offender out of Boston. He was placed into handcuffs and transported to the station where he was then booked.

Back at the station, Officer Glennon researched the male suspect and discovered a police report written by Officer Matt Hockney on Oct. 29, 2012 where he had the same male trespassed from North Quincy High. In that case, Officer Hockney found the male suspect sleeping on the school's loading dock. At booking, it was learned that the suspect had been staying in Quincy between McDonald's and Dunkin' Donuts for the past four or five days.

The suspect, a 58-year-old homeless man, was also trespassed from McDonald's after the manager was advised of the most recent investigation. Officer Glennon plans on taking out additional charges against the male suspect for failing to register as a sex offender (level 3) in this city too.

Nice Work!

Glo Financial Services Scam: With offices in Spain, England, and Toronto, the company is sending out letters indicating that you have won 2nd place in the "USA Departmental Stores Sweepstake Lottery." As the winner, you will receive a certified check, delivered by UPS/FedEx. All you have to do is cash the initial check of $4,450.50 and then wire $3,400 for documentation, taxes, and fees.

This is a scam.

The writing of the letter indicates it is not professional grade. You've won the lottery that you didn't even enter. You will be out $3,400 once you wire this money to the number listed in Canada.

In all candor, there is very little a local police department can do to get your money back when it was sent out of the country. Why do these scammers continue to do this to Americans? Simply, because there are enough suckers out there to make it profitable.

Over 150 Participate In Quincy Senior Olympics

First Year Games Held At Faxon Field Track Facility

Over 150 participants took part in the 31st Annual Quincy Senior Olympics under near perfect weather conditions for the 10-day long event.

Sponsored by the City of Quincy Mayor's Office, Council on Aging and Recreation Department, men and women age 55 and above participated in 17 events. The event also included a a sportsmanship luncheon and awards ceremony.

This year marked the first time that the Olympics utilized the city's new state-of-the-art track and field facility at Faxon Field.

The highlight of the morning events at the track was the one-mile run which saw Quincy residents Patricia Del Val and Barbara Coleman set the mile standard for their age groups. Del Val, who participates in sprint triathlons, was also the keynote speaker at the sportsmanship luncheon. She discussed the importance of healthy active lifestyles leading to longer and better quality of life.

The event was sponsored for the second year by Quincy Medical Center, a Steward Family Hospital, and River Bay Club hosted both the sportsmanship luncheon and the awards ceremony.

Site hosts were the Torre Dei Passeri Club for bocce, Olindy's for bowling and billiards and Presidents Golf Club hosted the golf event.

"This traditional event demonstrates the cooperation of our civic and community business partners to host a unique recreational opportunity with great health benefits and contributes greatly to the quality of life of our senior population. We are once again thankful for their contribution," said Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Valedictorian Amanda Yao's Message To The North Quincy High School Class of 2013

NQHS Graduates: 'Every Second Is A New Opportunity'

By EMILY TAFT

At the June 5th North Quincy High School commencement ceremony at Veterans Memorial Stadium Class of 2013, Valedictorian Amanda Yao urged her 341 fellow classmates to embrace and create new opportunities.

"Where we are today is a result of how we made use of our time and opportunities. In the future difficulties will continue to arise however, we must not let other's negativity stop us from reaching our hopes and dreams. We must take that negativity and turn it into positive energy that will help us throughout our journeys in life.

"Every second of our lives is a new opportunity for us. We don't have to wait until tomorrow, next year, next month, or even when we go to college, we can create a new opportunity at any moment we wish to," said Yao who will be attending Brown University in the fall.

"In elementary and middle school I had never been a great student, and it seemed as if I could never be good at anything. I remember being told I wasn't good enough when I got a needs improvement on my MCAS. Back then I seemed to accept all of that as who I was. I was only as good as they told me as I was, and I was never good enough. That's where I was wrong because in high school I realized that we are only as good as we make ourselves. We can't let ourselves be defined by others or by our circumstances."

Yao went on to urge her fellow classmates to not let the uncertainties stop them from pursuing their dreams.

"We will all face uncertainty in the future. Uncertainties about what will happen in college, who our new friends will be, and what career we will pursue. But uncertainty won't stop us from doing anything; we all have within us the strength to work a little harder, study a little longer, laugh a little more, and live a little better. Wherever life takes us, all we have to do is take a minute to smile and stay focused on everything important to us, our family and friends, our passions and happiness," said Yao.

"I want to end on this note. We should all be proud of what we've done in our accomplishments so far, but we still have so many more years to go. So even if we haven't reached those goals yet we must keep going for them, even if we haven't realized our dreams yet we must keep dreaming and working towards them. We all have the ability to make the impossible, possible. Let's show everyone what we are made of and what we are capable of, the only limits we have are the ones we've placed on ourselves. So Class of 2013 let's start living."

During his Principal address, Robert Shaw said that the future holds great things for the members of the Class of 2013 because of the many accomplishments they have been apart of.

"In many ways this evening is about looking forward. I think I'm right in assuming that each of you in the 340 has been thinking a lot lately about what comes next and what changes are in store for you. Even those of you who know what is coming next are probably looking at this change with a sense of excitement that is tempered a bit by anxiety.

"That's a good thing. It means you're human, and it means you care about your future. That future holds made of. I know what you can do," said Shaw.

"I know, for example, that you earned 128 Adams Scholarships for your performance on MCAS. I know 312 of you are heading to colleges and universities all over the country, even two up in Canada. I know that five of you are going into the military, either directly or through the reserves.

"I know that among you are students who competed in national science fairs, who have represented our school at robotic competitions, who have earned high scores on national foreign language exams, and who have competed in the stock market challenge.

"I also know that among you are four students who, with an assist from two friends from the junior class, won the High School Quiz Show Massachusetts State Championship, and the first ever Governors Cup. I also know that the Class of 2013 has brought an astounding level of spirit to North Quincy High School.

"You're a class who recognizes our school is a true community where people take an interest in the achievements of others and supports their friends and classmates in their endeavors."

Shaw spoke of a week at the end of February where basketball tournament matches were played, students advertised their production of All Shook Up, and worked hard to solve problems in the classroom and create science fair projects. In that single week, Shaw said, there was so much school spirit that it made everyone proud to be a part of NQHS.

"Consider the highlights of that single week in March, athletic achievements, artistic performances, academic accomplishments that make all of us proud to be associated with this school and especially this class. To our graduates assembled here tonight I simply say you did that. You reached those great heights on the court, on the ice, on the stage, in the classroom, in the science lab, and a few weeks before that in a TV studio in Brighton," said Shaw.

"In doing that you

Valedictorian Wenzheng Yu's Message To The Quincy High School Class of 2013

QHS Graduates: 'Uphold The Value Of Dedication'

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy High School Valedictorian Wenzheng Yu urged his 390 fellow classmates during their graduation ceremony on June 4th at Veterans Memorial Stadium to uphold the value of dedication that they have acquired and strengthened over their four years in high school.

"Today celebrates the dedication that we have all shown throughout our education up to this point. As long as we all uphold the value dedication that we have acquired and strengthened over the past four years we will be well prepared and uniquely positioned to tackle any course we choose to take anywhere in the world," said Yu, who will be attending Harvard University in the fall.

"Out of all the things I've learned from teachers and peers alike, one of the most meaningful and practical, is that in life there is no substitute for dedication. Dedication means going above and beyond expectations. In this increasingly competitive world meeting the bare minimum is only a good start, but far from enough to propel us to success. What separates the best and the brightest from the mediocre is how much extra dedication we are willing to give."

The ceremony marked not only the graduation of the 391 Quincy High School seniors but also the "graduation" of their Principal,

"AS LONG AS we uphold the value dedication that we have acquired and strengthened over the past four years we will be well prepared and uniquely positioned to tackle any course we choose to take anywhere in the world," Valedictorian Wenzheng Yu told his fellow Quincy High School Class of 2013 graduates at last Tuesday's graduation. Frank Santoro, who will be retiring at the end of the school year after 13 years dedicated to the Quincy Public School System.

"Graduates in the year 2000 as most of you entered the Quincy Public Schools in that kindergarten year, that year I too came to Quincy Public Schools as Principal of Central Middle School, and now 13 years later we both will be leaving Quincy Public Schools together," said Santoro.

"Tonight I too wear a blue robe as a member of the class of 2013. The class of 2013 will always be special to me, remembering that as I retire you too will retire from the Quincy Public Schools.

"Your class is special in many other ways as well. You entered a new high school and contributed to its design and designed a new mission statement that you leave other classes to follow in the 21st century. Your talents have laid the groundwork for others and you took great pride in your new school, and you proved to me that Quincy High School has become a beacon for others to follow. You have built a strong foundation that future classes will stand on and continue to build upon.

"We will now both embark on the future that holds many opportunities for us to grow. We were afraid the day we walked into school 13 years ago, and we will be afraid this day as we walk out. However, our experiences at Quincy High School have taught us, me and you, that as long as we follow our heart, passion, and dreams, we will choose a path that leads us in the right direction towards a successful and rewarding life."

The class, which Santoro pointed out in his address, has had a number of successes including 85 percent making the honor roll during their tenure, 88 percent plan to attend colleges across the country, 290 colleges accepted them, 61 have earned free tuition at state school as a result of their MCAS scores and the Abigail Adams Scholarship Program, among many other accomplishments members of the Class of 2013 attributed to.

"Class of 2013 you left your mark on Quincy High School, you have continued a tradition of excellence," said Santoro. "Class of 2013 you stayed with us when others left because of construction fears. You put those fears behind you and you truly have left your mark of excellence."

Veterans Stadium was filled with parents, QPS staff, QHS teachers, along with school committee members and other elected officials including Mayor Tom Koch who urged the Class of 2013 to remember their roots.

"I just want to leave you with one brief remark that I got from a dear friend who remembers what his mother said to him the night of his graduation," said Koch. "Remember your roots. Remember you are who you are because others have loved you, your family, your friend, your school community, and God. Remember you are related, dependent and responsible."

School Committee Vice chairwoman Barbara Isola gave the graduates advice and ideas to guide them in their future endeavors.

"I would like to share three quick thoughts that you can tuck away and use as you go to further your education, serve in the military, or go out into the work force.

"The first is you truly can create your own future by the actions you take today. The things you focus on will truly become reality, so focus on the positive. As you go forward take risks, but don't be reckless. Assess your strengths and weaknesses and each time you do something stretch yourself a little bit further," said Isola.

"This is something someone told me a long time ago; never assume that the answer is no. Ask for what you want or need, make your case, and advocate for yourself. You'd be surprised how many people are out there wanting to assist you. These simple ideas may seem very little at this point but I can tell you that they are guiding principles that will take you a long way. Embrace your future and make the most of each moment."

On the minds of many during the commencement ceremony was the absence of classmate Lamar Thompson who lost his life in a swimming accident just months before the beginning of the school year.

"We've shared so many memories and experiences

QHS Class Of 2013 Praises Principal Santoro

Retiring Principal Receives Accolades, Class Gift

By EMILY TAFT

During the June 4th Quincy High School graduation ceremony at Veterans Memorial Stadium member of the Class of 2013 honored Principal Frank Santoro with a personal class gift.

Graduate Amelia Wool presented Santoro with the gift and invited him to join the class as they moved their tassels to the opposite side of their caps at the end of the ceremony.

"The end of this school year not only marks the end of our time at high school, but also the end of our principal, Mr. Santoro's long and successful career in education. It also marks the beginning of his well-deserved retirement from the Quincy Public School System," said Wool.

"When I recently asked my classmates to give a word or two that would describe Mr. Santoro they immediately had an answer. People responded with generous, intelligent, he's a really good guy, many even responded with 'someday I really hope to be that tall.'"

"As our principal, Mr. Santoro has observed the Class of 2013 through the good and the bad. Every single morning he greeted us in the cafeteria, along with Mr. Johnson, sharing their cup of coffee and a very warm welcome. At lunch he could be seen sitting next to the lunch line, cracking jokes with the students and walking around, often picking up our trash from lunch. And when the 2:30 bell rang he was there in the front lobby smiling at the chaotic mess of teenagers crashing into one another attempting to get through the doors.

"But Mr. Santoro's day did not end there. He joined us at all of our after school activities, cheering us on, whether it was in the field, on the court, at the track, at the pool, or on the ice, he was there. Whether it was a home or an away game, he was there. It was also clear that Mr. Santoro took great pride in Quincy High School and by doing so he has instilled that pride in all of us. His dedication still did not end there. Mr. Santoro attended ever band concert, every choir concert, and every celebration of the arts.

"Although there were mostly great moments during our time at Quincy, brought your school together. Everyone felt they were a part of something special that week, and our school community was strengthened by these experiences. You were not alone in these experiences, on your teams, in your cast, around you at the science fair, with you in hundreds of classrooms around the building, were students who will come from the next few graduating classes and you have set a stellar example for them to follow.

"You have raised the bar for what it means to be a student at NQHS," Shaw added.

City Council President Michael McFarland was among the many city and state officials in attendance who gave the graduating seniors words of advice.

"The education you receive from North Quincy High and the Quincy Public Schools has prepared you for any path you choose. Along your path don't forget to work hard, play hard, and have a little fun along the way, it's okay," said McFarland. "Be proud of your diploma and your accomplishments and build upon them."

"Life is full of opportunities and decisions, go embrace them, but take responsibility for them. You have a terrific foundation. Be kind to others, and treat others as you wish to be treated. The best advice I can give you tonight is to stay positive."

Class president Melissa Ma kept the spirit of the class high as she spoke of proof that their class is the best.

"We are lucky to live in the best City in Massachusetts. It gave us two Presidents, Grumpy White's, and Coffee Break. Although these are the best things in Quincy, I'm here to talk about the best class ever, the Class of 2013," said Ma.

"Here's proof that our class is the best."

"We all support each other throughout our academic, athletic, extracurricular and personal endeavors. I know that all of you are bright, talented, and gifted young things were not always easy. When tragedy struck during different times over all four years Mr. Santoro was the one who helped ease the pain of our sorrow every time, being a friendly face when things got difficult. He was able to share his remarkable gift of compassion with not only one student but with the entire student body, a trait that not many possess. You have meant a great deal to us Mr. Santoro; you have truly led by example.

"From your daily presence before, during and after school we learned the importance of commitment to our work. From your love, from your care, for the students and the teachers, we learned the importance of having compassion for others. And from your very long career in education, with its countless hours of office work, staff meetings, parent conferences, and administrative meetings we learned the importance of dedication to the things that we are passionate about. We will really take these lessons with us for the rest of our lives. And later when we stand and move our tassels to the opposite side of our caps, we invite you Mr. Santoro to move yours as well, as we all begin the next chapter of our lives together. Congratulations on a job very well done."

together, both happy and sad," said Senior Class President Nina Plabutong who will be attending Simmons College in the fall. "We unfortunately lost a great friend of ours, Lamar Thompson, whom I never had the chance to meet but I've only heard good things about. His loss only made our class stronger. This was evident when the boys' soccer team came back this year even stronger, qualifying for the tournament, no doubt in honor of Lamar."

Plabutong presented the class gift of a bench to be put in the school's courtyard after she recalled her transformation from shy, scared freshman to growing into the comfortable senior standing before her classmates.

"Four years ago a little freshman was running up the steep steps of the old Quincy High building," said Plabutong. "It's funny to compare how scared and nervous we were of our first day in high school to how comfortable we've grown to be in it now."

"Quincy High is now and forever will be our home. My experience here has been a transformative one. I use to be so shy and afraid of public speaking and I never thought in a million years that I would be standing up here in front of all of you today. I think this is just a testament to how much someone can grow in their time here at Quincy High."

"As we all are about to set off on our own separate paths I just hope that you all remember we started off on the same one, and hopefully, someday in the future, our paths will cross again."

Before the graduates received their diplomas, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro urged the class to keep believing and continue to dream.

"Your Class of 2013, as we have heard, has made our City so proud in academics, in the arts, in athletics, in so many areas of Technical Education, and service to the City of Quincy," said DeCristofaro. "As you begin this next stage of your young lives please be mindful of the love, of the nurturing, of the guidance, of the encouragement, that your parents and other family members have shared."

"This evening recall the many smiles of yesterday as we celebrate, and tomorrow keep working hard, keep believing in your family, and your friends, but more importantly keep believing in yourself and make sure you continue to dream of accomplishing whatever you set your mind to do. Because nothing, absolutely nothing, is impossible."

QHS, NQHS Receive $48,000 Grant From State Treasurer

By EMILY TAFT

Quincy High School and North Quincy High School received a $48,000 grant award from State Treasurer Steve Grossman that will be spread out over three years and will be utilized to develop and implement a financial literacy program.

"This is another great opportunity, and it really is about partnerships, to talk about our students, and making sure our students get what they need in the most current fashion as possible," said Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "The world is changing so quickly, certainly from when I was in high school when credit cards were just coming to be, so we're very fortunate that we have incredible teachers, administrators that shepherd this. It's always about listening; it's always about doing what's right, not for ourselves, but for our students and preparing them for the world of work, somehow, someday."

The goal of the pilot program is to serve the special population students, such as ELL (English Language Learner) students, Special Education students, and the teen mother students. Each year the hope is to have 130 to 135 special population students enrolled in the pilot program and complete 25 hours of finance courses. One third of each schools student population is already enrolled in a finance course.

"The program that we have before us, sponsored by the treasurer, financial literacy, makes life a little bit more relevant to what you're learning in high school in the sense that there are decisions you will be making going into the college world or the work world, financial decisions that have a great impact on your life," said Mayor Tom Koch. "I think this program is so important to educate all ages, particularly young people in our school system, to really emphasize that every decision, every choice, has implications, or repercussions."

The grant, which awards $20,000 of for the upcoming school year and then $14,000 within the next two years, was awarded to both Quincy and North Quincy High School and nine other gateway schools across the commonwealth.

"We thought that a pilot program at the high school level was the way to go. This is meant to be a three-year ramp-up in a pilot program," said Grossman. "We invited all the high schools in our gateway communities, we have 26 gateway communities in the commonwealth, we invited all the high schools to compete and we got amazing presentations, we got amazing grant applications. Eleven high schools, in 10 gateway communities, this is the only city in the commonwealth, the only one, where both high schools are participating in this $20,000 grant."

Students from both Quincy and North Quincy High School spoke about how the finance classes they have taken have helped them better their own financial situations. North Quincy graduating senior Lisa Yang told the Treasurer that learning first hand how to manage her money has helped her to envision her future and how she wants to spend the money she earns.

"I think, throughout high school I have taken four years of business courses, but I feel like the most helpful or practical one was Personal Finance, which I took this year. We learned about things I will be dealing with next year, like how to budget for college, what types of loans will be available, and simple things like how to balance a checkbook, said Yang. "A great way I can apply what I learned in class was through one of our community partners in Quincy, South Coastal Bank, this year I just finished my term as chairperson on their junior board of directors. I really got to learn how to manage my money in terms of credit, the importance of paying back; it's not just free money. I think through experiences like that we're learning first hand, and it helped me envision my future and how I want to spend my money."

Quincy High School junior Madison Kirby said the most important thing she has learned from her finance class was to budget her money and always pay herself first.

"The most important thing they explained to me is to pay yourself first. Keeping track of my spending, and budgeting was something important I learned from the course," said Kirby. "It was crazy to learn all this new information and obviously in school all of the courses are extremely important but it's more fun to take a course where you can apply it to real life the second you walk out the door into real life."

QHS Science Class Earns Global Recognition

During the month of April, Quincy High School science teacher Christine Chang and student teacher Bridget Molloy worked with their 9th grade Integrated Science class on water conservation projects and were recognized by United Classrooms (UClass.org) as the high school winner of the global Earth Day project.

UClass is a new educational technology startup that promotes students as global citizens and creates the opportunity for students and teachers to connect with one another as part of the global education community. As part of this activity, students from all over the world explored important environmental issues and developed action plans to help our planet. The global network of teachers and students touched on issues present in the United States, Haiti, Ethiopia and Niger, uniting to raise concern to global warming, pollution, hunger, and scarcity of water.

At Quincy High School, students carried out a two week computer-based research project on various biomes, a large geographical area characterized by certain types of plants and animals, to learn about different environments around the world. Each student created a poster of their biome and while exploring the water cycle, identified ways water use impacts our lives. As an effort to engage in water conservation, each student cut out a large raindrop and wrote down promises of how they would conserve water in their lives. Some of the student comments included:

"I researched the desert for my biome project. You think deserts would be just land, but they're not. There's actually a lot to deserts. It

Middle School Students Participate At State Science Fair

Students and judges recently gathered for the 2013 Massachusetts State Middle School Science and Engineering Fair. Of the more than 250 projects on display at Worcester Technical High School, six were manned by students from Quincy's Central Middle School.

The topics of their projects ranged from testing the "5-second rule" using E. coli, to generating electricity from the seismic energy of earthquakes.

After three hours of interviews with judges, Central's students were treated to lunch, a movie and opportunities to speak with educators and scientists from companies and research institutions while their scores were tallied. In the end, five of the six projects received awards.

Mario Ragusa and Rachael Zisk each received an Pitching Key For Morrisette Legion

By BILL GRIFFIN

It begins and ends with pitching. It always has and it always will.

Morrisette's senior legion team has a terrific offensive blend of speed, power and contact hitters. They will hit. They have worked tirelessly on the fundamentals and the defense should be solid. They will catch the ball. The success of the season revolves around the single, most important part of the game.

"Pitching," said Maze whose team finished fourth in Zone 6 East last summer. "The key is pitching. If we get good pitching, I like our chances to have a good season."

There is no problem with the ace. Tommy McDonald, who throws a hard, heavy sinker which forces fistfuls of ground balls, returns from last year. He won his first eight starts with an ERA under 2.00 and a scary strikeout-to-walk ratio of nearly 15-1 for BC High this spring. He has the stuff and experience to lead a staff.

"We know what we have with Tommy. There are no questions there," said Maze.

Righty Tom Garland returns from last year. He has a solid fastball, excellent control and is a fierce competitor on the mound who battles for every strike and out.

"He was undefeated for us last year. He is mentally tough," said Maze.

Greg Paulo, who had a fine season as a sophomore for Quincy High, will be the No. 3 starter. He has a knee-buckling curveball, a good fastball and he knows how to pitch.

"He's what I call an all-around pitcher," said Maze. "He knows how to control a game on the mound. When he is in a groove, he speeds the game up. When there's trouble he slows it down. He knows what he is doing."

The legion schedule which bunches 23 games into just over a month demands pitching depth. There are weeks with four and five games. Makeups make the schedule more brutal. T.J. Hobbin and Chris LaLiberte will provide starting depth for Morrisette.

"They'll be spot starters for us," said Maze. "T.J. throws very hard and when he gets his curveball over, he is tough. Chris is a solid all-around pitcher from BC High and he will start games for us."

Dan Cobban, another senior standout for BC High, will be the closer. A closer must do one thing. Throw strikes. Cobban throws strikes. His walk-to-strikeout ratio at BC High was almost 7-1 and his ERA was 1.02. Maze had no doubts about handing him the ball with a one-run lead in the seventh.

"The closer is so important. There is nothing more discouraging than losing a game after working to build a lead for six innings," said Maze.

Righty Josh Hayward, who was North's ace this spring, will serve in the set-up role for Cobban. He has an excellent fastball and fine control.

Morrisette has weapons on offense. They can play smallball or longball. Andrew Currie (centerfield), Pat Verhault (second base), and Brian Turner (leftfield) supply speed and on-base weapons. Maze can bunt, hit-and-run and steal bases with his club.

"Pat does all the little things at the plate. He doesn't strikeout, and he puts the ball in play," said Maze. "Andrew will lead off. He can bunt, steal and get on base. Brian can really run."

The power will come from catcher Andrew Jaehnig, Hayward (first base), Jason Pekkinen (third), Robbie Munroe (right field), and Tyler Beach (shortstop). Matt Davis will supply more sock when he returns from an injury and McDonald is also an excellent hitter.

"I like our offense," said Maze.

Jaehnig has power and was BC High's leading hitter with an average over .370. Pekkinen batted .450 for Archbishop Williams, good for third in the catholic central League. He also has extra-base power. Munroe, a right-handed hitter, has impressive power especially to right center. During the high-school season, he came within 20 feet of the distant fence in the right center at Adams Field.

Beach is a complete hitter who takes the ball well to the opposite field. Aaron Clancy, who caught for Catholic Memorial as a sophomore, gives Maze depth behind the plate and will also DH to get his bat into the lineup.

"Andrew is excellent behind the plate. He has a strong arm and calls a good game," said Maze. "Pekkinen is a captain for us, a hard-

Morrisette Junior Legion Rolls In Opener, 11-0

By BILL GRIFFIN

Before his team began its season, Morrisette Junior Legion coach Rick Beach was asked what was the key to a successful summer.

"Mistakes," said Beach. "We can't afford mental mistakes. Physical mistakes will happen, but we can't afford the mental ones."

In its first game, there were no mistakes: physical or mental. Morrisette turned in a clean opening-night performance, rolling past Holbrook, 11-0 in a Zone 5-6 contest called after six innings at Adams Field Sunday night.

Righthander Ethan Yau pitched a complete-game two-hitter, his teammates played errorless defense, and Pat O'Connor had a hit, two RBI and made the defensive play of the game in leftfield to headline the victory.

"We played great," said Beach. "The defense was good, Ethan pitched well and we were able to force things with our speed," said Beach whose team stole 11 bases.

Yau was excellent. He struck out five and walked two. The hits were on an infield tapper and a bloop to the outfield. He had back-to-back walks in the fourth, but other than that, his control nosed player who sells out on every play. Munroe has the ability to keep his hands back, wait on the ball and hit with power the other way," said Maze.

The defense should be good. Verhault is exceptional at second and Hayward is a terrific first baseman especially on low throws. Turner and Currie will get to everything in the outfield. Jaehnig made great strides defensively after taking over the starting job as catcher for BC High.

"Pekkinen is an outstanding third baseman and Tyler will make all the routine plays at short. Munroe is a good outfielder and well," said Maze. "We work a lot on fundamentals. They are so important. You need 21 outs to win. If you can make the first 21 without an error, you have a great chance to win."

Morrisette's opener last Sunday against Stoughton was postponed due to a conflict with the high-school tournament. Morrisette is at Braintree Thursday (Braintree High, 7:30), visits Milton Sunday (Cunningham Park, 5:45), and hosts Holbrook Monday (8:00 p.m.).

was spot-on. He moved his fastball around and mixed in a good curve to keep Holbrook off balance.

"What I liked best was his control," said Beach. "He had that one little stretch in the fourth, but he settled down and threw strikes."

Lau kept the ball down, forced groundballs and his infield made the plays. Seven outs came on groundballs. Morrisette turned a 5-4-3 DP in the sixth. Third baseman Bobby Salvucci, shortstop Troy Shepherd and second baseman Josh Helfrich were all steady and sharp, especially for an opener when a team frequently makes mistakes.

"I like the infield a lot. They didn't make errors and they handled tough chances. Bobby was especially good at third," said Beach.

Six players hit safely in the eight-hit attack for Morrisette who scored seven runs in the second to take control of the game. Shepherd had two hits, two runs scored and two RBI while Pat Keohane two hits, two runs scored and an RBI. Adam McCormack and O'Connor had a hit and two RBI while Helfrich and catcher Liam Fitzmaurice hit safely.

"We got key hits with men on and we had good balance throughout the lineup," said Beach.

O'Connor made a terrific play to end Holbrook's best chance in the fourth. With the bases loaded and nobody out, he charged a fly ball in left, made the catch in good position to throw, and fired an in-the-air strike to home to easily get the runner for a 7-2 double play. Yau finished the inning with an out on a popup to preserve the big lead and the shutout.

"Pat missed all of last year, but he looked good tonight. That was a great play," said Beach.

In Morrisette's seven-run second, the first eight batters reached safely and Post 294 sent 11 batters to the plate. Morrisette stole five bases in the inning. O'Connor had a two-run single while Fitzmaurice, Keohane, and Shepherd chipped in with key hits.

"We used our speed well. It kept the pressure on them and it got us into scoring position," said Beach.

Salvucci drove in a run in the fourth. Shepherd, Helfrich, and McCormack finished the scoring with hits in a three-run sixth.

The junior legion finished 16-6 last summer, good for a second-place tie in the zone. Beach feels the development of his young pitchers will be an important factor to his club's success in his 20-game schedule this season.

"I think we'll hit. We have the speed to play smallball. The key is how the pitchers come along," he said.

Yau looked good in the opener. Dave Suslowitz has excellent stuff and will see action at the top of the rotation. Cody Desmond is a hard-throwing lefty out of Quincy High and Mike Gendreau features a good curveball. Richie Ryan and Jack Kennedy provide pitching depth.

"We have some good arms. The question is how quickly they develop for us," said Beach.

Brendan McDonald will start at first and supply power in the middle of the order. Brendan Collins is a solid defender in centerfield. Chris Wallace and Cam White give Morrisette depth at catcher and in the infield.

The junior legion team hosts Littleton Thursday at 5:45 and faces Norwood at home Tuesday, June 18.

Local Trio Terrific For B.C. High Baseball Team

Tommy McDonald, Dan Cobban, Andrew Jaehnig
Lead Eagles To Div. 1 South Sectional Finals

By BILL GRIFFIN

If it is true that excellent pitching and catching is a good formula for success, then there has been a powerful Quincy influence in B.C. High's drive to the Division 1 South Sectional baseball finals before the Eagles dropped a 4-3 decision to Bridgewater-Raynham.

Two of the Eagles top pitchers are Quincy natives. Hard-throwing senior righty Tommy McDonald has been BC High's ace for two years and senior Dan Cobban has had a brilliant season as a starter and reliever not only with his stuff, but his flexibility. He delivered two terrific long-relief performances which led BC High to two of its most important wins of the season.

And there's more. Since taking over as full-time catcher in the past eight games, junior Andrew Jaehnig of Quincy had shown power and consistency at the plate while doing a fine job handling the pitchers and throwing out base runners.

"Tommy has been the No. 1 guy and handled all the tough assignments for the past two years," said coach Norm Walsh. "Cobban has been very good as a starter, and we can use him in relief which has helped a lot. Jaehnig has stabilized the team offensively and defensively."

McDonald is 8-0 on the season his control is frightening. After he beat Dartmouth, 8-1 in the sectional semifinals, he had 48 strikeouts and eight walks in 55 innings of pitching. Five of the walks came against New Bedford in the tourney. Toss out that game and he had an astonishing 48-3 strike-out-to-walk ratio. Over 70 percent of his pitches are strikes. His ERA was 1.90 after the Dartmouth game.

"And he is efficient," said Walsh. "He uses 12 pitches or less in 40 per cent of his innings. That keeps his pitch count down which means he can go deeper into games."

This is particularly important in the tourney when the games are bunched together and pitchers are worn down by too many innings against too many good hitters.

"It's attrition in the tourney. The lower you keep the pitch count, the pitcher can perform better and longer," said Walsh.

McDonald is 6'3" and 220. He features a hard, over-the-top sinker which breaks bats and forces ground balls. He has signed to play for UMass next season and Walsh thinks he can pitch on the next level.

"He reminds me of Derek Lowe, that tall pitcher throwing overhand with a hard sinker," said Walsh. "I think he can pitch at UMass. He will need to work on his secondary pitches."

McDonald owns two wins over Malden Catholic and also has victories over Catholic Memorial and Xaverian in the tough Catholic Conference.

Cobban also features pinpoint control. His strike-out to walk ratio is 27-6. His record is 5-1 and his ERA 1.02. His WHIP (Walks and hits per innings pitched) is at a stunning 0.79. Like McDonald, he leads with a heavy sinker which he throws from the more traditional three-quarters arm slot.

"His angle is different than Tommy's, but he gets the same downward action. He also has a good change-up," said Walsh.

Cobban, who is also a member of the National Honor Society, has the ability to start and relieve. Against Chelmsford he pitched 6 1/3 innings of no-hot, no-run relief in a nine-inning win for the Eagles. In the tourney against New Bedford, he took over for McDonald, hit the first batter he faced, and then retired the last 17 straight to carry BC High to a 15-5 victory.

"The flexibility he gives us with his ability to relieve is important," said Walsh. "Again, it's especially important in the tourney when a team has to use pitchers in different roles."

Cobban will attend Suffolk University.

Jaehnig is the leading hitter on the team with a .375 average. After the Dartmouth game, he had 18 hits, 11 RBI, four doubles and two triples. In the tourney, he had four RBI against New Bedford, a big hit in the 5-0 win over Silver Lake, and three hits and two RBI against Dartmouth. There has never been any question about the hitting.

"He has power and he makes consistent contact," said Walsh.

In the Chelmsford game, he had a two-out single to tie the score in the seventh and scored the game-winner in the ninth. He was named the outstanding player in the Reading Memorial Day Tournament.

Jaehnig served as DH for most of the season.

He has a powerful arm and Walsh has worked with him about quickening his release and shortening his stride on his throws. He has made excellent progress as a defensive catcher in a short period of time.

"We had him working throwing a football to get him used to the quick release and short stride of a quarterback," said Walsh. "He has improved a great deal since taking over behind the plate."

All three played in Quincy Youth Baseball and Quincy Red Stocking AAU baseball. They will also play for Morrisette Legion this summer.

9 Who Made Spring Sports Fun To Watch

By BILL GRIFFIN

One of the best parts about sports are the debates. Take two fans, have them watch the same game or the same player, and there will almost surely be the seeds for a good argument from two different points of view.

The following is a look at high school athletes from Quincy and North that I enjoyed watching this spring. It is not an all-star team. It is not a list of the best players. It's simply a group of athletes that were fun to watch.

Saxon Bresnahan (Quincy softball) - There is something special, a sense of discovery about watching the early stages of the development of a great player. In Quincy's tournament run, the sophomore pitched four games her team had to win and struck out 53 batters in 25 innings. More than one opposing coach said that when she keeps her fastball down, she is unhittable. Quincy has a proud tradition of softball pitchers, and Bresnahan may well be as good as anyone who came before her.

Liz Kelly (North Quincy softball) - How many four-year starters are there in high school? How many of those four-year starters make the league all-star team four times? How many legitimate five-tool players are there? How many players catch, run, throw, hit for average, and hit for power? How many can play the two toughest defensive positions on the field - shortstop and catcher - at a high level? How many players hit .400 or better in each of four seasons? Kelly is a correct answer to all the questions and North was lucky to have her.

Johnny Marsinelli (Quincy baseball) - Some like power, I like a batter who knows the science of hitting, how to make contact, and how to hit them "where they ain't" as the great Willie Keeler said. Marsinelli flirted with .500 for much of the season. He also was a catcher who stole bases which is not a common sight. Against Whitman-Hanson with Quincy trailing by a run and two outs in the seventh, he took a pitch on the outside corner and sliced it to left to tie the game which the Presidents eventually won. He knew what he was doing. He knows how to hit.

Pat Gould (North Quincy baseball) - I will remember one play. In the final game of his varsity career, North was trailing Quincy by five runs in the seventh inning. There was one out. North's tournament hopes were gone, the game was lost. Gould hit an infielder grounder and he ran to first as hard as he could, as if it were the ninth inning of the World Series and the score was tied. More than any three-point jump shot, more than any lookaway pass, more than a double with the bases loaded, or a hard, accurate throw to nail a base stealer, this is the play I will remember. This play was Pat Gould.

Gabby Zorkers (Quincy lacrosse) - She looks she was born to play lacrosse. She scored 50 goals and that shows something, but not everything. She is a natural. She has a feel, an instinct for the game that can't be taught. Her decision are quick and correct. She knows when to pass, shoot, rush the net or cycle the ball back out around the perimeter. She doesn't have to slow the play to make the right call, she just knows.

Leah Ryan (North Quincy lacrosse) - I like speed. When Ryan took possession of the ball and flew through the middle of the field, she swept to open spaces before opponents could pinch in or teammates could set themselves up for a pass. She simply ran past everyone. Her rushes energized her team and entertained anyone who watched.

Brian O'Callaghan (Quincy lacrosse) - I like honest, two-way players, players who work the defensive and offensive ends equally hard. That's the way O'Callaghan played hockey and it's the way he played lacrosse. He defended the scoring area on one end and finished with a pass or a hard shot at the other end. Toss in speed, power, excellent lacrosse skills and you have a special player.

Mike Finn (North Quincy lacrosse) - It's great to watch a scorer operate. He knows how to set himself up in an open patch of grass to accept a pass in top scoring position. He knows when to use the wraparound from behind the net and when to charge the cage from in front. He finishes high, low, soft or hard, whatever the situation requires. He senses the angle of the rebound and buries it. Finn showed all of the above in scoring 46 goals in his sophomore season.

Mike Tran (North volleyball) - When he moved to the net, he had this uncanny knack to sense what was needed for a scoring shot - a smash or a soft placement over the front line. Once he decided, he didn't miss. His touch shots found open spots and his blasts did not come back. Add in his digs that kept points alive, his accurate passing, and there was the complete package for volleyball fans to watch and enjoy.

OUR HANDS-ON APPROACH

While some medical doctors may have been criticized for not taking the time to listen to their patients, chiropractors are known for their studied, hands-on approach. Initial evaluations begin with a visual examination of the way a patient walks, stands, and sits. A complete medical history, including recent injuries and symptoms, is then taken. Time is spent assessing the patient's work, exercise, and nutritional habits to discern any bearing on the patient's problems. Following this discussion, the chiropractor performs an orthopedic exam to assess range of movement, a neurological exam to assess nerve function, and a palpable examination of the spine and other joints to further assess mobility and alignment. Our patients get the time and attention they need.

Shoulders, hip problems, knees, ankles and even the jaw problems have been shown to respond to chiropractic care. Find out before resorting to drugs or irreversible surgery! At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we feel periodic check-ups by your doctor of chiropractic can help identify problems without drugs or surgery. Treating the cause and preventing future conditions in our patients is our primary goal. For more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call 617.472.4220. B.C. High Grad From Quincy Heading To University Of Virginia

Jack McDonald's Ready For Next Step In Football Journey

By BILL GRIFFIN

For Jack McDonald, the story begins with games of wiffleball, touch and tackle football along Hobomack Road, games which lasted through the day and past darkness while dinners grew cold and kids had fun with sports. It continues this fall when he will play college football on the big stage at a place where the games are shown on television on Saturday afternoons and evenings. It has been quite a journey.

"It was always pretty active on my street, there was always something going on," said McDonald who graduated from BC High this June and will attend the University of Virginia in the fall as an offensive lineman on a full football scholarship.

The sporting life around the McDonald house was always full. His older sister Kiley played for the great Quincy High basketball team which went to the sectional finals in 2012. His two younger brothers are athletes. His father played football for BC High and his uncle played football for UNH. There were always games which changed with the seasons, but for Jack, football always held the strongest pull.

"It might have been because of my father or uncle, but I think I always liked football best," he said.

He threw the ball around in the backyard with his dad. He played pickup games with friends. He played for the Manets and Apaches in Quincy Youth Football. He grew bigger, stronger, faster. When elementary or middle school teachers would assign essays about the goal in his life, McDonald's theme was always the same.

"I always wrote that I wanted to play in the NFL," he said. "My mother and I were going over old papers recently, and I always wrote about the same dream. The NFL."

From the beginning, there was always more than sports, more than football which guided him. It would shine through at BC High. His parents' influence was great and it taught him lessons about hard work and a moral life which he has remembered and practiced.

"My parents were everything to me," he said. "They taught me about goals. They taught me that no goal was impossible if you are willing to work hard enough. They taught me values and what that was important was the way you live your life."

He played basketball and football as a freshman at BC High. Before sophomore year, he realized that his first love could be a special sport for him and he poured his energy into football.

"I just hit the gym and worked hard all year round to get ready for football," he said. "I knew it was what I wanted. I set goals and I worked as hard as I could."

He started at offensive tackle as a sophomore. At 6'4" and 270 (6'5", 285 as a senior), he dominated. The Eagles won the Super Bowl his junior year behind a powerful running game which worked mainly because McDonald cleared holes on the right side large enough to fit an Amtrak train. He battled through a painful turf toe injury as a senior, but was still named Catholic Conference Linemen of the Year.

He was a Globe and Herald All Scholastic. He was a two-time Catholic Conference All Star. He was named to the Super 26, the 26 best players in Massachusetts selected by a vote of high school head coaches. He would receive 15 offers of a full football scholarship to college. He was in rare air, playing with the best of the best.

"The highlight for me was the Super Bowl," he said. "I will always remember being in Gillette (Stadium) up on the stage with my teammates, holding the trophy. That's a memory I will always have."

The recruiting process began after sophomore year. It was flattering and opened wide the door to a bright future, but it was a staggering process. The phone calls and visits were endless. Mail piled up like smokestacks. There were day trips and overnight visits. Mostly, there was the impact of making a decision at age 16 that would influence the rest of his life.

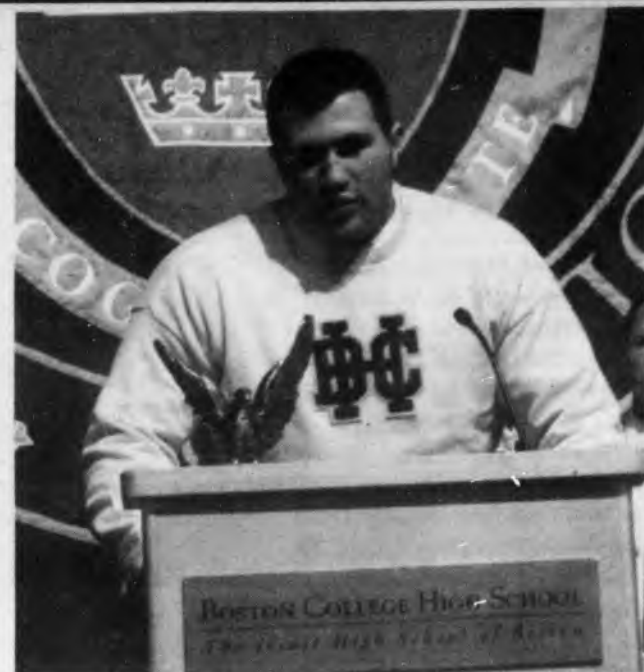

"It was pretty crazy," said "It's stressful having make such an important decision at such a young age. As one school said, you're not making a choice for the next four years, but for the next 40."

He was a prize. A team can find backs, but offensive linemen, the players who make everything work, are a treasure. McDonald was not just good, he was overpowering. He played in the toughest conference in the state. Academics were not an issue. They were a bonus. He was an honor-roll student at a great school. Harvard and Yale offered scholarships. Virginia, Maryland, Duke, Miami, North Carolina, Boston College, UMass and UConn offered scholarships. The final choice came down to Virginia, Miami, Maryland, UNC and BC.

"It came down to academics and everything that Virginia could offer after graduation," said. "I connected with the coaches and the kids they had coming in. My parents loved the campus. I had a great overnight visit. It just felt right. It felt like a huge weight had been lifted when I made the decision."

Just as it been true on Hobomack Road, there was more than football in McDonald's life in high school. He graduated from BC High with honors. He volunteered to work at My Brothers Keeper, a Christian organization that delivers furniture, household items and food to those in need. He won one of the most meaningful awards

JACK McDONALD accepts the Coach Cotter Award named for BC High's legendary coach Jim Cotter who served the school for 50 years, including 40 as head football coach. McDonald made himself into one of the best lineman prospects in the state. Bound for the University of Virginia on a full scholarship, he was a 3-year starter on the football team, a 2-year Catholic Conference all-star, Lineman of the year in the Catholic Conference and a Super 26 Team Member.

a student-athlete can win, The Coach Cotter Award. It is named for BC High's legendary coach Jim Cotter who served the school for 50 years, including 40 as head football coach. He died of ALS in 2010. The Super Bowl season was dedicated to him. Cotter's life is accurately summed up in the title to his memoir: "A True Man for Others."

In his presentation, BC High Athletic Director Jon Bartlett, who coached McDonald as a sophomore and junior, said:

"Coach Cotter would have loved to coach Jack McDonald....What is great about Jack, despite all of his success and credentials, he remains a shy and humble young man who is also a high achieving scholar-athlete."

"He is a gentleman off the field, but a fierce dominant lineman on the field - exactly what we want from our athletes. He has been a great role model to his teammates and younger players and is always respectful to all."

On the stage that night with McDonald was Bartley Regan, Cotter's godson who played quarterback on the Suoper Bowl team. There was also family connection. McDonald's father had played for coach Cotter. It was another one of those golden memories.

"I never had the privilege of knowing Coach Cotter, but I've heard so many stories about what he did for other people," McDonald said. "To receive an honor is his name, especially with Bartley there, was a great honor."

McDonald's mother, Michelle, may have put it best.

"This is a story that should be told, especially for younger kids to read," she said. "Young people have so many issues with alcohol and drugs that it might help to to see that you can set goals and if work hard, you can reach them."

Part of the story has been told, a rare journey by a rare athlete from Hobomack Road in Quincy to Charlottesville, Virginia. However, if one listens carefully to the firmness in McDonald's voice when he speaks about his dream in the NFL, one gets a feeling. The feeling is the best part of this story is yet to come.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Count to 10 if you must, but don't lose your temper, despite that person's (you know who!) efforts to goad you into reacting. Your restraint will pay off in a big way.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week finds you in a sociable mood, ready and eager to enjoy the company of family and friends. It's also a good time to seek out and renew old friendships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Patience is called for as you await a decision about that project you're eager to launch. Meanwhile, try to set aside more time to share with that special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid becoming involved in a workplace dispute early in the week by insisting both sides submit their stands to a neutral arbitrator. Things begin to cool off by Thursday.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It promises to be a busy but productive week for the Big Cat. The pace slows by Friday, allowing you to catch up on matters you put aside but that now need your attention.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A suddenly disruptive family situation is best handled with a cool, calm and collected response. Wait until things settle to let off all that pent-up emotional steam.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your practical side dominates the week as you reassess your finances to make some sensible adjustments in what you plan to spend and what you expect to save.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected meeting with a former colleague opens some interesting possibilities. But you need to press for full disclosure before making a decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent flurry of activity eases by midweek, giving you time to readjust your disrupted schedule and make new plans for a weekend getaway.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're usually the one who gives advice. But now it's time to open yourself up to counsel from friends who have your best interests at heart.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find resistance to your call for a full inquiry into a workplace problem. But by week's end even the most rigid naysayers begin to come around.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A recurring problem surfaces once again. Maybe it's time you used your creative talents to help you find a new approach to resolving it once and for all.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are guided in what you do both by your intelligence and your emotions. An acting career would suit you quite well.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Quincy Granite Monuments

QUINCY CITY HISTORIAN Tom Galvin explains the history of the Jonathan S. Swingle Monument at the Mount Wollaston Cemetery during one of his popular walking tours of the historic cemetery. The monument is made of Quincy granite. Swingle was recognized as the standard-bearer of Quincy granite and also known as the "Extra Dark Man" because of the extra dark color of his famous quarry's granite.

THIS MONUMENT MARKS the grave of Theophilus King, the renowned Quincy banker, businessman and philanthropist. The granite ball was created from granite from Hitchcock Quarry.

FINAL RESTING PLACE of Capt. Eugene Hultman fittingly features a granite monument with a large anchor. Hultman served as a city councillor for a number of years.

ZAVATTONI MONUMENT is an outstanding example of an unknown Quincy granite cutter's craftsmanship, Quincy City Historian Tom Galvin points out during his walking tour. The monument is made from Westerly, R.I. granite.

THE LARGEST monument made of Quincy granite may be the Joseph Robertson monument. Robertson, a farmer, was one of Quincy's wealthiest citizens in the 19th century.

A formal groundbreaking for the $120 million Merchants Row project, which will include two new buildings and renovations of the Granite Trust Building at 1400 Hancock, has been scheduled for Monday, June 24 at 5 p.m. Heapes said the new development was ready to take off, comparing it to the split second after the countdown for a rocket launch would end and actual lift off.

"If you remember the Saturn V rocket, they would do the countdown – three, two, one – and it would just [shake] and it would seem like it was just doing this forever before it would lift off into the sky," Heapes said. "That's kind of where we're at right now. Everything is shaking and shuttering as it gets ready to lift off and the new Quincy Center will begin to become a reality."

Coddington Hall Restoration Project Begins

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Monday at Coddington Hall, 24 Coddington St., kicking off the $9.8 million restoration project on the building that will be the new home to the Quincy Public School Administration offices along with a few city departments.

"This is a magnificent project, and what makes it work so well is how we are all working together as a community, as a government for the people of our city," said

Mayor Tom Koch. "This is an outstanding architectural gem that has been languishing for a few years. This will become the new home for central administration of our Quincy Public Schools, in addition our IT Department will move here in the lower level with the school department IT, and the upper level will be held by Denise Harrington and the Planning Department. This whole Coddington corridor will be changing drastically."

The restoration project will include replacing missing shingles, buckled shingles and a leaky roof, eroded and cracked mortar joints, deteriorated wood doors, cracked plaster in the interior, and asbestos and lead paint removal.

Built in 1909, Coddington School, also known as Coddington Hall, was designed by Charles Brigham, the architect who co-designed Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, and is named after William Coddington.

"William Coddington has maybe become somewhat a forgotten figure in the history of colonial Massachusetts but he deserves some honor, because he was one of the early defenders of freedom of religion and freedom of conscience," said Ed Fitzgerald of the Quincy Historical Society. "As far as I can see there has been a Coddington School, for almost as long as there has been a town or a City of Quincy, well over 150 years or maybe even close to 200 years."

Coddington was the treasurer of Massachusetts Bay Colony before leaving for what is now Rhode Island and becoming the first governor of that colony. When he left for Rhode Island, he donated all of his land to what is now Quincy, Braintree, and Randolph.

The now vacant building once served as an elementary school and was also used as part of Quincy College's campus. After the college moved out, it temporarily housed classrooms and school department offices during the construction of the new Quincy High School.

Koch announced during the groundbreaking that the project is on schedule and the building will be ready for move in by September 2014.

"We are so fortunate to live in such a great city, because it is so much about connections, so much about partnerships. This project is just really incredible," said

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "This project is so good because it offers so much to the public, it offers so much to the school system, so much to the Planning Department, and so much to IT. We're lucky, this is an incredible city and it offers incredible opportunity, and incredible beauty in history, and it's all about working together and improving our city in so many ways."

Council Approves Mayor's $257.8 Million Budget

The City Council approved Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed $257.8 million FY14 budget without making any cuts.

On Monday night the council unanimously approved the budget, which represents an increase of $10.8 million over the FY13 budget. The council's Finance Committee vetted the budget in three separate meetings, held on May 13, May 28, and June 11, but chose not to cut anything from the budget. Under Quincy's charter the council can't add anything to the budget either.

The total budget for FY14, which begins July 1, is $257,817,261. Koch indicated when he proposed the budget in May that the average homeowner could see a $100 tax increase starting next year. The council will set taxes for 2014 in December.

The council also approved budgets for the Water and Sewer Departments, which are funded by enterprise accounts and not the general fund. The Water Department's FY14 budget was set at $16.15 million, up from $15.13 million in FY13. The Sewer Department's budget also increases, from $21.74 million in FY13 to $22.81 million in FY14. They were both approved unanimously.

Flag Day - A Special Quincy Tradition

If you turned out for Saturday's Quincy Flag Day Parade and fireworks celebration at Pageant Field, you weren't alone.

An estimated 10,000 people lined the parade route along Hancock Street from Quincy Center to Merry-mount Parkway and the entrance to Adams Field and then gathered for the fireworks at Pageant Field.

You weren't disappointed, either.

The parade had something for everyone: marching bands sounding like half-time at the Rose Bowl; color and honor guards marching smartly; and of course, kids waving small American flags proudly with smiles as wide as can be.

The fireworks celebration over Black's Creek entertained people of all ages who "ooooohed" and "ahhhhhhhed" with every burst in vivid colors against a cloudless night.

There are a lot of folks who need to be thanked including Mayor Thomas Koch and the City of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and business community sponsors and others who continue to step up every year to make sure this tradition continues.

But another individual clearly is thought of each and every flag day in the City of Quincy.

And that's the late Dick Koch, Sr., the inspiration and founder of that very first Flag Day more than 60 years ago.

Flag Day grew out of the Koch Club that Dick Koch started back in 1948. The organization gave kids an opportunity to participate in sports. It was never about competition. It was about giving youngsters a chance to enjoy the camaraderie that sports fosters.

The very first Flag Day Parade occurred 1952. Dick Koch gave the youngsters small American flags and they marched around Cavanagh Field in North Quincy to celebrate Flag Day. Soon the parade had its first "float" - a milk truck.

The idea caught on and the event was embraced by the community.

"They added a few people to the parade and it just grew," said Dick's son, Mayor Tom Koch. "The decision was made to move it from Cavanagh Field to Veterans' Memorial Stadium in the early 1960s. He invited all the youth groups and some bands and other groups participated."

Over the years, the event grew and grew. Part of the celebration included a scholarship ceremony and guest speakers.

Tom Koch remembers when Gen. George Patton IV, the son of World War II General George S. Patton, was the guest speaker at one of the parades in the 1970s.

"He brought tanks into the stadium and kids were climbing all over them."

He also recalls when Dick Stratton, a POW in Vietnam, gave one of the talks.

"You could have heard a pin drop in the stadium filled with kids. It was pretty remarkable."

Sadly, Dick Koch passed away in August 1987 and the mayor said keeping the parade going in his dad's absence was very difficult. Then, a suggestion came to the attention of then Mayor James Sheets. Koch, at the time, was Sheets's executive secretary.

Beverly Reinhardt, who was the head of the Quincy Youth Arena, wrote a letter saying the city should take Flag Day over. Then the Quincy Partnership stepped up and they were able to raise some money for some bands.

It was if a red-white-and-blue baton had been passed from Dick Koch to a new generation.

Coincidentally, Dick Koch was a part of what TV news journalist Tom Brokaw dubbed the "Greatest Generation." Those men and women who grew up during the Depression and sacrificed so much serving this country especially during World War II. Dick Koch was an Army veteran of World War II.

Flag Day, Tom Koch says, was a way for his father to instill in young people the importance of the symbol of our country - the American flag.

"He loved the youth and the kids in Quincy. He came up like most kids - he didn't have much but he had everything - he'd tell you that," Tom Koch says. "They grew up during the Depression and went off to war and that generation literally built this country."

"The Koch Club became all about serving the kids. The parade was about instilling symbolism and love for the country. You may not agree with everything . . . that's okay . . . but the red, white and blue stood for your right to disagree and your right to protest and your right to serve."

"Everything good about our nation is in that symbol - the flag - whether you were in the service or not. It doesn't belong to just the veterans although we owe the veterans for protecting it. It belongs to everybody and he wanted to make that connection."

"Today, I think it's important that we carry on with great pride our traditions whether it's religious, ethnic or otherwise but the American flag is what unites us and that's what I love about Flag Day. It unites us as a country - all faiths, all ethnic groups, all ages come together to honor Old Glory because Old Glory stands for our past, our present and our future."

"It's the greatest symbol in the world."

That's something Dick Koch recognized early on . . . and the reason Quincy has a wonderfully meaningful Flag Day celebration each and every year.

"He got that early on and wanted to pass that on," Tom continued. "Over the years, I've heard from more and more folks who told me they were in the Koch Club and they marched in the parade. It's kind of a rite of passage and they have great memories of it."

Today, Flag Day is one of the city's most important traditions and celebrations.

It's exactly what Dick Koch wanted 62 years ago when he passed out those small flags to the Koch Club kids.

"It's become a regular tradition in the city with what we've been able to do with it with help from others," Tom Koch says. "It's really become a beautiful family night with the parade, the Koch Youth Service Award ceremony, the fireworks."

Beverly Reinhardt made another suggestion when she wrote that letter some 26 years ago. She wanted June 14 to be known as Dick Koch Day in Quincy.

She was right on the mark because that's the kind of impression Dick Koch made with people.

In many ways, Flag Day is already Dick Koch Day. And in Quincy it always will because without Dick Koch, there is no Flag Day Parade.

Well done, Quincy Flag Day Parade organizers. It was a proud day for Quincy and to be an American.

THIS IS A 1909 postcard view of Anne Hutchinson Square in Wollaston looking east on Beale Street. In the center the horse and carriage is one the bridge over the railroad tracks. Newport Avenue intersects Beale Street right-to-left through the center of the picture. Grand View Avenue comes down the hill on the lower right. The trees in the distance were on the estate of A.W. Farrington, later owned by John Faxon, and has since been developed into Wollaston Center. To the left of the bridge was Depot Square where in 1925 Howard Johnson opened his first ice cream store. A marker on the bridge today tells the story of Howard Johnson's. The flat roofed building on the right was an antique shop with apartments upstairs. It is now the site of an MBTA power station. The old Wollaston Hotel, which is on the left, was demolished soon after this picture was taken and replaced with single story commercial buildings once the home of the Red Coach Grille and Howard Johnson's general offices, now used as a warehouse. A tablet net to it tells the story of the exile of Anne Hutchinson for whom this square was named. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Singing The National Anthem

On May 21, a group of high school kids were involved in a celebration at the YMCA on Coddington Street. These young people, our future leaders, doctors, politicians, and parents were singing our National Anthem.

A group of disgruntled protestors from Local 103 of the electricians union were demonstrating at the site of the new YMCA facility. We all have the right to protest, and to demonstrate for what we believe is right, but there are constraints to the right to protest. There are legal prohibitions against violating the rights of others and there are moral ones in which we do not teach our children thuggery, rudeness and bullying.

The protestors didn't have the decency to remove their hats, be silent and respect the Anthem. They also did not respect the kids who practiced for this event. Instead, they outshouted the singing of the Anthem with profanity and vulgarity.

They also violated their obligation to the kids to teach respect and propriety which is the obligation of every American adult.

I want the members of local 103 to know that this career union member is deeply ashamed of the behavior of these selfish rude bullies, and if in the future I have any input into the hiring of an electrical contractor it will not be one represented by 103.

Thanks Firefighters For Seniors Cookout

Just as in previous years, the Quincy Firefighters, Local 792, hosted a cookout for the senior citizens of the city, at the Kennedy Center Council on Aging.

This terrific group of firefighters, who sacrificed their own day off to volunteer for this event, arrived prior to 10 a.m. equipped with grills, charcoal, cooking utensils, and hundreds of hamburgers, hot dogs, cake, cookies and refreshments.

They then set up tables and chairs for 130 people, set the tables completely, served everyone individually, then when the afternoon was over, cleared off the tables, folded the tables and chairs and stored them, swept and mopped the gymnasium floor leaving everything as spotless as it was before they arrived. Their enthusiasm matched the enthusiasm of every senior after the event. It was a pleasure listening to all the positive comments afterwards.

Entertainment was provided by Mark Carey and Tom Clasby - the dynamic duo. There was never a dull moment. I won't comment on who has the better voice.

The following are the names of the firefighters who participated:

Eric Gomes, Steve Sweet and Mike Dwyer.

Children helping were Christian Ho, my favorite boy because he sneaked me a hot dog; and Lana Christiani, my favorite girl, who lit up the senior center with her beautiful smile. Great

Quincy's David Coletti Homeric Greek Scholar

David Coletti of Quincy, a recent graduate of Boston College High School, gave a stellar performance in successfully translating and answering questions about Homer's Odyssey in Bulger Auditorium on the Dorchester campus earlier this spring.

Along with 16 other senior classmates, Coletti was a member of BC High's prestigious Homeric Academy, a College level course offered to students who have successfully completed two years of Classical Greek.

The 17 students, under the guidance of Maureen Toner, devoted themselves to an intensive reading of the 1,000 lines of the Odyssey and prepared all year for the public oral examination, an academic exercise that BC High has been offering for 49 years.

At the defense, which is regarded as a final examination, Dr. Leonard Muellner PhD of the Brandeis Classics Department and Dr. Robin McGill PhD of Wheaton College's Classics Department were the examiners. They asked the students to translate and interpret passages from various parts of the Odyssey, to comment on the literary and historical significance of the passage, to read in Greek, to discuss scholars' analyses of the poem, and to offer their own opinions, based on their year-long studies.

The examiners and the audience, who also questioned the panelists, were several hundred students and a large number of faculty members, parents and alumni all of whom were most impressed with the team's performance. Coletti received College level credit for this rigorous course.

Election Of Officers, Trustees Also At Annual Meeting 'Quincy And The Civil War: 1862-63' At Historical Society June 26

Quincy Historical Society will continue its commemoration of the Civil War Sesquicentennial at the Society's Annual Meeting, Wednesday, June 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Historical Society Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald will discuss Quincy's participation in the events of the crucial middle years of the Civil War, culminating in the Battle of Gettysburg and a fateful confrontation with the government of Great Britain.

Quincy's people and the town's heritage were engaged with the war at many levels during these years. Quincy men in military service fought in battles, both famous and little-known, that brought home the full tragedy and horror of the war.

Hundreds of ordinary citizens served, as did also members of leading families, such as Charles Francis Adams, Jr. and Paul J. Revere—who became arguably Quincy's most memorialized and beloved figure from the war. The legacy of John Quincy Adams informed the Emancipation Proclamation.

As minister to Great Britain, Charles Francis Adams, Sr. challenged the English government over Confederate shipbuilding in a profoundly dangerous diplomatic crisis. The people at home debated attitudes towards the war, responded to injuries and losses, and organized efforts to aid and support the troops during some of the darkest days of the conflict. The evening's presentation will follow all of these strands.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge.

As part of the Annual Meeting, nominations and elections for officers and trustees of the Historical Society for 2013-14 will be held that evening.

Good Neighbor Community Day Saturday

Good Neighbor Lutheran Church will host a Community Day Saturday, June 22nd from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the church parking lot of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 308 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Chicken With White Vinegar

Last week I was preparing chicken thighs (my favorite) and used my daughter

Ann Marie's recipe. It's made with white vinegar and so easy to make, and very gourmetish.

CHICKEN, ROSEMARY, WHITE VINEGAR

- 6 chicken thighs (I skinned them)
- 1 small package mushrooms (sliced)
- 1 can artichoke hearts (or frozen)
- 2 tablespoons Rosemary (fresh or jarred)

1 potato cooked and cut in small pieces

1 garlic clove (chopped)
3 tablespoons either olive or vegetable oil

Season the chicken with salt and pepper and the Rosemary. In a deep skillet, in the hot oil and garlic, add the vinegar and then the chicken and cook covered turning frequently until done.

Now add the mushrooms, artichoke hearts, potato, and cook uncovered until juice is absorbed.

Serve with rice, pasta, or potatoes.

Jean's Heavenly White Cake

My niece Jean recently baked the most delicious white cake ever and gave me the recipe for today's column.

Sculptures To Be 'Substantial'

Adams Green To Feature New Statues Of John Hancock, John And Abigail Adams

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Adams Green park is still being planned, but it will include new statues of John Adams, Abigail Adams, and John Hancock.

One of three improvements being undertaken by the city as part of the redevelopment of Quincy Center, the Adams Green project will link City Hall and the United First Parish Church. The area is already home to statues of both John and Abigail Adams.

In 1997, a statue of Abigail Adams, with John Quincy Adams as a child, was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and installed next to the church. Five years later a statue of John Adams, also commissioned by the partnership, was installed in the McIntyre Mall. Lloyd Lillie designed both bronze statues.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington said Lillie's statues were well-designed and high quality, but lacked the proper stature.

"We have a small/medium size John Adams out there. It's not an adequate portrayal of the second president in size," Harrington said. "Everyone is quite sure, especially the mayor, that the statues should be substantial. Artists use the word heroic in size. That's a term used by sculptors for large, cast bronze statues."

As a reference point, Harrington said the statues of John Adams and Hancock would be similar in size to statues that line the Boston Common. They would be put at opposite entrances to Adams Green. The new Abigail Adams statue may end up being slightly smaller than the other two, and would be featured promi-nently in the park.

The city is currently soliciting bids for the three statues. Harrington estimated that each statue could cost between $250,000 and $300,000, which includes cost for purchasing and forging the bronze, and transporting and installing them.

It's unknown where the current Adams statues would go. Harrington said they could go elsewhere in the new downtown, or possibly in front of the library or Coddington Hall.

Halvorson Design is still planning the park, which is at the 75 percent design phase. Harrington said the Planning Department spent last summer cataloging other monuments in McIntyre Mall, such as monuments for veterans, so they could be incorporated into the new design.

"We went out last summer and created a spreadsheet of everything that's in that area — every monument, every brick, every plaque. We have a spreadsheet of everything," Harrington said. "Nobody is going to be forgotten. We know exactly what's there and nobody is ignored — everybody is respected."

Restrictions For Medical Marijuana Dispensaries

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council Monday night unanimously approved zoning regulations that would limit medical marijuana dispensaries to a handful of locations in the city.

The regulations, drafted by Councillors Brian Palmucci and Kevin Coughlin, are largely based on regulations Palmucci proposed soon after Bay State voters overwhelmingly backed legalizing marijuana for medicinal purposes last November. It mandates that marijuana dispensaries must be placed at least 1,500 feet away from residential zoning districts, schools and other childcare centers, businesses with liquor licenses, or other dispensaries. Those regulations would limit the dispensaries to Crown Colony, the Fore River Shipyard, and Quarry Hills among other locations.

"The voters set a policy on medical marijuana. This particular ordinance will establish the zoning codes in compliance with that policy while at the same time protecting the integrity of our residential neighborhoods," Palmucci said.

The zoning restrictions in the ordinance passed Monday night are the same that Palmucci originally approved.

One of the changes to the ordinance the allowance of hardship cultivation. Under state law, residents can seek approval from the Department of Public Health to grow marijuana in their homes if they have a hardship that would prevent them from purchasing it at a dispensary.

Palmucci's original plan would have prohibited that, but the ordinance passed Monday night allows hardship cultivation, as long as the grower registers with the Quincy Health Department. Patients would not need to provide information on their medical condition, just a copy of their registration with the DPH. The list of residents with hardship licenses would be exempt from public record laws.

"Cultivation at home, those circumstances will be regulated," Coughlin said. "There will be a requirement that anyone who receives an exemption from the DPH because of hardship also registers with the city."

Under the new ordinance, dispensaries need to receive a special permit from the Planning Board before they open, in addition to any process they'd need to go through at the state level. The ordinance also allows the City Council to set a fee for applying to open a dispensary.

The city had previously enacted a nine-month moratorium on dispensaries that was set to expire at the beginning of 2014. The new regulations, however, will become effectively immediately once the mayor signs them into law.

Council, School Committee OK $93.67M School Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

On consecutive nights the City Council and School Committee unanimously approved the School Department's $93.67 million budget for the upcoming school year, allowing the department to bring on nearly a dozen new teacher positions and restore library service in elementary and middle schools.

Funding for the department's budget comes from two sources — the city's general fund and the state's Circuit Breaker program. For FY14, which covers school year 2013-14, Mayor Thomas Koch proposed allocating $91.16 million to the schools, up from $87.56 million in FY13. The department is also expected to receive an extra $50,000 in Circuit Breaker funding, bringing the total to $2.5 million.

After factoring in contractual pay raises and money needed to offset expiring grants, the FY14 budget gives the department $1.69 million more than it would take to sustain level service.

The largest portion of that $1.69 million will go towards creating 11.3 teacher positions. Nine of those will be placed at the elementary level, one will go to grade five at Point Webster Middle School, and a half position would go to Quincy High. The remaining 0.8 positions would be split between the carpentry, plumbing, and fashion technology programs at North Quincy High.

"Academic classroom teachers was 27, almost 28 percent of the additional funding," School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro explained to the City Council. "We're looking at 11.3 new academic classroom teachers as well as career and technical education teachers."

Some $268,000 will go towards hiring new library staff for the elementary and middle schools. The elementary schools will be open throughout the day while 2.5 total library positions were added to the middle schools, allowing them to be open half the time.

"The School Committee has been really trying to attend to our elementary libraries as well as our middle school libraries," DeCristofaro told the council. "There's been a significant increase in our library funding in this budget."

Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the council's Education Committee, thanked the School Committee for restoring service at the school libraries and also thanked the parents who petitioned the School Committee to do so earlier this year.

"One of the many victims of the Great Recession that took place over the last four years was media services — the library program," Gutro said. "Having two children in elementary school at the Beechwood Knoll School, you go to the Sawyer Center there it's vacant. It's an extraordinary resource but you need to have the talent and the expertise to really guide and nurture the kids.

"I'd like to congratulate the School Committee and all involved in that piece as well as some of the parent leaders like Tracey Christello and Susanne O'Neil who I know are huge advocates, and frankly thank the thousand of folks who signed the petition that went to the School Committee asking that media services be restored."

The School Department's budget also adds $200,000 to the athletics revolving account to resolve a deficit there. That money will allow for the restoration of freshman programs and for full junior varsity and varsity schedules. The School Committee transferred that money during the budget review process from a common core curriculum line item into the athletics account. Councillor Joe Finn, Finance Committee chairman, said the increase in athletics funding will help out families by keeping athletics fees from increasing.

"I really am grateful for the restoration in terms of athletics. I think in terms of a holistic education that's a very critical part," Finn said. "I'm hoping that as we move forward that's a continuing commitment. It's getting tougher and tougher for some of the families out there, particularly as athletics fees continue to increase, it gets harder and harder and certain people are almost excluded from participation, although the school goes out the way to make sure it doesn't happen."

Fore River Bridge Third Shift Work To Last Two Weeks

Beginning next week, a third shift will be added to the Fore River Bridge replacement project and will continue for approximately two weeks, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation announces.

The third shift will run from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. putting the project into 24-hour operation.

According to the DOT, a third shift is being introduced as a result of slower-than expected drilled shaft production combined with engineering requirements regarding how long each drilled shaft can be left in an unfinished condition, that is completely excavated, but without concrete. To maintain shaft integrity and safely complete this important phase of construction, the best course of action is to introduce a third shift to allow work to continue uninterrupted. As has been noted during the outreach for the project to date, certain critical aspects of the bridge replacement project require 24-hour operation.

It is anticipated that the current third shift will last for approximately two weeks, DOT officials said.

Work during the third shift will consist of operating the recirculating drill in the drilled shafts set in the bed of the Fore River. The recirculating drill will be situated on the temporary work trestles extending from the Weymouth and Quincy banks of the river.

No other work is scheduled for the third shift and as such, noise levels will be below what abutters experience during the first and second shifts in accordance with the project's noise control plan, the DOT said.

The recirculating drill is a stationary piece of equipment and will be isolated to the temporary trestles; therefore motorists moving through the area will not experience traffic impacts. Further, no deliveries will be scheduled during the third shift and no additional trucks are required for the operation of the recirculating drill.

For any immediate questions or concerns regarding third shift or any other construction activities at the Fore River Bridge site, call 617-504-2924. This telephone number is operated by a member of the White-Skanska design/build team and is live at all times when construction activities are underway. All comments and questions are logged and reviewed weekly by MassDOT.

The DOT reminds motorists that during this phase of construction, bridge openings associated with the passage of ships and maintenance of the temporary span will continue as normal.

Replacement of the Fore River Bridge is taking place under the Patrick-Murray Administration's historic Accelerated Bridge Program, an eight-year, $3 billion effort to repair or replace structurally deficient bridges throughout the Commonwealth.

For more information about this job, contact Donald Dailey, MassDOT Department of Governmental Affairs at donny.dailey@state.ma.us or 857-368-8902. More information about the Fore River Bridge Replacement Project can be found at www.mass.gov/massdot/foreriverbridge.

32% Turnout Seen For U.S. Senate Election Tuesday to his election to the House, Markey served in the state Legislature for three years. Gomez attended the Naval Academy, became a fighter pilot and then a SEAL before leaving the military in 1996 and earning an MBA from Harvard. This is only Gomez' second election — he finished third in a three-person race for a seat on Cohasset's Board of Selectman in 2003.

The third candidate running in the June 25 election is Richard Heos of Woburn, a member of the Twelve Visions Party.

Markey has led in every poll in the race. He defeated Cong. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston resident whose district includes Quincy, in the Democratic Primary on April 30. Statewide, Markey bested Lynch by 15 percentage points, receiving 309,854 votes to Lynch's 229,973. Bucking the statewide trend, Lynch prevailed in Quincy capturing 76.3 percent of the vote and defeating Markey 8,653 votes to 2,682.

Gomez knocked off two other candidates — former U.S. Attorney and ATF Director Michael Sullivan and state Rep. Dan Winslow — to win the Republican primary that same day. Gomez received 96,276 votes statewide, Sullivan finished second with 67,918 votes, and Winslow was last with 24,630 votes. The results were closer in Quincy — 911 votes for Gomez, 879 for Sullivan, and 215 for Winslow.

slow. Since the primary election, both candidates made campaign stops in Quincy. Gomez spoke in front of City Hall on May 16, calling for term limits for members of Congress. On June 2 Markey spoke at a Marina Bay rally.

Turnout for the primary election in Quincy was 21.23 percent — 13,460 out of the city's 63,395 registered (active and inactive) voters cast ballots. More than 300 new voters registered in Quincy between the primary and the registration deadline on June 5, bringing the total to 63,736. There are 26,065 registered Democrats and 6,072 registered Republicans in the city; 31,169 Quincy voters are unenrolled and not members of any party. City Clerk Joe Shea anticipates a turnout of 30 to 32 percent in Tuesday's election.

"I think we're going to get to about 30 or 32 percent," Shea said. "We'll be prepared so 100 percent of the people can vote. Everything is open. We're going to have outreach. We're going to have signs everywhere."

The clerk's office began accepting absentee ballots on May 15 and they had received about 500 absentee votes as of June 13. Shea said that's down from last year, when 2,800 residents had cast absentee ballots before November's presidential election — turnout in that election was 72 percent — and less than the 1,100 he would expect to see leading up to a competitive mayoral contest. Absentee balloting will continue until noon on Monday, June 24.

Tuesday's election will cost the city about $95,000. Because the mandate to hold the election comes from the state, municipalities are reimbursed for all expenses related to the election. A bill to pay $8 million to cities and towns for the combined costs of Tuesday's election and the April primary is pending in the Legislature.

"It's a state mandate. There is a bill before the Great and General Court to reimburse all cities and towns. It's an $8 million bill," Shea said. "We're looking for $190,000 to $200,000 (for the April primary and Tuesday's election), which we'll give them bills for. We have to itemize the police, the election workers, the printing."

The winner of Tuesday's election will replace Mo Cowan, who Gov. Deval Patrick appointed to the Senate on an interim basis following Kerry's resignation. Cowan opted not to run in the special election. The winner will be eligible to run again in November 2014 for a full six-year term.

Massachusetts last held a special election for a U.S. Senate seat on Jan. 19, 2010. Republican state Sen. Scott Brown upset Democratic Attorney General Martha Coakley in the race to replace the late Sen. Ted Kennedy. Brown won 51.9 percent of the statewide vote and 53.29 percent of the Quincy vote in that election. In Quincy, 52.43 percent of the 56,003 voters eligible to cast ballots in that election did so.

Prior to 2004 the governor had the power to appoint a senator to a vacant seat until the next midterm or presidential election — under that scenario the election for Kerry's seat would have taken place in 2014. The Democratic-led Legislature altered the rules in 2004 because Kerry was his party's nominee for president and Republican Mitt Romney would be the one to name his replacement if Kerry had won. The 2004 change called for a special election with no interim replacement. After Kennedy's death in 2009 the law was amended, allowing for an interim replacement.

Shea said he would favor a return to the system used before the law was changed in 2004, because it would save the state money.

"I would get rid of the special election," Shea said. "If the senator dies mid-term or gets replaced I would have the governor appoint and at the next even numbered year run and fall back into the normal cycle."

Vote On South Quincy Apartment Project Postponed

Council Seeks More Details From Developer

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council won't vote on a proposed 180-unit South Quincy apartment building until September at the earliest after asking the developer to provide more details on the project.

Zero Penn Street, the six-story building proposed by Boston-based Cabot, Cabot & Forbes would be located at the intersection of Penn Street and Burgin Parkway in the vicinity of the Quincy Adams MBTA station and across Penn Street from the Lowe's home improvement store that the council approved, in its capacity as Quincy's SPGA, in 2008.

The developer presented the council information on the proposal earlier this month during a public hearing, and also submitted a written proposal to the council and other city departments and peer reviewers for vetting.

For over an hour at the second council meeting on the Zero Penn proposal, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci noted the items on the SPGA checklist that the developer's application didn't include. Cabot, Cabot & Forbes, for example, didn't include anything in the section on construction impact, Palmucci said.

"Typically when you see an application for a permit — especially one of this size and scope so close to a major artery in the city, right next to some major retail space as well as abutting a residential neighborhood — you usually see something that at least says what the applicant is going to do mitigate the negatives of construction," Palmucci, who represents South Quincy, said. "I'm a little surprised that there is nothing by way of what we can expect for construction impact and then what you would do to mitigate those impacts."

In response Mike Boujoulian, a senior vice president for CC&F, said the proposal would not require any closures of Burgin Parkway and construction equipment wouldn't operate from the street. Like a typical proposal there would be some noise and possibly dust from the construction site, and it would be screened with six-foot high fences to prevent rubbernecking.

Palmucci also said CC&F didn't provide adequate information regarding the Zero Penn's impact on traffic. The council was given a three-page traffic summary, which compared the residential building's traffic impact with the impact a retail development at the same site would have, using information from the Lowe's review process. Palmucci said the council should have received a more in depth traffic study and updated traffic counts to judge if mitigation work done by Lowe's worked.

"We have nothing by way of traffic counts in the area, of any in depth traffic analysis as to what effects this particular project will have, as well as no analysis of the impact that Lowe's and other development has had on the area. Obviously Lowe's wasn't built when did the traffic study for Lowe's — I don't believe the BJ's was either," Palmucci said. "Quite frankly it's just grossly inadequate."

The proposal also lacked a detailed building design, a projected construction cost, or information on how much the units inside would rent for. After prodding by Palmucci, Boujoulian said the project would cost about $36 million to construct and provided rough estimates on rent — $1600-1700 a month for a studio apartment, $2000-2100 for a one-bedroom unit, and two-bedroom units would be in the mid-$2000s range.

To alleviate his concerns Palmucci proposed a series of conditions, one of which was making Cabot, Cabot & Forbes pay $2.5 million into a fund for mitigation work, including traffic signalization and construction of a pedestrian bridge over Burgin Parkway.

After Palmucci proposed his set of conditions, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he felt it wasn't the council's job to fix a deficient application and asked City Solicitor Jim Timmins for his take on the situation.

"We've listened to almost an hour-long monologue about deficiencies in the application and then at the end of this monologue we have a proposal to cure it," McNamee said. "I don't see that as our responsibility as the body that's contemplating the application. If the applicant wants to amend it, that's their responsibility — I don't see it as our responsibility to essentially propose amendments that cure deficiencies or inadequacies in their application."

Timmins said the council still had the option to ask Cabot, Cabot & Forbes to give more details at a later date, and advised that imposing the set of conditions without giving the developer a proper chance to respond could create grounds for appeal.

"If the body wishes to bring the applicant back, knowing there are some questions that you have, then you can do that," Timmins said. "I think that there may be concerns if there were an appeal that simply saying 'no, we're not going to hear anything else and we're imposing these conditions,' perhaps there could be a problem with that."

Councillor Joe Finn was concerned because a peer review of the proposal had only been given to the council and developer two days before the meeting.

"Here's the thing that I'm very much concerned about in terms of the time aspect. We have actually the peer review that we received — it's dated June 10, today is June 12," Finn said. "I though there may be some discussion this evening in response to that peer review."

That leads me to the question 'are we even able to vote this evening?'"

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, on the other hand, said he would have been okay voting on the proposal, but only if a lengthy list of conditions were tacked on first.

"I think there's a panoply of issues here — if this body were to do something tonight we're going to be here for a while listing conditions that need to be in place," Coughlin said. "I'll vote on it tonight but I'm going to tell you there's going to be a whole lot more conditions set on this thing before we're done if we're going to do that."

In response to his colleagues' concern, Palmucci agreed to withdraw his motion to amend the order.

The council will hold its next meeting on the Zero Penn proposal on Sept. 9 at 7:30 p.m. after its summer recess ends. Cabot, Cabot & Forbes CEO Jay Doherty said his company would work over the summer to address concerns voiced by councillors at the meeting and by the peer reviewers.

"We'll get the homework right and get it back to you," Doherty said. "I apologize for wasting your time tonight."

Community Meeting Thursday Furnace Brook Restoration Work Set To Begin

With construction of a $2.5 million restoration of the Furnace Brook set to begin, Mayor Koch's Administration and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci will host a community meeting on Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at Sterling Middle School to update West and South Quincy residents on flood-relief projects in those neighborhoods.

Mayor Koch included a major investment for flood-relief projects as part of his Capital Improvement Plan, beginning discussions with Palmucci about potential projects in the immediate aftermath of the 2010 floods that damaged a number of West Quincy neighborhoods. The plan includes flood-relief projects city-wide, and about $10 million of work in Ward 4 neighborhoods.

"There are no silver bullets when it comes to flood control in our neighborhoods, but we are making great progress and the Furnace Brook restoration is going to be a major improvement to a number of neighborhoods," said Mayor Koch.

Added Palmucci: "We are moving forward with construction on important projects and continuing to move forward with permitting and planning for additional projects. The meeting will be a great opportunity to update residents and answer any questions they may have."

Contractors for the Furnace Brook project will be in attendance at the meeting, and the City's engineering team will also discuss progress on the associated projects, all related to low-lying areas of West and South Quincy that have been prone to heavy flooding for decades.

Demolition Underway For Merchants Row Project

above.

"You have to do some work with the Building Department," Heapes replied, "who we've already met with, on rolling certificates of occupancy. You have to make sure it's safe for the workers up on top to get down and out of the building. It's not atypical to roll the occupancy over a several-month period, realizing it takes a year for the units to rent out and for people to move in."

Heapes explained that when the lower floors start opening, the only work left above would be finishing touches, such as installation of cabinets.

The Merchants Row project also includes a new 186-unit parking garage, which will be located under the Kilroy. That garage will be completed before Merchants Row is completed and construction workers will be able park there during the latter stages of the project. Before that they will need to park in the Hancock Lot.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was concerned about the impact that would have on the lot, including the farmer's market that sets up shop there. Stephen Chrusciel, director of construction services for Street-Works, said there are plenty of spaces for the construction workers, and promised to work with the farmers market going forward.

"The counts right now that were verified by the city staff indicate that there's about 150 spaces available during business hours, which is the bulk of the time my guys will be there," Chrusciel said. "If we have to make a special accommodation for the farmers market, we will. We won't see a spike in manpower until well into the winter and I think at that point the farmers market is probably taking a break for a little bit, but we'll stay on top of it."

Both the Kilroy and Granite Trust Lofts buildings will have street level retail. Including the Granite Trust Building, there will be a total of about 30,000 square feet of retail space in the Merchants Row development. Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the Downtown and Economic Growth Committee, asked Heapes about lease agreements for the Merchants Row retail. Heapes said the process is ongoing and he is optimistic about the retail aspect.

"We don't have a requirement by our lender to pre-lease the retail, which is good news because you don't have to go out and do stores and whatever that are less strategic just to get the credit," Heapes explained. "We have been out in tranches in the market."

"I will tell you right now that we could probably lease this space to restaurants 10 times over...Quincy is already starting to be thought of as a food place, not through anything we've done, except for the liquor licenses. It's a big deal and created a brand for Quincy as a food place. That's the first tranche. Now we're looking at the kinds of services you would want to have at street level if you lived here. Dry cleaners, spas, aerobics, coffee shops – the things you'd want to do if you lived here.

"We're not in a hurry to lease it out. We have 30 letters of intent out there, to everything from the smallest local to the biggest, which would be the Bank of America. We're very bullish on not only this retail but the rest of the retail downtown."

Merchants Row will be the first phase of development undertaken by the developer, but when Street-Works signed the Land Disposition Agreement (LDA) with the city in January 2011, the first phase – known as Step 1 – was to take place in the area near the Ross Garage. The developer was supposed to file detailed plans – a financial submittal and application for a certificate of consistency (COC) – for that area in January 2012, but hasn't and is instead paying $50,000 every two months to extend the deadline.

Gutro asked Heapes why the Step 1 submittal has been delayed. Heapes responded that they've been working on agreements with companies to fill the three anchor retail spots, which includes a cinema, and would have the COC filed next year.

"The LDA anticipated we would have the ability to pay as we went forward," Heapes said. "We think we've accomplished the hard part of that, which was locking up the anchors. We're going to be back here next year and get that back on schedule."

Gutro then asked what was taking the developer so long to announce leases with retailers, when Street-Works had said last year that agreements would be announced by the end of 2012. Heapes answered that the lease agreements are being finalized and will be announced later this year.

"We will have that announcement this year," Heapes said. "We have agreements with the anchors now we are going through the minutiae. There are two parties of lawyers, if I told you the issues on the table you would just want to shoot yourself. They are very detailed."

Gutro said that delay had caused skeptics of the plan to express concerns that something was wrong. "When it's reported, rightfully, that the anticipation was in 2012 that the anchors would be announced and it doesn't happen – the doubters, and I'd like to think there are few – fear that something is amiss," he said.

Heapes said that anyone still skeptical of the plan should read the newspaper next week after the groundbreaking for Merchants Row takes place.

"They will see steel going up. They will see a groundbreaking going on and construction going on, on something more than just the public improvements," Heapes said. "There's nothing like steel going up to convince them."

Five Graduate Quincy Drug Court Program

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Drug abuse is everywhere. If you think you're unaffected by it because no one in your family or circle of friends is addicted, think again. Someone you know has either abused alcohol or drugs, has been affected by a user, or has been a victim of a drug-related crime.

In its effort to address the rise in these drug-related criminal offenses, the Quincy Drug Court has, since 2001, been conducting a program to reduce the effect of drug distribution in the community. The court provides treatment and rehab assistance to those whose crimes would otherwise be cause for their incarceration.

The court recently held its 11th Commencement ceremony for five graduates of the program, a program which has been uniformly praised by law enforcement, treatment-providers, court officials and by drug-users and their families.

For these particular graduates the courtroom was filled to capacity with local police chiefs, including Quincy's Chief of Police Paul Keenan, and law enforcement representatives, including Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

Bellotti said, "The House of Correction does save lives, some people need to be there for the public safety continuum, but we want to be part of the 'recovery' continuum." Bellotti thanked the "unsung heroes, the treatment providers," and stressed his department's willingness to assist this program even if just by transporting offenders. "You never know what it is going to take to help someone."

ON BEHALF OF the Quincy Drug Court, Judge Diane Moriarty (left) recognizes Probation Officer Jo Rothman for her 28 years service. Rothman was also honored by the graduates, who spoke of her influence upon their recovery and of her sincere commitment to the participants of the program. Mayor Thomas Koch also acknowledged her work.

D.A. Morrissey praised the program and its success, and in his comments to the graduates, Morrissey said, "Not everybody gets to be in this program--hopefully you graduates have learned something, coping systems--congratulations on your commitment."

State Reps. Tackey Chan, John Rogers, and Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, who has been a strong supporter of anti-drug programs, joined the treatment providers, former graduates, probation officers, court personnel and families in the courtroom.

On behalf of the city of Quincy, Koch expressed his pride in the graduates and reiterated something he had recently said to the graduates of Quincy High and North Quincy High: "You are who you are because others have loved you," he said. Koch also read a commendation to Quincy Court Probation Officer Jo Rothman in honor of her 28 years at Quincy Court.

Rothman explained the basics of the program to the audience: "Drug Court is a behavior modification program for people addicted to drugs and alcohol who are on probation and who have at least one case in the Quincy Court."

Graduate Keith Gray expressed his sincere appreciation of the program as he accepted his citation: "I just didn't know that I didn't know. Thank God for this program right here. I never would have made it [to recovery] without this program."

One graduate, who prefers to remain anonymous, said that when he first joined the program, he viewed it as a way to stay out of jail, but has since learned about the disease and about the dynamics of relationships. He, too, expressed sincere gratitude to 'a good sponsor' and praised 'the support network of the program.'

Keynote speaker Harry Spence, the first-ever Court Administrator for the Trial Court of Massachusetts spoke of the history of drug court. "The basic theory of criminal law is called Deterrence Theory, which says that if we tell you that certain, bad consequences will be the result of your taking certain bad actions, that will discourage you from taking bad actions."

"The difficulty for the courts has been that within the last number of years, they have seen people coming back again and again. Something about deterrence theory isn't working. And most of those folks who keep coming back are folks who are in the grip of some form of addiction--because they have lost the capacity to make a determined decision about their lives. Decisions were being made for them by their addiction."

Spence explained that when the courts took a look at this pattern, judges began to think about what was not working, what was wrong, and looked at the ways in which the court system could actually support what was the intention of the deterrence theory.

In a world where there were significant number of people who had lost the ability to make their own decisions, and the ability to decide to comply with the law, the courts explored another idea, he explained.

It was felt that in order to help people to come back to be part of society... "how to help them reconnect to the world of the people who love them," as Spence put it, a change would be required.

So, the Drug Court was founded. Spence referred to statistics discussed at a recent conference which indicated that "drug court is an effective, efficient, humane process that saves the taxpayers' money and saves people's lives."

Spence mentioned a member of his own family who had drifted away--"he is in the prison of addiction." When speaking directly to the graduates he said, "You are freeing yourself to step out of prison and rejoin all of us--that is an enormously powerful moment."

Graduate Matt Smith, a new father, talked of the program's success "in teaching me how to be father. When I first met my probation officer, Jo Rothman, I was thanking God I was handcuffed to the wall. She didn't like me and I didn't like her, but it turned out to be a great relationship!" Matt, too, thanked everyone who makes the program work.

The program is overseen by First Justice Mark S. Coven and Associate Justice Diane E. Moriarty. Guest judges at this year's ceremony were the Honorable Paul F. LoConto, Chief Justice District Court, and Paula M. Carey, Chief Justice Probate Court.

At this year's commencement, first-time representatives of Casa Esperanza were warmly welcomed. Established in 1984, this group responds to the crisis of alcohol and drug abuse in the Latino community.

Quincy's Drug Court initially requires probationers to periodically appear for judicial reviews following a probation surrender hearing before a judge. They must complete a standard inpatient program, followed by a stay at a Half-Way, or Sober House.

Among many other requirements, these candidates are subjected to frequent drug and alcohol testing--including 'hair' tests, attendance at meetings, and participation in the Relapse Prevention and Relationships in Recovery groups.

QHS Freshmen Bury Time Capsule

Will Be Opened In 2036

By SCOTT JACKSON

An empty Mountain Dew bottle. An Xbox 360 video game console. A pair of headphones. Magazines and books.

These were among the items students in Quincy High's freshman class placed in a time capsule that was buried six feet under the school's courtyard last week. It won't see the light of day again until 2036, 20 years after the freshman class graduates.

Jane Lundquist, a Quincy High history teacher, organized the time capsule project. In addition to the personal items, Lundquist had the students place a number of assignments from the past school year — a 16th century newspaper project, letters to themselves, a notebook of her questions of the day, lists of their favorite music — into the time capsule, which also includes copies of The Quincy Sun. Lundquist even donated her own Class of 2016 t-shirt, signed by members of the class, to the project.

The time capsule project was done in part to honor Frank Santoro, Quincy High's principal since 2004, who is retiring at the end of the school year. The 64-year-old Santoro spoke briefly before the time capsule was lowered into the ground, telling the students he hopes to be there when it is unearthed 23 years from.

"When you're sitting in my shoe and think back you tend to forget things. High school is a four-year experience for all you. In four years you tend to forget things but in 2036 when you come back, you can remember some of those things. I hope to join you. I'll be 84 but I hope to be here," Santoro said. "Fill it up before I jump in."

Lundquist told the students the 23 years between the capsule's burial and opening would happen sooner than they'd expect.

"We are next going to see this box in 1,200 weeks. That's 276 months, 8,395 days. It sounds like a lot but anyone over the age of 40 will tell you 23 years goes very quickly," Lundquist said.

metal fabrication students, led by instructor Dennis Thibault, were instrumental in making the time capsule happen. They built a metal frame to encase the plastic box the objects were placed in and used a CNC plasma cutter to make a sign noting where the capsule was placed. On June 19 when the capsule dedicated Monica Ly welded the case shut and other welding students placed it into the ground.

"It's very important to connect subject areas," Santoro said. "For you students in metal fabrication and you students in social studies, that's a great thing — to come together and do things together."

Friends Of Wollaston Beach, Beach Commission Receive Grants

Two local organizations were recently awarded grants from the Save the Harbor / Save the Bay to support free public events in Quincy.

The Friends of Wollaston Beach was awarded $1,000 to support Kids Fest and the Quincy Beaches and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission was awarded

$1,000 to support the Pumpkin Fest. They were among 15 groups awarded the grants in support of dozens of free public events in nine beachfront communities from Nahant to Nantasket this summer.

"The Boston Harbor region's public beaches are important assets to the region's residents and visitors alike," said Patricia A. Foley, President of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay. "We are proud to support our partners in the city's waterfront neighborhoods and beachfront communities as they work to share their beaches and the harbor with the region's kids and families."

We've just finished our latest batch of Boston Strong beads.

As before, all profits from these beads will go to the One Fund.

The money will assist individuals and families hurt by the Boston Marathon bombing.

At a recent luncheon complete with Fenway Franks and Boston Baked Beans, the staff of both the assisted living community and Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center celebrated, "We love Boston Day!" Strong Families Survive, And Social Security Helps

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

In June we celebrate National Family Month, which is a great time to reflect on your family and how to make it stronger. As the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reminds us, strong families share many valuable qualities: trust, commitment, communication, growth, affection, fun, and love.

Strong families are more likely to grow through a crisis, allowing the difficult experience to bring them even closer together.

In the unfortunate event of a family member's death, we want you to know that Social Security is here to help. In addition to the emotional difficulty family members experience, there is often a financial burden as well, especially if the family's main wage earner dies. In such cases, Social Security survivors benefits will help.

Did you know that nearly every child in America could get Social Security survivors benefits if a working parent dies? And Social Security pays more benefits to children than any other federal program. Although many people think Social Security is just a retirement program, you should know that Social Security also provides survivors insurance benefits for workers and their families. If you're like most people, the value of the survivors insurance you have under Social Security is probably more than the value of any individual life insurance you may own. And you don't even need to sign up for a separate policy; by working and paying Social Security tax, you are most likely already insured without even knowing it.

Family members who may be able to receive survivors benefits based on your work record include a widow or widower, unmarried children up to age 19 and still in high school, and under certain circumstances, stepchildren, grandchildren, stepgrandchildren, adopted children, and dependent parents.

If you'd like to learn more about survivors benefits, and how to apply, you should read our publication, Survivors Benefits, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

For more information, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/pgm/survivors.htm.

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

THE RED CORUNDUM

The mineral "corundum" is the crystalline form of aluminum oxide (Al₂O₃), which is a naturally clear and transparent material. However, the presence of impurities adds color to the mineral in ways that make for very enticing gemstones. For instance, consider ruby (July's birthstone), whose red color is determined by the amount of chromium contained in the gemstone. On the other hand, sapphire, another form of aluminum oxide, derives its range of colors (blue, green, yellow, pink, and others) from iron and titanium impurities. When is corundum not sapphire? Only when it is red, in which case it is called ruby. One notable exception is "padparadscha," which is the name of a rare, pinkish-orange sapphire found only in Sri Lanka.

There's no better way to show your love than by giving a ruby in celebration of a July birthday. Rubies rouse the senses, stir the imagination, and are said to guarantee health, wisdom, wealth and success in love. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center and choose a ring, anklet, necklace, bracelet, pin or even a pair of ruby earrings for that special occasion. On Saturday, June 8, at approximately 5:12 a.m., Officers Daniel Church and Steve O'Donoghue were dispatched to a West Quincy address for a "911" call in which both a male and female told the Communications Operator that there were no problems and that the call was accidental, however the Operator suspected that something was wrong.

Upon arrival, the Officers were met at the door by a female, wearing a shirt and a towel around her waist. She said that she had been in an argument with her husband, but he left just before the Police arrived.

Fortunately, Officer Church knew from past interactions with the female, that she and her husband were in the divorce process, have had several criminal and domestic violence cases and immigration hearings for the female's citizenship. There also may be a pending or ongoing custody battle between the female and her husband.

Officer Church asked the female if her daughter (Officer met on past calls) was home to which she responded that she was upstairs asleep. When asked if anyone else was present, the female said no one else was home. Officer Church asked the female if she wanted to go put on pants to which she responded that she did not. The Officer observed that the female had a small cut on her left wrist and Officer O'Donoghue observed what appeared to be a hair extension on the floor.

Several times throughout the conversation the female requested that the Officers speak more quietly as to not wake up her daughter. Officer Church asked the female numerous times what she and her husband were arguing about, but she would not say other than to state that she would just handle it at court. She said that there were both criminal and immigration hearings scheduled for the next couple of days.

Officer Church told the female that he would need to go upstairs to check on the well being of the child. The female said that she would not allow it as it would wake up her daughter. When the Officer again explained this and would be as quiet as possible, the female repositioned herself on the bottom stair and said that she "knew her rights" and would not let the Officers go up as she did not want her daughter disturbed.

Officer Church told her that there was no choice and explained that she would be removed from the stairs if she did not allow Police access. She then said that the Police would have to drag her off the stairs which would cause a loud disturbance waking her daughter. Officer Church then removed her from the stairs and sat her on a couch. When the Officers went upstairs, they did not find the little girl – or the husband. Instead they found another man in bed. He was then identified as the female's boyfriend.

Upon examination, the boyfriend had scratches/cuts on his face, right shoulder, and neck. Initially he would not comment on what had happened, but gradually revealed that he was home asleep when the female arrived home drunk with several friends. The boyfriend asked her to ask her friends to leave as he had to get up early for work and the only bathroom is upstairs just outside of their bedroom. He said she became furious and a scuffle ensued during which he incurred the above mentioned injuries. When asked about the scratch on the female's wrist and the hair extension on the floor, he said he wasn't certain but it may have happened as he was trying to defend himself and avoid being hit and scratched more.

Officer Church checked the apartment but there was no little girl there. The boyfriend was offered a protective order but he declined, adding that there was no need for one. The Officer then returned to the female, informing her that she was under arrest, again offering her the opportunity to put pants on. She said her pants were upstairs, which the Officers found and brought to her.

Despite several requests from Officer O'Donoghue for the female to put her pants on, she outright refused. Once handcuffed, the female, a 27 year-old Quincy resident, was led to an awaiting cruiser where she was transported to the station along with her pants and shoes. She was charged with, "Domestic Assault and Battery."

CAR SEAT INSTALLATIONS/INSPECTIONS AND CHILD FINGERPRINTING were offered Wednesday, June 19th at the Quincy Walmart from 3:15 to 8 p.m. No reservations required and there was no residency requirement. For more information, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

SCAM: Be wary of renting properties from "Craig-slist." There have been numerous cases where renters are asked to forward money via wire, often through Walmart, as a down payment and first months rent.

In this particular case, the ad said that the house is available through this ad or a nationally known realtor, with the name of the realtor. A check with the real estate company confirmed that the person actually worked for them, but the house was not listed under them.

CONGRATULATIONS AND THANK YOU TO LT. CHARLES SANTORO!

Quincy Police Lieutenant Charles "Charlie" Santoro retired last week from the Quincy Police Department after 41 years of service to the City of Quincy.

Lt. Santoro was known for his leadership in the domestic violence field, the training of new recruits as well as the entire department. Charlie was instrumental in updating the Communications/Dispatch rooms. He personally painted murals of Police Officers in the training academy within the station.

He currently trains Officers and Police personnel across the country in "Verbal Judo", which helps Officers diffuse volatile and escalating situations.

Chief Paul Keenan described Charlie as a "Cop's Cop", which is considered as one of the highest compliments made by fellow Officers. Always ready to help out in any way, Charlie is known for his compassion for those in need and for his passion for police work.

Dented Wood Floor Can be Repaired

Question: My apartment has this cool original wood floor made up of wide pine planks. They're painted over, so scratches haven't been a problem. But there are a few spots where heavy furniture or dropped items dinged and dented the wood. Is there a quick way to repair these spots? -- Carla in Taunton, Mass.

Answer: There's an interesting fix you can try, using a clothes iron and a damp towel to try and bring up the dent. Because the dent is a compression of the wood, using dampness and heat may help the wood to expand and minimize the dent.

This technique is not one that I would recommend for floors with a heavy coat of wax (as some older floors do), because the heat may discolor the finish, but since your wood floor has just a coat or two of paint, you shouldn't have much of a problem. However, the paint may bubble or crack due to the initial damage and the expansion of the wood, so have some matching paint handy in order to touch up the area afterward. (As always, test a less-conspicuous area of the floor before making the repair.)

First, dab the dent with a wet rag to soak the wood a bit. Wait a couple of minutes. While you're waiting, fill the reservoir of your clothes iron and turn it on high, with full steam setting.

Once the iron is hot, place a damp towel over the dent. Place the iron atop the towel, holding it directly over the dented area and trying to avoid the surrounding floor. Move the iron in a circular pattern while applying full steam, for about three minutes. Lift the towel to check your results. If the dent appears to be less deep, reapply the iron for a minute or so, checking each time until the dent is almost level with the rest of the floor.

Once the area has cooled, repair the cracked or bubbling paint over the dent. Sand away the damaged paint, wipe clean with a damp cloth, and touch up the spot with matching paint.

HOME TIP: Placing runners or area rugs in high-traffic areas of your home can reduce minor damage to hardwood flooring.

CD Director Participates In CDBG Roundtable

Accepting an invitation from Newton Mayor Setti Warren, Quincy's Community Development Director, Sean Glennon, recently participated in a roundtable conversation sponsored by the U. S. Conference of Mayors (USCM) to discuss the impact of the federal Community Development Block Grant Program (CDBG).

Warren, who chairs the Housing and Community Development Committee of the USCM, asked Glennon to attend the roundtable, serving in his capacity as Chair of the New England region of the National Community Development Association (NCDA). Glennon was elected to the position this past November.

Other roundtable members included Congressman Joseph Kennedy, III; Congressman Michael Capuano; Barbara Fields, Regional Director of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Community Development; and CDBG recipient agencies in the City of Newton. Participants via telephone included Tom Cochran, Executive Director of USCM; Mayor Ralph Becker of Salt Lake City, UT; and Mayor Ed Pawlowski of Allentown, PA.

The event also marked the official launch of a new page of the USCM's website, which will be used for communities to tell the story of how CDBG impacts them locally. For example, last year alone in the City of Quincy, CDBG funds were used to rehabilitate 33 housing units; assist 10 buyers in purchasing their first home; create 12 jobs for low-moderate income individuals; and serve over 11,800 Quincy residents through critical public services, such as neighborhood center programs, mental health counseling, senior transportation, fuel assistance, and emergency food assistance.

As part of his comments at the roundtable, Glennon stressed the importance of making sure CDBG subre-cipients (agencies) and beneficiaries (individuals) help tell the story to Congress of how crucial these funds are in being able to provide a better quality of life for all residents in any given community.

"A rising tide lifts all boats," said Glennon. "By providing assistance and increasing opportunities to our most needy residents, we are improving neighborhood character throughout the city, one block at a time." Glennon also provided a statistic at the roundtable that 42% of all residents in the New England area were served by CDBG during the last fiscal year.

"This is a truly remarkable statistic, and further proof of just how vital this funding is for communities across the state, region, and throughout the country," he added.

Patrick O'Connor Experiences The Effects Of Hurricane Katrina

Patrick O'Connor of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School, spent his February vacation helping out in New Orleans in a variety of projects arranged through The Center for Ethical Living and their community partners.

O'Connor, along with 11 other BC High students and faculty, worked with children in one of the poorest and most diverse schools in the region, the Chahta-Ima elementary school; they cleared brush at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Bayou Lacombe Center, home to an amazing collection of camellia trees, some found nowhere else in the world; and they helped a local church.

Before the group began their work, to help them understand the context in which they were working, to process their experience, and to be effective witnesses to the need for continued assistance and recovery of the Gulf Coast, they received an orientation program which included the history of Hurricane Katrina, the geography of the city, and the current state of rebuilding in New Orleans.

O'Connor and the others toured the most flood-impacted areas of New Orleans where the ravages of the hurricane can still be seen and where recovery is incredibly slow. They had the opportunity to engage in a dialogue with "New Orleans Now: Race, Culture and Rebuilding," which facilitated a discussion of the inequalities in the region's rebuilding and recovery process.

O'Connor considered the trip a life-changing experience.

Blank Milton 5-0 To Post 2-0 Record

Morrisette Legion Off To Impressive Start

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was only the second game of the season, but it gave an impressive look at how good Morrisette can be in the Zone 6 East pennant chase this summer.

Ace Tommy McDonald threw five strong innings, Robbie Munroe led a balanced offense with a booming triple, and catcher Andrew Jaehnig played an exceptional defensive game to lead Morrisette past Milton, 5-0 in a Legion contest at Cunningham Park Sunday.

"I was pleased with all aspects of our game," said coach Steve Maze. "I knew Tommy would pitch well. We also hit, made the plays on defense and did it against a quality team which is stacked with talent."

Morrisette finished the week at 2-0. Monday night's home opener against Cohasset was postponed due to rain.

Morrisette jumped to a 5-0 lead after three and McDonald knew what to do with a big lead. He threw strikes. The tall righty gave three hits and struck out four. He moved the ball around, mixed in a good curveball with his hard sinker, and did what a No. 1 pitcher is supposed to do: control the game. His infield cleanly handled six grounders in his five innings. Righty Kenny Sorenson worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth and Dan Cobban threw an efficient 1-2-3 seventh to preserve the shutout.

"Some pitchers throw hard, but Tommy also knows how to pitch. He knows where and when to throw his pitches," said Maze. "Sorenson settled down and did what he to do. Cobban will be our guy at the back end of games all season."

Jaehnig was terrific. He jump-started the offense by ripping an RBI double to right center in the first, was on base three times, and made four excellent defensive plays. In the second he made a diving grab of a shallow popup along the third baseline. In the the same inning, he rifled a knee-high dart to second to catch a base-stealer. In the sixth, he took a perfect throw from Munroe in right, blocked the plate and swept the tag on the runner to complete a double play and save a run.

"He got here just a couple of minutes before the game started because he was playing in an all-star game," said Maze. "Once he got here, he played great."

His best play was in the fourth. Milton had a runner on first and one out. Justin Lloyd tapped an infield grounder. Morrisette got the out at second, but the throw to first bounced wildly past the bag. Jaehnig was not on his way to back up the play. He was there in position to back up the play. He handled the overthrow cleanly and fired a one-hop strike to second for the out. It was a play which showed his talent and hustle.

"You really don't have to coach him. He knows how to block the plate and how to back up a play," said Maze.

Munroe had two hits an RBI, and a run scored. His triple sailed into his personal power alley in right center. How balanced was the hitting? By the end of the second inning against a quality pitcher in lefty Wes Kroniger, seven of nine batters in the lineup had hit safely.

"It really doesn't matter where anybody bats," said Maze. "These kids all hit 1-thru-4 in their high-school lineups, so we should hit the ball."

and Jaehnig each had a hit, a run scored, and an RBI. Josh Hayward had a double and a run scored, Andrew Currie had a hit and Tyler Beach put down a perfect sacrifice bunt which led to a run. Jaehnig and Verhault had two-out hits to drive in runs which pleased their coach.

"Two-out RBI are big. That's how you win games," said Maze.

Jaehnig drove home Currie in the first for a 1-0 lead. Munroe, Hayward, and Verhault had hits in a three-run second and Munroe tripled home Jaehnig to finish the scoring in the second.

"I liked the balanced offense and I liked our defense. If we play clean baseball in the field, we should be good," said Maze.

In other action last week, Morrisette downed Canton, 6-3 behind the combined pitching of Tom Garland and T.J. Hobbin.

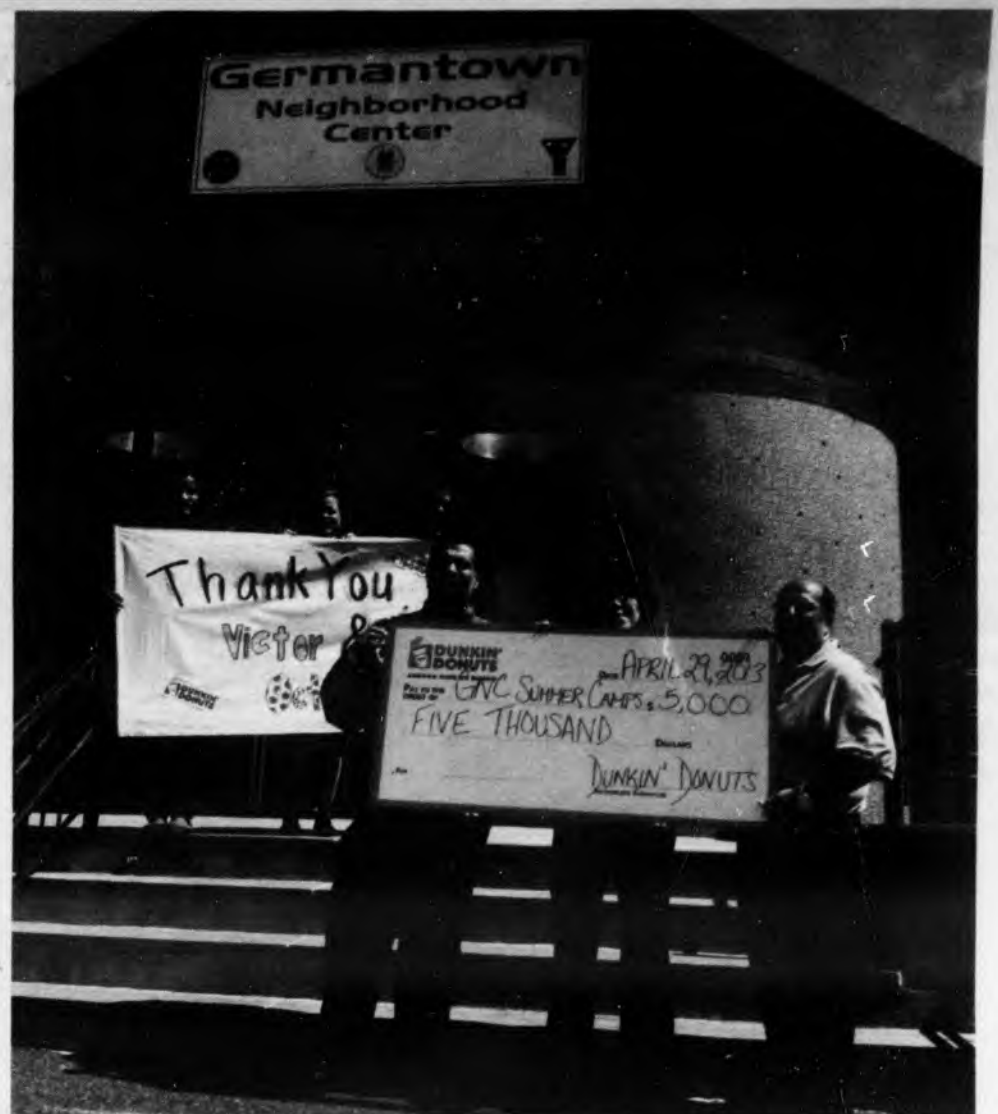

Garland gave just one earned run over the first five and Hobbin did a good job pitching out trouble to finish the game with two shutout innings.

"Garland pitched very well," said Maze. "He had good control of his fastball and he spotted in his change and curve. Hobbin had excellent control."

Verhault led the offense with three hits and Hayward chipped in with two.

Morrisette jumped to a 3-0 lead. After Canton rallied to tie at 3-3, Munroe drove in the go-ahead run and Munroe later finished the scoring with a two-run double to make the final, 6-3.

Morrisette travels to Weymouth Wednesday (5:45) and hosts Weymouth Thursday at Adams Field at 8 p.m.

Andrew Jaehnig Named Outstanding Player In Junior Select All-Star Game

Quincy's Andrew Jaehnig won the Outstanding Player Award in the Massachusetts Junior Select All Star game played at Bentley College Sunday.

The game matches the Massachusetts' best high-school baseball players who are currently finishing their junior year. Jaehnig, a catcher, helped lead BC High to the South sectional finals in the state tourney.

Jaehnig had a bases-loaded single to drive in the winning runs in the East's 7-3 win over the West.

Jaehnig also made a fine play on a pitch in the dirt to save a wild pitch and prevent a run from scoring.

He will play for Massachusetts All Stars against the Connecticut All Stars Saturday at Tufts University.

Win, Tie For Morrisette Junior Legion

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are hitting the ball, running the bases like robbers and receiving quality-late inning pitching.

After rolling past Holbrook in its opener, Morrisette's Junior Legion team tied Cohasset, 5-5 and dropped Hudson, 10-6 to finish last week at 2-0-1.

"I think we're playing great," said coach Rick Beach whose team scored 26 runs in its first three games. "We're putting the ball in play and we're running every chance we get."

Pat Keohane led the offense with a combined total of five hits and eight stolen bases in the Cohasset and Hudson games.

"Pat's had a great start," said Beach. "He's a solid hitter and he has speed. We've been running on the pitcher's first move to put pressure on the other team."

Brendan McDonald had a hit and two RBI in the Hudson win while Josh Helfrich and Adam McCormack each chipped in with a hit.

Hard-throwing lefty Cody Desmond pitched the first five innings against Hudson. Righty Ethan Yau, who blanked Holbrook, finished the game with two shutout innings.

Keohane had two hits and four stolen bases in the Cohasset game. Helfrich chipped in with a single and two RBI. Dave Suslowitz and Bobby Salvucci each had singles for Morrisette.

Suslowitz pitched first six innings. Jack Kennedy and Yau combined in the seventh to blank Cohasset and preserve the 5-5 tie.

"Ethan had a win and two holds in the first three games. He's pitched well for us in the late innings," said Beach.

Morrisette is at Westwood Thursday.

Patrick Lane, Michael Joyce New Athletic Directors

By BILL GRIFFIN

When Superintendent of Schools Richard DeCristofaro began implementing the idea of half-time athletic directors for Quincy and North Quincy High, he was looking for teachers with coaching experience who possessed excellent communication skills and could emphasize strongly the concept of the student-athlete.

DeCristofaro, the principals of the two schools and the selection committees chose two candidates who measured up to the high standards. Both are currently teachers and coaches at their respective schools.

Patrick Lane, a math teacher who has been head wrestling coach at Quincy since 2004, will be the new athletic director for the Presidents. Michael Joyce, an English teacher who has been JV and head lacrosse coach at North Quincy over the past four years, was named athletic director for the Red Raiders.

Lane is a graduate of UMass and Loyola University. Joyce is a graduate of Stonehill and Northeastern. Each will teach three sections in their subject area along with serving as athletic director.

"The concept of two half-time athletic directors is a new one," said DeCristofaro. "The Mayor, the School Committee and I were looking for two candidates who could communicate across the board with athletes, staff, teachers and parents."

DeCristofaro made the announcement Friday, in conjunction with Quincy High Principal Lawrence Taglieri, North Quincy High Principal Robert Shaw and the site-based interview committees which included Jim Rendle, who served as athletic director for both high schools for the past seven years.

"The principals felt that someone with coaching experience would be a good idea and I agreed," said DeCristofaro. "We also looked at teachers because we want to stress the student-athlete. Teachers who coach understand how hard a student works both on the field and in the classroom."

Lane and Joyce are both excited about the challenges and opportunities of their new jobs. Lane talked about the atmosphere of support for student-athletes which already exists at Quincy High School. Joyce said he is grateful for the solid base he begins with thanks to the work of Rendle who retired this June.

"The scholar-athlete at Quincy High School is as good as you'll find anywhere," said Lane. "The faculty support is great. You see it at games. If you go to a game, you see faculty members there supporting the athletes."

"There are no operating problems to begin with and that's thanks to the efforts of Jim Rendle," said Joyce. "I have a good model to follow and a chance to put out my own new vision for student-athletes at North Quincy."

Lane said two of his first goals are to work with fundraising and increase student participation in athletics. Quincy High has a deep and varied program of athletics to offer and Lane would like to see more students take advantage of it.

"Too many kids go home at 2:30," he said. "It begins with educating kids on the different types of sports we offer. If he or she doesn't make the basketball team, there are other sports that a student can enjoy. There are coaches who offer flexible practice schedules. I want to make our students aware of the opportunities."

Increasing participation begins by reaching out to the middle schools, and Lane has considerable experience in this area.

"You start with becoming involved in the middle schools and developing a feeder system for athletes in all sports for the high school," said Lane. "I will work with the middle schools on both the intramural level and in competitions with other schools. As a wrestling coach, I reached out and had the chance to see kids start in the middle school and work with them right up to high school graduation. It was a special thing to see."

uation. It was a special thing to see."

"We were looking for coaches with rapport with kids and both these men have it," said DeCristofaro.

Joyce wants to unite the entire North Quincy High community behind its student-athletes and develop strong personal relationships with players, coaches and parents.

"I want students, teachers, coaches, parents, the entire community to be 100 percent behind the student-athletes, and I want the players to be aware of this in every game they play," he said. "I want to make sure I do my job and that all the behind-the-scenes matters run smoothly, so that the athletes can just go out, play and give their best effort.

"I think it's important to build personal relationships. I want to get to know the coaches, players and students on a personal level."

Joyce also mentioned the concept of the student-athlete which DeCristofaro stressed.

"I want to highlight the fact that North Quincy is not only producing athletes, but producing student-athletes," said Joyce. "It's my job not only to communicate with players and coaches on the field, but in the classroom as well."

"Communication is the most important factor," said DeCristofaro. "We want teachers and coaches to communicate about how well a student is doing in the classroom and on the field. An athletic director who is close to teachers and students can help facilitate this."

Lane said a big part of his job is to be visible and available to athletes, coaches, teachers and parents.

"I want to be seen at games and practices," he said. "A lot of our practice sites are off-campus and I would like to be there for the coaches and athletes. I think being visible shows support and I want everyone involved to know they have my support both during and after school."

In his announcement Friday, DeCristofaro stated that the two new athletic directors would work together to facilitate the sports programs at the middle schools. Joyce is confident that he and Lane will have a strong working relationship.

"I'm sure we'll get along well, and work together for what's best for the athletic programs in the city," said Joyce.

All three men expressed respect for the difficult job which Rendle did for seven years. Lane and Joyce also expressed strong enthusiasm for the idea of a half-time athletic directors at each high school.

"Jim Rendle had a daunting job being athletic director from the two schools. He did a great job," said DeCristofaro.

"It's a job almost too big for one man," said Lane. "It will be so much easier for me just to focus on Quincy High. I talked about being more visible and one reason I can be is I only have one school on which to focus."

"I respect the work Jim did during his tenure," said Joyce. "I talked about building personal relationships. One of the reasons I'll be able to do this is I teach at the school and I only have the community from one school to come to know better."

DeCristofaro is pleased with the two choices.

"Both men are fantastic teachers," he said. "Both are keenly aware of the time and effort the job requires. They have an excellent relationships with the students and they have experience both as teachers and coaches. That will help us build the students athletes which is the focus of this new idea."

TWO TREATMENTS ARE NECK AND NECK

Neck pain is one of the most common reasons for people to seek emergency room care or visit their primary care doctors. Between 10 and 21 percent of the population experiences neck pain in any given year. With this in mind, it is important to point out the findings of a recent study involving 272 adults who experienced neck pain within the previous 2-12 weeks. Each was randomly assigned medication, spinal manipulation, or home exercise with advice (two hour-long therapy sessions in which they learned to gently exercise their neck and shoulder joints at home). After 12 weeks, those in the spinal manipulation and home exercise groups had far better range of motion and less pain than the medication group.

At one point or another in their lives, most people will experience some degree of neck pain. Neck pain may be chronic and indicative of an underlying systemic problem. We commonly address neck discomfort. Sometimes home care can't fully heal the irritation; the injury may need professional help. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are educated in the natural way of health. Chiropractic care could improve your daily life dramatically. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Medication only masks pain symptoms and does not address their underlying cause. Pain medications may also lead to gastrointestinal bleeding, abuse, addiction, and drowsiness.

1999 NQHS Girls' Soccer Coach-Player Tandem Paired Again For Wheaton College Softball

It's Back To The Future For Rachel Powers And Paul Bregoli

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is 1999 and North Quincy girls' soccer coach Paul Bregoli is talking to his players. Rachael Powers does not miss a word. When the coach talks, she listens. She gets it. Bregoli is tough, a disciplinarian. He pushes his players. Powers likes that because it makes her better.

Jump into your time machine and fast-forward to 2013. Powers is the softball coach at Wheaton College. Bregoli is her hitting coach. She is talking to her players. They are not missing a word. The players listen, but her hitting coach is making faces and whispering jokes. She has to tell her hitting coach to, well, knock it off. She is, as the kids would say, the boss of him now.

"I was just trying to have a little fun, lighten things up, and she brought me back," said Bregoli.

Life does indeed come full circle, and it has all worked out for Bregoli and Powers. It worked in 1999 when Powers was a three-sport captain of soccer, basketball and softball at North. It worked in 2013 when Powers and Bregoli led Wheaton to the ECAC Division 3 Championship. It was a bit odd at times, but it worked.

"We couldn't have done it without him. Our hitting improved drastically with him. He knows hitting and the players responded to him," said Powers.

Everything changed, but everything stayed the same. At North in 1999, Bregoli was a demanding coach. He has mellowed, softened a bit with the years. He is still the coach, but the coach who sees better the lighter side of games. Powers is now the teacher not the student.

North Quincy Basketball Coaching Staff Conducting Clinic For Boys Grades 4-10

Head coach Kevin Barrett and the entire North Quincy boys basketball coaching staff will hold a clinic for boys entering Grades 4-10 from Aug. 12-16 at North Quincy High.

The hours of the clinic are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The entry fee is $175 and includes a Red Raiders T-Shirt.

The goal of the clinic is develop skills for boys who aspire to play on the varsity level in high school.

She runs the program. She is responsible for it and every coach and player in it. She is the demanding one. It is a reversal of the good cop-bad cop roles and Bregoli thinks it's just wonderful.

"She's the tough one now, but she does remind me of someone," said Bregoli.

"Probably himself," said Powers.

"I like a laugh now. I like to fool around a little and she has to tell me what to do," said Bregoli.

"It is a little weird to correct him. It's like telling your parents to obey you," said Powers.

What hasn't changed is the feeling and closeness the two share. Outside of family bonds, a coach-player connection is one of the closest relationships a person can enjoy. Bregoli has had a profound influence on Powers' life and career.

"He influenced everything I became as an athlete, coach and person," said Powers who also played for Bregoli as the only girl in Quincy Babe Ruth League baseball in her high-school years.

"And she more than held her own with the boys," said Bregoli.

He has clearly touched her coaching style. She holds her players accountable. Nobody outworks her. She never stops coaching. She coaches when there are games and when there is snow on the ground. She calls and meets with the best softball minds she can find for new ideas. She works at it from Massachusetts to Florida to Illinois. She recruits and sells her program. That work ethic didn't just happen, it came from an old coach.

"Absolutely. One thing I learned from him was hard work. I go to clinics all year and I try to pick the brains of the best in my profession," said Powers who finished her fifth season as coach at Wheaton after a four-year softball career at the school as a third basemen and centerfielder.

"She's out there recruiting right now and she's going to have a baby in a month. She never stops," said Bregoli.

The recruiting, the hard work brought home a championship. Last year, Powers went on the road and found a player from Florida (Marissa Timotteo) and a player from Chicago (Kelly Welch). With the score tied in the final inning of the championship game against Worcester State, Timotteo doubled and Welch hit as walk-off home run to win the title.

"If she doesn't go the extra mile and hit the road to get those players, we don't win," said Bregoli.

Powers first talked to Bregoli two years ago about the hitting-coach job. She had hit .500 when she played for him, so she was fairly sure he knew something.

"I needed someone I knew I could work with. I kept going over it and finally, my dad said: Why don't you call Mr. Bregoli," said Powers.

Bregoli is still committed to North soccer in the fall, but he has worked with Wheaton for the past two springs. He makes the Quincy to Norton commute six days a week and if there is night practice, he gets home at midnight. His work ethic is still just fine, but it is not all a burden. While most of Quincy was digging free from our March blizzard, Bregoli The Hitting Coach was enjoying a trip south to Florida with Powers and Wheaton for spring softball.

"The big thing he has done is make our hitters more relaxed, less tense at the plate, so I guess the lighter approach has helped," Powers admits.

So it has come full circle. The teacher has become the student. The student has become the teacher. It is all worked because, although Bregoli may drive her crazy at times, Powers knows the bond first formed at North more than 15 years in the past has held firm.

"Why does she tolerate me? She loves me," smiled Bregoli.

RACHEL POWERS (right) was a player on Paul Bregoli's North Quincy High School girls' soccer team in 1999. Today, Powers is the softball coach and Bregoli the hitting instructor for the Wheaton College softball team, the champions of ECAC Division 3.

JACK KOZLOWSKI, an 18-year-old Quincy native, completed the 2013 Buffalo Marathon May 26. He was in the youngest running group in the marathon and displayed an incredible level of dedication and perseverance. Kozlowski is a graduate of Quincy High School and has committed himself to running since the spring of 2012. In the fall, he will be a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and will continue on the pre-med track while double majoring in kinesiology and economics. Kozlowski is already planning to run many more marathons and has even more motivation following the tragedy that struck Boston April 15.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deal firmly with a difficult family matter. It's your strength they need right now. You can show your emotions when the situation begins to ease up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent dispute with some co-workers might not have been completely resolved. But other colleagues will be only too happy to offer support of your actions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Let go of that Piscean pride long enough to allow someone to help you with a surprising development. That could make it easier for you to adjust to the change.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to open up to possibilities is why people like you are often among our most popular political leaders.

Standing just feet away from the wrecked remains of two Hancock Street buildings that formed part of the old Quincy Center, officials touted the new Quincy Center as a 'model for city development' to be used nationwide at the groundbreaking ceremony for the Merchants Row project.

Federal, state, and local officials broke ground on the Merchants Row project shortly after 6 p.m. on Monday. The day's record high temperatures didn't stop more than 200 people from attending the ceremony, which celebrated the first part of private construction being undertaken by devel-

NOT FORGOTTEN—A wreath was placed on the Korean War Memorial Monday to remember the 38 men from Quincy who gave their lives serving their country during the Korean War.

Quincy Remembers Korean War, 38 Killed In Action

City Marks 63rd Anniversary Of War's Outbreak

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

On Monday, Quincy recognized Korean Veterans Day with a wreath laying ceremony to commemorate the 63rd anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War.

Guest speaker U.S. Navy Korean War Veteran Fred J. White, who is the Finance Officer for the Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 and a past Post commander, spoke of his time in the Navy and the four months he spent in Korea.

"We were told we were heading to Korea as a part of a world cruise, and on January 7, 1953 we set sail for Korea," said White. "The war lasted 37 months and 38 men from Quincy lost their lives. I had been in the North Atlantic with ice four to five inches thick but I had never been as cold as I was in the waters of North Korea."

The ceremony was held at the Korean War Veterans Memorial located at the corner of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway. The memorial was built and dedicated to the 38 young men of Quincy who gave their lives for freedom. The ceremony was held a day early because of the special Senate election on Tuesday.

White, a lifelong resident of Quincy Point and Quincy High graduate, joined the U.S. Navy and attended Class A radio school for six months after basic training. He not only served on board the USS Cowell DD 547 but also became a shellback and was assigned to the USS Rich DD 820 in 1954. He made an around the world cruise in 1953 with a stop off in Korea for four months.

During his time aboard the USS Rich and Cowell he made two Mediterranean cruises before being discharged in 1954.

"After our time in Korea we traveled to Athens, Greece where we took a dip in the Mediterranean Sea to celebrate the end of the war and spent three days relaxing on the Italian Riviera," said White. "On the 18th of August 1953 we returned home to the port in Virginia where an excited and jubilant crowd of family and friends greeted us. That homecoming was just an illusion and we were given the silent treatment. There was never any mention of the war and our service. It became the forgotten war. It is great that America now appreciates and celebrates service. I get a lump in my throat and a tear in my eye when I see people greeting service men and women at the airport, holding up welcome home signs, or a child holding the American flag."

Mayor Tom Koch said that the tradition of service in Quincy was no different when the Korean War began.

"This is a great city with a long tradition of service and the Korean War was no different," said Koch. "Today we celebrate freedom in South Korea and in America."

The ceremony ended with a roll call of all 38 Quincy natives' names that are listed on the Korean War Memorial, along with the laying of the wreath in front of the memorial and a benediction done by Joseph H. Brooker. Naseeb "Moe" Morad a member of the Morrisette Post sang God Bless America and P.C. Robert LaFleur played "TAPS" after P.C. Anthony Wolowitz presented the wreath.

"I never could understand why in God's name it is the forgotten war," said George Nicholson, commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council. "Twenty one nations banded together to save South Korea, and service men set aside their own comforts to answer the call to duty."

"Those veterans will never be forgotten. They changed the face of war, they changed history, and they proved that America was and truly still is the greatest nation on Earth."

Claims Proposal Did Not Get A Fair Hearing

C-Mart Owner Appeals Council Decision Rejecting Grocery Store

By SCOTT JACKSON

The owner of the C-Mart supermarket chain has appealed the City Council's decision to reject his proposal to convert the former Boston Gear Works building on Hayward Street into an Asian grocery store.

The appeal, filed Monday in Land Court by lawyers for Michael Fang, alleges that Mayor Thomas Koch improperly pressured the council to reject the application. It also says the council failed to properly follow the remand order issued in Land Court that sent the proposal back to the council after Fang appealed a previous rejection by the council.

"We believe that Michael Fang and C-Mart cannot get a fair hearing in the City Council because of the Mayor's ongoing interference in the Council's decision making process and the Council's inability to abide by the process laid out in the Remand Order," Steve Crawford, a spokesman for Fang, wrote in an email to The Sun. "We asked the Land Court to annul the Council's unreasonable decision and hear C-Mart's permit application itself, rather than returning the matter to the Council yet again."

The 30-page appeal cited testimony critical of the project provided by Frank Tramontozzi, an engineer who reports directly to the mayor, during the council's May 20 meeting. The council voted to reject the proposal in a 5-3 vote that night.

"The City also arranged for yet another purported traffic expert - Frank Tramontozzi - to speak about traffic at the final City Council hearing on May 20, 2013, even though he had never submitted any written traffic report prior to that date," the appeal states. "Mr. Tramontozzi is an appointee of and works for the Mayor, and his comments therefore are fairly attributable to the Mayor."

"Regardless, Mr. Tramontozzi's presentation was not ad hoc; it was prepared in advance of the Council hearing and, on information and belief, members of the Council were aware in advance that he was going to make the presentation. C-Mart, however, was not given any advance notice and was deprived of any reasonable opportunity to address Mr. Tramontozzi's comments. To make matters worse, Mr. Tramontozzi addressed issues that had not been raised by any of the other traffic experts that the City had proffered."

In addition the appeal cites a letter written by Koch to the council in early April. That letter was written in response to comments at the second public hearing on the proposal, when more than a dozen individuals accused C-Mart's opponents of being racists. Fang's appeal faults the mayor for calling those individuals 'representatives of C-Mart,' and said Koch should have addressed anti-Asian comments made at the first C-Mart hearing.

"On April 2 2013, the Mayor himself sent a letter to the City Council that falsely accused individuals who spoke during the second day of the public hearing of being 'representatives' of C-Mart, and it chastised them for injecting race into the process," the appeal says. "Tellingly, however, the Mayor made no comment whatsoever about racially biased remarks that opponents of the C-Mart Project had made at the first public hearing."

The appeal says the council didn't properly follow the remand order by not considering the traffic impact by-right uses - those which wouldn't require a special permit - on the property would have.

A Very Quiet Election Year

The city election is still four months away but it's shaping up to be perhaps one of the quietest political seasons in quite some time.

Headlining that "quiet" election season is the strong possibility that there will not be a contested mayor's race. Nor will there be a mayoral rematch from two years ago.

That's because School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney — who tried unsuccessfully to unseat Mayor Thomas Koch in 2011 — took out nomination papers for a third School Committee term a week ago Monday.

Two years ago, Mahoney challenged Koch at the midpoint of her current four-year term. So, this year, she has a decision to make: run for re-election or another office. She apparently has decided on another term for school committee. However, it is possible that Mahoney could take out nomination papers for mayor. She would have to decide what office to seek when filing her papers meaning she can't run for both seats.

Koch is seeking his fourth two-year term this fall. If he has no opponent, he would be the fifth mayor to be re-elected without opposition. The others: Tom Burgin (1940), Frank McCauley (1983), James Sheets (1991, 1993 and 1997) and Bill Phelan (2005).

Nomination papers were available May 6 and are due at the city's Election Office Aug. 6. Only 50 signatures from Quincy registered voters are required to qualify for the ballot for mayor, school committee, councillor at-large and ward councillor.

Another indication this could be a ho-hum election year: Every elected official who is up for re-election has taken out papers for re-election. No one is looking at making a move towards another office or vacating their seat.

All nine city councillors have pulled papers for re-election. So too have School Committee members Barbara Isola, Emily Lebo and Mahoney. Of course Koch has, too.

As of Tuesday, three elected officials had returned their papers: Mayor Koch, Councillor Michael McFarland and Councillor Doug Gutro.

And so far, only two contested contests have materialized. That would be in Ward 4 where incumbent councillor Brian Palmucci is being challenged by Michael Healy; and for school committee where Noel DiBona is running for one of the three seats up this fall.

So, with about six weeks to go before the filing deadline, it's quite possible that the city will not have a preliminary election this fall because of the dearth of candidates. A preliminary, if needed, would be held Tuesday, Sept. 17. The city would save $90,000 if there is no preliminary election, City Clerk Joseph Shea said.

A city election without a preliminary has been an aberration of sorts. The last time the city did not require a preliminary election was 2007. That's only six years ago. Prior to 2007, you had to go back another 67 years to 1940 to find a city election without a preliminary.

So, why could 2013 be the third time in 73 years that there's no preliminary election in Quincy?

One reason: no open seats. Over the past several city elections, there's been quite a bit of turnover on the School Committee and City Council created by incumbents who have decided to step down instead of running for re-election. Open seats draw candidates and crowded fields need preliminary elections to pare them down.

Reason two: no hot-button issues to run on. For the most part, the city's elected officials have been working together on a myriad of important issues including the downtown project and fiscal matters like the municipal budget. There doesn't appear to be a lot of public outcry about decisions made by elected leaders and which way the city is headed.

Another factor could be the initiative petition to increase the mayor's term from two to four years. The ballot question — sponsored by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce — would double the length of the mayor's term if approved by voters this fall. The Chamber is expected to submit the last of the required 2,700 signatures this week for the question to appear on the ballot Nov. 5. Petition proponents were positioned at several polls during Tuesday's special U.S. Senate election to gather more signatures.

So, if the petition is approved by voters, the city would elect its first four-year mayor in 2015.

Those with mayoral aspirations may let 2013 come and go and instead gear up for 2015.

Political observers think two of the city's councillors at-large may run for mayor someday, perhaps in 2015. One is Councillor Doug Gutro, the other Councillor Joe Finn. Both are seeking their seventh terms on the council this fall.

Gutro has been seen throughout the city at various events including some smaller and lower-profiled gatherings.

Finn is believed to be the frontrunner as the next city council president, a post that in the past has been considered a springboard to the mayor's office because of its enhanced visibility on the council.

But, the last two mayors have not even come from the city council. Bill Phelan was on the School Committee when he unseated Jim Sheets in 2001. Tom Koch resigned as director of the Park Department before he defeated Phelan in 2007.

It would appear that Finn is in a good position to be the next council president. He, along with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Gutro, are the longest serving councillors on the current council. Coughlin and Gutro have already served as council president.

So while 2013 appears to be a very quiet election year, 2015 could be quite the opposite. Only time will tell.

THE LACK OF a mayor's race and few contested races elsewhere on the ballot could spell a very low turnout for the Nov. 5 final election. But how low could it go?

Political observers may want to compare 2013 to election year 2005. Eight years ago was the last time the city did not have a contested mayor's race. The turnout that year was 25 percent.

But that's where the comparison ends because in 2005, there were five open seats up for grabs: one councillor at-large, three school committee and one ward council seat.

The open councillor at-large seat was vacated by Frank McCauley who retired after 32 years in public life. He is the only resident to be served in all four local elective offices: mayor, school committee, councillor at-large and ward councillor.

Five candidates ran for councillor at-large that year. Incumbents Joe Finn and John Keenan were re-elected. Mike McFarland, who vacated his school committee seat, won the open councillor at-large seat finishing ahead of two other candidates.

There were also three open school committee seats in 2005. They were vacated by McFarland, Ron Mariano and Jo-Ann Bragg who both stepped down after 16 and 12 years of service respectively.

The final election saw six candidates seeking the three open school seats. They were won by Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey and Jim Timmins in that order.

There was also an open seat for Ward 6 councillor after Alicia Gardner decided to not seek re-election. Brian McNamee defeated Mark Bracken to claim the seat.

If there's a betting line in Las Vegas on turnout Nov. 5, it might be wise to take the "under" 25 percent.

PERHAPS THE biggest draws for voters in November will be the ballot questions. We've already mentioned the binding four-year mayoral term initiative petition.

But another petition — this one is non-binding — is being circulated by School Committeeman Paul Bregoli. It is a public opinion advisory question regarding the two high schools in Quincy.

The question asks:

"Should the city of Quincy change its format for high school from the current approach of two distinct high schools — North Quincy and Quincy High School — to one high school with two campuses approach: namely, one Quincy High School with students attending Grades 9-10 at the North Quincy campus, and students attending Grades 11-12 at the Quincy campus.

A 'YES' vote would indicate support for such a change.

A 'NO' vote would indicate opposition for such a change.

BEST WISHES to Paul and Karen Moody who are celebrating their 45th wedding anniversary. Paul and Karen, who have done a tremendous job coordinating the Flags for Veterans Island in Fort Square, were married June 29, 1968 in St. John's Church. They have two sons: Mike and Paul Moody.

Paul also reports that the number of American flags for the Island has reached 213. Those who would like to order an honor or a memorial flag for a veteran can call 617-472-5952. The one-time cost is $30.

The Strand Closes After 57 Years

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 57-year-old Strand Theater closed for business following a Saturday showing of the Julie Andrews film "Victor Victoria."

Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. was in the process of buying the theater, located at 12 Chestnut St. in Quincy Center, and Mayor Francis X. McCauley said the building was most likely going to be razed and turned into a parking lot.

The closure of the Strand left the city with only one movie theater, the Wollaston Theater on Beale Street. McCauley remembered when there were three big theaters downtown—the Strand, the Capitol, and the Art—and the smaller State and Adams Theaters.

"The Adams was the place where you'd go for the Saturday serials and the cartoons," he said, "but the big deal was to go to the Strand at night. I think it was 17 cents under 12."

The Strand was built by former Mayor William A. Bradford and opened in 1925. It became the first theater in Quincy to show a talking picture—Vitaphone's "The Lion and the Mouse." It reached its heyday in the 1930s and the 1940s, when City Clerk John Gillis ushered there.

EARLIER CLOSING TIME PROPOSED

The License Board voted to hold a public hearing in August on a controversial proposal to rollback the closing time of liquor establishments from 2 a.m. to 1 a.m.

The proposal had been on the agenda at the License Board's agenda for this week, but a restraining order obtained by an attorney representing six Quincy bars prevented a vote. Attorney Richard R. Barry said he filed for the restraining order because no public notice of the proposal was given.

New Health Commissioner Dr. M. Grace Hussey was expected to be the deciding vote on the proposal, which would be voted on immediately following the public hearing. Hussey said she wanted to keep an open mind on the proposal, though she was leaning one way.

CITY TO CHALLENGE MDC OVER SEWER DISCHARGE

Mayor Francis X. McCauley announced the formation of a new task force to draft and enforce anti-pollution measures in the city, taking aim at the MDC's sewage treatment plants.

City Solicitor William Golden was asked to lead the task force, which also included the City Council, Quincy's State House delegation, and the heads of the Health and Public Works Departments.

"The committee has begun to assert itself already by requesting the MDC to closely monitor the coliform bacteria count along Wollaston Beach and take steps to prevent potential health hazards to swimmers," McCauley added.

The task force was announced weeks after sewage treatment plants on Moon and Nut Islands dumped a combined 1.4 billion gallons of untreated sewage into Quincy Bay during heavy rains, forcing the closure of numerous beaches.

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES NEW FINES

The City Council authorized two new fines—one for trespassing in West Quincy schools and the other for swimming in quarries.

Anyone caught in the Gridley Bryant or Willard Schools after 10 p.m. would face a fine of $100. Previously two boys broke into the closed Bryant School and started a fire inside.

Residents caught swimming in either the Granite Rail or Swingle's Quarries would face a $150 fine. Councillor James A. Sheets, sponsor of the ordinance establishing the fine, called for strict police enforcement.

QUINCY-ISMS

Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, was among those in attendance at a reelection kickoff party for Sen. Paul Harold...The License Board granted common victualer and Lord's Day license to Timothy Cahill, Edward Graham Jr., and Joseph Irvine allowing them to open Handshakes, a health food restaurant on Granite Street...Mary Pratt planned to attend a reunion of players from the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League held in Chicago...The Italian American Charitable Society announced that Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti would be honored at the society's Gold Medal dinner in the fall.

THE M. E. CHURCH ~ ~ ATLANTIC, MASS.

THIS IS A 1927 real photo postcard view of the Methodist Episcopal Church on East Squantum Street in Atlantic. The church had just been built on land that was the site of the old Quincy Elementary School. On the right was the pastor's home and just out of sight next to it was the original wooden church that later became the Masonic Hall. The Methodist congregation merged with other Quincy churches in the 1980's and this building was used as a Sikh Temple for a few years until it was converted into condominiums. In the distant left can be seen the old Atlantic fire station with the tower and beyond that the old Hancock Paint factory. Under construction at the time of this photo was the center section of today's North Quincy High School behind the church. The east wing of the high school was built in 1931 and today would block the view on the left. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Calls Plan For Heroic Statues Ignorant, Wasteful

Re: Planning Director Dennis Harrington's plans to have commission, cast and install three "heroic" sized bronze statues of John Hancock, John and Abigail Adams at a cost of upwards of $1 million dollars for the new Adams Green. I cannot recall a recent proposal that is more ignorant or wasteful.

The Pharaohs, the Emperors of Rome, European monarchs and contemporary dictators have all used oversized statues to demonstrate symbolically their absolute power over their subjects. "Heroic" statuary is one of the oldest tricks in the propagandist's playbook. As symbolic language, it is contrary to the ideals of the American Revolution.

Please consider our war in Iraq. If pressed, the average American might recall only two joyful images.

First, the crowds pulling down the "heroic"- sized statue of Saddam Hussein in Baghdad and the smiles of the citizens on their first Election Day when they displayed their ink-stained thumbs.

How might our local Heroes of our Revolution, could they see them, have responded to both those images?

Mr. Harrington is inspired by the sculptures that line the Boston Commons. Just because such statues were the fashion in the 19th century does not mean they should be created for Quincy in the 21st. The over-sized bust of John Hancock at the Quincy Historical Society was presented to the City in 1951 by the John Hancock Mutual life Insurance Co. It was not cast with the pennies of Quincy's school children. It is a commercial relic and is accepted as such.

The Lloyd Lillie statues of Abigail and John Adams are appealing and modern precisely because they are not grandiose and pompous. Their human scale is a delightful representation that the subjects were "of the people." Their deeds and writings were heroic.

We consider John and Abigail legendary, yet the scale and accessibility of the statues remind the visitors that they were real human beings. Adams and Hancock "pledged their Lives, Property and Sacred Honor" when they signed the Declaration of Independence. Abigail endured the long British Siege. The sculptures challenge the viewer. Would we have the guts to do what they did?

I like best that citizens and visitors engage the statues. It was not mockery when a citizen put a N.E. Patriots jersey on John before Super Bowl games. That was witty and that was ownership. Visitors have their photos taken with the statues. Mr. Harrington would have them pay homage at the base of bombastic bronzes mounted atop honking huge pedestals (no doubt, clad in fiberglass "granite" to cut the inevitable cost over-runs.)

Then there is the matter of the price tag. Mr. Harrington floats a price of $250-300,000 per statue. Multiply by three and add ten percent for "Client error" = $1,000,000. That is a "heroic"-sized number indeed.

Does the City of Quincy really have that kind of money stashed away?

If this City actually cares about Art and Culture, then it will invest that money in its children. Use the million dollars to hire Full-time Art and Music teachers for each and every school in the system. And fully fund the materials, media, and instruments for their classroom/studios as well.

What? That idea is crazy?

But I ask you, is it sane to buy three bronze statues that the people have not requested?

Visit 5 Historic Sites For $5 Discover Quincy Days July 13, Aug. 10, Oct. 5

Discover Quincy, the tourism agency of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, announces the return of its "Discover Quincy Days" program being offered this season.

On three Saturdays - July 13, Aug. 10 and Oct. 5 - visitors and residents can experience Quincy and all of its rich history for one admission price.

Participants may purchase a Discover Quincy wristband for $5 that gives them admission for the day to the Adams National Historical Park, Josiah Quincy House, Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Quincy Historical Society, and United First Parish Church.

"Many visitors to Quincy are familiar with the Adams story and the National Historical Park tour of the birthplaces and the Old House at Peace field," said Donna Mavromates, Vice President and Director of Tourism for the Quincy Chamber. "Fewer are familiar with the 'Quincy' story, one of Massachusetts' leading families, and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and Josiah Quincy House. We wanted to bring that inclusive experience to all visitors and residents alike and make it easy and affordable for them to enjoy more of Quincy's rich history this summer."

With the purchase of a wristband, visitors can visit one, two, three, four, or all five historic sites on Discover Quincy Days. They may use their own transportation and travel from location to location or they may take advantage of a shuttle that will depart from the Quincy Historical Society and run on a continuous loop between the sites from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

In addition, participants can explore Quincy's history by walking in the footsteps of John Adams. A Walking Tour map provides a self-guided tour for visitors from the Adams Academy/Quincy Historical Society down Hancock Street. Along the way, a variety of statues and markers, such as the John Adams and Abigail Adams/John Quincy Adams statues and Granite Ball are highlighted. At the Hancock Cemetery, located across the street from the United First Parish Church, a historical interpreter will be on hand to guide visitors through the town's earliest cemetery.

Discover Quincy wristbands will be sold at all of the participating historic sites on Discover Quincy Days and in advance at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. or the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, 1400 Hancock St.

String Bean Fritters

When we were growing up, we had a huge vegetable garden, and one of the family favorites was string beans made with tomato sauce, or string bean fritters.

Both of these can be made ahead of time especially if you are preparing a dinner later that day. The recipe for the fritters can yield about 12-14 depending on how large you want them. If you want them bite size, use a teaspoon, if larger, use a tablespoon.

STRING BEAN FRITTERS

½ pound string beans boiled
2 eggs beaten
3 tablespoons flour
3-4 tablespoons of Parmesan or Romano grated cheese
Salt and pepper to taste
3-4 tablespoons of vegetable oil (or more if needed)

Boil the string beans until done to your liking. Set aside to cool. Meanwhile beat the eggs and add the flour and grated cheese, salt and pepper. Mix until well blended.

Cut the string beans in small pieces. Add to the mixture, which should resemble pancake mix. If mixture seems too dry, add a little water.

When this is done, heat the oil and drop the mixture by spoonfuls. Turn until golden brown and drain on paper towel. Place in warming oven if not eaten right away.

STRING BEANS WITH TOMATO SAUCE

1 pound string beans
3 cups tomato sauce
2 cloves garlic
Salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons olive oil
Grated Romano or Parmesan cheese

Boil the string beans until done. Set aside. You can either use leftover tomato sauce or make a quick marinara sauce by sautéing a couple of cut up garlic cloves in hot oil and add small can of tomatoes, and season with basil or a favorite herb.

Cook for twenty minutes.

Sauté the string beans in the olive oil and garlic. Blend for a couple of minutes, then add the tomato sauce, and cook until hot and bubbly.

Top it with grated cheese and serve hot.

'The Stars And Stripes Of American Music At Crane Library

Enjoy an introduction to some of the most extraordinary artists in the history of American music: the innovators and geniuses who have made American music into the rich tapestry that it is today.

Tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. Wheaton College professor Delvyn Case will explore how three of America's homegrown composers, Charles Ives, Aaron Copland, and George Gershwin, forged a uniquely American style of classical music that incorporated the folk and popular music they heard across the country.

This free program will be held in the community meeting room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Case is an active composer, conductor, scholar, performer and educator. He is a past faculty member at Boston College, Northeastern University, Eastern Nazarene College and Longy School of Music and is also the Music Director of the Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra and the Great Woods Chamber Orchestra.

WHICH "C" COMES FIRST?

You are probably already familiar with the "4 C's" (Cut, Clarity, Color, and Carat weight) of diamond buying, the primary factors used to evaluate a diamond. If so, you might have wondered if one factor takes precedence over the others. Cut, which is more a measure of workmanship than the diamond's inherent qualities, should take precedence. The fact is that cut greatly influences sparkle and luminosity and can hide flaws. For instance, even a diamond with a nice color will appear lifeless and dull if not cut properly. On the other hand, a diamond with a midrange color rating of K will flash and sparkle when the cut is optimum. Therefore, choose a diamond with a very good cut.

Our staff help you learn about diamonds, and give you the facts you need to make decisions when it's time to shop for diamond jewelry. Whether it's a diamond engagement ring to pop the question or a necklace and earrings to show her how much you care we can help you find the perfect jewelry. Our store is located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you can shop for the widest selection of unique jewelry items and the most exquisite diamonds and gemstones. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and allow us to assist you in purchasing quality diamond jewelry.

A Legislative Update From State Sen. John Keenan

Comprehensive Welfare Reform Bill

The Senate last week passed legislation making improvements to the state's welfare system, putting programs in place to support and encourage recipients to gain employment, and transition from welfare to economic independence. The bill also includes several fraud prevention and reduction measures that had been previously set aside during Senate budget debates last month.

State Sen. John Keenan (D - Quincy) says he was "pleased that the Senate has had an opportunity to address much needed reforms in a comprehensive and balanced manner, and through the proper legislative process that allowed for meaningful deliberation and debate."

The new legislation would require applicants to conduct an initial job search before receiving cash assistance. It would also direct the Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA) and the Commonwealth Corporation to create job diversion and full-time employment programs to match able-bodied individuals with employment before they start receiving benefits. Current regulations provide recipients with a 60-day window after they start receiving benefits before they are required to look for a job.

Through these programs recipients would be provided relevant training and education to help secure a job, and those successful in finding employment would receive childcare for the first year of employment. Employers who hire from the Full Employment Program would be eligible for a healthcare subsidy under the insurance partnership program, and a subsequent tax credit of up to $1200 per participant. This revives a tax credit that was created in 1995.

The bill takes other steps to help recipients establish economic independence, and break free from long-term dependence on public benefits. This includes provision of financial literacy programs for low income homes, and an "asset development program" allowing recipients to save money for education, and for first, last and security rent payments, without having those assets counted as income for purposes of eligibility.

Senator Keenan's filed or co-sponsored seven amendments to the bill, six

Alex McKeon Interns In Office Of Sen. Keenan

Alex McKeon of Quincy recently completed an internship in the office of state Sen. John F. Keenan.

"Alex was an exemplary intern, and he represented his school and community very well," said Keenan, co-chairman of the Joint Committee on Public Health. "His energy, attitude and work ethic give me high hopes for the future of public service."

During his internship, McKeon conducted policy research, assisted with constituent service matters, and helped record and respond to correspondence from constituents and advocacy groups. McKeon's work was primarily focused on the state budget, and he supported the office during the weeks long process of debating, amending and passing a budget in the Senate.

McKeon, a senior at the Thayer Academy, is heading to Miami University of Ohio and plans to pursue a degree in sports management.

"Alex was a valuable asset during a very busy time period for the Senate. I was glad to have him, and wish him well in future endeavors," Keenan added.

Quincy Farmers Market Opens 31st Season Friday At Hancock Lot

The Quincy Farmers Market will celebrate the opening of its 31 season Friday, June 28 at 11:30 a.m. at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot, Quincy Center.

Over thirty small businesses and non-profits are committed to attend during the season. This is their third consecutive year of expansion.

Opening day features "Festooning," a 16-foot tall participatory public art installation, storytelling, an opportunity to speak with a Quincy-based author illustrator of children's picture books, a demonstration of Freestyle BMX bicycle stunt riding, live music, a new food vendor, coffee with a sustainability and social justice mission, two entrepreneurial bakers, aeroponics, biodynamically grown wine, locally created organic chips and salsa products, solar power and energy efficiency programs, gardening education, education about healthy cooking and healthcare coverage

"Festooning" is a 16-foot tall inflatable beehive which will host three storytellers and children with their parents inside throughout the day. The work is a collaboration of two artists.

Maria Molteni is a multimedia artist working with participatory soft sculpture. Colette Aliman is a video performance artist.

Both have extensive background in apiculture. Festooning is the lacework of bees, forming a bridge between frames of a honeycomb in a hive, by hanging together leg-to-leg. The more general idea is "individual parts linking together to form more complex and energized systems, a tool for interdisciplinary learning, social interaction, and celebration," says Molteni. Molteni will engage adults and children in her art throughout the day.

The Crane Public Library will also host stories at the market at 1 p.m. Then the children can taste honey with CIG Beekeeping. CIG is engaged in a research program with Arizona State University to introduce chemical treatment-free apiculture into Massachusetts in order to address Colony Collapse Disorder. They have helped start hives in Quincy.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources farmers markets generated a 66 percent increase in overall sales for Massachusetts's forty wineries in the first year of this statewide economic development program launched in 2011. This led to 29% of wineries planning an average increase in production of 38%, 53% of farm wineries planning to hire more employees, and 82% reporting an increase in visits to their farm wineries with a roughly 28% increase in visitors. This in turn helped farmers maintain 1,842 acres of open space with 439 acres devoted exclusively to grape or fruit production.

This collaborative initiative promotes Agricultural Tourism which includes the Quincy Farmers Market.

"According to a recent demographic study we ran, roughly one half of our fans on Facebook are coming in from outside Quincy," said market volunteer Kevin Dye. "Our following has exploded in the last six weeks approaching 2,000 members and our season has not even started. It is one of the largest, likely the fastest growing, and most actively engaged online social network in Quincy."

The Quincy Farmers Market and the City of Quincy helped make this happen. The market hosts several wineries on a rotating schedule. On opening day Zoll Cellars of Shrewsbury will be there to explain their innovation in biodynamic farming, a step beyond organic, offer tastings, and recommend pairings.

"It's not just about products," says Dye "We are approaching the Quincy Farmers Market as a local, experience economy, creative economy, a cultural economy, and engine of civic engagement. Our market is becoming a venue for the arts."

In the last two years the market hosted about 80 free, live music performances.

"Music ranged from Bach Cello Suites, to Hendrix on electric guitar, to a Brass Trio, to jazz renditions on flute and classical guitar of local American Celtic punk band The Dropkick Murphys," says Dye.

Susan Bill, accomplished classical violinist for the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, founder of the Atlantic Music School, and Artistic Director of the Atlantic Youth Orchestra, plays fiddle music to open the market. Quincy singer-songwriter Mike Delaney is stepping up to organize the early afternoon performances.

Other features at the Quincy Farmers Market includes freestyle BMX bicycle stunt riding, custom made soaps, coffee, baked goods,

"The market is now a great spot to have a cup of coffee, listen to live music, watch a performance, and engage in art, storytelling and education," says Market Manager Janet Little. "Opening day will feature education about gardening in an urban environment. For one day only we feature a booth on Aeroponics by Tower Gardens. Green City Growers install and teach about container and raised-bed gardening. The Wollaston Garden Club will be on hand to plant beans with children and address challenges specific to gardening in Quincy."

The Quincy Medical Center begins a series of healthy cooking demonstrations, especially targeting at-risk youth.

There will be other features and market founder Anneli Johnson will also be on hand to share information about the event and the market's history.

Wooden Shingles Replaced On Roof Of John Adams Birthplace

By SCOTT JACKSON

Work is currently ongoing to replace the wooden shingles on the roof of the John Adams Birthplace.

The roof of the house, located at 133 Franklin St., is topped with red cedar shingles that had been installed in the mid-1990s, according to Kevin Kelly, facility manager for the Adams National Historical Park. Wooden shingles typically have a 10-15 year lifespan, Kelly said, and the ones being replaced at the birthplace had deteriorated enough that replacement was necessary.

Crews from the National Park Service began the roof work on May 16, and by mid-July the project is expected to be completed. The site will remain open for tours during the process. The Park Service budgeted $60,000 for the repair work, though Kelly expects the project to be finished for less than that.

"We are utilizing a Park Service preservation crew out of Lowell," he said. "We were allotted $60,000 to do it but the good news is we might not reach that number. If we had to use a contractor we would have likely exceeded that."

The new shingles were treated over the winter with cedaricide, an organic chemical. Kelly explained that process should give the new shingles a lifespan of 20 years; similar shingles at other historic properties have been sprayed with cedaricide, with positive results.

"It seems to prolong the life, we've gotten fairly good results," Kelly said. "We took time over the winter to coat the shingles."

In addition to the roof work, the preservation crew also replaced a floor joist under the living room and small beam on the home's east side.

Similar work will take place next door at the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 2014. "Funding has been formulated to replace roof and other carpentry projects," Kelly said.

Markey Carries Quincy In U.S. Senate Victory

registered voters went to the polls Tuesday. It was Quincy's lowest voter turnout for a city-wide election since 2005 when only 25.02 percent cast ballots in a municipal election that did not include a contested mayor's race.

In Quincy, Markey defeated Gomez by 695 votes or 51.7 percent to 47.15 percent. Markey, a Bay State congressman since 1976, polled 7,889 votes while Gomez, a businessman and retired U.S. Navy SEAL, received 7,194 votes.

In precinct-by-precinct results, Markey won 21 precincts while Gomez finished first in eight of them: Ward 1 Precincts 1, 4 and 5; Ward 3 Precinct 4; Ward 4 Precincts 1 and 3; Ward 5 Precinct 4 and Ward 6 Precinct 5. They also tied each other in Ward 4 Precinct 2 polling 279 votes each.

A third candidate on the ballot, Richard A. Heos, received 76 votes in Quincy.

There were also 99 write-ins with most of those cast for Cong. Stephen Lynch of South Boston. Lynch, who represents Quincy in the new 8th District, had challenged Markey for the Democratic Senate nomination eight weeks ago.

The precinct with the highest turnout in Quincy was Ward 6 Precinct 5 in Squantum where 40.38 percent of voters went to the polls. The vote there was 540 for Gomez (55.33 percent) and 420 for Markey (43.03 percent).

Markey was declared the winner in Tuesday's election shortly after 9 p.m. Early returns had put Gomez in the lead but by 37 percent of the state-wide returns in, the momentum had shifted and Markey took a slim lead with less than 1,000 votes.

With 89 percent of the state-wide vote reporting as of press time, Markey had received 570,695 votes or 54 percent while Gomez had polled 480,454 votes or 46 percent.

The Markey-Gomez race failed to attract the interest of the state's last special U.S. Senate election three years ago when Republican Scott Brown shocked the state's political establishment by defeating Democratic state Attorney General Martha Coakley. In that special election held in January, 2010, Brown carried Quincy winning 20 of 30 precincts with 52 percent of the city's voters going to the polls.

Markey and Gomez each had luminaries travel to Massachusetts to support their campaigns.

Those stumping for Markey included President Barack Obama, former President Bill Clinton, First Lady Michelle Obama and Vice President Joseph Biden.

Markey shared campaign stops with former Republican Presidential nominee and Arizona Sen. John McCain and former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani.

Markey will fill the seat vacated by Kerry who resigned earlier this year to become the nation's 68th Secretary of State under President Obama. The term expires in January, 2015 and Markey is expected to seek a full six-year term in 17 months.

Some political pundits are predicting that Brown will challenge Markey for the U.S. Senate next year and not throw his hat into the 2014 governor's race.

Election Day - Nov. 4, 2014 - is 494 days from today (Thursday).

"The purpose of the Remand Order was to provide C-Mart with a fair chance to address traffic concerns and to ensure that the Council would maintain its focus on actual traffic data and analysis and thereby avoid a situation where traffic would be used as mere cover for a decision that was based on raw politics or improper bias," the appeal states. "That purpose was not fulfilled, as confirmed by the Council's terse written decision, which purports to deny C-Mart's Application solely on the basis of traffic concerns but is devoid of any meaningful analysis of traffic issues and does not come close to reflecting the type of traffic inquiry that was required under the Remand Order.

"The traffic evidence that was presented during the hearing demonstrates that the Project is feasible: the City's comments during the proceedings and the Council's decision reflect the view that no reasonable use of C-Mart's Property is permissible."

In response to the appeal, City Solicitor Jim Timmins said traffic concerns were the only reason the proposal was rejected.

"We have invested a lot of time and focus on this permit," Timmins said Tuesday. "It is unfair and inaccurate for Mr. Fang to say otherwise. He didn't get the outcome he wanted, but the problem was the traffic problems, which the engineers consulted on for over six months, were never adequately address."

The allegations against the mayor, Timmins added, were based on guesswork and inaccurate.

"The allegations are based on guesswork and are completely inaccurate. Mr. Fang and his counselors don't understand the city councillors are very independent," he said.

Coordinated By D.A. Michael Morrissey

Over 100 Veterans Attend Summit

More than 100 Norfolk County Veterans, some in uniform and some in civilian clothes, attended District Attorney Michael Morrissey's first Veterans Summit. They served in the Middle East, Korea, southeast and central Asia, and this month they came together in Norwood to learn about ways they can serve again.

"We invited all of Norfolk County's Veterans Services Officers to our Canton office this spring and asked their help identifying the greatest needs and issues they saw for the people they are charged with serving," Morrissey said after the event. "Their answer was access to services for Veterans, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and readjustment challenges, substance abuse and unfamiliarity with the Norfolk County Veterans Court. That became the template for the Summit."

Morrissey said he considers it imperative for government at every level to be looking for ways to support those who have served in uniform. He said his work with the Veterans Officers is ongoing, looking for programs and avenues to support those who have served.

The Summit featured Operation Iraqi Freedom Veteran Kevin Lambert, who now works for the state's Department of Veterans Services, presenting the "Battlemind," program about transitioning from combat and service to home and civilian life. It is useful both for the Veteran facing challenges personally and those who work to help fellow Vets navigate adjusting.

Judge Mary Hogan Sullivan, her son a US Marine, presides over the Norfolk County Veterans Court that she formed with the support and partnership of District Attorney. The Judge moderated a panel explaining that first-in-New England program designed to connect court-involved Veterans with the services they need to right their paths.

State Rep. John Rogers, of Norwood spoke briefly about the legislative measures he is trying to implement to support the Veterans Court and its mission. Established Veterans also learned how they can become involved by serving as formal mentors for men and women who are involved in the Veterans Court program.

"Military service carries the obvious sacrifice of leaving the safety of home to place yourself in harm's way," Morrissey said following the June 12 event. "It can also exact a less obvious price, as the training and experience that shapes young men and women into effective warriors become obstacles to re-entering civilian life."

"What we can do to help take down those obstacles, we are determined to do."

Thomas Madden Awarded Jackie O'Neil Scholarship

Thomas M. Madden of Quincy was recently presented a $1,000 Jackie O'Neil Scholarship at a recent awards ceremony in Boston.

The Jackie O'Neil Scholarship is awarded annually by the Building Trades Training Directors Association in honor of John "Jackie" O'Neil, a 40 year member of Plasterers and Cement Masons Local 534. Mr. O'Neil served for 25 years as the Apprentice Coordinator for Local 534 when he became a key influential force in Massachusetts apprenticeship.

The scholarship is awarded to the sons and daughters of union members in recognition of O'Neil's countless contributions to education and training and the American labor movement.

Tom's father, Thomas P. Madden, is a member of IBEW Local 103.

"Being a member of a family closely associated with unions for two generations, I appreciate the labor movement's cause to improve and protect the lives of the American worker," Tom said.

Atop Penn's Hill on Franklin Street stands a stone monument known as the Abigail Adams Cairn. From this vantage point on June 17, 1775, as the Battle of Bunker Hill raged on, Abigail Adams and her son, John Quincy watched the burning of Charlestown.

The following day, Abigail penned a heart-wrenching and prophetic letter to John Adams, then serving in the Second Continental Congress in Philadelphia: Sunday June 18 1775 Dearest Friend

The Day, perhaps the decisive Day is come on which the fate of America depends. My bursting Heart must find vent at my pen. I have just heard that our Dear Friend Dr Warren is no more but fell gloriously fighting for his Country... Great is our loss.

The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong—but the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people. Trust in him at all times ye people pour out your hearts before him. God is a refuge for us. Charlestown is laid in ashes. The Battle began upon our intrenchments upon Bunkers Hill, a Saturday morning about 3 o'clock and has not ceased yet and tis now 3 o'clock Sabbath afternoon.

Tis Expected they will come out over the Neck to night, and a Dreadful Battle must ensue. ... The constant roar of the cannon (is so) distressing that we cannot Eat Drink or Sleep. May we be supported and sustained in the dreadful conflict...

Seven decades later, John Quincy Adams would recall his feelings of that fateful day in a letter to Joseph Sturge, an English philanthropist and abolitionist:

The year 1775 was the eighth year of my age... on the 17th Of June lighted the fires of Charlestown... I saw with my own eyes those fires, and heard Britannia's thunders in the Battle of Bunker's hill and witnessed the tears of my mother and mingled with them my own, at the fall of Warren a dear friend of my father, and beloved Physician to me.

"Rock Solid Security"

Will Be Hard-Wired With Battery Back-Up Updated Carbon Monoxide, Smoke Detectors For Housing Authority Units

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Carbon monoxide and smoke detectors were the hot topic at last Wednesday's meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Maintenance Director David Ferris discussed plans for updating current smoke and CO detectors to singular, combination units which meet state and Department of Housing and Community Development regulations.

"We're upgrading detectors wherever we change them now in every development—high rises, elderly, family—that's being done," he said. "We eliminate that wall-hung one with the batteries and we're replacing the old detector with the new smoke and CO detector which, by code, has to talk to you, has to tell you it's a fire evacuation and it has to tell you it's a CO evacuation so it distinguishes one from the other."

According to Ferris, all new detectors will be hard-wired, allowing them to interconnect with other detectors within individual units, and will also be backed up by 9-volt batteries in case of malfunction or deliberate tampering.

"I'm eliminating all those battery operated ones that the tenants take down and use the batteries," he said. "It's a 9-volt, which there's not much use for 9-volt batteries anymore. Everyone's using AA batteries or AAA batteries. That eliminates residents taking them and using them for themselves."

The changeover also eliminates the need for constant maintenance.

"Of course you don't have the manpower to monitor that stuff; to change batteries, to continuously do that with the amount of detectors we have in the authority," he said, "so what I started doing a year ago was to eliminate that one device and move to a dual, talking smoke and CO detector hung in the proper place, not that these [current detectors] weren't."

Ferris suggested that clauses be added to apartment rental lease forms to dissuade the removal of backup batteries from the alarms. "I'm going to talk with staff here about now putting in a violation in their moving package," he said, noting that tampering with the devices may result in fines of $1,000 or more.

Efforts to upgrade the detectors will focus mainly on Sawyer Towers and Tobin Towers, in addition to several other state-owned buildings as the current law does not apply to federal properties.

"I think it's a good thing. It's a win-win for us," said Ferris. "We're going to use those [alarms] on the state developments."

New QHA Executive Director Jim Lydon took the opportunity to reflect on his first few weeks as executive director of the housing authority, thanking staff and vocalizing his plans for the future of affordable housing in Quincy.

"I've spent two and a half weeks being the executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority and I've got to tell everybody that I really couldn't be happier," he said. "I work with the greatest group of residents that anyone could ever hope to encounter."

"Two of the residents groups had 'welcome Jim' cakes for me to the extent that the baker down at Stop & Shop wanted to know who the heck Jim was," joked Lydon.

The new director wasted no time in assuming his duties. "I've begun to reach out in some unique directions for the housing authority that we have talked about both during the interview process and respective meetings that I've had," he said. "We've communicated with the Urban Land Institute (ULI) about doing a technical assistance panel in Germantown."

In fact, Lydon has contacted the ULI regarding a possible redesign of housing authority properties.

"One of the first letters I sent out was sent to the Urban Land Institute. I asked them very simply to look at the aesthetics of German town."

Lydon has also gotten in touch with other groups such as the Manet Community Health Center and the local YMCA.

"I will be having further meetings with these organizations," said Lydon. "Both organizations have indicated that they would really like to increase the services that they provide for the residents of Quincy public housing."

Lydon isn't daunted by what's before him. "We've got a lot ahead of us to accomplish but I think in two and a half weeks we've made some great strides and shown the direction we want to bring the housing authority in," he said.

8-1 Vote OKs Bond For QHS Demolition; 5-4 Vote Cuts $1.5M In Landscaping

By SCOTT JACKSON

A bond to pay for demolition of the old Quincy High building was approved by the City Council during the council's most recent meeting, but only after $1.5 million was cut from the plan.

During a previous meeting the council received information on costs associated with tearing down the building, completing a wall of the new school building, and landscaping the site. No vote was taken that night, June 10, because councillors said not enough information had been provided to them. The day after the meeting they received the requested information from city officials, and the City Council reconsidered the bond during their June 17 meeting.

The costs associated with tearing down the school and landscaping the site would total about $3.1 million. Tearing down the school would cost $687,000—that money is in the bond that was used to construct the new building.

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed a $2.5 million bond to pay other costs, including $745,000 to complete a wall of the new school that would be left exposed, $150,000 to hire a landscape architect and engineer to draw up a plan to use the site after demolition, and $1.5 million for the actual landscaping. Councillor Doug Gutro proposed cutting $1.5 million from the bond because there were no details for the landscaping.

"I'm happy to vote for most of this, but I'd like to cut $1.5 million out of it,"

Gutro said. "When we get the specific details from the landscape architect and engineer services, which I would anticipate would probably come late summer or early fall, we could get a better sense and cast a vote at that point."

Gutro's motion to cut the $1.5 million was approved by a 5-4 vote, with Councillors Brad Croall, Joe Finn, Kirsten Hughes, and Margaret Laforest supporting the reduction. The $1 million bond was subsequently approved by an 8-1 vote, with Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci opposed.

Demolition of the building is expected to take place this summer while class is out of session. Once that is completed the exposed wall will be completed.

Summer Playground Program

The Quincy Recreation Department summer playground program will begin Monday, July 1st at 14 locations with supervised activities for boys and girls ages 6 – 16, Recreation Director Barry Welch announces.

The playgrounds are open from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, weather permitting. There will be no program on Thursday, July 4th.

The free program offers supervised activities that include active games and sports; weekly sports competitions, as well as arts and crafts. There are special events and weekly field trips to local attractions. In addition to the high school and college staff members who are assigned to each playground, a sports specialist and an arts and crafts specialist visit each location in a regular rotation. Registration is done at the playground and continues throughout the summer to accommodate youngsters who may return from vacation or summer school programs. Participants must be residents of the City of Quincy, and may attend the program of their choice.

The locations of the supervised playgrounds are:

Faxon Park, Kincaide Park/Sterling Middle School Park, O'Rourke Playground, Forbes Hill Playground, Perkins Playground, Arthur Boyson Park/Heron Road, Snug Harbor Playground/Palmer Park, LaBrequette Field, Fore River Field, Wendall Moses Playground/Squantum, Bishop Playground/Montclair, Fenno Street Courts, and Beechwood Knoll Playground, Mass Field Playground.

The playgrounds will be staffed until Tuesday, Aug. 13. For more information, call 617-376-1394.

Sports & More Clinics, Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department kicks off the 2013 Summer Sports and More Clinics & Workshops in July.

Enrollment is limited. Call the Recreation office at 617-376-1394 or visit the Quincy Recreation web site, www.QuincyRec.com, for further information.

Limited openings still exist for three workshops and clinics that will be conducted July 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 5th.

The Girls Basketball clinic will be held at North Quincy High School. This is an instructional program with an emphasis on the fundamentals: passing, shooting, rebounding, dribbling and defensive skills through a complete series of drills and scrimmages and will be run 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The cost for the clinic is $66 and includes a t-shirt for each participant. The clinic is open to participants entering grades 3–9.

The Sports & More Clinic will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department, located at One Merrymount Parkway.

The clinic provides a week of traditional activities under supervision that will include group games and organized play like capture the flag, dodge ball, scavenger hunts, board games, arts and crafts, sports and more.

This recreational experience will be planned and informal; spontaneous, and organized with plenty of fun. The clinic is open to boys and girls entering grades 3–9, and will run from 8:30

Jiarui Li Awarded Scholarship, Stipend To BU's PROMYS Program

Boston University's summer Program in Mathematics for Young Scientists (PROMYS) is not for everybody. Just for a start, the application includes a very difficult mathematics test. Approximately sixty applicants are accepted from all over the country. These young people, high school juniors, move to Boston University for six weeks and immerse themselves in solving a large assortment of unusually challenging problems in number theory.

However, through this effort these budding mathematicians practice the art of mathematical discovery—numerical exploration, formulation and critique of conjectures, and techniques of proof and generalization. They attend lectures, listen to guest speakers, work with college-age mentors from prestigious universities, and participate in group research. If so inclined, they may also take part in more advanced seminars in wavelet transformations, geometry and symmetry, and representations of finite groups.

It takes a very special person to find his heart beating faster as he considers this prospect. But just such a person is Quincy High School's Jiaui "Jerry" Li. Jerry is a math prodigy in a high school that loves math.

There are over 60 members in Quincy High School's chapter of Mu Alpha Theta, the National Honor Society for Mathematics. Jerry is their leader, their mentor and their champion. The entire club participates in monthly mathematical contests, but Jerry goes much farther. He has written to the contest creators, Steven Conrad and Daniel Flegler, making several corrections and suggestions to their problem sets. These professionals were so grateful for his, editing that they thanked him with a six-volume set of contests, inscribing their thanks for his excellent proofreading.

Not only was Jerry accepted to the BU PROMYS program, he received a full scholarship of $3,300 as well as a stipend of $1,500. Such honors are reserved for only the most promising of this elite fellowship.

Jerry said he looks forward to improving his ability to work on a team, as well as the opportunity to hone his math skills.

"I am very excited about this summer," said Jerry. "I always assumed that mathematics was about individual achievements, but now I understand that the truth is very different. Mathematicians work together all the time, producing valuable arguments and interesting ideas. On the other hand, each individual contribution to the team is like a star in the sky."

House Members Tackles EBT Reform

By RON MARIANO

The Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA) has been garnering headlines recently following a state audit which uncovered some problems with fraud and abuse in benefit programs they administer. The House of Representatives has been working over the course of the last two years to implement changes and reforms which enhance oversight and accountability of these programs.

The programs run by DTA such as the Electronic Benefit Transfer program (EBT) and the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), commonly known as food stamps, are designed to provide a safety net for our poorest and most vulnerable residents who are unable to make ends meet and provide food and other basic necessities for their families. Stories of fraud and abuse should anger all of us, as both a waste of taxpayer dollars and because they take away from those legitimately in need.

We began putting significant changes in place through an EBT reform bill that was passed last year. Last week the House of Representatives advanced these efforts by taking immediate action in light of the audit findings to update oversight measures and affirm our commitment to rooting out fraud and preventing EBT abuse.

This new legislation requires a photo ID on EBT cards for each eligible household member over the age of 18. It also establishes a Bureau of Program Integrity within the Executive Office of Health and Human Services (EOHHS) which will be responsible for monitoring and correcting deficiencies in the programs administered by the office. The bureau will be directed by a deputy inspector general appointed by the Inspector General, assuring that this watchdog role will be filled by an outsider specifically focused on finding and preventing dollars from being wasted or misappropriated.

The legislation requires that EOHHS establish a computerized integrated eligibility system (IES) to monitor eligibility requirements before funds are dispersed in order to avoid duplication and deter fraud. The IES is mandated to cross-check social security numbers of applicants with information from over 20 state and federal databases, and requires them to file an annual status report on the IES that includes specifics on the number of people disqualified from public assistance following a discrepancy found by the IES. The bill also allows for the sharing of tax return information with all agencies that provide benefit programs. It also requires businesses to apply online to accept EBT cards at point of sale, and requires the development of a system in which DTA will work with law enforcement agencies to use fingerprinting comparisons in instances of trafficking and fraud. Retailers who violate EBT prohibitions will also face increased fines. Each of these changes are common sense reforms utilizing technology to share information and improve efficiency. DTA uses an old computer system which lacks the ability to share information with other agencies. The House understands that an investment in modern technology will go a long way towards making these programs run more efficiently.

Out-of-state EBT card use, except in states contiguous to Massachusetts, is now specifically prohibited as well. These reforms are all in addition to previous work done to prohibit certain purchases using EBT cards and criminalize the use of an EBT card in any manner not authorized by law.

Representative Tackey Chan and I both supported all of these changes. We know that DTA, and indeed every agency in state government, must work continuously and constantly to improve, modernize and fine-tune systems which ensure that state funds are being used appropriately and as intended. Fraud and abuse of those dollars cannot be tolerated in any form. We all must work together to make sure that this happens and continues, but let us not vilify any agency or program which works to serve and protect those amongst us most in need.

Ronald Mariano
House Majority Leader
3rd Norfolk District

Comprehensive Welfare Reform Bill

of which were adopted into the final version. Two of the amendments dealt with public housing benefits.

Recognizing the concern that public housing recipients may be taking long absences and trips that bring into question their need for a housing unit, while so many others are on a waiting list, Keenan's amendment established a presumption that after a 30 day absence from Massachusetts, a public housing recipient has abandoned residency, unless the recipient can show otherwise.

The bill also allows for a fraud risk assessment system that would assign recipients into high- or low-risk client groups, prompting differing levels of scrutiny for potential fraud. Keenan says he supported the use of smart technology and systems to identify risks for fraud, but worried that without proper safeguards such a system would result in discriminatory profiling, especially if contracted out to a private vendor. He lead an amendment to adopt language explicitly prohibiting risk classifications based on profiling by race, gender, nationality, religion or disability status. Keenan also joined with Senators Michael Rush (D - West Roxbury) and James Welch (D - West Springfield) to establish stricter penalties for stores that are negligent in preventing fraud, by repeatedly failing to check EBT card photographs. The bill now includes fines for up to three offenses, and upon a fourth offense within the same year would allow the DTA to review and revoke a store's authorization to accept EBT payments.

These penalties correspond to a new requirement to include photographs on EBT cards for all recipients over the age of 18. Other fraud prevention measures include a requirement that applicants timely file verified social security numbers, and that application and third party verification of work participation forms be signed under penalty of perjury.

The bill would also provide resources to the DTA to hire additional fraud investigators, and specialized case managers to work on job placements for those who would otherwise be at the most risk of long-term dependence.

The Senate EBT reform bill now goes to the House of Representatives for consideration.

oper Beal/Street-Works as part of their Quincy Center project. The $1.6 billion development will create more than 3.5 million square feet of retail, office, and residential space throughout a 50-acre area of the downtown.

"This project will employ thousands and create 3.5 million square feet of business, retail, and residential space," U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch said. "The City of Quincy along with their partner Beal/Street-Works is setting a precedent for city redevelopment after the recession across the United States. This project has received national recognition for its creativity and will be used by cities across the nation as a model for city development."

Projects such as the Quincy Center redevelopment, Lynch continued, are key because of the importance cities have.

"As President John F. Kennedy once said 'we will neglect our cities to our peril, for in neglecting them we neglect the nation,'" Lynch said. "Cities like Quincy are at the very heart of our country — they are at the heart of our economy, culture, society, and especially in Quincy our history. This project demonstrates a commitment to maintaining and promoting the growth of infrastructure, businesses and jobs that are so valuable to the economy and culture of our cities."

As part of the $120 million Merchants Row project, the developers will construct two new buildings on the block surrounded by Hancock and Chestnut Streets and Cottage Avenue. Demolition on the block began last week as the buildings on Hancock Street were razed. A third building on Chestnut is expected to be torn down today (Thursday).

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH spoke Monday at the groundbreaking for the Merchants Row project, the first step in the $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center. At right is a 3-D model of the new downtown, which will be completed in its entirety in 2020. "We're a city on the move — strap yourself in," the mayor said, "we're going." With Koch on the platform (left to right) are Sen. John Keenan, U.S. Rep Stephen F. Lynch, and former U.S. Rep. William Delahunt.

Located at the corner of Chestnut Street and Cottage Avenue, in what is currently a parking lot, will be the 15-story Kilroy. At approximately 175 feet tall, it will become the tallest building in Quincy once completed, though buildings up to 20 stories high could be constructed elsewhere in the downtown as part of the Beal/Street-Works redevelopment. The other new building is the five-story Granite Trust Lofts.

Combined the buildings will have 289 residential units — the initial proposal had 306 total units, but the developer reduced the total number to allow for larger units. In addition the Merchants Row project will include 35,000 square feet of new retail space and 25,000 of renovated office space in the Granite Trust Building

"This project in particular symbolizes what we believe all of the downtown redevelopment will be. It's a mix of uses that are very diverse," said Ken Narva, Street-Works co-founder and managing partner. "It's about creating really interesting public places. It's about marrying old, which is the landmark 1400, with new development. And it's really about designing and creating something from the street up, and it has to reflect the culture, the personality, and the character of the city it's in."

Included in the $1.6 billion price tag for the Quincy Center project is $289 million worth of implementing public improvements, including new utilities, widened sidewalks, and repaired roads, that the developers will construct and the city will purchase with revenue from the downtown. Building at 1400 Hancock St., which will be renovated as part of the Merchants Row project.

from the downtown.

The project also includes $50 million worth of core public improvements — namely the re-routing of Town Brook, construction of Adams Green, and the building of the Cliveden Street Bridge — that the city must finance as construction continues. The state gave Quincy a $10.1 million MassWorks grant for the Town Brook re-alignment, which is nearly finished, and is reviewing the city's application for $40 million in I-Cubed money for the bridge and Adams Green park — the federal government has already agreed to pay $6 million for street improvements related to the Adams Green project.

Speaking at the groundbreaking, Greg Bialecki, Massachusetts' secretary of housing and economic development, said Gov. Deval Patrick's administration made the financial commitment to Quincy because the project is important to the state as a whole.

"We're proud of our part because it's not important just for Quincy but it's important for Massachusetts," Bialecki said. "We've been neglecting our cities in the United States over the last couple decades. That has not only been not good for the cities but it hasn't been good for any of us. Massachusetts is a state that is blessed with so many great cities with long traditions — not all of them are home of presidents like Quincy — and Massachusetts is always going to be at its most successful when we make sure we help all these cities put their best foot forward."

Planning for the Quincy Center project began nearly a decade ago during a series of community meetings and charettes, or workshops, where residents were able to voice their opinion on the future of the downtown. Sen. John Keenan recalled those early meetings, which helped encourage Street-Works to commit to redeveloping the area.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

WORDS OF WISDOM

When there is enough space in the mouth to accommodate the "wisdom teeth" (third molars), which do not appear until the late teens or early twenties, they can grow in normally to become fully functional. However, wisdom teeth are candidates for extraction when they are impacted or trapped in the bone under the gums in a crowded jaw. Otherwise, they may tend to grow sideways to find space, forcing adjacent molars out of place in the process. Partially erupted wisdom teeth also pose a danger because they leave an opening at the gum line that invites bacteria to enter and cause infection. When extraction of the wisdom teeth is indicated, the surgery can be performed at any age.

Many people develop impacted wisdom teeth. They may erupt only partially or not at all. Some dentists and oral surgeons recommend wisdom teeth extraction even if impacted teeth aren't causing problems, as a preventive measure against potential future problems. Our friendly and knowledgeable staff will provide you and your family with the professional care and personal attention you deserve. Our goal is to help you enjoy your teeth throughout a lifetime. Ground Broken For $120M Merchants Row Project

Works to commit to redeveloping Quincy Center. He said that led to the a partnership, which also involved officials at all levels of government working under Mayor Thomas Koch after he came into office.

"What they saw at that charette was a city that was ready, ready, ready and anxious for change and they jumped in thankfully for the City of Quincy," Keenan said. "The City of Quincy, recognizing that the future was ours, took off and ran with it, worked with Street-Works, worked with everyone involved — state, federal, local — under the direction of Mayor Koch. The result is what we see before us. Just an incredible project that truly is a model, not only here in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, but what has become a model for development across the country."

Shortly after Street-Works reached an agreement to redevelop Quincy Center, they negotiated a partnership with Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, a business that's headquartered across Chestnut Street from the Merchants Row project. The mayor said the agreement between those two companies was key to residents believing in the project.

"I knew we had a great partner in Street-Works," Koch said. "But early on, quietly across the road there, a quiet company that's been in Quincy for 150 years — Quincy Mutual Fire — stepped in and became an investor with Street-Works. Once you say at a public meeting that a 150-year-old Quincy company is part of the project, you could see a sense of belief on folks."

Quincy Mutual CEO and President Doug Briggs said the Quincy Center redevelopment is important to him and his company's employees. He believes the project, once completed, will make the downtown more vibrant than it was a half century ago, when it was known as Shopper's Town, USA.

"What happens in Quincy Center matters to us greatly and also matters to me personally. My wife was born in Wollaston and raised in Wollaston and I've been here for many, many years. Half of our 250 employees either live in the city or one of the contiguous communities," Briggs said. "The new Quincy will eclipse the heyday of the 50s and 60s."

Other speakers said the project highlights the best possible results of a partnership between a private company, and the local, state, and federal governments.

"This project is historical — there isn't a week that goes by where I'm not stopped and asked about what's happening here in downtown Quincy," House Majority Leader Ron Mariano said. "It is truly a landmark and historical public/private partnership, of which I am particularly very proud."

"Things in government never happen fast," City Council President Michael McFarland added. "But when you get a bunch of very concerned people and very committed people behind a project, and you have federal, state, and local officials behind that project you can move mountains. And we have moved a mountain."

McFarland also praised Koch for his willingness to take on such a large development.

"For the mayor to be able to pull this off," McFarland said, "while running a city at the same point in time took three things. Obviously some vision and a very talented team of bankers, lawyers, architects, and planners. But it also took a ton of chutzpah."

Narva said he and partner Richard Heapes agreed to the redevelopment one day after meeting Koch in 2007, and said it wouldn't have happened if Koch wasn't willing to bet his political future on the project.

"You can have all the vision in the world. You can dream about great projects. As a private entity you can bring capital to the table," Narva said. "But unless you have visionary, courageous public leader who is willing to stand up for the long term, put his own political career at risk in order to support and make the hard decisions you stand no chance."

The Merchants Row project is expected to be entirely completed by the end of 2014. The Granite Trust Lofts building is scheduled to open first, in July 2014. The Kilroy will open in three phases in September, November, and December of that year.

It will take seven years, until 2020, for the entire Quincy Center project to be completed. Suffolk Construction has signed on as the master contractor for whole redevelopment, and Suffolk CEO John Fish said his company, and the unions who will work for the company, won't let the city down.

"I can assure you as the owner of this organization we will not let you down, and the unions will not let you down," Fish said. "The unions have been our best partner on this particular project. Since day one four-and-a-half years ago they have been absolutely spectacular. The unions' sweat and blood sits on this site."

There could be more than a dozen additional groundbreakings in the future, Narva said, and the next one will happen near the Parkingway within 12 months.

"We have five to seven years and we believe as many as 15 more groundbreakings. This is just the first, and you will see the next within 12 months," Narva said. "It will be a lot bigger, because it will be west of Hancock and a lot of the retail and more residential and office will take form."

Among those in attendance for the groundbreaking was former Mayor James Sheets. Koch served as Sheets' executive secretary before being appointed head of the Park Department. Following the groundbreaking, Sheets said he is optimistic about the future of Quincy Center.

"The amazing thing here is that there's been a progression of decisions made by different mayors, 'let's get this project going forward,'" Sheets said. "What [Koch] is doing has risk and he's taking that risk because he believes in the city and he believes in the people in the city and he's going to be successful."

"Change is happening more rapidly today than ever in the history of this country and you have to control change or it controls you. He's controlling change. He, along with all the others, are basically providing a plan to do just that. He's doing a great job and it's going to be successful."

"When you look and see John Fish up there and see Street-Works and all these powerful people who know how to evaluate prospective jobs, you realize that some of the best minds in

YOU'VE GOT SOME NERVE

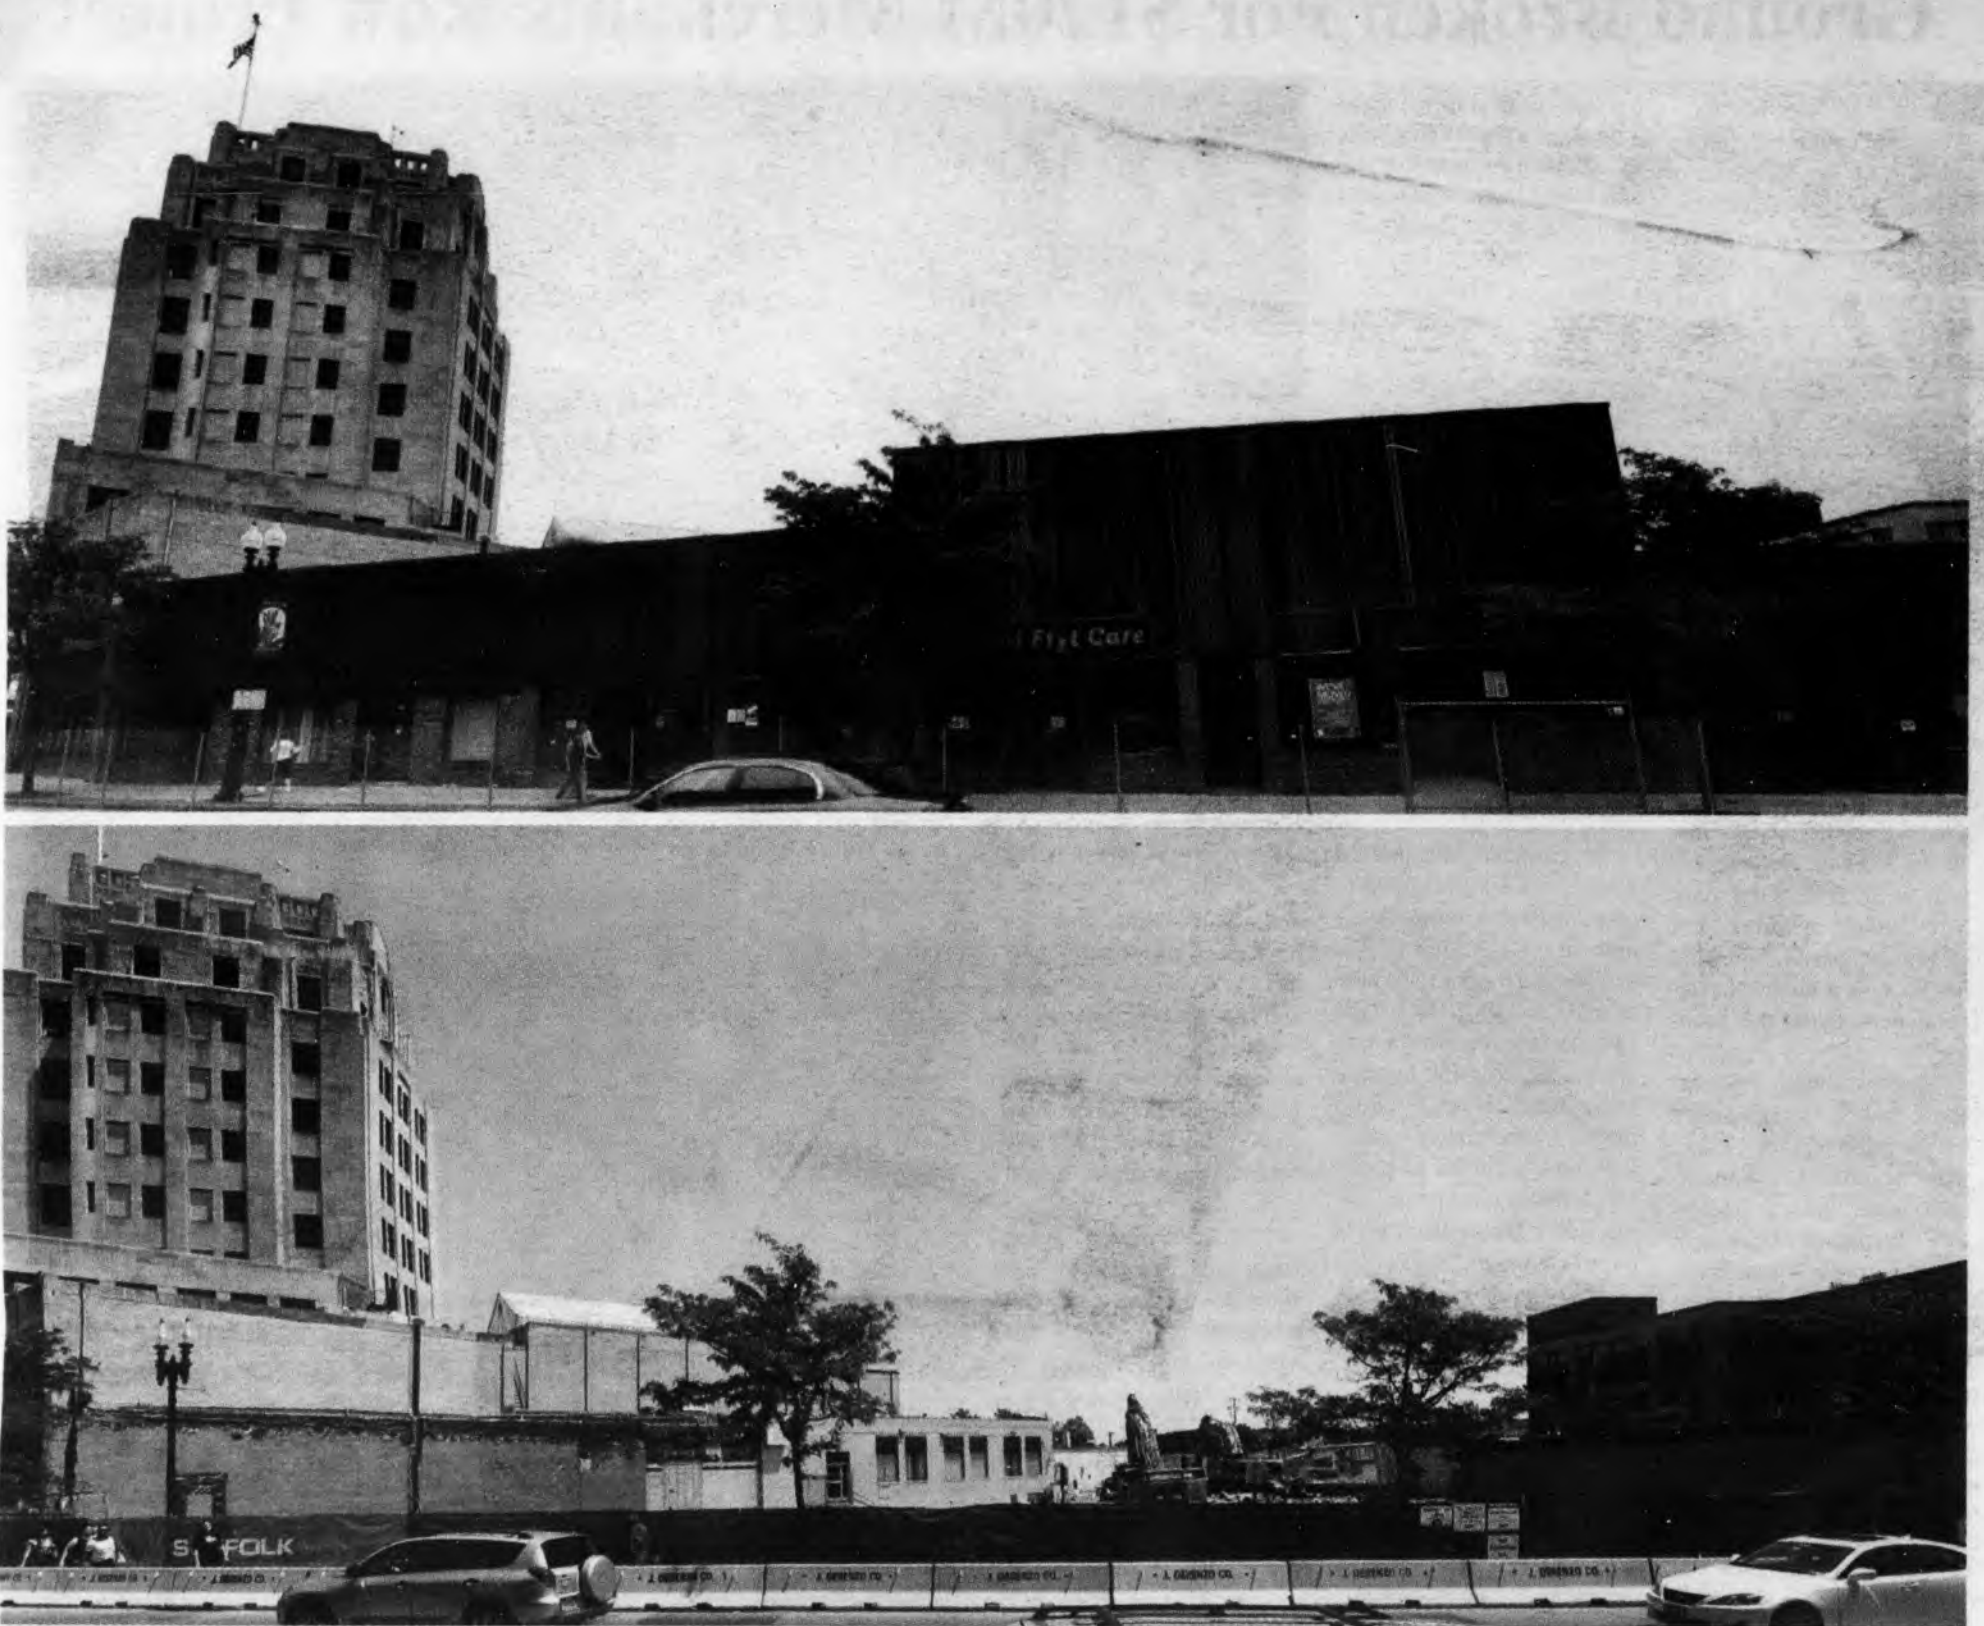

Pain that radiates down the lower back through the buttocks to the lower leg and worsens while sitting, bending, or straining, may be due to "sciatica." This condition results from pressure on one of the nerve roots that make up the sciatic nerve, which is formed in the pelvis from several spinal nerves emerging from the vertebral column. When these nerve roots become compressed or inflamed, pain in the backside and a tingling sensation in the leg may result. Causes include herniated disc, spinal stenosis, and spondylolisthesis. If surgery is not necessary, 90% of sciatica cases caused by herniation will self-resolve within two months. In the meantime, chiropractic treatment can reduce nerve impedance, stabilize the spine, and help prevent recurrence.

Sciatic pain can vary from infrequent and irritating to constant and incapacitating. It's a condition so widespread that many people think they can self-treat it or just follow another person's advice for how to relieve the pain. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can prescribe exercises designed to help develop strong muscles, along with instructions on good nutrition, posture and sleeping habits. Buildings Razed For Merchants Row Development

MERCHANTS ROW will be constructed on this site as seen from the roof of the Granite Trust Building in Quincy Center. Last week, demolition crews took down two buildings that made up some of the low numbers of the 1400 block of Hancock Street (right half of the photo above). In the top left portion of the aerial photo is the parking lot bordered by Chestnut Street (left) and Cottage Avenue. This is where The Kilroy - a 15-story building that will feature 240 residential units - will be constructed. Once completed, The Kilroy - named in honor of the famed World War II ship inspector James Kilroy who worked at the Quincy Fore River Shipyard - will be the tallest building in Quincy Center. The five-story Granite Trust Lofts building will rise next to the Granite Trust Building on Hancock Street. The small building on Chestnut Street (visible here just beyond the brick chimney on the left) was scheduled for demolition this week.

On Saturday, June 15 at approximately 11:19 a.m., Officer James Sullivan was dispatched to the station to speak with a victim of a past domestic that occurred in the early morning hours. The Officer met with the victim and her Mental Health Counselor. The victim was very upset, crying and shaking to the point that she couldn't talk. Her counselor told the Officer that the victim is from Brazil and speaks broken English.

The victim calmed down and was able to say that she had a verbal argument around 2 a.m. inside their apartment. She said that they dated for about two years and got married six months ago. The victim said that their relationship was wonderful prior to marriage - she received gifts, flowers, expensive vacations, etc., but once married, she said her husband drastically changed, becoming very possessive and verbally/psychologically violent towards her. She added that he embarrassed and degraded her often. She said that he would stand over her and watch her sleep and this "creeped" her out. He would also make her say, "Please" before every sentence that she spoke to him.

She was trembling uncontrollably while giving details of the past six months. She continued by saying that she had to leave her job due to the verbal abuse and being forced to stay up late hours. She said she couldn't function due to lack of sleep and having to get the 5 a.m. train into Boston. The past three weeks she has been unable to sleep and eat properly due to the stressful situation. The victim then blurted out, "He will kill me if he finds out I am doing this."

When asked if there was any physical violence, the victim said there was none. She did add that she has called the DOVE hotline and has attended two sessions. She has also reached out to Interfaith Social Services and was assigned a RN/Mental health counselor. When Officer Sullivan reviewed the domestic violence Law in depth, the victim said, "I am in fear and I think he will kill me." The Officer then contacted the on-call Judge and explained the situation. The Judge issued a temporary Emergency 209A Restraining Order against the husband.

Officer Sullivan was able to get a photo of the husband/suspect and description of his motor vehicle. The victim said that her husband often would not come home and thinks he lives a double life. She stated that he is very possessive and won't let her leave on her own or have friends. She added that he will not let her bring her family members here or leave to visit family in Brazil. This behavior all started after they got married.

Officer Sullivan went to their residence to serve the Emergency Restraining order in hand, but he was not home and his car was gone. The victim was still upset and shaking uncontrollably. The victim told the Officer that her husband owns a boat and keeps it at Marina Bay. A check of the boat showed that it was open but on one was on or inside it. The Officer then asked the victim to send her husband a text inquiring where he was, which she did, but he did not answer. The description of the suspect's car was given out to all units. Soon after, Officers located the suspect's vehicle at the parking lot of their residence.

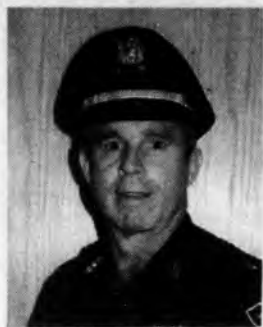

Officer Sullivan knocked on the door and was greeted by the suspect. As the Officer explained to the suspect that he was being issued an Emergency Restraining Order, the suspect seemed very nervous and started to shake. Officer Sullivan told the suspect that he had to vacate the residence and could not have any contact "in any way...even by a text message." The suspect said he understood.

After about fifteen minutes of the suspect gathering his belongings, he was escorted from the building. The keys to the residence and mailbox were also taken from the suspect.

As Officer Sullivan arrived at the station to file his report, the victim called "911" to report that she just received a text message from her husband. Officers responded to the area of the residence and the marina to look for the husband/suspect, who had violated the restraining order by contacting the victim. Officers located the suspect's car at the marina and soon after Officer Mark Smith spotted the suspect and placed him under arrest. Meanwhile, Officer Sullivan met with the victim and read the text which said, "Just got back. Let's talk and have a good weekend." The time stamp confirmed that the message was sent after the Emergency Order had been served.

The suspect, a 51 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Violation of Protective Order."

checks at the Wollaston Wine & Liquor store (who were working cooperatively with the Police) under the "Cops in Shops" grant. The Officers were looking for minors attempting to make alcohol purchases or for adults to make the purchase for a minor.

While monitoring the area, the Officers observed two males pacing back and forth in the parking lot for several minutes. One of the males eventually entered the store and exited several minutes later with a bottle of alcohol in a brown paper bag that he had purchased. This male approached the second male and handed him the bottle, which he then put into a back pack. Believing that the male who put the bottle in his backpack may be under the legal age of 21 since he did not go into the store, the Officers approached the two males, identified themselves as Police Officers (with badges around our necks) and engaged them in conversation.

The male who entered the store provided a Mass ID however; the second male stated he lost his. The second male provided a name and address to the Officers. Officer Parisi, who was part of Operation "Rude Awakening," the warrant sweep held a week earlier, recognized the second male because he actually went to this male's apartment looking for him. This male gave the name and date of birth of his brother. When confronted with this information, the second male/suspect 1 confirmed his true identity and was placed into custody. While performing a search of suspect 1, Officer Parisi found three individually wrapped plastic bags hidden in a cigarette container in the suspect's left front pocket.

Officer Parisi knew that people who sell illegal narcotics will often times package them in this manner. Located in another pocket were a silver box cutter and a folding black handled knife. Suspect 1, a 22 year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Possession of Class D (Marijuana) with the intent to distribute, Possession of a dangerous Weapon Pursuant to an Arrest Warrant and two outstanding Default Warrants.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On Sunday, June 16 at approximately 8:45 p.m., Officers James Parisi and David Zupkofska were dispatched to Presidential Drive for a reported disorder. The caller initially reported that a female was jumping on a car hood, however, this soon changed to the car driving away with the female hanging from the hood. Further updates indicated the car was driving erratically and changing directions while the female was yelling and banging on the windows.

Officer Parisi turned onto Presidential Drive and saw a vehicle make a turn and accelerate between a row of parked cars. The vehicle, being driven by a male, did have a female riding on the hood. When she saw Officer Parisi, she waved and yelled, "Hi Police." When the vehicle came to a stop at a dead end, the female jumped off the hood and began banging on the driver's side window, yelling at the driver to give her phone back.

The female complied with instructions to step away from the car; however, the driver would not step out of the car. The Officers told the driver repeatedly to open the door and step out. He refused for approximately one minute as he rapidly pressed various keys on the hood rider's phone. When he eventually opened the door, the driver was handcuffed and pat frisked for officer safety.

This commotion caused many neighbors to come out of their apartments and into the parking lot to see what was going on. One witness said that she heard screaming so she looked out her window to see a moving car with a woman clinging to the hood. Another witness, a security guard, confirmed what occurred, adding that the driver stopped a couple of times to let the female off, but when she refused, he continued to drive. Officer Parisi then interviewed the participants separately and learned that they live together, there were no injuries and there were no allegations of violence. The Officer determined that the female was talking on her phone when the driver took it and refused to give it back. He got in the car and tried to leave so she jumped on the hood.

Out of anger toward him, the female snapped off one of the windshield wipers. She did not want to press charges for him taking the phone and wasn't worried that he intended to keep it. The male driver did not say much, only that he took Vanessa's phone so he could talk to his sister. He did not want to press charges for the damage she caused to his car.

After the phone was returned to the female, both agreed that they did not want to pursue any actions against each other. It was obvious that a heated exchange took place between the couple, exactly what they would not say.

The driver had a working phone of his own and had no legitimate purpose to take her phone and not give it back when asked. Furthermore, he had no legitimate purpose to drive through a crowded parking lot trying to shake off the female who was riding on the hood of his car. She did not have a legitimate purpose in helping create that very dangerous situation. Both were placed under arrest for "Disorderly Person" and transported to the station.

SCAM: Residents are receiving telephone calls with a recording claiming to be from Sovereign Bank's Security Department. The message states that your Mastercard number has been stolen. The directions are to press #1 for the Security Department. A check with Sovereign Bank showed that there have been a few complaints about this scam. As always, do not act immediately. You can do as others have done by contacting your bank or call the number on the back of your credit card and ask for security. This is the correct number to call to determine if there has been illegal use of your credit card. The trace of the phone number came back to Kansas City.

A JOB WELL DONE: On Wednesday, June 12, at approximately 9 p.m., Officers Dan Parisi, Mark Millane and Bill Lanergan were dispatched to the Marshall's parking lot in North Quincy on a male-female disturbance in progress. While en route, the Officers were updated that the male was holding a female and not allowing her to leave the area. Upon arrival, Officer Parisi was flagged down by a couple. Standing across the street was a male (suspect) and a female (victim 2).

Officers Lanergan and Millane arrived and all parties were separated in order to interview them individually. Officer Parisi learned from the caller that he is currently dating the female (victim 1) he was standing with, however she was also the ex-girlfriend of the suspect across the street. The caller said that on this night he received a call from his girlfriend/victim 1 asking him to pick her and her friend/victim 2 (the woman standing across the street with the ex boyfriend/suspect) up at Marshall's because her ex-boyfriend/suspect was at the store and would not allow her to leave.

Upon his arrival, the caller/boyfriend parked in front of the store and his girlfriend/victims' 1 and 2 attempted to get in the car however the ex-boyfriend (suspect) physically grabbed his victim 2 and held her from getting in. The two females managed to fight off the suspect long enough for ex-girlfriend/victim 1 to climb into the car, however, victim 2 was held back by the suspect. The caller drove to the opposite end of the parking lot and called the police requesting help.

The suspect then physically escorted victim 2 to the end of the parking lot, stating that he would not let her go until his ex-girlfriend/victim 1 got out of the vehicle. Officer Parisi interviewed the ex-girlfriend/victim 1, who stated that all four involved are from the same area of China and now live in the United States. She said that she dated the suspect in China but have not been together for over a year. She added that he has been harassing her by following her and placing her in fear.

On June 11 at approximately 7:19 p.m., the Quincy Police responded to her home after the same suspect gained entry into her home (via a room-mate) and refused to leave. When the two females left their home on this night, the suspect was standing directly outside the front door glaring at them. He immediately came up to them and spoke of their past relationship as well as his upcoming court case on June 14th where he is the defendant regarding Restraining Order violations, Threats and Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon.

The victim said that the restraining order expired in February 2013. She said the suspect followed her to Marshall's and began to threaten her about the trial, stating that he would kill her and her family. The victim (1) lost sight of the suspect briefly inside Marshall's, but suddenly he appeared and continued his tirade until she managed to get outside to where the vehicle awaited. Officer Parisi then interviewed the victim 2 who had been detained by the suspect.

She confirmed that they all knew each other in China. At this time, the suspect spoke in Mandarin to her and she translated to the Officer that the suspect advised her that he was leaving and that she "better not say anything to him." The suspect has no known ties to the Boston area as far as the three people involved knew and they all believed that he was there solely to seek out his ex girlfriend.

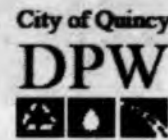

The suspect, a 23 year-old male, unknown address, was arrested and charged with, "Domestic Assault and Battery, Assault and Battery, Intimidation of a Witness and Stalking." In spite of this and with the strong urging of the Officer, the victim said that she did not want an emergency restraining order.

Dear Sewer Customer,

Re: Council Order # 2012-174 -Sewer Ordinance

As you may be aware, the City of Quincy pays over $28 million annually to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) for water and sewer services. A significant portion of that cost is directly related to the volume of our sewerage. The less volume in our system – the less we pay. Infiltration of rainwater and illicit connections to our sewer system create more volume which results in higher bills for the City that are passed on to you the ratepayer. These payments are expected to increase in future years and, therefore, we need to take whatever steps we can now to control and minimize future water and sewer rate increases.

As the Commissioner of Public Works, I share your concerns with the escalating costs mandated by the MWRA. The Department's goals are to minimize the impacts to the average customer by:

- a) discouraging the intentional or accidental abuses of our system that drive up the costs to you, and
- b) ensuring that individuals and businesses pay for services that the City of Quincy provides to them.

To that end, the Department initiated a new Sewer Ordinance that has been adopted by the City that includes a number of charges. Some of these policy changes and new charges are designed to discourage the misuse of our sewer system.

Below please find the charges that will be in effect on July 1, 2013. A complete listing of all the sewer charges and changes is available at the DPW at 55 Sea St or at the Department's website.

Norfolk County Register Of Deeds Testifies Before Judiciary Committee

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell recently visited the Massachusetts State House to testify on behalf of House Bill 1226 before the Joint Committee of the Judiciary.

House Bill 1226 is an act to increase the transparency in the Massachusetts land record systems to protect the property rights of homeowners and is sponsored by State Senator John F. Keenan of Quincy and State Representative Michael D. Brady of Brockton.

Register O'Donnell who is the Legislative Chair for the Massachusetts Association for Registers and Assistant Registers of Deeds asked that the joint committee to vote House 1226 out of committee favorably.

Joined by Plymouth County Register of Deeds John R. Buckley, Jr. and Hampshire District Register of Deeds Mary Olberding Register O'Donnell began his testimony by stating that "This law provides transparency to the consumer. The effect of this bill, if passed into law, would be to help facilitate a way for property owners to find out if their mortgage has been assigned to another entity. The biggest asset most people have is their home. This legislation would give the consumer the tool to better know what impacts that asset."

O'Donnell concluded his testimony by reminding the committee that "...the integrity of the land recording system is not just the responsibility of the Registers of Deeds. We need help from our colleagues in government- here in the state legislature- to protect the integrity of the land recording system."

In order for House Bill 1226 to become law this bill must be voted out of the Joint Committee on the Judiciary following further oral and written testimony. House Bill 1226 will be voted out of the joint committee and taken up by the State Legislature at a later date.

Summer Compost Heap

Question: I recently moved into my first house and am eagerly starting a garden along with a compost pile. A few friends said I'd be better off just prepping the soil for now and waiting to start the compost until fall. But I want to start as soon as possible. What do you think? -- Sarah in Upstate New York

Answer: The great thing about having your own house is you can do pretty much whatever you like with your garden, compost pile, yard and so on -- as long as it doesn't violate local ordinances. If you want to plant a garden now, choose plants that will produce vegetables or flowers within 90 days so that you'll have something to harvest before the first frost. If you want to start a compost pile in midsummer, go for it.

Honestly, when to start a compost pile isn't absolutely cut and dried. Starting in fall is recommended so that a good amount of compost is ready by the next planting season. Letting the compost work over the winter can reduce unpleasant odors wafting off the pile.

However, a well-constructed and well-maintained compost pile shouldn't give off much odor. Balancing out the pile's ingredients and turning it regularly keeps the composting action going. It takes about three months to get a significant amount of spreadable compost. So, if you want to start composting now, keep in mind that you likely won't be able to use your own compost until next spring. On the plus side, you'll have a good amount to work with.

It sounds like you've already staked out your garden and composting areas. But for the benefit of my readers, it's advisable to locate your compost pile at least 20 feet away from the house to prevent pests that burrow into the pile from burrowing into your house.

HOME TIP: Many municipal landfills offer sifted compost to residents at little or no cost. Check with your city or town's waste management department to see if they have this program available.

Apply For Disability Benefits At Home

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Have you been thinking about applying for Social Security disability benefits, but you are unable to visit a Social Security office to complete the interview? Or perhaps your disabling condition makes it difficult to visit a Social Security office.

We have good news: you can complete your application for Social Security disability benefits from the convenience of your home. Get started at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

The application process involves determining 1) whether you have sufficient work to be eligible for Social Security; 2) the severity of your medical condition; and 3) your ability to work. Because we carefully review so many cases — more than three million each year — it can take us three to five months to determine whether you are eligible to receive benefits.

The amount of time it takes to make a decision on your application can vary depending on a number of factors, such as:

- the nature of your disability;
- how quickly we obtain medical evidence from you, your doctors, hospitals, or other medical sources; and
- whether we need to send you for a medical examination to obtain evidence to support your claim.

We have several important initiatives to speed up the process. For example, our Compassionate Allowances initiative allows us to fast-track certain cases of individuals with very severe disabilities. Two hundred different types of disabilities qualify for this expedited decision, and the list continues to expand. Since Compassionate Allowances began in 2008, the agency has fast-tracked more than 250,000 disability applications, getting benefits to people in a matter of days instead of months. Learn more about Compassionate Allowances at www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

Another way we speed up decisions is with our Quick Disability Determinations initiative, which uses technology to identify applicants who have the most severe disabilities and allows us to expedite our decisions on those cases. Read more about Quick Disability Determinations at www.socialsecurity.gov/disabilityresearch/qdd.htm.

There are things you can do to help speed up the decision process too. The more information you provide up front, the less time it will take us to obtain the evidence we need — and the faster we can make a decision on your application. The types of information we need include:

- medical records or documentation you have; we can make copies of your records and return your originals;
- the names, addresses, and phone numbers for any doctors, hospitals, medical facilities, treatment centers, or providers that may have information related to your disabling condition;
- the names, addresses, and phone numbers for recent employers and the dates you worked for each employer; and
- your federal tax return for the past year.

If you're not able to work due to a disability and getting to an office is troublesome, don't worry. You can apply online for Social Security disability benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

Tips To Reduce Cancer Risk While Outdoor Grilling

It's outdoor grilling season again and that means plenty of picnics and parties with lots of grilled goodies.

All that sizzling and flipping on the gas or charcoal grill may also be cooking up cancer-causing chemicals, warn experts at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. And surprisingly, those chemicals have been linked to breast, stomach, prostate, and colon cancer, according to the American Institute for Cancer Research.

But Stacy Kennedy, MPH, RD, CSO, LDN, a Dana-Farber nutritionist, says that doesn't mean giving up those tasty summer time treats like burgers, steaks, and ribs. "It's really about planning ahead and making wise choices."

There are two risk factors to keep in mind. First, research has shown that high-heat grilling can convert proteins in red meat, pork, poultry, and fish into heterocyclic amines (HCAs). These chemicals have been linked to a number of cancers. "What happens is that the high temperature can change the shape of the protein structure in the meat so it becomes irritating in the body and is considered a carcinogenic chemical," explains Kennedy.

Another cancer-causing agent, called polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs), is found in the smoke. PAHs form when fat and juices from meat products drip on the heat source. As the smoke rises it can stick to the surface of the meat. "That's where the main cancer causing compound occurs in grilling," says Kennedy. "So you want to reduce the exposure to that smoke."

How to lower the risk? Here are some tips:

Prep the Meat

- Choose lean cuts of meat, instead of high-fat varieties such as ribs and sausage.

- Trim all excess fat and remove skin.

- When using marinades - thinner is better. Thicker marinades have a tendency to "char," possibly increasing exposure to carcinogenic compounds.

- Look for marinades that contain vinegar and/or lemon. They actually create a protective barrier around the meat.

Limit time - limit exposure

- Always thaw meat first. This also reduces the cooking time.

- Partially cook meat and fish in a microwave for 60 to 90 seconds on high before grilling and then discard the juices. This will lower cooking time and reduce risk of cause smoke flare-ups.

Grilling techniques

- Flip burgers often - once every minute for meat burgers - to help prevent burning or charring.

- Place food at least six inches from heat source.

- Create a barrier to prevent juices from spilling and producing harmful smoke. Try lining the grill with aluminum foil and poking holes, and cooking on cedar planks.

Plan ahead and choose wisely

- Lean meats create less dripping and less smoke.

- Choose smaller cuts of meat, like kabobs, as they take less time to cook.

- Try grilling your favorite vegetables. They do not contain the protein that forms harmful HCAs.

"People are surprised, but you can safely eat charred vegetables. They have different proteins that are not affected the same way as the meat protein," says Kennedy.

In fact, Kennedy stresses if you love to barbecue - no need to panic. "People need to keep this in perspective," explains Kennedy. "If you're grilling and following the proper safety tips, the risk of getting cancer from grilling food is very low."

Raymond C. 'Ray' Cattaneo Former Director Quincy Park Department, Longtime Coach Morrisette Baseball Team

A memorial service for Raymond C. "Ray" Cattaneo, 82, a lifelong Quincy resident, former executive director of the Quincy Park Department and longtime Morrisette Legion baseball team manager, will be held Friday at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, 95 Crescent St., West Quincy.

Mr. Cattaneo died peacefully Sunday at home, surrounded by his loving family.

Born in Quincy, he was a graduate of Saint Mary's Elementary School in West Quincy and Boston College High School.

Mr. Cattaneo was employed by the City of Quincy for over 35 years. He served as assistant park director from 1972 through 1987 when he was named executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department. After retirement, he continued as a seasonal consultant organizing all field permit requests until 2009.

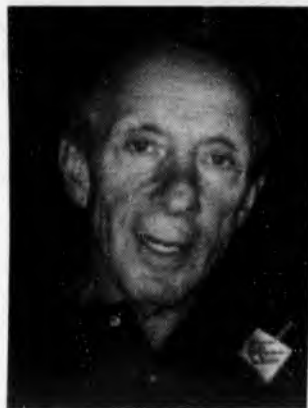

Mr. Cattaneo's passion in life was baseball. He was drafted from high school as a third baseman for the Boston Braves, playing in their minor league system from 1948 through 1951 when he was drafted into the U.S. Army during the Korean War. After his Army service, he played for the Jacksonville Braves before returning to assist in his family's plastering business.

He was a life member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post #294 in Quincy and the North Quincy Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Cattaneo was best known for his association with the Morrisette American Legion Baseball Program. He played for the team as a young man and later devoted over 40 years of dedicated service. He served as coach for 30 years and as manager ever since. Over these many years he provided leadership to countless young ball players, promoting American Legion baseball, good sportsmanship and patriotism.

During his career, he received many awards and acknowledgements including being inducted into the Boston College High School Baseball Hall of Fame and the Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame. In addition, he was recently honored by being inducted into the North Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame as a special inductee.

Ray Cattaneo passed away Monday after a legendary life which included more than 40 years of service to the Morrisette American Legion baseball team. His memory will forever live in the hearts of the countless people he touched with his wisdom, kindness and a wonderful sense of humor.

"We are deeply saddened by the news of the passing of Ray Cattaneo," Mayor Thomas Koch said. "Ray was a special person who possessed a wonderful sense of humor and a kind demeanor, always equipped with words of encouragement for friends and strangers."

"A veteran of the United States Army, Ray continued his service to the community through his work for the city as well as his commitment to the Morrisette American Legion Post and Morrisette baseball program, and charitable work through the Quincy City Club, coordinating the Christmas program for families in need for many years. His attitude toward serving others was a humble one, never looking for credit or fanfare, but just willing to help."

"I was fortunate to know Ray for most of my childhood and all of my adult life and knew him to be a man of tremendous character and great faith. He was a mentor to more than he'd know, and on behalf of a community grateful for and enriched by his service, I extend our condolences to his wife, Claire, children and grandchildren."

"It's a huge loss for me personally and it's huge loss for the city," said Morrisette coach Steve Maze. Maze played for Cattaneo from 1996-1998 and coached with him from 2002 until 2012. "The impact he had on peoples' lives was enormous."

His grandson Ray threw out the first pitch before Monday night's game against Canton. The flag at Adams Field will fly at half staff until Friday. There will be a ceremony at 7:30 Friday before the Braintree game during which the flag will be raised.

"I'd like as many former players as possible to attend the ceremony. I think it will be something special," said Maze. "Somebody asked me if we were going to dedicate our season to Ray. Every season Morrisette has ever played, past, present and future, is dedicated to him. That's how much he meant to us."

Cattaneo joined as an original member of the post in 1945. He played baseball at BC High. He was a third baseman and he was signed by the Boston Braves in 1949.

He played for two minor league teams before he was drafted by the Army to fight in the Korean War in 1951. While in the service, he played against the great Willie Mays in an army baseball game.

After he was discharged from the army, the Braves sent him to a minor league team in Jacksonville, Florida. One of his teammates was Henry Aaron. Unfortunately for Cattaneo, another teammate was third baseman Eddie Mathews who went on to have a Hall of Fame career. There was no market for third basemen with the Braves.

He returned to Quincy and worked in his family's contracting business until he went to work for the Park Department in 1972. He worked as Assistant Director, Executive Director and as a contract employee in charge of organizing field permits until he retired in 2009.

"If you wanted a baseball field, you went to Ray," said Maze.

It was in 1972 that Cattaneo began his involvement with the Morrisette legion team. His team earned a berth in the nationals in 1975, won countless district titles and played in regional championships. However, Cattaneo was much more than a man who knew how to win baseball games.

"He cared about you and he made sure you knew it no matter what," said Maze. "It you guys. That's the way he was. No matter what happened on the field, we knew he cared about us."

Morrisette draws players from Quincy High, North Quincy, Archbishop Williams and BC High. It was important to Cattaneo that the players from different schools form a close bond.

"He always told us we all wear the same hat and he wanted everyone to get along. He always wanted a family atmosphere," said Maze.

After Maze graduated from Fitchburg State, he began working with the legion team in 2002. In 2005, he became head coach but his student-teacher relationship with Cattaneo did not change. Cattaneo had too much knowledge to pass on to his young coach.

"Every lineup I made out I had to bring over to Ray at the Park Department to check out," said Maze. "It was like going to the principal's office. Ray would take out a red pen and start making changes. And you know what? He was almost always right."

The walks to the Park Department left Maze with an image he will always remember.

"I can still see him sitting there with that half smile of his, a cigarette hanging from his lips and talking baseball. I'll never forget that," said Maze.

As the years flew by, Cattaneo gave Maze more freedom, but Cattaneo always had something to say and sometimes he said it firmly and loudly.

"Right up until last year, he was involved," said Maze. "I cut a kid and he disagreed. He asked me why I cut him and we talked about it. I told him I'd bring the kid back, but he said to let it stand."

"Sometimes when I was coaching third, he'd yell out from the dugout or the stands. He'd yell 'bunt' or 'steal a base.' I thought: Great now everyone knows. But I did what he wanted."

Cattaneo is a member of the BC High Hall of Fame. He carried the Olympic torch when it passed through Quincy in 2001. The home dugout at Adams Field is named after him.

He was recently inducted in the newly established North Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame as a special inductee.

However, Cattaneo was not a man who was about honors and trophies.

"He never talked about himself. It was the kids. It was always about the kids," said Maze.

didn't matter if you made three errors or hit a walk-off home run, he felt the same way about you."

Maze's uncle played for Cattaneo in 1976. When Maze was growing up, he started to hear the stories about his future mentor.

"All I heard was Ray Cattaneo this and Ray Cattaneo that," he said. "I was 15 years old. What did I know? I just wanted to belt the ball over the fence. Then my uncle introduced me and I knew why he was special. I was just a kid, but he took the time to talk and ask about how I was doing. He had time for me and he cared about me."

Morrisette had great teams when Maze played. He knew the teams and his manager were terrific, but his appreciation for Cattaneo grew stronger as Maze grew older.

"You're a kid and you don't know how good you have it," he said. "It's only when I got into my 20s and 30s that I looked back and realized what a special man Ray was. Life taught me how much I owed him."

Maze remembers the 1998 team. Morrisette made a stunning run to the finals of the Northeast Regionals where Post 294 faced Pennsylvania. The winner went on to the nationals and a spot on ESPN. Maze will always remember what Cattaneo said to the team before the game.

"Our coach (Tom Malvesti) gave us a great rah-rah speech," said Maze. "We're ready to charge out there and Ray sticks his head in the dugout and said: I love each and every one of

By BILL GRIFFIN

The doubleheader ended nearly five hours after it began, and it was a long day's journey into night for Morrisette's baseball team.

In the opener, Hyde Park rallied for three runs with two outs in the seventh to tie the score and went on to hand Morrisette a deflating, 9-8 loss in eight innings.

In the nightcap, Hyde Park broke open a close game with four runs in the fourth inning and went on to a 7-5 victory in a Zone 6A sweep at Adams Field Sunday night.

The sweep lifts defending zone champion Hyde Park to 6-1 and drops Morrisette to 5-2 after Post 294 had rattled off five straight wins to start the season.

The opener was especially difficult because Morrisette controlled the game for seven innings. Post 294 had leads of 2-0, 5-1, and 8-5 but six errors hurt Morrisette.

"It's always particularly hard to lose a game which you've controlled," said coach Steve Maze. "You can't give a good team like Hyde Park extra outs with errors and that's what we did."

There was no doubt about Morrisette's hitting. Post 294 pounded out 13 hits. All nine players in the lineup hit safely. Third baseman Jason Pekkinen has three hits, walked once, scored a run and drove in three. Shortstop Tyler Beach added two hits and three RBI, and it was this pair who delivered two-out, RBI hits in the sixth which gave Morrisette a three-run lead.

Andrew Currie had two hits and two runs scored. Eddie Riley had a hit and two runs scored. Pat Verhault and Josh Hayward had a single and an RBI. Andrew Jaehnig had a hit and a run scored. The offense produced big time.

"I knew we'd hit from the beginning of the season. The question is pitching and defense, and we have to play better defense," said Maze.

Ace Tommy McDonald started and deserved much better. He gave nine hits, no earned runs, struck out six and didn't walk a batter. He mixed in a good breaking ball with his hard sinker and pitched well enough to win most games.

"Tommy gave us a big effort, but we need to support him better," said Maze.

Morrisette went up 2-0 in the second on RBI hits by Verhault and Pekkinen. Hyde Park drew within, 2-1 in the third, but Post 294 stretched it to 5-1 with one in the fourth and two in the fifth on key hits from Hayward, Currie, Pekkinen and Beach.

Hyde Park tied it at 5-5 in the fifth, but Pekkinen and Beach delivered two-out RBI hits in the sixth to make it 8-5. Pekkinen's RBI was a monster double to left which rolled to near the 363-foot sign.

"Pekkinen and Beach are both good hitters. Pekkinen has been with us for three years and his experience shows in big situations," said Maze.

Closer Dan Cobban escaped a second-and-third, one-out jam in the sixth on just four pitches. Cobban had two outs and the bases loaded in seventh, but a hit and an error tied it. Hyde Park won it in the eighth on an RBI single by Todd McDonald.

In the nightcap, Morrisette kept hitting. Post 294 had seven hits led by Jaehnig who had a two hits, including a triple and an RBI. Currie had two hits, a walk, and RBI and scored a run. Riley had a single and an RBI while Verhault had a hit, RBI and a run scored. Davis had a double and a run scored while Robbie Munroe had added a hit. Aaron Clancy had a walk and a run scored.

After Hyde Park jumped out 3-0 in the second, Morrisette tied it in the third with Davis, Currie and Jaehnig chipping in with key hits. Hyde Park went up 7-3 in the fourth, but Morrisette kept battling and had singletons in the fourth and seventh on RBI from Verhault and Riley to make the final 7-5.

"They won't quit. They battled all the way," said Maze.

Righty Kenny Sorenson mixed his pitches, changed speeds and arm angles, and threw three innings of two-hit, shutout relief for Morrisette.

"Kenny is a good pitcher," said Maze. "He'll pitch a lot for us as a reliever. He knows how to pitch and he's gaining confidence on this level."

Morrisette Downs Weymouth 8-5, 9-7

By BILL GRIFFIN

Morrisette needed a fast start and clean finish. Mission accomplished.

Josh Hayward's two-run double fired up a seven-run first inning and closer Dan Cobban notched the final three outs on five pitches to lead Morrisette to an 8-5 Zone 6 East victory over Weymouth and a sweep of back-to-back games between the two clubs at Adams Field Thursday night.

On Wednesday night in Weymouth, Morrisette rallied from a three-run deficit and survived a four-run Weymouth rally in the seventh inning for a 9-7 decision. Coach Steve Maze wanted his team to be ready from the first pitch in the first inning and to finish the game with less dramatics in the second game. His club responded well.

"Right from batting practice, we preached to be ready to play," said Maze whose club won its first five games of the season. "We came out slow in the first game and found ourselves down three runs. Weymouth is a team that will play you tough. They won't roll over. They'll play hard and we had to be ready."

Morrisette was ready. 11 batters came to the plate in the first inning. At one point six straight reached safely. Andrew Jaehnig, Tyler Beach, Robbie Munroe, and Hayward had hits. Jaehnig, Munroe and Hayward drove in runs. Morrisette ran the bases aggressively, forced two errors and turned them into runs. The result was a 7-1 lead for starter Tom Garland who pitched five quality innings to win his second game of the season.

"We put the bat on the ball and we were sharp right from the start. We have to understand this is the way we have to play," said Maze.

Once again the offense was a well-balanced production. Against Milton, seven different players hit safely by the end of the second inning. In the second Weymouth game, seven players hit safely, seven players scored runs, five players drove in runs. This is a lineup which can hit the ball top to bottom.

"They work hard on their hitting in batting practice, and we have a lineup where a different player can hurt you every night," said Maze.

Hayward had two hits, two RBI and a run scored. Jaehnig had two hits, a run scored and an RBI. For the second straight game, Matt Davis had a pair of hits. He also drove in one and scored one. Pat Verhault (run scored), Tyler Beach (run scored), Brian Turner (run scored), and Munroe (RBI and run scored) also had hits.

Garland was strong through five. He threw hard and he threw strikes. He gave four hits, one earned run and struck out seven. He walked just two and pitched well with the big lead, throwing quality strikes and forcing Weymouth to put the ball into play.

"His fastball is excellent and his control tonight was good," said Maze. "At this stage of the season, once a pitcher reaches five innings or 80-85 pitches, I like to take him out to keep his arm fresh."

Hayward pitched the sixth and worked his way out of a first-and-third jam with a popup and strikeout. Cobban, who finished the first Weymouth game with two pitches, threw just five to finish the seventh thanks to Morrisette's second double play of the game, a sharp 1-4-3 number from Cobban to Verhault to Tommy McDonald. For Cobban, it was two nights, two games, seven pitches and two saves. That is most efficient.

"Hayward is getting used to legion pitching and he worked his way out of a tough spot. Cobban changes speed and gets the ball over. He'll be good for us as a closer," said Maze.

Morrisette tightened up its defense. There were two errors, but the double plays helped. Verhault was great on the pivot on both, especially on a 5-4-3 DP in the second when the runner was right on top of him. Jason Pekkinen made a diving grab of a shallow infield pop to help Hayward in the sixth.

"If we can make 21 outs without making an error, we'll be in good shape," said Maze.

Morrisette Junior Legion Baseball Improves To 6-0-1

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are a team which is always on the move, a go-go team which is fun to watch. They steal bases by the bushel-full, forces mistakes, take the extra base and score on line drives which travel 250 feet and wild pitches which travel 10 feet.

Shortstop Troy Shepherd was on base three times, singled, scored three runs and stole three bases, and Josh Helfrich used control and a sharp-breaking curveball to lead Morrisette's Junior Legion team to a 10-1 win over Canton at Adams Field Friday night.

In other action last week, Morrisette swept to victories over Norwood, Holbrook and Cohasset to up its record to 6-0-1.

"That's the style we play.

We run and try to put the pressure on the other team," said coach Rick Beach. In his career as a high-school coach, Beach had two players steal over 100 bases in their varsity careers.

Morrisette stole seven bases, forced six errors, went from first to third on a sacrifice bunt, and scored on three wild pitches. Morrisette also scored on a strikeout which was the product of brains and hustle, not a passed ball or a wild pitch.

"The kids love this style, They want to go. It keeps them alert and in the game," said Beach.

If there were a play which symbolized the team, it came in the fifth. Morrisette had the game in control, up 6-1. Bobby Salvucci was on second and Shepherd was on third. Helfrich struck out, but the ball was in the dirt. Canton Joe Bires handled it cleanly and threw to first to complete the out. Shepherd was moving on the pitch, broke hard for home on the throw to first and scored easily. A strikeout, no wild pitch, no passed ball and Morrisette scored a run.

If a team is smart and quick, good things happen.

"We work on just that, getting jumps and when you get the sign, go," said Beach. "Shepherd is an very good ball player. He's strong in the field and he gets on base."

Helfrich was excellent, especially considering that he only threw a few innings for North's JVs in the spring. His fastball was good, but his curve was his calling card. His only serious trouble came in the second when a single and a double put runners on second and third with none out. Helfrich reeled off three straight strikeouts, two of them caught looking at the curve and Canton never again threatened seriously.

Helfrich gave three hits, no earned runs and struck out six through six innings. Liam Fitzmaurice finished up with a scoreless seventh.

"Helfrich has pitched a lot in summer ball and I think his poise showed. His control was good and his curveball was excellent," said Beach.

Morrisette showed a balanced offense. Seven players figured in the eight-hit attack. Helfrich had two hits, a run scored and two RBI. Richie Ryan had a booming double and an RBI. Brendan McDonald had a single, sacrifice fly, two runs scored and an RBI. Salvucci had a single, sacrifice fly, a run scored and an RBI. Adam McCormack and Pat O'Connor each had a single and run scored while Cam White scored a run. Everyone had a seat at the table.

"We have a team with a lot of players who can put the bat on the ball, and when we do, we can run," said Beach.

McDonald, Helfrich, and Ryan had hits in a three-run first. McDonald's sacrifice fly scored O'Connor in the second and Morrisette made it 5-1 in the fourth on more hustle and speed. White reached first on an error, took third on a sacrifice bunt by Jack Kennedy and scored on a wild pitch.

Shepherd and Salvucci singled and scored in the fifth to up the lead to 7-1. Morrisette finished the scoring with three in the sixth. McCormack and Helfrich had hits in the rally.

In action earlier last week, Morrisette edged defending zone and state champions Norwood, 3-2. Norwood led 2-1 until Morrisette scored the winning runs in the bottom of the fifth.

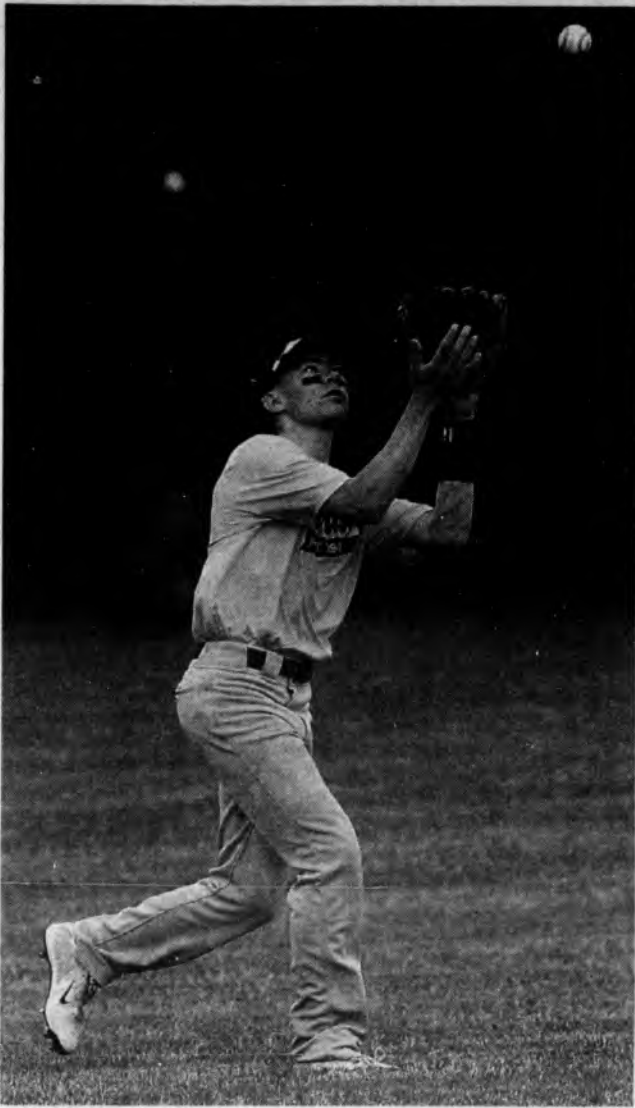

O'Connor walked, moved along on a stolen base and a sacrifice. Shepherd singled in the tying run and Salvucci doubled home the game-winner.

nings to earn the win. Ethan Yau pitched a 1-2-3 seventh, striking out two to cement the win. Through Morrisette's first four games, Yau had a win, two holds and a save.

McDonald and Shepherd had a pair of hits in the win while Salvucci chipped in with a clutch hit in the fifth.

Yau pitched no-hit ball for 5 2/3 innings and finished with a two-hitter while striking out three to lead Morrisette to a 12-0 win over Holbrook.

O'Connor had two hits, two stolen bases and one run scored while Shepherd was on base five times and scored two runs. Salvucci chipped in with two hits, two runs scored and two stolen bases.

Ryan took care of the pitching and hitting in a 5-2 win over Cohasset who had tied Morrisette earlier in the year.

Ryan pitched a three-hitter, fanned five over 5 2/3 innings and helped his own cause with two hits and an RBI.

Suslowitz was lights out as a closer, firing 1 1/3 innings of no-hit baseball while striking out two.

Helfrich had a perfect 4-4 night at the plate and added two RBI and two stolen bases. McDonald had two hits and two stolen bases.

Morrisette Downs Weymouth 8-5, 9-7

After Weymouth closed within 7-4, Turner singled and scored on hits by Hayward and Davis for an insurance run in the sixth.

In the first game against Weymouth, Morrisette was hitless and trailed 3-0 entering the fourth. Beach (two hits) broke up the no-hitter and Eddie Riley, who went 3-4 with three RBI, tied the game with a double.

After falling behind, 4-3, Morrisette took control with six in the sixth led by Pekkinen who had a two-run single. Weymouth answered with four in the seventh to cut it to 9-7, but Cobban entered with the bases loaded, two outs and ended the game on a tapper back to the mound.

Greg Paulo used a fine curveball to pitch the first six and earn the win. He gave just three earned runs. Davis had two hits, an RBI and made a run-saving catch with his back to the plate in leftfield.

In other action last week, Morrisette defeated Stoughton, 7-0 in a forfeit. Stoughton was unable to field a complete, nine-player team for the game.

McDonald, Jaehnig, Green Shine In All Star Games

By BILL GRIFFIN

Three Quincy athletes distinguished themselves by competing in prestigious All-Star games Saturday.

Tommy McDonald was the starting pitcher for the Massachusetts Senior All Star Squad in its 2-1 loss to Connecticut in the Border Challenge game at Tufts University.

Andrew Jaehnig caught for the Massachusetts Junior All Stars who defeated Connecticut, 5-4.

Former Quincy High football player Jalen Green made the biggest impact, by showing the breakaway speed that entertained fans in Quincy for three years, scoring on an 81-yard run to lead the South All Stars over the North, 21-7 in the 30th annual Shriners All Star football game at Bentley College.

Green scored his touchdown at the end of the first period to give the South a 14-0 lead. When the play was called, a smile came to his face. It was the old "jet sweep" he ran as a sophomore and junior at Quincy High.

"We had Jalen and Reggie (Cesar) in the same backfield," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon. "I put them on the wings because each was so talented, we had to split the ball carries.

Between them they had 21 touchdowns and over 300 yards for two years, and a lot of it came from the jet sweep. We ran it until the cows came home."

The play is made for Green because all he needs is a small crack, and he is gone.

"It's the perfect play for him because he is so quick and fast," said Reardon. "We didn't run it as much his senior year because we went with a one-back set and just fed Jalen (223 carries as a senior) the ball."

Green gained 93 yards on three carries and was named the offensive MVP for the South squad in the Shriners game. Reardon was not surprised Green excelled against the best football players in Eastern Massachusetts.

"I think he's one of the most talented backs in the state," said Reardon. "The Duxbury coaches told us Jalen was the best back they saw all year. I thought he outplayed Dylan Oxen from Plymouth South in our game against them. Oxen was named to the Super 26, the 26 best players in the state selected by the football coaches. I thought Reggie deserved to be on the team as well."

McDonald, the ace pitcher from BC High and Morrisette Legion, pitched two innings. Jaehnig, the starting catcher for BC High and Morrisette, walked and scored his team's first run.
